JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 1 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	3.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Windows.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
6.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	3.00
Elements of Geology.....	1.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	1.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	3.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras. Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau. 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	5.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of our Creed.....	3.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	2.00
1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE.) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion. Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 4 vols.....	1.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	4.50
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings. Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	3.00
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence. The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	1.50
.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolly Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged in.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 16 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
BOSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	1.50
ROHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.00
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	6.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	6.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.00
Sociology.....	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	2.00
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER.) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New. Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Classic Boom Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.....	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Pendennis. The Virginians. Esmond, and Love the Widower. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Hamorists, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....	1.50
THAXTER'S (MRS. OKLIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Foot and Horse. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	1.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	3.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.00
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	3.00
Vols III. IV. and VI., each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Saunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion. Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	1.50
6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	2.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.00
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth. Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P. J. PROUDHON: HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS. PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.

PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.

LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.

THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE.

Demonstration. Axiom. Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition. Property is impossible, because it demands something for nothing.

Second Proposition. Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition. Property is impossible, because, with a given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is Homocidal.

Fifth Proposition. Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Appendix to the Fifth Proposition.

Sixth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition. Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition. Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.

§ 1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.

§ 2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.

§ 3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.

§ 1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.

§ 2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.

§ 3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUI ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges.....$3.50

Price in Full Calf, blue, gilt edge.....6.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-TON'S

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

KRINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

THE

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street, LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3 50.

LIBERAL BOOKS.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MAN. By Win-

wood Reade.....$3.00

THE SAVANT CREED. By O. B. Frothing-

ham.....1.50

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE WORLD. By

Edward Clodd......75

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN: Priest and Man.

By Frederika MacDonald.....1.50

SOME PROBLEMS, with other Papers. By

Cuthbert E. Peck......75

THE CULTIVATION OF ART, and its Relations to Religious Puritanism and

Money-Getting. By A. R. Cooper... .25

JUST ISSUED:

THE CHRIST OF PAUL; or, The Enigmas

of Christianity. By George Reber.

12mo. Extra cloth. 400 pp. Post-

paid.....2.00

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPHER

AND REFORMER. By Charles

Sotheran. Post-paid.....1.25

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE

INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE

INDEX

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P. O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.,

for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by

James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.;

one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W.

Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker.

Never before published.

Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60

cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen

(Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal

American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two

Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13

and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter.

10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred,

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, April 5, 1876. Address

NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINBON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT

BETWEEN

Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CENTENNIAL BUSTS.

Jefferson and Paine.

Copies in plaster, boxed, guaranteed against injury by transportation. Price of each,

$50.00. Send orders to S. H. MORSE, 25

Bromfield St., Boston.

THOMAS PAINE.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

Of MORSE'S Bust of Thomas Paine, for sale

at the Office of THE INDEX, 1 Tremont

Place, Boston. Price, 50 cts.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,

and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense

kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

737 Washington St., Boston.

THE AMERICAN EDITION

OF

MONCURE D. CONWAY'S

SACRED ANTHOLOGY,

A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,

has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.

Address THE INDEX,

1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

BOOKS FOR THINKERS.

Send 25 cts. for THE STYLUS one year,

a Monthly Record and Review of the latest and best works in Radical, Freethought, and

Oriental Literature. It also contains a list of the standard books of this class.

CHAS. P. SOMERBY,

PUBLISHER, BOOKSELLER, AND IMPORTER,

139 Eighth St., New York.

THE GODS, AND OTHER

LECTURES.

By Col. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,

OF ILLINOIS.

This book contains five Lectures, entitled severally: "The Gods," "Humboldt,"

"Thomas Paine," "Individuality," and "Her-etics and Heresies." It is handsomely bound, and will be sent from this office on receipt of Two DOLLARS.

Address THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament,"

the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff," etc., etc.

Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

Price.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)...$1.50

CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....1.00

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....1.00

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....1.00

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND

OTHER DISCOURSES.....1.00

LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....3.00

THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM

IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp.,

with steel portrait of the author)...2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE CENTENNIAL

CONGRESS OF LIBERALS!

AN APPEAL TO ALL

Who believe that the United States should be

Absolutely Secularized,

And who favor the movement to carry out

the principle of

STATE SECULARIZATION,

As indicated in the "Demands of Liberalism."

605 WALNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, }

March 1, 1876. }

To the Liberal Leagues and the Liberal Public of the United States:—

The General Centennial Committee, appointed at a convention held in this city last September for the purpose of making all necessary arrangements for a General Centennial Congress of Liberals next summer, have decided to call said Congress to convene at Philadelphia, Saturday, July 1, 1876,—further particulars to be hereafter announced.

Each organized Liberal League will be entitled to send five delegates as special representatives—three in addition to its President and Secretary. But all individual Liberals who sympathize with the general objects and aims of the Liberal Leagues will be equally entitled and welcomed to seats and votes in the Congress.

REPORT PROMPTLY!

In order to lessen as much as possible the expenses of the delegates, each League is requested to elect them as soon as possible, and to report their names to the undersigned through its Secretary. All Liberals, delegates, or individuals who desire and intend to participate in the Convention are requested also to forward personally and immediately their names and full post-office addresses to the undersigned, that he may be enabled to make the most favorable terms possible for their accommodation. If notified early, he hopes to secure for them a considerable reduction in railroad fares, and to provide boarding-places at perhaps half the usual rates of the season.

Donations Solicited!

The Centennial Committee on Finance having through their Chairman transferred their duties to the General Centennial Committee, the undersigned has been appointed to attend to the financial department, and hereby appeals to the Liberals of the country for voluntary contributions to the amount of One Thousand Dollars. This amount will be needed to make the Congress a complete success, though the utmost possible will be done with whatever is contributed. The officers of the union of Liberal German societies propose to raise the same amount for their convention, and have already raised $600 of it. The Young Men's Christian Association here have already spent this year nearly $100,000 in preparation for the Centennial, in the interest of Orthodox superstition; it would be a pity if all the friends of "Liberty and Light" could not do a hundredth part as much for the cause of national development and free humanity! The money will all be wanted (and much more could be advantageously expended) in providing suitable halls and headquarters, advertising the Congress liberally in advance in the chief dailies of the country, defraying the necessary expenses of desired and invited speakers, paying verbatim reporters, publishing a complete pamphlet report of the proceedings, etc., etc. What is done must be done speedily, since the arrangements should be completed, as far as practicable, by the first of May.

All sums donated will be duly acknowledged in THE INDEX, and a full report of all expenditures will be sent for publication in the same paper. Remittances should be sent to the undersigned, 605 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. Will not all friends of the movement respond heartily and at once?

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

Acting Treasurer.

I believe that Mr. Kilgore is a gentleman of unimpeachable personal integrity, and that all money remitted to him as above will be faithfully and economically devoted to the legitimate uses of the Congress.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

Chairman of the General Centennial Committee.

General Centennial Committee:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

ALEXANDER LOOS,

ISAAC RHEIN,

BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD,

E. S. WILLIAMS,

with power to increase their number to fifteen. The completion and success of the arrangements must depend on the liberality of the friends of the movement, who are respectfully and earnestly solicited to contribute the necessary funds.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1876.

WHOLE No. 339.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, undilatingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civilization impeded, and the most sacred rights of man infringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the practical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land;

THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.—The name of this Association shall be THE LIBERAL LEAGUE OF —.

ART. 2.—The object of the Liberal League shall be to secure practical compliance with the "Demands of Liberalism" throughout the country, and especially in —, and thereby to effect the total separation of Church and State in fact as well as in theory.

Also to send delegates to the conventions of the National Liberal League, when organized, and to cooperate heartily with all the liberals of the country in furtherance of the above-named object.

ART. 3.—The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in general, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right.

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement.

ART. 6.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ex-officio delegates to the conventions of the National Liberal League.

ART. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any regular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amendments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification for any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever in any State be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion.

No person shall ever in any State be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious practices shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

DOM PEDRO is announced to be in Philadelphia from June 19 to July 6. Possibly he may be present at some one of the sessions of the Centennial Congress of Liberals.

THE BOSTON Herald of June 8 refers to THE INDEX as "the organ of the Progressive Unitarians." This must be a new sect, of which we have not heard! But THE INDEX is not the organ of any Unitarians, progressive or non-progressive.

TWO OR THREE weeks ago, as we are informed, some young men were arrested for playing base-ball on Sunday in Jamaica Plain, in this State; and our informant, who is not in favor of the Liberal League movement, added that there seems to be a new determination to enforce the Sunday laws.

AT THE Twenty-eighth Annual Meeting of the Friends of Human Progress, at Waterloo, N. Y., held early in the present month, resolutions were passed, on motion of Mr. H. L. Green, substantially reaffirming the "Demands of Liberalism," and protesting against the shutting of the Exposition on Sundays.

THE REPUBLICAN National Convention at Cincinnati proposed a Constitutional amendment, "forbidding the application of any public funds or property for the support of any school or institution under sectarian control." We repeat the warning that by this word "sectarian" is meant, and will be construed by the courts to mean, the retention of the Bible in the public schools as a non-sectarian book. The battle for a secular public school system is yet to be won. The National Liberal League will find its hands full of work.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE begins, "When in the course of human events," etc. The platform of the Republican party just adopted at Cincinnati begins, "When in the economy of Providence," etc. That is one of the stealthy approaches of the Christian Amendment. Little by little is the public mind becoming habituated to such seemingly trivial abandonments of the secular principle, till by-and-by a great body of precedents will be established for the final fatal change of the Constitution. The only preventive is the immediate and energetic protest of organized patriots.

THE GERMAN Republicans, through Mr. Vance, of New York, introduced resolutions at the Cincinnati convention, June 14, favoring non-sectarian [secular?] schools, compulsory education, church taxation, civil service reform, and legislation to protect emigrants, and opposing the compulsory observance of the Sabbath, State recognition of sects, any discrimination against foreign-born citizens, and any form of inflation or repudiation. The religious questions here raised, whatever becomes of these resolutions, can never be got out of our national politics until they have all been settled in accordance with the principles of the Liberal League.

READ THE "Call for a National Centennial Convention," issued by the Christian Amendment party, with the long array of dignitaries who indorse it; and read also the "Address of the American Alliance to American voters," with its strenuous demand to keep the Bible in the schools as "the corner-stone of our liberties," and (as an illustration of those liberties) with its proposal to disqualify all foreign-born citizens for holding office. Both papers will be found in this issue of THE INDEX, and they are just now exactly such reading as liberals ought to have. They are very instructive—far more so than inane self-gratulations on the triumph of liberal principles. Look at the forces actually manifesting themselves in American society and shaping themselves for political action: is it a time for stupid star-gazing?

AT THE fifty-ninth minute of the eleventh hour, a public meeting was held in Boston at the Old South meeting-house, Wednesday, June 14, to try to raise sufficient funds to rescue the noble old pile from its destroyers. Charles W. Slack, John T. Clark, W. H. H. Murray, E. S. Tobey, and Curtis Guild all made earnest and excellent speeches for this purpose; but Wendell Phillips made a plea for the old edifice which will never be forgotten by those who heard it. This passage of noble eloquence and bold truthfulness made the walls ring with irrepressible cheers: "The consecration that the Puritans gave to these walls, to Christ, and the Church, in 1729, is annulled. The ark of God has sought a new and perhaps a better shelter, but these walls received as sincere consecration when Adams and Otis dedicated them to liberty. We don't come here to save the walls that have echoed to the prayers of Cotton, and Prince, and Eckley, and the early saints of the colony. We come here to save the walls that have echoed to the sublime thought of Quincy when he said: 'No matter where, nor how, nor for what cause, I mean to die a free man, and not a slave!' These arches will echo as long as they stand with the sublime and sturdy religious enthusiasm of Adams, with the unequalled eloquence of Otis, with Warren in his young genius and enthusiasm. I will not say it is a nobler consecration, I will not say that it is a better use; I only say we come here to save what our fathers consecrated to the great memories of the most successful struggle the race has ever made for the liberties of men." Once more has Boston a chance to redeem herself from the scorn of mankind: let her shrink from the shame of the impending infamy!

WHAT THE "American Alliance" is is thus told by the Boston Advertiser of June 17: "The foolish 'American Alliance' or 'American League' movement is said to have reached this State, and to be forming lodges of American native-born citizens against the foreign-born. Besides the object of the old Know-Nothings the 'Leaguers' are said to be in favor of maintaining the Bible in public schools. Whether any lodges have been formed in this State or not, we do not know. They have kept themselves carefully concealed if they do exist, but it would be a poor compliment to Massachusetts intelligence if such a movement could acquire a foothold here. From the occasional reports from other States it seems there is a little vitality to the league, and its national convention in Philadelphia next month may be of importance enough to attract more attention than has hitherto been given to the order. At the last meeting there were reported to be more than one hundred lodges in Pennsylvania, two hundred in New York, one hundred and thirty in Ohio, and several in New England. The objections to this movement are so strong that it cannot receive the support of intelligent men. The position of the Bible in the public schools will not be improved by the efforts of such organizations. The idea of opposition to foreigners is contrary to our whole history, besides being most injurious to American interests. Were there any reason for the action of the League, the manner in which it is undertaken would be enough to bring it into condemnation; but when the method is bad and the cause unjust to foreigners and injurious to Americans, it is strange that it gets any support. Its strength lies in ignorance and prejudice, and Massachusetts, of all States, should prove most inhospitable soil for its growth."

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BOSTON, MASS.—F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JEFFERSON, OHIO.—W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary.
 SAN JOSE, CAL.—A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary.
 TOLEDO, IOWA.—J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secretary.
 VINELAND, N. J.—John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary.
 JUNCTIONVILLE, NEB.—J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary.
 OLATHIE, KAN.—S. B. M. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary.
 DETROIT, MICH.—W. R. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BRANESVILLE, MICH.—A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 OSOOLA, MO.—R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary.
 BATH, ME.—F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary.
 BERLIN, WIS.—President, J. D. Walter; Secretary, J. D. Kruschke.
 WASHINGTON, D.C.—George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary.
 AUSTIN, OHIO.—John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treasurer.
 MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—S. C. Gale, President; W. C. Cowles and Frank J. Mead, Secretaries.
 NEW YORK, N.Y.—J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary.
 ST. JOSEPH, MO.—P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary.
 EAST CLAIRES, WIS.—President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
 BALBOA, IND.—President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 NEW ORLEANS, LA.—President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 BAY CITY, MICH.—President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson.
 OLNEYFIELD, PA.—S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.
 SAUK CITY, WIS.—Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Conrad, Secretary.
 AUGUSTA, WIS.—Davis Jackson, President; George P. Vaux, Secretary.
 WATERTOWN, N.Y.—L. D. Olney, President; W. A. Howland, L. M. Delano, Secretaries.
 PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mrs. Carrie B. Kilgore, President; John S. Dye, Secretary.
 MILWAUKEE.—Theodore Fritz, President; D. C. Zünig, Secretary.
 MILWAUKEE (Second League).—R. C. Spencer, President; E. Boyd, Secretary.
 NORTHBURKLAND, PA.—M. B. Priestley, President; Chas. Collins, Secretary.
 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—E. E. Denniston, President; M. A. Dewey, Secretary.
 MEDINA, MINN.—Allen Grave, President; Taylor Archibald, Secretary.
 COOPERSTOWN, MICH.—George A. Farr, President; H. Potts, Secretary.
 OLINTON HOLLOW, N.Y.—Theodore A. Cookingham, President; Lee G. Graham, Secretary.
 DARIEN, WIS.—Crosby Carleton, President; Daniel Rodman, Secretary.
 SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—J. L. Hatch, President; A. J. Boyer, Secretary.
 ADEL, IOWA.—George B. Warren, President; T. R. North, Secretary.

(FOR THE INDEX.)

The Growth of Opinion

AS TO WHAT CONSTITUTES TRUE RELIGION.

A DISCOURSE FOUNDED ON II. SAMUEL XXIV., 21-24, SPECIALLY ON THE WORDS—"NEITHER WILL I OFFER BURNT OFFERINGS UNTO THE LORD MY GOD OF THAT WHICH DOETH COST ME NOTHING."

BY JAMES BOYD, GLASGOW, SCOTLAND.

Moralists have long been in the habit of summing up our duties under three heads; those, namely, which we owe to ourselves, to our neighbors, and to God. These last are universally admitted to take precedence of the others, and consist in reverence, worship, trust, gratitude, penitence, and obedience. But as all these are simply affections of the mind, men have ever felt the necessity laid upon them of giving expression to these sentiments in some outward acts, in order to prove, not less to themselves than to their neighbors, that they really do possess the merit which they claim. For, however often religious professions may be made for the purpose of imposing upon others, they are far more often made for the purpose of impressing on the individual himself a conviction of his own sincerity. Nor is there in this any conscious attempt at imposition or self-deceit. Knowledge of self is of all knowledge the hardest to acquire, and the most rarely attained. Every day we may see men, in pure and perfect ignorance, taking credit to themselves for qualities which they sincerely believe they possess; but their want of which is patent, and probably a subject of remark to every one beside. The human mind is to the immense majority of the human race a tangled skein which they cannot unravel, a document written in an unknown tongue which they may gaze upon forever and yet learn nothing from. Has it not almost passed into a proverb that the motives men assign for their acts are rarely, if ever, the motives which really induce them to act? And although the cynic may choose to interpret this only as a proof that "all men are hypocrites and liars," no man, who thoroughly knows the workings of his own mind, can admit such an interpretation to be correct. Recall, now, each one of you for himself, let us say, the action which each considers the noblest of his life. With it will be recalled, without effort, the motives which we gave ourselves at the time for its performance. They will be found to be worthy and noble ones. But now that you are removed from the circumstances and the persons you were associated with then, now when the zeal which animated you has evaporated—with changed affections and altered views of life—can you not discover on looking back some other and less worthy motive, which was in deed and in truth the real spring of your action? And yet you know there was no conscious deceit in the case. Reflect, again, how careful we are, when tempted to commit any mean, or base, or cruel act, to refrain until we have found some reason that shall justify us to ourselves. See, even when men are anxious to obtain disinterested advice in some important crisis of their lives, how almost certain they are to resort to those whose counsel will point towards the course to which they feel themselves already inclined.

Now, although it is not every man who is familiar with these things, there yet seems to be a vague suspicion, very general among men, as to the deceitfulness of their own hearts. Hence arises the necessity we spoke of, of outward acts of worship expressing the inward feelings of love and fear, in order that men may be assured of their own state, and that they are not, in a matter of such vital import as their duty to God, practising deceit upon themselves.

Having thus seen the origin of external acts of worship, and the necessity out of which they arose, it next devolves upon us to trace the development of opinion regarding the most appropriate manner of expressing our religious feelings; when we shall find that not until long, long after man had resort to external acts of worship in order to escape the deceitfulness of his heart, was he successful in wholly conquering it, and standing at length face to face with the pure and perfect manner of discharging his duty towards God.

The first, or, at least, a very early mode, in which the expression of men's religious feelings took outward shape, was sacrifice; the meaning of which is, we apprehend, at the present day very generally mistaken. When the word sacrifice is mentioned, we are all too apt to associate with it the idea, and the one idea only, of an attempt to avert or propitiate the wrath of God by the slaughter of a beast; as if the sacrificers believed that there was virtue in the mere act of shedding blood to wash away human sin. That this notion has obtained very wide acceptance among the nations who practise sacrifice, we do not doubt or question; but it bears on its face the stamp of being one of those popular, superficial, irrational opinions, which, somehow or other, gain their way among the ignorant and unthinking. We cannot conceive how it could enter any man's mind, who was conscious of feeling himself at enmity to God, and anxious to obtain, yet, at the same time, ignorant of all means of obtaining, a reconciliation with his Maker,—we say we cannot conceive how it should enter such a man's mind that the best mode of seeking a reconciliation was by the slaughter of a beast. But we can conceive, and very readily too, how the rite of sacrifice, once introduced and established on more rational grounds, should come to be regarded by the ignorant and superstitious as a means of reconciliation with God. And we can also very readily see how, when such an opinion had once gained ground, it should also come to pass that, in the estimation of the multitude, reconciliation with God should be esteemed the end and object for which sacrifice had been instituted. But it is not in a mind of such a class that we need look for any inventive power. It was not in a mind of such a class, we may be very sure, that the idea of sacrifice originated. And when we come to the higher class of minds, in whom alone inventive or creative power resides, it would be against all experience, against the laws of our mental nature even, to suppose that such a mind could ever bear such fruit as this idea, that the shedding of the blood of bulls and goats could have any efficacy with God in washing out the stains of human guilt.

It is nothing to urge against this view, that minds of the highest class and culture have regarded sacrifice in this latter light. They had been brought up from earliest infancy to regard it thus with feelings of the most sacred awe. And so firm a hold on us have the opinions and prejudices which were inculcated on us in youth by those who claim and deserve our love and respect, that it is but one degree more difficult for the Ethiopian to change his skin than it is for even cultured men to throw off the incubus of superstition that has descended to them from their sires. But the originator of sacrifice was hampered by no traditional views respecting its nature or end. And it is on this account that we pronounce the opinion, which afterwards in narrower minds sprang up regarding it (though from its wide-spread acceptance and early inculcation it acquired, in later years, force to enthrall the noblest), to have been impossible to his free and unbiased mind.

We cannot help thinking that the original meaning of the word sacrifice was exactly that which we attach to it in common speech, as when we talk of sacrificing our time, or our position, or our means. And the idea which gave rise to sacrifice as a religious rite was this: that sincerity in the service of God can only be manifested by giving up, or parting with, something that we hold dear. As time rolled on, other ideas were gradually grafted on this one. A sacrifice might then be an expression of thanksgiving, as in Noah's case in his coming forth from the ark; or as a recognition of the lordship of God over men's persons and possessions, some share of which it was proper should be devoted exclusively to his service, in token of his rightful ownership of the whole,—which seems to have been David's meaning when, on the completion of his preparations for the erection of a house to God, he exclaims, "But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? For all things come of Thee, and of thine own have we given Thee." Or, again, as in the text, sacrifice might be offered as an atonement for sin, and in propitiation of God's wrath. But even then we see the radical idea of loss, or deprivation, or cost, is still an essential element of the rite, for David evidently considered that it would be no sacrifice if it cost him nothing.

*Of course, I don't cite this as a historic fact,—only as showing the opinions prevalent in the time when the myth was composed.

But it is ever the fate of pure religious ideas, emanating from lofty spiritual minds, that they should have to wait for centuries before the mass of men are educated up to the point of appreciating their truth and beauty. Nor is this delay the only, nor the worst, indignity they must endure. For they are seized upon by lower minds, and distorted into uncouth shapes, in which, nevertheless, they slowly, albeit surely, do their work of purifying, ennobling, and refining man's gross and carnal mind. Thus fared it with the rite of sacrifice. From simply serving to denote the worshipper's sincere desire to surrender himself and all he owned to God, it degenerated into a ransom for the offerer's sin. Nor can we be astonished to learn what were the effects this manner of viewing it entailed. When the only fear of God before a sinner's eyes is the fear of having to immolate an extra bull or goat, we may feel quite sure that the flood of human passion can never be stayed, can scarce be checked, by a dam so frail. But although there be evil, and evil in plenty, in man's nature, there is good likewise. And it only needs that the evil should come to the worst to summon the good to the rescue. So, when the heathen darkness, which was the inevitable fruit of such a faith, had settled down on God's chosen people, there sprang up, one after another, prophets and preachers, to declare with trumpet voice that the offering of bulls and goats was a vain worship; that the sacrifices of God were a broken spirit; that burnt-offerings and sin-offerings were worthless to prevail with God; but that to obey his will and to walk in his statutes was all that he required of man.

But experience shows how hard a lesson this is for man to learn, from the length of time he has been engaged in learning it, if indeed we can persuade ourselves that he has learned it even now. For although the rite of sacrifice may be got rid of, as it has been got rid of during some outburst of zeal on the part of reformers in religion, the old error which was associated with it crops up ever anew. In every generation the forms, ceremonies, observances, by means of which it is sought to propagate and keep alive religion among men, are perversely put in the place of the ends which are intended to be secured through them; so that, instead of serving, as in every case probably their designers intended them to serve, only as expressions of certain dispositions, or as means whereby certain dispositions may be conveniently attained, they come, after a very short lapse of time too, to be regarded by the followers and imitators of those who introduced them as perfect and satisfactory substitutes for these mental dispositions, on whose account alone they at first existed, or are at any time valued.

Nor is it difficult to explain why this should be so. Two causes may be very plainly traced as cooperating to work out this effect. In every sphere of life and business we find a tendency exhibiting itself in men to erect means into the place of ends. The veracious delays and circumlocutions of law and government arise simply from the multiplication of forms, which originally were devised for the purpose of expediting business; and which, before they had become quite useless, had gathered around them such a veneration for their own sakes, that even now, when they are only obstacles and hindrances, it is always difficult to accomplish their removal, from the blind belief that has arisen in their possessing some virtue in themselves. The forms of politeness and etiquette which are devised merely to oil the wheels of social intercourse and prevent them from grating—to render the necessary relations of man with man a source of pleasure as well as profit,—are looked upon by the fool of fashion as the only ends in life which are worthy of study or attainment. So, too, with the miser and his gold. In like manner you will find no idolatry or fetich worship among even the lowest tribes of man, which, in its origin, did not clearly recognize that the stock or stone, before which it pays its homage, was merely a symbol of the unseen spiritual power, who is the true and only object of its worship. Conversely, history establishes beyond dispute that whosoever a worshipper, or sect of worshippers, adopts a material symbol as a means of quickening their apprehension of, and assisting their devotion to, the unseen God, before long, that symbol, be it sun or moon or star, bird or beast or fish, statue or painting, shall be regarded by their children as in very deed, and not in seeming only, their father's God. So, in spite of the efforts of iconoclasts and reformers, who, by abolishing or simplifying the prevailing forms of worship, seek to trample out the pernicious error which confounds worship with the observance of these forms, we find the error perennially reappearing, ready even to cling, in twining wreaths, around the barest, baldest service which puritan can devise.

Besides this tendency, which is always, or at least usually unconscious in its operation, there is another cause which contributes to the spread of the error in question, which seems to be nearly, if not quite, universal among men, and therefore has some innate root in our nature; the belief, namely, in vicarious atonement. We do not undertake to analyze the genesis of this belief, although we incline to think it is begotten through the power of the wish to become father of the thought. Certain it is, the wish to lay the responsibility for our evil deeds upon another's shoulders, or the desire to substitute for some duty, whose obligation is distasteful to us, some other which we feel to be less irksome or repugnant to our love of ease or pleasure, is a very strong one in human nature. And, as a fact, we find the belief very generally diffused among mankind that God has mercifully provided means whereby this wish may be gratified. Recognizing, as most men do, that man's original duty to God is simply to lead a pure and perfect life, they yet allege the impossibility, which is merely an exaggerated way of stating the inherent difficulty, and their consequent disinclination, to fulfil this obligation. And so, to satisfy their consciences, they are bound to cast about for some sacrifice which they may offer, and which God will accept, in lieu of his first requirement, that they should do justly, and love mercy, and walk humbly in his sight. According to the stage and phase of civilization in which they live, this offering will take the shape of the sacrifice of their herds and flocks, it may be even of their sons and daughters; of their time and wealth, in support of and attendance upon the imposing celebration of gorgeous rites in stately temples; or, what is represented as the hardest, but in reality to the unthinking and indolent is the easiest and least costly sacrifice of all, that of the exercise of their reason respecting the inscrutable mysteries and inexplicable creeds which a priesthood, favored with a more intimate knowledge of the Deity, proposes for their acceptance.

Now, as we admit that this error has been denounced and protested against by all the prophets, seers, and holy men who have made use of the inspiration with which all men are gifted to learn of God, who have used their eyes to behold that light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, and yet find that this error survives and flourishes after many of them and their teachings have vanished and been forgotten, shall we still trust, and hope, and cling to the belief that this error may be uprooted from the hearts of men? We shall still so trust and hope and believe. And we think we desecrate the dawning of a truth which has been implied, but not distinctly expressed, in the teachings of all true seers, which is destined, when explicitly stated and consciously recognized, to effectually and for ever banish the idea of sacrifice from the world. And that truth is that we have and can have no duties to God outside of those which we owe to man. Our duties to others and to ourselves—to relieve the widow, the orphan, the needy, and him that hath no helper, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world—COMPRISE ALL THE DUTIES WHICH WE OWE TO GOD. And we cannot compromise for the non-performance of them. "This or nothing"—is God's and nature's demand. Call it sacrifice, if you will—it is the sacrifice of all the lower tendencies of our nature in keeping ourselves unspotted from the world; the sacrifice even of our higher selves to our brother's service. Other sacrifice there is and can be NONE. And, assuredly, if the value of sacrifice be in its cost, you will find when you proceed to offer this one, that it is not one which will cost you nothing.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

PROUDHON AND HIS TRANSLATOR.

BY STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

Benj. R. Tucker, the business partner and confrère of E. H. Heywood of Princeton, Mass., has translated and published, in an elegant volume of nearly 500 royal octavo pages, the most renowned of the politico-economical works of the justly celebrated P. J. Proudhon. The title of the work in English is: What is Property? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. I am requested to write a review-notice of the work. The temptation is strong to expand into an exhaustive review, but I am not certain of any avenue to the public for such a treatise, and I shall confine myself to the smaller plan. First, as to what is usually put last. The volume as a book is superb. Print, presswork, paper, and binding are at the top of the powers of the book-making art, and the price ($3.50, or $6.50, according to style) is not excessive. The work of the translator is also conscientiously and well done, and is nearly faultless from the literary point of view. A few Gallicisms may be pointed out, but they are exceptionally few, and the translator's personality is completely sunk in the labor of love which he evidently had before him.

The work itself consists of two "Memoirs," the first of which is the more important, and is that to which my comments will mainly apply. Proudhon was confessedly one of the great thinkers of France, at a time, thirty years ago, when France abounded in distinguished men. He combined the metaphysical subtlety of the German with the vivacity of the Frenchman, and the dead-in-earnest character of the genuine reformer. His was a truly religious nature, in the right sense. He was in love with truth, and on fire with devotion to its promulgation; and he struggled hard with the problem of its solution. His scope was not confined to social affairs. He traversed the whole field of philosophy, and, as I think him more characterized by analytical than by constructive power, I cannot but regard his Création de l'Ordre as a more remarkable and valuable work than that which Mr. Tucker has chosen to introduce him to the American public; although I have no doubt that he has been judicious in his choice, as that would find a still smaller circle of minds prepared to appreciate it.

Proudhon had the genius of discovery, a wonderful depth and clearness of perception, wonderful accuracy of statement, in the main, and wonderful strength of intellectual grasp upon his conception; but after all he is by no means, always, a luminous writer; sometimes because he had not reached the bottom of his subject, and sometimes because his love of epigrammatic and paradoxical statement betrayed him into astounding rather than convincing the reader. For example, he heads a long succession of propositions with the repetition of the statement that property is impossible, and proceeds to show, under each head, why it is so. But if property is impossible, then it cannot exist; and if it cannot exist, then it does not exist; and why should Mr. Proudhon write a big book to do away with what does not and never did have any existence? Of course the literal meaning of what he says is absurd; but if you have the patience to study him intensely, you will find out that what he intends by this expression is: that property (in so far as he is here considering it, as that what gives increase) contains within itself a suicidal principle; that it is self-defeating; that it is constantly "killing the goose that lays the golden egg." His statement covers, but it does not convey, that idea. The idea is, in part, true; is profound, and profoundly important; but his way of saying it is afflicted with the same evil; it is repellent, self-defeating, and suicidal of his supposed purpose, that of being understood by his reader.

But what, in fine, does Proudhon mean by property? His startling epigrammatic thunderbolt, property is robbery, aroused, bewildered, and repelled all Europe. Perhaps not a dozen persons from his time till now have ever studied him severely enough to understand exactly what he meant. It is just possible that he did not quite understand himself, and that if he had done so, he would never have put his statement in that form. What he meant covers an immensity of truth, of new truth (at that day), and of important truth; but is it all true, to the extent of maintaining such a sweeping indictment? Let us see what he meant by property. He did not mean possession, enjoyment, usufruct of the land, and of the products of labor. These he contrasts with "property," and maintains and defends. What he means by property is that subtle fiction which makes that mine or thine of which we are out of possession, for which we have no present use, but which by this subtle tie we may recall at our option, using it, in the meantime, to subjugate others to our service, by taking increase, for its use in the form of rent, interest, and the like. He uses the term property, therefore, in a very rigorous and technical sense; and unless this is constantly borne in mind, he is certain to be misunderstood, and the truth which he is representing will be lost sight of. "Possession," he says, "is a right; property is against right."

It is, however, not true that property, even so restricted in definition, is robbery, pure and simple. The acute thinker has still not discriminated closely enough. It is not proprietorship, but the use of proprietorship to extort increase, which is vicious in principle; or else proprietorship applied where, in the true nature of things, it is not applicable, as in the case of land. The product of the labor of the free laborer, equitably and fairly produced, is in justice his property, and the argument of Proudhon to the effect that he owes it to society even before it is produced, and holds it only on sufferance, seems to me, at least, the weakest part of his First Memoir. It (the product) is his (the producer's) to lend, to own while out of possession, to recover back in kind or in equivalent, and in all senses precisely as ownership is understood in the world and defined in the law-books. The simple distinction between natural wealth which, while it can be possessed and enjoyed when needed, ought not to be owned in the technical sense (except temporarily, as adjunct to improvements, to secure the repayment for them), and proprietary wealth as the product of labor, sets the whole matter right. There may be an ethical inhibition against abusing one's own, but not rightly a social one; that is to say, a man's neighbors should not be set upon him to decide when he is rightly using and when he is abusing what belongs to him by a perfect title. All that the law means here is that the decision on that point is best left to the individual; and the law of the land and the law of sociological right are in perfect harmony in that particular, and Proudhon is wrong.

This right of the free and unlimited disposition of what is really one's own is, in this property domain, precisely that individual sovereignty which, without the name, Proudhon so vigorously defends, elsewhere, against communism; and the endangering of which is his grand objection to communism. His error in denouncing property, in this limited and just sense, as robbery, is as fatal to his own system as if he had averred that the individual owes himself, absolutely, to the community from birth, and should, therefore, submit to established authority with a loving and unquestioning obedience. Such a view (which the Comtists now virtually affirm) would, of course, have been the reversal of his whole doctrine, but not more so than this fundamental error in denying to the individual the control over the products of his own industry. Indeed it may be said, quite generally, that he fails to distinguish between ethical and sociological questions,—those matters which appeal to the conscience of the individual, as a member of society, and those matters which authorize society to intervene, to constrain, or to regulate the conduct of the individual. He also leaves us very much in the dark as to the precise social machinery by which he would have the world organized and run. He is far more specific with regard to what he would abolish than with regard to what he would construct.

Another of Proudhon's startling paradoxes, seemingly so at least, and I think we shall see really so, is the use of the term anarchy, to denote not chaos and confusion, but the basis of order in the freedom of the individual from the control of others. Etymologically, this use of the term has a show of reason as it merely means absence of government; and a writer has the right, if he choose, so to revert to etymological origins; and frequently there is a great advantage in so doing. There is a loss it is true in the temporary obfuscation of the mind of the reader, but, it may be, a more than compensating advantage in arousing deeper thought, or in furnishing a securer technicality. But in this case the disadvantage is certainly incurred: and neither advantage is secured. There are two very different things covered by the term government: personal government by arbitrium, and the government of inherent laws and principles. Proudhon is denying the rightfulness of the former, and affirming the latter. Now the Greek archê meant both of these things; but if either more peculiarly than the other, it meant the government of laws and principles, whence the negation of such rule by the prefix an has meant, and rightly means, chaos. Proudhon undertakes to make the Greek word mean exclusively the other idea, whereby he spoils one excellent technicality without getting for his other purpose a secure and good one in the place of it.

At the 56th page the author propounds the theory that there was a primitive state of social equality; that our departure from it is a degeneracy; that we are to return to that state of nature, etc. Surely our social theories are in advance of that idea now. We might as well assume that the acquired use of knives and forks is a degeneracy. Men will be just as much in a state of equality if their property rights remain, and are made equal, by equity, as they would be if they returned to a state of nature, and so had no property rights. Man never returns to prior conditions. He advances to new conditions which reproduce the spirit of primal states, but in still newer forms, which embody also the good of what now is. We pass from an undifferentiated state to differentiation, and thence not backward but forward to integration. Everything is subordinated to "The Law of the Three States" in a larger sense than is meant by the author of that phrase. So the equality which Proudhon so aspired after will never come in the simple primitive form, but it will come in a higher and scientifically adjusted form,—as a permeative factor in a highly complex order of society. That form Proudhon failed to discover and formulate. Both his argument and his remedy for existing evils, on that head, are fallacious. One side of the truth of the subject, the individualistic side, Warren, more fortunate than Proudhon, did discover and formulate; the other side, the opposite and counterbalancing side, is communism, best represented as yet, on any large scale, by the Oneida Perfectionists. These two opposite ideas and types of life are to be reconciled and united, not merely despite of their oppositeness, but because of their oppositeness. Everything that approximates perfection is made up, primarily, of two opposite factors. This is the meaning of sex in the universe, the type and model of the reconciliation of opposites. We must and shall attain, therefore, to the mutual adjustment, harmony, and balanced vibration of sundered equality and communistic unity in the bosom of a higher reconciliative unity. That Proudhon did not attain to this idea condemns him as a lover of thought for our epoch. It makes of him what Fourier would call a simplist, a man of one idea, of the vision of one side of the truth, and, in this case not a clear vision of that.

Now that we have this book in English, it should go into every library; should be consulted, and, if leisure permits, read by every advanced student of these high questions, and should be prized as a contribution to the history of the evolution of thought in this line. But every reader should be notified that it is already superseded by better thought on the same subjects; and it seems hardly worth while on the part of Mr. Tucker to import at great cost the less perfect lucubrations of even a truly great thinker of a past epoch, when the later thought of our home production, and of our day, is so superior, even to the extent of the whole difference between failure and complete solution. Mr. Tucker, in disposing of himself, is recommended to study the doctrine of RELATIVE VALUES. It is not enough that such a man should be engaged in doing a good thing. He should be quite certain that he is engaged in doing the very best thing. He should, in other words, economize himself, on the ground that good men are scarce.

There is, nevertheless, a sense in which this and the other works of Proudhon have an intrinsic value altogether above and beyond that which attaches to his particular dogmas and solutions. I mean in respect to method. No man of his epoch, perhaps, in the whole world, understood so well; none, I am certain, insisted so earnestly and effectively upon the true scientific method; that which carries everything by analysis back to first principles; but in this also he is superseded now by a better understanding of that method. Permit me, in conclusion, to point out some inaccuracies even in his closest reasonings.

The deepest conviction, the intellectual worship, of Proudhon was invested in the idea of equality. In this nobody is, by organization and conviction, more profoundly sympathetic with him than I am, but within limits which are also imposed upon me by intellectual analysis. I am compelled to see that intrinsically, metaphysically, mathematically, scientifically—every way,—equality has, set over against it, inequality, as a counterbalancing principle, equal in validity and extension to itself. Proudhon was grandly precise, and impressive, and almost unique, in his assertion of the principle that all science must be carried back and down to mathematical origins, before it can claim to be truly scientific. But he merely sensed the principle, and dogmatically maintained it. He failed to discover the method of it, so as to make it a corrective, or a canon of criticism upon his own reasonings and the reasonings of others. By the mathematical analogies, equality refers to the equal or even numbers, and inequality to the unequal or odd numbers, and both are alike fundamental in the mathematical series. What does it mean, then, when this great thinker affirms that justice and society itself are absolute synonyms of equality; except simply that he is mistaken? It means that he came short of a full understanding of his subject, and that he was not true to, because he did not comprehend, the method which he, with such utter fidelity, believed in. It was his immense merit to have "intuited" its validity, and to have deferred, even theoretically, to its demands; but it was not given to him to thread its intricacies, or rather to discover its almost infinite simplicity.

He could not fail to meet the consequences of his lack of mastery of the true method. He came unprepared for the satisfactory answers of some of his own most pregnant questions. I cite, as instance, "that the preferences of love and friendship are unjust?" Certainly it does, if justice means simple and absolute equality. Equality is impartiality, and preference is partiality; and if justice is equality, pure and simple, which is the author's prime postulate, then justice excludes absolutely all favoritism, all partiality, the preferences of love and friendship included. Justice and equality being co-extensive and synonymous with society, there is no place left in society for grace and favor of any kind. Straight-linism has excluded the possibilities of curvature, and consequently of grace or gracefulness.

There is no avoidance of this logic. The efforts of the author to escape from his own trap are painful. "Within universal society," he says, "there exist for each of us as many special societies as there are individuals; and we are bound, by the principle of sociability itself, to fulfill the obligations which these impose upon us, according to the intimacy of our relations with them." But there was nothing said of universal and special when the prime postulate was propounded; and, what principle of sociability? By the prime postulate the only principle of sociability is equality, which prohibits absolutely what is now asserted. This introduction, on the sly, of an opposite principle of sociability, referring it to the degree of "intimacy of our relations with others" and to "social compact," new and unheard-of factors in the calculation, is what the philosophers call a "surreptitious interpolation"; and through this loop in his logic, the proprietor of every grade escapes from the force of any part of it.

What a writer discussing this subject, radically, should have done, would be, first, to lay down the proposition that society rests upon two equal and equally fundamental bases; the one impartiality or equality, and the other partiality or inequality; then to inquire and ascertain in what spheres impartiality should prevail, and in what spheres partiality should be indulged and fostered; and then what is the proportion between them, their balanced vibration, their ultimate reconciliation. Proudhon is wholly right in his conclusion, that commercial exchanges should rest, like the administration of public justice, on the basis of equality; but he is wholly wrong, when, in order to reach the conclusion, he affirms that equality is the sole factor of society itself, or that the two (equality and society) are synonymous. Indeed, it is my anxiety to place his conclusion on an absolutely safe logical basis, which he has not done, that forces me to criticize his logical procedure.

I should like to say more of the author's use of the terms justice, équité, and proportionality, but I must resist the temptation, and let this suffice for the present. I will observe, however, again, in conclusion, that it seems a pity to continue any longer the wholly vague, or the partially scientific, treatment of social subjects, now that science is competent to cover that whole domain. Proudhon belongs as definitely to the past, at this day, and to the mere history of ideas, as Ptolemy after Copernicus; and, while I have conceded that, from that point of view, it is well to read him, I fear that, incidentally, Mr. Tucker's enterprise may contribute to the wasting of the time of new students. Such certainly would be the case, if all that is known on the subject were published and accessible. As it is, perhaps the best that can be done is to read Proudhon.

NATIONAL REFORM ASSOCIATION,

ORGANIZED TO MAINTAIN EXISTING CHRISTIAN FEATURES OF THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT, AND SECURE A RELIGIOUS AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

CALL FOR A NATIONAL CENTENNIAL CONVENTION.

A century ago our fathers based the nation, in the very beginning of its independent life, on the principles of general, unsectarian Christianity. Declaring their independence of oppressive human authority, they did not fail also to declare devoutly their national dependence upon God. Having inherited Christian institutions of civil government from the fathers who settled the country, they transmitted them to their children. Providentially and historically, we are a Christian nation. With Christianity as a recognized part of the common law of the land; with the Christian Sabbath as the sacred day acknowledged by law; with the oath of God as the pledge of official fidelity and the instrument of investigation in our courts of justice; with days of public fasting and thanksgiving set apart by State and national appointment; with Christian ministers employed by government to conduct divine service in the legislatures of the nation and the States, in the army and navy, and in educational and reformatory institutions; and, above all, with the Bible as our national book, in our common schools, the symbol and standard held aloft, during all our history, in the forefront of our system of public education, we have, as a nation, Christian responsibilities which we dare not ignore, and a Christian character which we are most sacredly bound to maintain.

As we enter upon this second century of our national independence, we cannot be blind to the fact that great and growing dangers threaten our Christian institutions of government. The theory of secularism, essentially hostile to the principles and purposes of the men whose deeds we now commemorate, is undoing the work of the fathers. Its advocates have repeatedly assailed the employment of chaplains in Congress and State legislatures, and, in some cases, with success. Their influence has led judges of the Supreme Court of New York city, the Supreme Court of California, and the Supreme Court of Ohio, and even Christian ministers, to affirm that Christianity is no part of our common law. They have rendered our Sabbath laws in many cases inoperative, and imperilled their observance in connection with the Centennial Exhibition. They have stricken the name of God from the oath, as frequently administered, and boldly demand that it be wholly abolished. They have driven the Bible from the public schools of St. Louis, Chicago, Rochester, San Francisco, and other important places. In a word, they insist that the connection which has always existed, and still exists, between the American government and the Christian religion shall be severed at every point.

In all these assaults the appeal is made to the Constitution of the United States. This written instrument, the basis of all national institutions, the compact by which we agree to be governed as a nation, acknowledges no connection between our government and Christianity. It contains no explicit acknowledgment of God, of Christ, or of the Bible. It is maintained that the government itself should be as secular as its written Constitution; that the institutions of the nation should be in harmony with the fundamental law on which they rest. The want of any acknowledgment of God or the Christian religion in the National Constitution is the most formidable weapon in the hands of the enemies of the Christian institutions of our nation. Nor do they fail to employ it.

Thus the issue is pressed upon us: clearly and indisputably conform the written Constitution to the actual character of the nation, or allow the nation itself to be drawn into conformity to the Constitution. We cannot evade it. It must be met and settled. As patriotic citizens, concerned for the nation, we must take our stand. It is not the existence of Christianity or the Bible that is at stake. It is our national welfare, our national character, our Christian institutions of government, and our religious and civil liberties resting upon them. Commemorating this Centennial year the achievements of Christian ancestors, shall we suffer the inheritance which they purchased at incalculable cost, and bequeathed to us, to be robbed of its glory? Shall we permit the Bible to be banished from our schools, and our Sabbath laws to be violated, because there is no acknowledgment of God, and Christ, and the Bible in the Constitution? Shall we not rather, in the spirit of the fathers, and carrying out their purposes, cherish the Christian schools and laws that have come down to us, and in the day of their peril secure for them an undeniable legal basis in the nation's fundamental law? Wise statesmanship, fidelity to the trust from our fathers, and our duty to the generations to come, alike dictate our choice.

In the words of one of the wisest of our citizens and most patriotic of our lawyers, now gone to his rest: "God preserve us, we must go back. We must reform our political administrations in the all-important point of their moral principles. Our Christian population must do this. It is a work for them, and every other work of theirs will be hindered till this is done. We must retrace our steps, retrieve our errors, regain the position we have lost. Reform is wanted in another sense than what party schemers think of. Let us have a reformation of the elements of public life. Let us dig up the buried standard of the fathers, and fashion ourselves anew by it. Let us return to the primary spirit of the government, ere the doom of the nations that forget God becomes our own."

The NATIONAL REFORM ASSOCIATION, organized to maintain existing features of the American government, and secure a Religious Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, invites all auxiliary associations, and all bodies of citizens who favor this cause, without distinction of party or creed, to appoint delegates to attend the Convention to be held in the ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Philadelphia, beginning Wednesday evening, June 28th, at 7 o'clock, and closing on the evening of Friday, June 30th, 1876.

FELIX R. BRUNOT,

President of the National Reform Association.

VICE-PRESIDENTS:

The Hon. JAMES M. HARVEY, United States Senate.
The Hon. LORENZO SAWYER, U. S. Circuit Court, San Francisco, California.
The Hon. G. W. BROOKS, U. S. District Court of North Carolina.
The Hon. EDGAR W. HILLIER, U. S. District Court of Nevada.
The Hon. F. C. SAFFOLD, Supreme Court of Alabama.
The Hon. C. C. COLE, U. S. District Court of Iowa.
The Hon. JAMES PHELPS, Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut.
The Hon. M. B. HAGANS, Superior Court of Cincinnati.
The Hon. J. ROCKWELL, Superior Court of Massachusetts.
The Hon. GEORGE W. FRENCH, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Dakota.
The Hon. DAVID NOGGETT, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Idaho.
The Hon. MADISON E. HOLLISTER, Supreme Court of Idaho.
The Hon. ROBERT S. GREENE, Supreme Court of Washington Territory.
The Hon. ROBERT W. FURNAS, Ex-Governor of Nebraska.
The Hon. HEZEKIAH S. JOHNSON, Supreme Court of New Mexico.
The Hon. J. W. KINGMAN, Supreme Court of Wyoming Territory.
The Hon. C. M. HAWLEY, Late Justice Supreme Court of Utah.
The Hon. J. W. MCCLURG, Ex-Governor of Missouri.
The Hon. W. H. CUMBACK, Ex-Lieut.-Governor of Indiana.
The Rt. Rev. WM. INGRAHAM KIP, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of California.
Pres. DAVID H. COCHRAN, Ph. D., L.L.D., College and Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn.
The Rev. CHARLES ELIOTT, D.D., Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago.
Prof. E. KIRBY SMITH, University of Nashville, Tennessee.
The Rev. GEORGE B. CHEEVER, D.D., Englewood, New Jersey.
Prof. W. HENRY GREEN, D.D., L.L.D., Princeton Theological Seminary, New Jersey.
The Rev. WM. R. NICHOLSON, D.D., Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Philadelphia.
Prof. TAYLER LEWIS, L.L.D., L.H.D., Union College, New York.
The Right Rev. JOHN B. KEFOOT, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of Pittsburgh.
The Rev. T. L. CUTLER, D.D., Brooklyn.
The Rev. LEVI SCOTT, D.D., Bishop of the M. E. Church, Odessa, Delaware.
The Hon. JULIUS H. SEELYE, United States House of Representatives.
The Right Rev. F. D. HUNTINGTON, D.D., Bishop of the Prot. Epi. Church, Diocese of Central New York.
The Rev. A. A. MINER, D.D., L.L.D., Boston.

The Rev. JONATHAN EDWARDS, D.D., LL.D., Peoria, Illinois.
The Rev. EDMUND S. JAMES, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of the M. E. Church, New York.
The Rev. HENRY J. FOX, D.D., Charleston, S.C.
The Right Rev. W. M. GREEN, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Miss.
Vice-Chancellor J. GORGAS, University of the South, Tennessee.
The Right Rev. G. T. WEDDELL, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Ohio.
The Hon. ELLIS A. APGAR, State Supt. of Public Instruction, New Jersey.
The Hon. A. N. FISHER, State Supt. of Public Instruction, Nevada.
The Hon. JOSIAH H. DRUMMOND, LL.D., Philadelphia.
JOHN ALEXANDER, Esq., Philadelphia.
CHARLES G. NAZRO, Esq., Boston, Massachusetts.
The Hon. THOMAS W. BICKNELL, Editor of Journal of Education, Boston.
JAMES W. TAYLOR, Esq., Newbury, New York.
WILLIAM GETTY, Esq., Philadelphia.
The Right Rev. G. D. CUMMINS, D.D., Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Newark, N.J.
The Rev. J. H. McILVAINE, D.D., Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Phila.
The Rev. M. SIMPSON, D.D., L.L.D., President of Wheaton College, Illinois.
Prof. O. N. STODDARD, LL.D., Wooster University, Ohio.
Prof. J. R. W. SLOANE, D.D., Ref. Presbyterian Theo. Sem., Allegheny.
The Rev. E. R. CRAVEN, D.D., Newark, New Jersey.
The Rev. JOSEPH CUMMINGS, D.D., LL.D., Middletown, Connecticut.
The Rev. STEPHEN B. TYNG, D.D., New York.
The Rev. F. MERRICK, Ex-President of the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio.
The Rev. JOHN S. DALES, D.D., Philadelphia.
The Rev. JOSEPH T. COOPER, D.D., Pittsburgh.
The Rev. J. BANVAED, D.D., Paterson, New Jersey.
The Rev. C. H. EDGAR, D.D., Easton, Pa.
The Rev. D. STEELE, D.D., Philadelphia.
The Rev. JOHN S. STONE, D.D., Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.
The Rev. H. DYER, D.D., Cor. Sec. of Evangelical Knowledge Society, N.Y.
The Rev. THOMAS SPROULL, D.D., Ref. Presbyterian Theo. Sem., Allegheny.
President W. F. KING, D.D., Cornell College, Iowa.
President J. W. STRONG, D.D., Carleton College, Minnesota.
President THOMAS HOLMES, D.D., Union Christian College, Merom, Ind.
The Rev. DAVID R. KERE, D.D., United Presbyterian Theo. Seminary, Allegheny.
The Hon. JAMES DAWSON, Washington, Iowa.
The Rev. EDWIN S. WEBB, D.D., Shrewsbury, Mass.
President J. F. COOK, LL.D., La Grange College, Missouri.
The Rev. DORIS CLARK, D.D., Boston, Mass.
President SOLOMON POOL, D.D., University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C.
President WALTER HILLMAN, LL.D., Central Female Institute, Mississippi.
Professor EDMUND H. BENNETT, LL.D., Boston University, Massachusetts.
The Rev. ROBERT BETHEL L. CLAXTON, D.D., Philadelphia.
President A. J. MCGILVER, D.D., Lincoln University, Illinois.
The Rev. B. P. AYDELOTT, D.D., Cincinnati.
S. H. FORD, LL.D., Editor Christian Repository, St. Louis, Mo.
President L. H. HAMMOND, Lebanon Valley College, Pennsylvania.
President REUBEN ANDRUS, D.D., Indiana Asbury University, Indiana.
President A. B. MILLER, D.D., Waynesburg College, Pennsylvania.
The Rev. A. A. HODGE, D.D., Western Theological Seminary, Allegheny.
President GEORGE P. HAYS, D.D., Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa.
President DANIEL RICE, D.D., Logansport Female College, Logansport, Indiana.
The Rev. M. W. JACOBUS, D.D., LL.D., Western Theo. Seminary, Allegheny, Penn.
President P. M. BARTLETT, D.D., Maryville College, Maryville, Blount Co., Tenn.
President DAVID A. WALLACE, D.D., LL.D., Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois.
President MILTON VALENTINE, D.D., Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pennsylvania.
The Rev. S. J. WILSON, D.D., Western Theo. Seminary, Allegheny, Penn.
Pres. O. L. SMITH, D.D., Emory College, Oxford, Georgia.

GENERAL SECRETARY:

The Rev. D. MCALLISTER, 137 North Seventh Street, Philadelphia.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY:

The Rev. T. P. STEVENSON, 137 North Seventh Street, Philadelphia.

RECORDING SECRETARY:

The Rev. W. W. BARR, D.D., Philadelphia.

TREASURER:

SAMUEL AGNEW, Esq., 1135 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

The following gentlemen concur in the foregoing call:—

The Right Rev. THOMAS H. VAIL, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of Kansas.
The Rev. GILBERT HAYEN, D.D., Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Atlanta, Ga.
The Rev. WM. M. CORNELL, M.D., D.D., LL.D., Boston, Massachusetts.
The Rev. E. O. HAVEN, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y.
The Rev. J. WEAVER, D.D., Bishop of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, Dayton, O.
The Rev. DAVID EDWARDS, D.D., Bishop of the Ch. of the United Brethren in Christ, Baltimore, Md.
The Rev. J. DICKSON, D.D., Bishop of the Ch. of the United Brethren in Christ, Decatur, Ill.
The Rev. RICHARD NEWTON, D.D., Philadelphia.
The Rev. E. B. MORRIS, D.D., Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio.
The Rev. WILLIAM SPEER, D.D., Cor. Sec. of the Pres. Board of Education, Philadelphia.
The Rev. JONATHAN BRACE, D.D., Editor of the Religious Herald, Hartford, Conn.
The Rev. J. C. BOIBROOK, D.D., Sec. of the N. Y. Cong. Home Miss. Society, Syracuse, N.Y.
The Rev. HENRY COWLES, D.D., Oberlin, Ohio.
The Rev. C. H. PAYNE, D.D., President of the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio.
Brev't Brig.-Gen. JAMES A. EGIN, U. S. Quartermaster's Department, Louisville, Ky.
Gen. C. H. HOWARD, Proprietor and Editor of the Advance, Chicago, Ill.
The Hon. N. W. BATTLE, Judge of the Criminal Court, Waco, Texas.
Prof. O. N. STODDARD, Wooster University, Wooster, O.
The Rev. D. S. GREGORY, D.D., Prof. of Moral Philosophy, Wooster University, Wooster, Ohio.
The Rev. E. G. BROOKS, D.D., Pastor of Church of the Messiah, Phila.
The Rev. J. E. BANKIN, D.D., Washington, D.C.
The Rev. JOSEPH E. BODWELL, Hartford, Conn.
The Rev. WILBUR F. PADDOCK, D.D., Philadelphia.
Prof. J. R. HENRICK, D.D., South Hadley, Mass.
The Rev. GEO. H. GOULD, D.D., Worcester, Mass.
The Rev. WILLIAM R. CLARKE, D.D., Boston, Mass.
The Rev. JAMES P. LANE, Bristol, R.I.
The Rev. A. F. BEARD, D.D., Syracuse, N.Y.
The Rev. T. W. HAWKS, D.D., Marietta, Ohio.
The Rev. S. F. SCOVILL, Pittsburgh, Pa.
The Rev. D. W. C. HUNTINGTON, D.D., Syracuse, New York.
The Rev. JAMES M. CROWELL, D.D., Philadelphia.
The Rev. ROBERT PATTERSON, D.D., San Francisco, Cal.
The Rev. J. A. LANSING, D.D., Brooklyn, N.Y.
The Rev. J. W. HANSEN, D.D., Chicago, Illinois.
Prof. WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Pres. Theo. Seminary, San Francisco, Cal.
Prof. J. DEWITT MILLER, Fort Edward Institute, Fort Edward, N.Y.
The Rev. A. RITTENHOUSE, Presiding Elder of the M. E. Conference, Phila.
GEORGE W. HILL, Esq., President of the American Life Ins. Co. Philadelphia.

ADDRESS OF THE AMERICAN ALLIANCE
TO AMERICAN VOTERS.1871. NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ROOMS,
NEW YORK, June 8, 1876.

At a "conference" of delegates representing different American orders in the United States, held in Philadelphia, on May 19, 1876, a joint organization was perfected under the name and title of the American Alliance, based upon, and to further the principles of, "Americans ruling America." The rules and by-laws of the American Grand Council of the United States, 1871, were adopted, and a National Committee was appointed, composed of delegates present, with instructions to issue an address to the American voters of the nation, and to take such other measures as might be necessary to further the interests of the Alliance, political and otherwise. The committee, therefore, beg leave to present the following facts for the serious consideration of their American fellow-citizens. The orders embraced in the Alliance were severally formed in the years 1871 and 1873, for the purpose of founding a political party of American-born citizens, in favor of such legislation as might be necessary for putting a check upon the wholesale manufacture of citizenship from the foreign material that floods to our land, and often unfitted to be invested with the same.

Without being able to read or write, in many instances, and even to understand the language of the country, the foreign newly-made voter easily falls a prey to some petty political aspirant for place, is marched to the polls, and his vote offsets that of the citizen who must be a resident of the country twenty-one years before exercising the same privilege.

By this system, the halls of Congress and State legislatures have been disgraced, and seats secured in the same by unfit persons, and in some instances where the proper place for such was in entirely different institutions. The American Alliance recommends that American-born citizens only be elected to official positions of high trust and responsibility, and (while admitting the right of everyone to the enjoyment to the fullest extent of his political or religious creed and convictions) favor the keeping of the Bible as the "corner-stone of our liberties," and its use in the public schools and other institutions of learning in our land, without any compromise of any kind with any sect whatever. The orders of the American Alliance have secretly organized, and carefully watched the intrigues of an invidious and crafty foe to popular liberty throughout the world, which, driven from other nations, hopes and seeks to obtain a foothold in America.

Within the past year an envoy, clothed with special powers from Rome, and uniformed and wearing the arms of a soldier, had the audacity, in a so-called Christian church in the city of New York, to publicly invest a religious prelate with a title of "Prince," by the orders of the foreign potentate, whose followers consider the rulers of this and other nations as second in their obedience and consideration. Americans, if we are to have any price for ruler, let us see that we have one of our own selection.

It is said we have "invited the oppressed of every clime to an asylum upon our shores." If so, the invitation was limited; it certainly was not intended to convey the idea that we were blindly to accept all their views, and consent to be ruled and have the laws of our country made by and for their especial benefit; far from it.

Americans, it is time for an "American Balance of Power" in this country. One great political party of the day calculates its majorities, at the elections in many of the principal cities, upon the foreign vote entirely, and parcels out its patronage as a reward for such services, and now seeks to obtain control of the government of the country by the same means. Americans, see to it that it is not successful at the polls. Act, and at once; and at the coming election cast your vote only for those who favor the principles of this appeal. To the residents of the country of foreign birth, for services rendered in defence of the nation, we recommend the bestowal of citizenship, as a "mark of honor" to them, and in most instances they would consider it as such, and in preference to the manner in which it is obtained at present. It is not the foreign resident who is at fault, but that corrupting influence that aims to use one nationality of them, in order to carry out its designs upon this continent.

Americans, it is for you to settle this question now, and not leave it for those who follow in your footsteps to do; that would be unfair to them, and cowardly for you. It is easy for you now, and time will make it difficult for them then. You have no right to bequeath any such legacy to them. The National Committee have been given authority to confer with all American societies not represented at the conference, and also, if in their judgment it is considered necessary, to call a National Conference in the city of Philadelphia, on the 4th of July, 1876, for the purpose of acting upon nominations for President and Vice-President of the United States, upon the principles advocated by the American Alliance, and also to recommend an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to enable the voter to cast his vote directly for President and Vice-President, instead of as provided at present. A special call has been issued for such purpose, and each State Council will send two delegates to such conference, by order of this Committee, and approved by the Grand Council of the United States. All American societies or orders who desire to take part in the movement are cordially invited to appoint two delegates to confer with the special committee of the Alliance. Correspondence is also invited from all who favor the object in view, as set forth by this committee.

The American Alliance embraces among its members eminent statesmen, and gentlemen who have occupied high positions of trust and responsibility, and soldiers who have ranked high in the service of their country, with a perfect and harmonious organization in nearly every State of the Union, perfected by the secrecy of its movements, and invites every American to join the order. "In union is strength." The American Alliance is truly a secret Order of Americans, who claim the right in their own country to organize and act as such. It is not the only secret society in this land; even secret foreign orders are in operation here, and among the many may be noted a branch of the Order of Jesus, so-called, whose headquarters are at Rome, and which is known in this country as the Roman Catholic Central Society of the United States, besides other foreign societies, too numerous and unnecessary to mention here. Americans! hold the fort! Charters of the American Alliance to form councils will be granted by the Grand Council of the United States to all American-born citizens, white or colored, throughout the country, free, upon application for the same, signed by at least five persons, which, together with all communications, should be addressed to the Secretary American Alliance, P. O. box 2,071, New York City. By order American National Committee,

LEMUEL S. TYLER,
Chief Secretary, A. A.

—N. Y. Sun, June 9.

LEST IT SHOULD go unnoticed by those of our editorial brethren who teach that all Catholics desire to control our public schools in the interest of the Church of Rome, we invite attention to the action of a Catholic member of the Boston Board of Education. When a liberal member of this Board (which elects school supervisors from its own body) proposed to elect as a supervisor some Catholic who should be a representative of his sect, a Catholic member of the Board objected. Professing unwavering adherence to his own faith, he nevertheless said "that he was not elected a member of the Board as a Catholic, nor to represent Catholics especially, but the whole people. He would sooner resign his position altogether than to hold it with any understanding, expressed or implied, that he was the representative of the Roman Catholic people solely. He believed that the sooner the bigots on both sides, whether Catholic or Protestant, took their hands off the public schools, the better it would be for them and for the schools. He hoped to see the day when no form or ceremony of religion, whether of prayers or hymns or whatever else, should find place in the sessions of the public schools, but that they should be strictly secular, as much so as the dry-goods shops or railway-cars. He would have the sessions of the schools so conducted that no pupil, whether, Jew, Catholic, or Protestant, should bear anything therein which should hurt his or her religious feelings." We hope this manly utterance will be honored with as wide quotation and comment as some bigoted and senseless expressions upon the other side have called forth of late.—Christian Union.

THE HOUSES OF 1776.—Of architecture, let it be remembered, there was little or none. The house was built simply and substantially for use, and not for display. The timbers were so large and so sound, that even the wear and tear of a hundred years have often left them unimpaired. Bricks were often imported from England. Windows were small, and the panes diminutive; 6x8, 7x9, and 8x10, being the common sizes of French window-glass advertised for sale. The house was generally square, the walls of exceeding thickness; the chimney rose massive and capacious in the centre; the interior walls were paneled, and the great oaken beams crossed the ceiling in plain sight. The centre of the house, and of the family life which it sheltered, was the open wood-fire, which blazed cheerfully in the huge fireplace of the living-room. Stoves were unknown; and no furnace sent its currents of overheated air to hall or chamber. Cooking was done in tin-kitchens or turn-spits placed before the fire, or in pots hung by links and hooks from the swinging crane, or in the great brick oven which the chimney work included on one side.—Edward Abbott's "Revolutionary Times."

A HEBREW GENTLEMAN had a legacy left to him, but it was hampered with an unfortunate condition, which he hastened to announce to a sympathizing friend. The sum was £10,000, but half the sum, according to the testator's wishes, was to be placed in his coffin and buried with him. Was there ever such a waste of good money? But the sympathizer was equal to the occasion. "Where is the money now?" he asked, and was told "In the bank." "All right," he said; "you write a check for £5,000, and put it in the old boy's coffin, drawn to order!" That young man ought to get on in the world.—N. Y. World.

A PIOUS New Jersey dame has stopped praying for her husband, because as she says, "I have prayed so long without effect that I think the Lord has just as poor an opinion of the man as I have."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 17.

D. B. Scofield, $3.15; Maggie Devoe, $1.60; W. C. Kelley, $3; T. L. Mann, $2.40; G. Chatterton, $1.75; C. T. Pratt, $3.20; Mrs. L. B. Sayles, $3; Mrs. Peter Phillips, $3; J. Miel, $6.40; W. H. Saxton, $3.20; E. O. Parker, $3; R. T. Starr, $3.20; Jackson Brothers, $1.20; John Curtis, $4.80; Chas. E. Gager, $1; F. Hyde, 20 cents; B. B. Griswold, $1; —, $3.38; J. O. Bentley, $3.20; W. W. Scholes, 10 cents; J. E. Boynton, $3.25; J. H. Woods, $1.10; Geo. Martin, $4.45; J. York, $3.20; Eliza W. Leggett, $3.20; H. Powers, $3; Geo. Draper, $3.20; Mary E. Wylie, $1.10; William Fels, 10 cents; J. A. J. Wilcox, $3.20; J. Reedy, $3.20; J. G. Richardson, $1.50.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

F. A. Angell, New York	$1.00
Ebenezer Haskell, Philadelphia	1.00
Friends in Boston	40.00
Carl H. Horsch, Dover, N.H.	2.50
T. W. Higginson, Newport, R.I.	2.00
A. Schelling, Philadelphia	1.00
Richard Hackett, Philadelphia	1.00
W. H. Spencer, Sparta, Wis.	18.00
E. M. Harris, Baltimore	1.00
R. M. J. Vail, Port Jervis, N.Y.	1.00
Sauk City (Wis.) Liberal League	20.00
Mrs. M. P. Southworth, Cleveland, O.	5.00
Israel Betz, Oakville, Pa.	1.00
J. J. Hoopes, Philadelphia	1.00
Alex. Cochran, Franklin, Pa.	5.00
B. B. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	2.00
Warren Griswold, " "	1.00
M. Bamberger, Piedmont, W. Va.	1.00
Wm. Sisson, Port Hope, Ontario	1.00
Chas. Nash and sister, Worcester, Mass.	4.00
C. B. Peckham, Newport, R. I.	2.00
S. E. Honey, " "	2.00
J. G. Mills, Goshen, N. Y.	1.00
Geo. W. Julian, Irvington, Ind.	1.00
Alex. Risk, Winthrop, Iowa	2.50
J. O. Bentley, Philadelphia	5.00
J. S. Bonsall, Salem, Ohio	.90
O. B. Frothingham, New York	10.00
Mrs. Ellen J. Hasker, Philadelphia	5.00
Mrs. Hannah Merley, Philadelphia	1.00
George Langford, " "	1.00
Thos. Phillips, " "	1.00
Carl Doerflinger, Milwaukee	1.00
Henry D. Maxson, Amherst, Mass.	1.00
A. Friend, New Bedford, Mass.	10.00
Chas. F. Steele, Brooklyn, N. Y.	10.00
Friends in Brooklyn, N. Y.	20.00
S. R. Koehler, Boston	2.00
John Carson, Troy Mills, Iowa	1.00
H. T. Marshall, Brockton, Mass.	1.00
H. C. Gray, Painesville, O., (collection)	5.50
J. Budgebeer, " "	.50
Through Banner of Light	15.50
" Boston Investigator	18.75
" New Age	5.50
M. Altman, New York City	20.00
F. A. Green, Boston	6.00
Friends in Boston	2.00
J. V. Blake, Boston	5.00
A. Friend in " "	5.00
Geo. W. Park, " "	3.00
Chas. W. Wendte, Cincinnati	5.00
Robert Moore, St. Louis	10.00
James Eddy, Providence	5.00
W. Eysenbach, Lima, O.	.50
W. L. Foster, East Stoughton, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. Mary G. Thompson, Lancaster, Mass.	3.00
John Wise, Philadelphia	1.00
A. Friend in New Jersey	10.00
John Gillies, St. Louis	50.00
Robert Collyer, Chicago	50.00
"An English Brother" (£5)	27.25
J. W. Frank, Dysart, Iowa	1.00
Louis Löwenthal, Rochester, N. Y.	2.00
B. F. Underwood, Thorndike, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. Wm. Heine, Pleasant Hill, Mo.	1.00
Adam Wolfe, Port Byron, N. Y.	2.00
Thos. H. Matthews, New Bedford	5.00
S. F. Spangler, Winthrop, Iowa	5.00
D. Sandman, Harre Mills, Wis.	1.00
E. R. Brown, Elmwood, Ill.	1.00
C. M. Dennison, New York	5.00
Mrs. Orrin Gillet, Parma, Mich.	5.00
M. Jacoby, St. Louis	2.00
O. W. Hayer, St. Louis	3.00
Philip Godheart, St. Louis	2.00
Mrs. Kotany, St. Louis	1.00
Kohn & Co., St. Louis	2.00
C. H. Shepard, Brooklyn	5.00
William Green, Brooklyn	5.00
Sidney H. Morse, Boston	100.00
Gilbert Cope, West Chester, Pa.	1.00
F. M. Vaughan, Middleboro, Mass.	1.00
E. R. McKenzie, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
W. C. Fuller, Willimantic, Ct.	3.00
D. P. Wilcox, Yankton, Dakota Territory	1.00
Dr. J. N. Lyman, Columbus, O.	5.00
Daniel G. Crandon, Chelsea, Mass.	1.00
Geo. Lewis, Providence, R. I.	1.00
Jas. Dillaway, Somerville, Mass.	1.00
Liberal League, Minneapolis, Minn.	30.00
David Ferguson, Waupun, Wis.	5.00
Matilda Goddard, Boston	5.00
Banner of Light , Boston	5.00
William C. Gannett, Boston	10.00
Geo. Dimmock, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
Marcus F. Whitehead, Jersey City, N. J.	2.50
J. Farnsworth, Fort Scott, Kan.	1.00
J. L. Cutler, Quitman, Ga.	3.00
Friends in Dexter, Me.	2.00
Henry Damon, Boston	2.00
L. Kingman, Buffalo, N. Y.	2.50
Dr. L. P. Babb, Eastport, Me.	1.00
John Keppler, New Frankfurt, Mo.	1.00
Job Angell, Providence	1.00
A. Friend in Concord, Mass.	1.00
J. E. Oliver, Ithaca, N. Y.	5.00
Wm. J. Potter, New Bedford, Mass.	2.00
Lewis G. James, New York	1.00
Rabbi S. H. Sonnenschein, St. Louis	2.00
Hon. John B. Henderson, " "	5.00
Rev. J. C. Learned, " "	2.00
James E. Yeatman, " "	5.00
Rev. R. A. Holland, " "	1.00
Hon. A. W. Kelsey, " "	10.00
Jacob Hoffman, Cincinnati	5.00
Joseph Rosenthal, Granby, Mo.	1.00
William Barnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	2.50
Joseph Barnsdall, " "	2.00
S. R. Urbino, Boston	2.00
L. Prang, Boston	5.00
W. H. Studley, Boston	2.00
H. C. Watson, " "	1.00
W. Warren, " "	2.00
A. Friend, " "	1.00
Wm. Dudgeon, New Hartford, N. Y.	5.00
Chas. Coffin, New Bedford	1.00
Elizur Wright, Boston	5.00
C. Wheeler, Boston	1.00
Mrs. E. B. Chace, Valley Falls, R. I.	10.00
W. W. Stout, Vienna, Ill.	1.00
George Hes, Montreal, Can.	2.00
Dr. H. Nye, Enon Valley, Pa.	1.00
A. Hiller, " "	1.00
F. Alsdorf, " "	1.00
C. Fischer, " "	1.00
D. A. Robertson, " "	1.00
A. Folsom, Boston	5.00
C. Vonnegut, Indianapolis, Ind.	5.00
C. Vonnegut, Jr., " "	2.50
W. Steinwedell, Quincy, Ill.	1.00
H. O. Glattfeld, " "	1.00
A. H. Bates, " "	1.50

June 20.....$719.83

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

Mar. 10.	Received of	F. A. Angell, Passaic, N. J.	$5.00
" 13.	"	M. Einstein, Titusville, Pa.	2.00
" 13.	"	W. Barnsdall, " "	2.00
" 13.	"	E. Whitcher, Boston.	5.00
" 13.	"	J. Davison, Alfred Centre, N.Y.	1.00
" 21.	"	Jas. Dillaway, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
" 21.	"	M. L. Hawley, Marathon, N.Y.	3.00
" 21.	"	R. H. Ranney, Boston.	6.00
" 21.	"	F. E. Abbot, Boston.	25.00
" 21.	"	C. A. Gurley, Pulaski, N. Y.	50.00
" 25.	"	Emily J. Leonard, Meriden, Ct.	10.00
" 25.	"	S. R. Urbino, W. Newton, Mass.	5.00
" 25.	"	Jehu Hiatt, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
" 25.	"	A Friend	1.00
" 25.	"	C. H. Horsch, Dover, N.H.	2.50
" 25.	"	Edw. Wigglesworth, Jr., Boston	15.00
April 1.	"	T. W. Higginson, Newport, R.I.	3.00
" 1.	"	Israel Betz, Oakville, Pa.	5.00
" 1.	"	Mrs. M. P. Southworth, Cleveland, O.	5.00
" 1.	"	S. Warbasse, La Fayette, N.J.	2.00
" 3.	"	A Friend in New York City	50.00
" 3.	"	Sauk City (Wis.) Liberal League	20.00
" 3.	"	R. B. Stone, Forrester, Miss.	5.00
" 8.	"	J. D. Lange, New York City	5.00
" 8.	"	Jane P. Titcomb, Boston	2.00
" 8.	"	Alex. Cochran, Franklin, Pa.	5.00
" 8.	"	B. B. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	10.00
" 8.	"	Warren Griswold, " "	5.00
" 8.	"	C. Nash and sister, Worcester, Mass.	4.00
" 8.	"	F. E. Nipher, St. Louis	2.00
" 8.	"	K. Hoegh, La Crosse, Wis.	3.00
" 10.	"	H. K. Oliver, Jr., Boston	5.00
" 13.	"	S. R. Honey, Newport, R. I.	3.00
" 13.	"	A. S. Brown, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
" 13.	"	C. B. Peckham, Newport, R. I.	3.00
" 13.	"	Geo. W. Julian, Irvington, Ind.	1.00
" 13.	"	Alex. Risk, Winthrop, Iowa	2.50
" 13.	"	Jas. Eddy, Providence, R. I.	10.00
" 13.	"	G. P. Reynolds (for "Liberals of Shelley, O.")	8.00
" 17.	"	J. O. Bentley, Philadelphia	5.00
" 17.	"	J. W. Sulist, Salem, Ohio	5.75
" 17.	"	J. S. Bonnell, " "	.90
" 17.	"	M. Schlesinger, Albany	5.00
" 17.	"	O. B. Frothingham, New York	25.00
" 25.	"	Friends in Bristol Co., Mass.	90.00
" 25.	"	Mrs. N. H. Crowell, Jefferson, O.	5.00
" 25.	"	W. H. Crowell, " "	5.00
" 25.	"	J. F. Ruggles, Bronson, Mich.	1.00
" 25.	"	Mary E. Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
" 25.	"	C. Doerflinger, Milwaukee	2.00
" 25.	"	J. A. Heintzelman, Phila.	5.00
" 25.	"	D. G. Orandon, Chelsea, Mass.	1.00
" 25.	"	S. R. Koehler, Boston	3.00
" 25.	"	Geo. M. Murray, Jersey City	1.50
" 25.	"	H. T. Marshall, Brockton, Mass.	5.00
" 25.	"	C. A. Simpson, Saxonville, " "	5.00
" 25.	"	J. Copeland, Humboldt Basin, Oregon	5.00
" 15.	"	B. F. Underwood, Thorndike, Mass.	5.00
" 15.	"	"An English Brother" (25)	27.25
" 15.	"	John Gillies, St. Louis	1.00
" 15.	"	J. W. Frank, Dysart, Iowa	4.00
" 15.	"	L. Löwenthal, Rochester, N. Y.	5.00
" 15.	"	M. Landsberg, Rochester, N. Y.	5.00
" 15.	"	A. Walther, Brooklyn	2.00
" 15.	"	E. R. Brown, Elmwood, Ill.	2.00
" 15.	"	M. Altman, New York City	20.00
" 15.	"	B. E. Grimshaw, Minneapolis, Minn.	5.00
" 15.	"	Adam Wolfe, Fort Byron, N. Y.	3.00
" 15.	"	F. P. Hicks, " "	1.00
" 15.	"	Benj. Gerrish, Jr., Bordeaux, France	5.00
" 15.	"	W. L. Foster, East Stoughton, Mass.	5.00
" 15.	"	W. Eysenbach, Lima, O.	.50
" 15.	"	C. H. Phillips, Boston	3.00
" 15.	"	W. P. Phillips, " "	1.00
" 15.	"	H. S. Williams, " "	5.00
" 15.	"	Mrs. Orrin Gillett, Parma, Mich.	5.00
" 15.	"	D. Sandman, Barrs Mills, Wis.	2.00
" 22.	"	C. M. Dennison, New York City	5.00
" 22.	"	James McArthur, Chicago	20.00
" 22.	"	C. H. Shepard, Brooklyn	5.00
" 22.	"	Liberal League, Toledo, Iowa	10.00
" 22.	"	" " Boston	25.10
" 22.	"	Mrs. A. L. Richmond	5.00
" 30.	"	L. Scott, Waynesburgh, O.	1.00
" 30.	"	E. R. McKenzie, Charlestown, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	"	C. K. Whipple, Brookline, Mass.	1.00
" 30.	"	E. B. Moore, Charlestown, Mass.	1.50
" 30.	"	E. H. Warren, Chelmsford, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	D. Deming, South Bend, Ind.	1.00
" 30.	"	S. C. Mason, Moberly, Mo.	1.00
" 30.	"	H. C. Hanson, Barnesville, Ga.	.50
" 30.	"	A. M. Dent, Weston, West Va.	1.00
" 30.	"	F. M. Vaughan, Middleboro, Mass.	1.00
" 30.	"	M. P. Barber, Pleasantville, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	"	"Cash," Phoenix, N. Y.	1.00
" 30.	"	G. Cope, West Chester, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	"	Wm. Dudgeon, New Hartford, N. Y.	5.00
" 30.	"	H. Andriessen, Beaver, Pa.	2.00
" 30.	"	E. A. Spring, Perth Amboy, N. J.	.50
" 30.	"	A. Morrison, Braintree, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	"	G. Lieberknecht, Geneseo, Ill.	1.00
" 30.	"	Sophia H. Carter, Andover, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	"Widow's Mite," Portage City, Wis.	2.00
" 30.	"	H. C. Southworth, Stoughton, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	"	B. Hallowell, Sandy Spring, Md.	2.00
" 30.	"	E. P. Hassinger, Brodhead, Wis.	5.00
" 30.	"	D. B. Hale, Collinsville, Ct.	1.00
" 30.	"	Rev. J. S. Richards, Liberty, Me.	.10
" 30.	"	H. D. Maxson, Amherst College	1.00
" 30.	"	W. B. Studley, Rockland, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	"	J. W. Marshall, Plattsburgh, Neb.	2.00
" 30.	"	Dr. C. Wesselhoft, Boston	1.00
" 30.	"	C. A. Greenleaf, Chicopee, Mass.	.50
" 30.	"	L. Goepfer, Union Village, O.	1.00
" 30.	"	W. C. Fuller, Willimantic, Ct.	5.00
" 30.	"	Dr. G. E. Francis, Worcester, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	"	W. W. Baker, Boston	5.00
" 30.	"	James Parton, Newburyport	25.00
" 30.	"	Dr. J. D. Thorley, Steel Works, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	"	H. S. Bacon, Milford, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	"	E. C. Darling, Ipswich, " "	2.00
" 30.	"	"Friend," Chelsea	1.00
" 30.	"	Matilda Goddard, Boston	10.00
" 30.	"	"Cash," Boston	1.00
" 30.	"	Dr. W. P. Wesselhoft, Boston	2.00
" 30.	"	P. A. Chamberlin, Wauseon, O.	1.00
" 30.	"	Albertina von Arnim, Longwood, Mass.	3.00
" 30.	"	D. P. Wilcox, Yankton, Dak. Terr.	1.00
" 30.	"	C. Lohmann & Son, Edwardsville, Ill.	1.00
" 30.	"	J. Blain, St. James, Mo.	2.00
" 30.	"	H. T. Wright, Washington Hts. Ill.	2.00
" 30.	"	P. H. Macgill, Baltimore, Md.	10.00
" 30.	"	C. T. Pratt, Pawtucket, R. I.	3.00
" 30.	"	J. N. Clark, E. Somerville, Mass.	3.00
" 30.	"	T. J. Atwood, Albion, Wis.	1.00
" 30.	"	L. Prang & Co., Boston	10.00

April 30.	Received of	W. S. Cunningham, Vienna, O.	$1.00
" 30.	"	C. F. Paige, Boston	2.00
" 30.	"	D. E. Mayo, Chelsea, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	Jos. Post, Old Westbury, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	Louise M. Thurston, Lynn, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	J. G. Richardson, Lake City, Minn.	5.00
" 30.	"	G. M. Wood, Washington, D.C.	1.00
" 30.	"	Liberals of Defiance, O.	17.00
" 30.	"	Liberal League, Medina, O.	25.00
" 30.	"	Liberal League, Minneapolis	20.00
" 30.	"	J. W. Cabot, Boston	10.00
" 30.	"	D. Ferguson, Waupun, Wis.	10.00
" 30.	"	Mrs. H. Grinnell, New Milford, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	"	Arethusa Hall, Northampton, Ms.	2.00
" 30.	"	J. Scott, Dighton, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	"	G. M. Wood, Washington, D. C.	1.00
" 30.	"	Thos. Curtis, St. Louis	1.00
" 30.	"	F. Fradley, Brooklyn	2.00
" 30.	"	S. R. Smith, West Winfield, Ct.	5.00
" 30.	"	Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Godfrey, Brooklyn	10.00
June 6.	"	Noah Green, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	P. Sidebotham, Fall River, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	"	Mary H. L. Cabot, Boston	1.00
" 6.	"	L. Klingman, Buffalo	2.50
" 6.	"	M. A. Blanchard, Portland	1.80
" 6.	"	C. M. Dennison, Brooklyn	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Damon, Ipswich, Mass.	3.00
" 6.	"	Cash, Haverhill, Mass.	.50
" 6.	"	Dr. L. P. Babb, Eastport, Me.	2.00
" 6.	"	Isaiah West, New Bedford, Ms.	1.00
" 6.	"	Thos. Nye, Ridgeville, O.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. W. Braley, New Bedford	5.00
" 6.	"	J. Keppeler, New Frankfurt, Mo.	2.00
" 6.	"	Beth Hunt, Northampton, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	"	Dr. E. B. Foote, New York	5.00
" 6.	"	C. M. Waddell, Argillite, Ky.	2.00
" 6.	"	W. R. Morgan, New York	10.00
" 6.	"	C. M. Cuyler, Albany	2.00
" 6.	"	Elizur Wright, Boston	10.00
" 6.	"	B. H. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	2.00
" 6.	"	C. Graeter, Vincennes, Ind.	2.00
" 6.	"	W. Coleman, Leavenworth, Kan.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. L. Cutler, Quilman, Ga.	5.00
" 6.	"	J. Farnsworth, Fort Scott, Kan.	2.00
" 6.	"	M. F. Whitehead, Jersey City, N. J.	2.50
" 6.	"	G. Dimmock, Cambridge, Mass.	3.00
" 6.	"	H. Lieber, Indianapolis	5.00
" 6.	"	D. B. Morton, Groton, N. Y.	5.00
" 6.	"	F. Pilmonth, Florence, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	"	A. R. Hinchey, Burr Oak, Mich.	2.00
" 6.	"	Z. S. Wallingford, Dover, N. H.	2.00
" 6.	"	Dr. G. F. Matthes, New Bedford	2.00
" 6.	"	A. Schüller, Keokuk, Iowa	5.00
" 6.	"	M. Peckham, Utica, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	"	F. Loesser, Brooklyn	5.00
" 6.	"	J. W. Frank, Dysart, Iowa	5.00
" 6.	"	J. Chappellsmith, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	Mrs. M. Chappellsmith, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	Susanna E. Hinkly, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	Margaret Burns, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	C. H. White, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. C. Wheatcroft, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	"	Wm. Green, Brooklyn	5.00
" 6.	"	M. Fleischmann, New York	10.00
" 6.	"	E. Eising, New York	5.00
" 6.	"	O. O. Friedlander, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	F. Dessauer, New York	2.00
" 6.	"	C. Dessaur, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	G. Riker, New Philadelphia, O.	3.00
" 6.	"	Rabbi M. Samfield, Memphis	2.00
" 6.	"	M. S. Devereux, Irvington, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	"	E. R. Wolcott, Milwaukee	2.00
" 6.	"	R. M. Whipple, Chicago	2.00
" 6.	"	S. D. Bardwell, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	"	Mrs. L. C. Bardwell, Shelburne Falls, Ms.	1.00
" 6.	"	W. D. Pitt, Groton, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	"	H. L. Green, Syracuse, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	"	E. D. Cowperthwaite, Washington	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Wright, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	"	B. Breed, Lynn, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	"	W. E. Lukens, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	"	A. Skinner, Ceresco, Mich.	1.00
" 6.	"	F. H. Gutwitz, Avoca, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. T. White, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Maddock, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	B. Lindsey, Boston	1.00
" 6.	"	G. Hillings, Chicopee, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	"	O. K. Crosby, Syracuse, N. Y.	.50
" 6.	"	J. Marsh, Northampton, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	"	M. Shore, Litchfield, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	"	Dr. S. Wolfenstein, St. Louis	1.00
" 6.	"	Cash, Indianapolis	1.00
" 6.	"	I. P. Greenleaf, Boston	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Ahrens, Monticello, Ark.	.50
" 6.	"	H. Ahrens, Longview, Ark.	.50
" 6.	"	L. G. Jones, New York	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Consalus, Troy, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	"	A. Keen, Duplain, Mich.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. E. Sutton, Olathe, Kan.	1.00
" 6.	"	R. H. Miller, Utica, N. Y.	.50
" 6.	"	H. H. Chase, Union City, Mich.	.50
" 6.	"	T. Lamory, Concordia, Mo.	.50
" 6.	"	T. Tibbets, Augusta, Me.	1.00
" 6.	"	F. Goodyear, Cortlandville, N.Y.	1.00
" 6.	"	John Orth, Boston	2.00
" 6.	"	Henry Damon, Boston	2.00
" 6.	"	Jos. Warbasse, Newton, N. J.	5.00
" 6.	"	E. E. Chapin, Rockford, Ill.	.25
" 6.	"	T. Martin, W. Boylston, Ms.	1.00
" 6.	"	H. R. Fletcher, W. Boylston, Ms.	.50
" 6.	"	Nath. Little, Newbury, Ms.	1.00
" 6.	"	E. R. Sanborn, Leavenworth, Kan.	1.00
" 6.	"	W. H. Farrell, Leavenworth, Kan.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. Reedy, Toledo, Iowa	3.00
" 6.	"	B. F. Horton, Dexter, Me.	1.00
" 6.	"	W. F. Johnson, Cleveland, O.	6.80
" 6.	"	T. J. Crouse, Clinton, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	"	R. S. Perrin, New York	2.00
" 6.	"	L. Lamott, Groton, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	"	F. G. Johnson, Towanda, Pa.	1.00
" 6.	"	Rabbi A. Rosensplitz, Nashville	1.00
" 6.	"	E. D. Stark, Cleveland, O.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. S. Thomson, Bloomington, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	"	Mrs. J. N. Lyman, Columbus, O.	2.00
" 6.	"	John Alexander, Shelby, O.	1.00
" 6.	"	R. Pritchett, Fort Madison, Iowa	2.00
" 6.	"	Peter H. Clark, Cincinnati	1.00
" 6.	"	Geo. Lewis, Providence	1.00
" 6.	"	B. S. Hopkins, Providence	2.00
" 6.	"	J. S. Bonnell, Salem, O.	1.00
" 6.	"	W. T. P. Menefee, Crittenden, Ky.	1.00
" 6.	"	H. W. Gilbert, Philadelphia	1.00
" 6.	"	A Friend in Concord, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	"	J. E. Oliver, Ithaca, N. Y.	5.00
" 6.	"	Wm. J. Potter, New Bedford	3.00
" 6.	"	R. Wilkin, San Buenaventura, Cal.	2.00
" 6.	"	W. S. Shepherd, San Buenaventura, Cal.	2.00
" 6.	"	Jacob Hoffer, Cincinnati	5.00
" 6.	"	A. Braasch and friends, Mishicott, Wis.	5.00
" 6.	"	W. F. Allen, Madison, Wis.	5.00

June 13.	Received of	L. J. Burch, Modoc, Col.	$.25
" 13.	"	G. A. Hill and friends, San Francisco	5.00
" 13.	"	E. Bentley, Morgan City, La.	1.00
" 13.	"	L. A. Harbaugh, Toledo, Iowa	3.00
" 13.	"	Cash, Cambridge, Mass.	.50
" 13.	"	E. Z. Penfield, New York	5.00
" 13.	"	R. O. Old, Georgetown, Col.	1.00
" 13.	"	L. Liebmann, Brooklyn	2.00
" 13.	"	W. Barnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	2.50
" 13.	"	Miss H. S. Ware, Boston	5.00
" 13.	"	Eben Turk, Chelsea, Mass.	2.00
" 13.	"	W. H. Saxton, Oberlin, O.	1.80
" 13.	"	J. Miel, Decatur, Ill.	.80
" 13.	"	D. H. Schofield, Baker City, Or.	1.85
" 13.	"	J. C. Rued, San Francisco	.50
" 13.	"	Jos. Harnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	3.00
" 13.	"	Cash, Delphos, O.	1.00
" 13.	"	H. Frederic, Utica, N. Y.	1.00
" 13.	"	H. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.	.25
" 13.	"	L. Markham, Madison, Ga.	1.00
" 13.	"	G. Frauenstein, New York	5.00
" 13.	"	A. Loos, Germantown, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. H. Nye, Enon, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	A. Hiller, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	F. Alsdorf, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	S. Riddle, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	C. Fischer, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	D. A. Robertson, Enon, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mr. and Mrs. A. Rate, Milwaukee.	5.00
" 20.	"	Jos. Singer, Chicago.	1.00
" 20.	"	C. H. Vinton, Cambridge, Ms.	1.00
" 20.	"	D. L. McKeinzie, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	T. Culver, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	W. Drury, Verdure, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	J. Gardner, Rochester, N. Y.	1.00
" 20.	"	A. Friend, Elyria, O.	5.00
" 20.	"	N. Houghton, Lake Providence, La.	2.00
" 20.	"	C. P. Somerby, New York	1.00
" 20.	"	E. G. Fell, Clarence, Iowa	1.00
" 20.	"	A. A. Raymond, Fond du Lac, Wis.	.25
" 20.	"	R. K. Price, Dexter, Iowa	.50
" 20.	"	Rev. Robt. Collyer, Chicago.	2.00
" 20.	"	J. E. Boynton, Elyria, O.	2.00
" 20.	"	Rev. H. Powers, Manchester, N. H.	2.00
" 20.	"	H. Bethig, Buffalo, N. Y.	2.00
" 20.	"	Dr. J. M. Hawks, Hyde Park, Ms.	3.00
" 20.	"	R. T. Starr, Rochester, N. Y.	3.00
" 20.	"	John Curtis, Boston	5.00
" 20.	"	D. Ballantine, Bloomington, Wis.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mrs. P. Phillips, Rondout, N. Y.	1.00
" 20.	"	M. L. Lewis, Providence	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. W. S. Leach, St. Joseph, Mo.	1.00
" 20.	"	J. W. Sulist, Salem, O.	1.00
" 20.	"	Laura Barnaby, Salem, O.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. W. A. Crandall, Napoleon, O.	.50
" 20.	"	O. B. Vose, Forkston, Pa.	.50
" 20.	"	G. McMurray, Jersey City, N. J.	1.00
" 20.	"	S. Ritchie, Racine, Wis.	1.00
" 30.	"	John Turner, Philadelphia	10.00
" 20.	"	Henry Jones, Three Tons, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mary Y. Jones, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	Joseph Ambler, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	Hannah Ambler, " "	1.00
" 20.	"	G. A. Atwood, Fort Harker, Kan.	1.00
" 20.	"	Hon. Henry Booth, Chicago	5.00
" 20.	"	R. P. Titus, Madison, N. J.	1.00
" 20.	"	Ivan Panin, Boston	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. J. T. Dickens, Newburyport.	2.00
" 20.	"	F. A. Flagg, Providence	1.00
" 20.	"	Carl Edelmheim, New York	5.00
" 20.	"	H. G. White, Buffalo, N. Y.	10.00

The Index.

BOSTON, JUNE 22, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREV, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS PROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENET, REV. CHARLES
VOYSEY (England), GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England),
DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

The Centennial Congress of Liberals will be convened at Concert Hall, on Chestnut Street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets, Philadelphia, on Saturday, July 1, at 2 o'clock, P.M. Concert Hall will seat about two thousand people, giving each a cushioned chair. It has a large stage and two large ante-rooms, and is excellently adapted to secure the comfort and convenience of a large convention.

Railroad officials refuse to make any other reduction in fares than the excursion rates agreed to by all the principal companies, of which all delegates and members can avail themselves. A local committee is at work to secure a list of cheap boarding-places for the accommodation of members. The necessary price will not exceed $1.50 per day, nor be less than $1.00. All who wish to avail themselves of these accommodations should write without delay to D. Y. Kilgore, Secretary, 606 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

In order to enjoy the rights and privileges of membership, it will be necessary for delegates from Liberal Leagues, or other Liberal Societies desiring to join in the Liberal League movement, to be provided with proper credentials signed by their own local officers. Individuals not delegates can receive a certificate of membership on writing for, filling up, and returning a blank form of application which can be obtained by addressing F. E. Abbot, Chairman, 1 Tremont Place, Boston. It can also be obtained at Concert Hall, July 1, at 1 P.M.; and all who may not previously have received their certificates should not fail to present themselves promptly at that time. This is the only way to prevent confusion and vexatious delays to all concerned. Over five hundred certificates have been already issued to applicants for membership; there is every indication of a great increase of this number; and immediate application will save trouble and time in organizing the Congress when it meets.

The following order of business has been adopted by the Committee, subject to ratification by the Congress itself:—

Saturday, July 1: Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

1. Temporary Organization.
2. Appointment of Committee on Membership, and reception of credentials.
3. Address of Welcome, by the President of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
4. Reply, by the Chairman of the General Centennial Committee.
5. Report of the Committee on Membership.
6. Report of the General Centennial Committee.
7. Appointment of Committees on Permanent Organization, on Finance, on Resolutions, and on Address to the People.
8. Consideration of the General Centennial Committee's Report.
9. Consideration of the Constitution of the National Liberal League.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Consideration of the Constitution of the National Liberal League, continued.
2. Report of the Committee on Permanent Organization: election of officers of the National Liberal League.
3. Short speeches.

Sunday, July 2: Morning Session, 10 1-2 A. M.

1. Reading of extracts from letters by distinguished citizens.
2. Address by F. E. Abbot: "The Liberal League Movement; its Principles, Objects, and Scope."
3. Address by Mrs. C. B. Kilgore: "Democracy."
4. Short speeches.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Address by James Parton: "Cathedrals and Beer."
2. Address by B. F. Underwood: "The Practical Necessity of Separating Church and State."
3. Short speeches.

Monday, July 3: Morning Session, 10 1-2 A. M.

1. Address by Charles F. Paige: "Is Christianity a part of the Common Law?"
2. Report of the Committee on Resolutions: free discussion of the proposed methods and measures of the National Liberal League; action of the League on the Resolutions taken singly.

Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

1. Address by Damon Y. Kilgore: "Ecclesiasticism in American Politics and Institutions."
2. Continuation of the discussion and action on the Resolutions.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Address—[probably by Charles D. B. Mills].
2. Reports by Delegates from various Liberal Leagues throughout the country.
3. Short speeches.

Tuesday, July 4: 9 A. M.

1. Report of the Committee on Finance.
2. Report of the Committee on Address: "Patriotic Address of the National Liberal League to the People of the United States."
3. Action on the Report.
4. Adjournment.

WHAT THE PEOPLE THINK.

That the Centennial Congress of Liberals is the veritable expression of a deep and wide-spread enthusiasm, the genuine manifestation of sentiment and conviction among the liberals of the United States and not an artificial or manufactured movement, would be very obvious to any one who should have had the reading of our daily mails for the past few months. As the time of assembly draws near, it seems fitting that the people should speak to the people—that the thoughts and aspirations now glowing in many isolated minds should be brought to a focus, for the encouragement and strengthening of those who now take up the great task of rousing the republic to a nobler conception of its own destiny. Instead, therefore, of writing words of our own this week, we stand aside that the people may know what the people are thinking, and gladly transcribe at random a few of the utterances which have so powerfully impressed our own mind with the vast vitality of this Liberal League movement. The names of the writers are withheld, the letters here quoted not being at all designed for publication.

TITUSVILLE, Pa.—"My whole heart is with you in the great and good cause in which you are engaged. I am so sick that I can hardly write—have been confined to my room for three weeks; but I pray that I may be able to be with you in Philadelphia."

CINCINNATI, O.—"I thank you very much for the documents you have sent me, and feel honored by the privilege they confer. Your deep desire not to let the rare opportunity now offering pass unimproved speaks well for the cause and its enterprising movers. A movement so great it is fit to inaugurate at the 'Congress of Nations'; you will speak to an assembled world, and it is well—for your cause is great humanity, its emancipation and elevation. Everything in it and about it is noble, and it grows in my esteem as it moves forward. I rejoice to see it so full of the love of truth for its own dear sake, of the spirit of liberty and patriotism and enterprise; and my whole heart is with you. Such sentiments are big with events worthy of the dignity of history, and will prove so, or I have misinterpreted the signs of the times. It will be a pleasing reflection while I live to have my name enrolled among its earliest supporters."

BUFFALO, W. Va.—"I am well pleased to see that the liberals are going into this matter with an earnestness that means business. I cannot attend the Congress, but my sympathies and hopes are centred in your efforts to remove ecclesiastical pressure from the minds of the people."

LONG LAKE, Minn.—"The methods and objects of the proposed Congress of Liberals have my warmest approval, and I wish I could afford to add something more substantial by way of donation."

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—"I shall always be as ready as my purse may be to aid the splendid cause to which you are devoting your life. Success to you and your co-laborers, my friend, and always remember that what you are doing with your large influence, there are thousands trying to do in their more circumscribed sphere in all the cities and villages all over the land. Yours for life in the cause," etc.

OAKVILLE, Pa.—"Unless prevented, I have determined to be present at this most auspicious gathering of the patriots of 1876. I am fully convinced that a mighty conflict is before us. The National Liberal League means agitation—work. You have not exaggerated the signs of the times. How Mr. Stevens and others can say, 'there is no danger,' passes my comprehension. Let them come to Pennsylvania, and they will see that orthodoxy is as defiant and aggressive as ever. To be otherwise is death to their supremacy."

CLARKSVILLE, Iowa.—"I regret our inability to send any money. If real, hearty appreciation of your principles and manner of advocating them is any comfort to you, you can count on two here, my husband and myself."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—"I also fully coincide in my husband's sentiments, and heartily indorse the movement, and should be greatly pleased to receive a certificate of membership myself."

NEWVILLE, Pa.—"I am really sorry I cannot enclose a donation to the Congress with my signature of approval. My best wishes are with the movement, and I earnestly hope to aid the liberal cause by and by. If at all possible (and I will try hard), I will visit Philadelphia on the first of July. Orthodoxy is weakening, but its death-struggles will doubtless be fearful."

EAST HADDAM, Conn.—"I most heartily approve of the Congress, and shall be in attendance, if possible."

SAUGUS, Mass.—"Approve of the Congress! With all my heart, and the largest portion of my liver, if that organ added will emphasize the approval. Without exception, THE INDEX is the boss paper of the United States—full, frank, and free."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"I enclose one dollar for the Congress, and only wish I could make it one hundred, but must console myself with the widow's mite."

CRITTENDEN, Ky.—"I am poor, else I would send more. I heartily sympathize with the aims and purposes of the Congress—also with every word you have said in THE INDEX for three years."

COLUMBUS, O.—"I have a strong desire to be present at the meeting in Philadelphia, and, if it is possible for me to get away, shall do so. I heartily approve of the objects of the meeting, and have faith to believe they may be reached within the next hundred years, and perhaps at an early day. I greatly hope that such pressure will be brought to bear upon the managers of the Exhibition that they will be compelled to open it on that one of the Lord's days above all others on which it would be appropriate to have it open."

CLEVELAND, O.—"I much fear the depressed condition of my finances implied in this small contribution will not permit my attendance, but I am with you heart and soul."

DUPLAIN, Mich.—"I am a poor man, but complaints are useless: what I can spare, the liberal cause will always command. I send you one dollar, wishing it may increase like the loaves and fishes."

ROCK FALLS, Ill.—"I can spare another dollar out of my toll for this Congress, and if the addition of the name of one obscure man can do any good, I would be glad to have my name enrolled as a friend to this important movement."

NEW YORK (with $16 enclosed from several persons).—"Wish I could raise $1,000 for you, but everybody is poor now, and this is about all I could do."

GROTON, N. Y.—"I rejoice that there is to be a Congress held, sincerely believing that some movement of the kind is greatly needed. Living in a village of one thousand inhabitants which supports four Orthodox churches, I have heard a clergyman say from his pulpit to his audience that the churches ought to control the education and the amusements of the place; and to a very large extent they accomplish their purpose. With their Sunday-school picnics and excursions, their mite societies and sociables, they chiefly furnish the entertainments; and a liberal who has children must deny them the pleasures that other children have, or allow them to march under the church-banner. The churches make every intelligent woman realize that it would be for her advantage socially to unite with the Church; and it requires more than an average amount of clear-headed principle on the part of a woman to resist the temptation. In short, the Church magnifies and exalts every one who yields to it, and belittles every one who refuses to submit and manfully stands by his convictions. Whoever has not discovered the aggressive tyranny of the churches has either been favored with a very fortunate position, or else has not done the cause of religious freedom much service."

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill.—"We congratulate you on the final success of having a Congress of Liberals convene at Philadelphia from July 1 to July 4, 1876, the most important period of the Centennial, for the purpose of forming a National Liberal League. Let the grand work go on! Our heart and soul are with you and the cause of religious liberty."

St. Louis, Mo.—"I am gratified at the success which the matter is having. It is high time that something is done. It is in educational institutions that I have seen the meekness and gentleness of the Protestant priesthood displayed. I have been flung from one State University, and refused admission to another, solely on account of religious doctrines that I was not capable of understanding, but which it was not expected that I should teach. A friend of mind has just had a similar experience, he having made a brilliant geological discovery which some of the wise men thought 'interfered with Moses.' I have been properly taught in Sunday-schools and church, and have beforetime taken a prominent part in this work; but I am thoroughly resolved to rebel wholly against the tyranny of the Church. I would do it, even if I could believe all its dogma, for I am resolved to be lorded over by no man, if I can avoid it. With great respect," etc.

Such are a few of the multitudinous letters we have received. May the spirit of the Centennial Congress of Liberals correspond!

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

There is one thing to be profoundly thankful for in considering the probable results of the Cincinnati Convention, and that is, in the language of the Boston Transcript, that we have "escaped a campaign in which the young men of the country would have been continually told that they must not be too squeamish about 'purity' in public life; that all politicians are corrupt; that all legislation is corruption, and that a congressman interested 'on the ground floor' in railroads existing by congressional aid is 'all right enough' provided he pitches into Jeff Davis, and Wirz, and Libby Frison. We cannot, in fact, be too grateful that the Great Unknown has saved some of our most respected political leaders and several esteemed and influential clergymen from thus demoralizing themselves and those who have put faith in them." Townsend and Mallen among the clergy, and Hawley among politicians, have already shown us the kind of rhetorical stuff which would have been freely used to cover up the weak spots in Blaine, or any other man of similar character, if he had succeeded in obtaining the nomination. That both Hayes and Wheeler are men of unblemished character is, therefore, a fact which calls for hearty thanksgiving from all who believe in moral purity as a necessary qualification for public officers.

But purity of moral character may be possessed alike by President and chimney-sweep, and by no means therefore does it imply the possession of any qualification by which the President should be distinguished from other men. "I am all ready to hurrah," said a politician upon receiving news of the nomination; "but who is Hayes?" Whether this question was seriously put or not, every one will admit that Mr. Hayes was comparatively an unknown man. His name has never been associated with any important speech, or legislative measure, or official action, nor are his opinions known upon any of the momentous questions which the next President must surely grapple with. The battle in the Convention was undoubtedly between those who desire the retention of existing political methods and those who desire to reform these methods, and each party yielded somewhat to the other. Both parties gave up their pet candidates, and the result is a triumph for reform only in this; namely, that the tainted men—Blaine, Morton, Conkling—had to be dropped, and a clean man chosen instead. But the pronounced reformer was also dropped, and whether the new man is a reformer or not, no one knows. The triumph therefore was a negative rather than a positive one.

Whatever opinions may be expressed with reference to the candidates chosen at Cincinnati, there can be, among intelligent persons, but one opinion with regard to the platform,—it is thoroughly weak, and wholly inadequate to the requirements of the times. The preamble we have read over several times, and confess our inability to understand what it means, or even what it was intended to mean. Of the seventeen resolutions adopted, no less than ten are either meaningless or unnecessary, and the whole platform would be very much better and stronger without them. Several of the remaining ones are upon comparatively unimportant subjects. Those which refer to the most important subjects are the fourth, fifth, and eighth, which refer respectively to specie payment, the civil service, and the tariff. That with regard to specie payment favors "a continuous and steady progress" toward resumption, which is to take place "at the earliest practicable period." But "the earliest practicable period" has already been fixed by Act of Congress; the faith of the nation is pledged already to resume at that date, January 1st, 1879; and the fact that dishonest Democrats and Republicans are seriously striving to alter this date called for a more explicit declaration than that above made. And yet, when the attention of the Convention was called to this fact, and an amendment to the above declaration was proposed, the amendment was voted down. With regard to civil service reform, the resolution (the fifth) hints at what is needed but does not expressly state it and require it. The resolution with regard to the tariff is evidently worded for the purpose of being interpreted in favor of either free trade or protective tariff; but, in fact, it favors a protective tariff only. The resolution most enthusiastically received in the Convention was the seventh, which calls for an amendment to the Constitution forbidding appropriations of money to sectarian schools. On the whole we do not imagine that the Democrats at St. Louis will manage to adopt a much worse platform unless they positively oppose or say nothing about civil service reform, and demand soft money or a repeal of the Resumption Act.

The chances for the success of the Republican ticket depend to a certain extent, of course, upon the platform to be adopted and the men to be nominated at St. Louis; but, in our estimation, they depend still more upon the character of Mr. Hayes' forthcoming letter of acceptance. If in this letter he should put his own interpretation upon the platform, stating plainly not what the platform may try to say but what he himself really believes, and should exhibit a thorough comprehension of a country's needs, and should manifest a determination to undertake the reforms so loudly called for—he would surely do the very best thing possible to insure Republican success. He would offend none of the regular party followers; he would win immediately the support of a large and increasing body of Independents; and he would receive the hearty cooperation of those who would gladly have the Republican party punished for its shortcomings and its corrupt practices, but who dread a return of the Democrats to power.

With many members of Congress absent at Cincinnati, the two Houses did little more than adjourn from day to day, and no measure of importance was passed during the week. There is a serious deadlock in prospect with regard to the Appropriation Bills. The House has made many reductions which the Senate declares to be in opposition to existing laws, and refuses, therefore, to approve. The House stubbornly declines to accept the Senate alterations, and although a Conference Committee has been appointed it is not probable that its members will be able to agree. The President has sent a special message to Congress calling attention to the fact that the fiscal year expires on the 30th of June, and that all the operations of government will be brought to a stand-still if the appropriations are not made at that time. The action of the House in many particulars appears to us to be altogether indefensible. So long as laws calling for certain appropriations continue upon the statute books, their terms should be complied with, and no attempt should be made to alter them by a line in an appropriation bill. To permit this would open a wide door for the introduction of manifold abuses.

The House has adopted unanimously, by a rising vote and with other marks of respect, the report of the Committee exonerating Mr. Kerr from the charge of bribery brought against him by Harney. This pleasing result of the work of an investigating committee should remind some of those who talk about "detraction in public life" and the "assassination of private character" that no committee has ever succeeded in "assassinating" any man who deserved to continue in political life, and that whenever any attempts have been made (and they have been very few in number) to pull down a man of good character, they have resulted only in making his integrity more strikingly manifest.

The retirement of Mr. Bristow from the Cabinet will be deeply regretted by all who believe in the union of ability, energy, and integrity in public service. His resignation is all the more to be regretted because of the uncertainty with regard to the kind of man by whom he will be succeeded. Grant's previous selections show that he has no understanding whatever of the qualifications demanded in a Secretary of the Treasury, and whether we are now to be afflicted by a Boutwell or a Richardson, or are to enjoy the services of a competent officer, is a matter to be determined by accident, by personal feeling, or by political expediency, and not by any adequate knowledge of the requirements of the position.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs has discovered that Mr. Godlove S. Orth, late United States Minister to Austria, and now Republican candidate for Governor of Indiana, while acting as Chairman of the same Committee during the Forty-third Congress acted also as attorney and agent of Venezuela with reference to certain claims brought before his own Committee. The facts are to be reported to the House, and, if true, should ensure the retirement of Mr. Orth to private life.

The release of Winslow will furnish occasion for regret to all honest men, and will doubtless encourage all forgers and defaulters who are hoping to scrape together money enough to pay the expenses of a trip to England. It is a great pity that England did not send back Winslow at once, and then call the attention of our government to any defects which it might believe to exist in the extradition treaty. If this course has been pursued, a mean rogue would not have escaped legal punishment, and a new and better treaty might by this time have been accepted by both countries. It seems quite probable now that we shall be obliged to await the coming into power of a new party in England before another treaty can be negotiated.

Mr. Lord, of New York, has introduced into the House a resolution calling for an amendment to the Constitution which shall provide for the election of all United States officers,—postmasters, marshals, collectors, etc. The resolution is another indication of the growing dissatisfaction with our present civil service, but the proposed remedy would, we believe, only aggravate the worst features of our existing difficulties. We have already far too many elective offices, so many in fact that the ordinary man of business cannot possibly keep the run of them, or spend time in investigating the qualifications of those who desire to fill them. Consequently, office-seeking in this country has become a regular trade, and certain needed reforms in our political administration will be impossible until the number of elective offices is greatly diminished. If the executive duties of one of our large cities, for instance, should be placed in the hands of a mayor with power to appoint all subordinate officers, the people would know whom to hold responsible and would be more likely to exercise care in the selection of a mayor; but when people are obliged to elect a large number of inferior officers, the wire-puller at once sets to work and the political "machine" is organized. Mr. Lord's measure, if adopted, would relieve congressmen of a great deal of disagreeable work, and would enable them consequently to attend more closely to their legislative duties; but this same relief would be afforded in a much better way by a President with backbone enough to insist upon his right to make his own executive appointments, and who should decline therefore to receive recommendations from congressmen with regard to appointments.

M. Buffet has been elected Senator for Life by the upper branch of the French Assembly,—a fact which is significant as indicating that the Senate is not so strongly Republican as was at first supposed, M. Buffet being opposed to a Republican form of government. The news from Turkey is unimportant politically, though doubtless the assassination of the Minister of War and of the Minister of Foreign Affairs caused great excitement at Constantinople. The murder seems to have been committed however from motives of private revenge rather than from political reasons.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, May 26, 1876.

Do earnest Christians in America give you, or send you by post, horrible little tracts, with appalling headings, and ugly words in double-sized type, jumping at you out of the pages? It is a favorite kind of pious amusement here, and I have just received an evil little four-page thing, entitled "Do not Trifle with your Soul." It begins as follows:—

"If we had seen one of our neighbors struck dead by a flash of lightning, just after he had been committing one of our own often indulged sins, it is to be supposed it would make a serious impression upon our minds. If we afterwards beheld two or three more of our acquaintances blotted out of life in the same way, and for the same reason, we should probably bring the case a little more home to ourselves. If there should afterwards fall another, and another, and another, and we were in the habit of seeing God's wrath executed every day the moment it was provoked, it is surprising what a change we should presently observe among all the careless and bold-faced sinners of society."

Then we get drunkards, liars, misers, etc., rapidly reformed, and we learn that they don't reform under present circumstances because hell is such a long way off. But it's coming all the same; for the "soul that sinneth it shall die," etc., etc., etc. "One would think we might take God's word for more than this," and yet men go on in sin. Here we are to "observe two things": first, God's goodness in "not blotting you out from the face of the earth," which goodness seems to me problematical, since God, it is to be supposed, put me on the face of the earth, knowing perfectly well what I should do there; and secondly: "You see that every time you neglected and refused, you were 'treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath.' There is a treasury of vengeance in eternity; and day by day, and hour by hour, you have been casting in your mite."

Is this part of God's goodness also? There is something touchingly beautiful in God keeping this "treasury of vengeance" open, and allowing us to cast in our mites. Let us resume:—

"When will your cup be full? Perhaps at this moment it may be overflowing; perhaps the plain, simple warning you are now reading may be the last which the Lord God will ever vouchsafe to your soul. This at least is certain: that the next time you return to your sin, it will be in deliberate defiance of the wrath of the Almighty. Who shall say whether you will be allowed to make the trial a second time? God may prolong your life only that men may see a sinner gasping without hope upon his death-bed."

How great is the goodness of the Lord! how merciful to prolong life that "men may see a sinner gasping without hope on his death-bed." I really think that the Christian Deity is the most repulsive of all the idols men have made: he is so remorselessly cruel, so pitilessly vindictive, literally taking pleasure in inflicting useless pain. What human heart could see, un pitying, a dying human creature "gasping without hope"? Instantaneous relief would follow the sight, if relief were possible; yet with "God all things are possible," and he is imaged as looking on with pleasure, and even as keeping a man alive in order that this sight may present itself. Truly, his ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts as our thoughts.

The Rock newspaper has an article on the American Centennial year, and says that:—

"Amongst other things, a great effort is to be made to arouse the public mind to a sense of the imperfection of the American Constitution, and the necessity for engraving upon it a clear recognition of the authority of God and of his Word. Whilst many here are seeking to unchristianize the British Constitution, and whilst ungodly men are seeking to blot out all ideas of God on the other side of the Atlantic, and to erect a monument to THOMAS PAINE, Christian men there of various denominations as here are banding together to raise the standard of national duty and responsibility to God."

I sadly fear me, Mr. Editor of THE INDEX, that you are one of these "ungodly men." I have been reading of your efforts to "erect a monument to Thomas Paine," and to "blot out all ideas of God" in the Constitution. By the way, it looks as though the Rock thought that you worshipped Thomas Paine, as it prints him in small capitals, identical with God. The Rock then gives some extracts from the Christian Statesman of Philadelphia, which I will not send back to you, and then rejoices over an "important Christian triumph" in a resolution that "the great Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia shall not be opened on the Lord's Day." How little can Christians believe in the attracting power of the gospel when they are so terribly afraid of any rival building being open on Sunday; they manifestly think that if people could go anywhere else they would not go to church. But the Rock is not only moved by the spirit against your wickedness in America; it prints, also, furious attacks on its fellow-Christians when they verge on Ritualism. "Romanism and Rationalism" are its bugbears. Can Ritualism stop Rationalism? asks Canon Bell indignantly:—

"What can the carnal weapons which it employs—processions, and banners, and incense, and music, and vestments—effect in the translation of sinners from darkness to light? Was it by such weapons as these that the world was won from Paganism to Christianity? Is it by such weapons that we can vanquish the sin that meets us on all sides, raise the fallen, rescue the tempted, save the perishing, or pluck the guilty as 'brands from the burning'? Are not all such questions immeasurably trifling, unspeakably trivial, when we think of the infidelity, and secularism, and vice, and worldliness that meet us on every side, and against which we are called to do battle in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? And may not the mocking devil of lust and hate and drunkenness and scepticism and crime say in uttermost scorn to all such attempts to exorcise him, 'Paul I know, and Jesus I know, but who are ye?'"

Observe that infidelity, secularism and, scepticism are put on a level with lust and hate and drunkenness; they are alike "mocking devils." This is the kind of opinion Christian people have of us, and yet they wonder we sometimes "speak so bitterly"! The Rock, however, has a high opinion of the merits of its own friends to make up for its uncharity towards the rest of the world. I wrote to you, I think, about the "May meetings," and the Rock thus speaks of them:—

"In sober truth the work of which the May meetings are the outcome and expression is not a work of the many but of the few,—not of the nation nor yet of the Church, but of a little company described in Holy Writ as 'the called, and chosen, and faithful, who follow the Lamb' whithersoever He leads them in the paths of duty or beneficence. The Times, indeed, speaks of 'earls, bishops, clergymen, preachers, and tradesmen,' all working together in the same cause,—and a blessed privilege it is, and quite peculiar to God's people to find men of every class standing shoulder to shoulder for an unselfish end. But, alas! how few comparatively of either or any class are ready to come to the help of the Lord against the mighty hosts of the Prince of Darkness! You may count the peers on the fingers of one hand, and the M. P.'s on the other; while the number of clergy who come to the front on these occasions, though actually large is relatively small when compared with the twenty thousand names which appear in the pages of the Clergy List. But this little army is the salt of the earth, and preserves the body politic from corruption and decay."

God must have a good many people among the "mocking devils of infidelity and secularism" if it be true that only among his people we can "find men of every class standing shoulder to shoulder for an unselfish end." And then the poor "Lord against the mighty hosts of the Prince of Darkness"! Only one Almighty Being, helped by a few peers and M. P.'s; no wonder the devil wins.

Dean Close says that the denial of the existence of the devil is the devil's greatest triumph. "Men were now denying that there was any enemy. That was the very climax of his power, and his throne was so to work upon men as to make them deny the very existence of a devil." The very existence of a dean is imperilled when the existence of a devil is in danger. Half the use of the officials of the church will be over when Satan has departed this life; no devil, no dean. But, at present, the Dean is here with his Bible Society, and there is yet hope for the world. Christ foresaw how much evil would "be stirred up in this generation," so he "put his holy spirit into the hearts of his people to found these great societies to withstand it." The Dean verges on blasphemy in his delight: "The wonders of Pentecost were a trifle to the standing miracle of the Bible Society, which spoke in two hundred and twenty tongues." The Holy Ghost must hide his diminished head before Dean Close and his two-hundred-and-twenty-tongued society. Pentecost? oh, a mere trifle; look at ME and my society.

I wanted to say something about the Jewish World, an admirable paper, which grows more and more rationalistic; but the Dean is too much for my feelings added to the mail-time having come, so I must leave the Hebrew journal until next week.

Communications.

MASONRY.

The principles of this time-honored institution are similar, with regard to religion and politics, to those of Free Religion; but just as all human beings have imperfections, so have human societies; and it is true that Masonry is not yet as broad as humanity. We hope, however, that we shall develop to a broader platform. Operative Masonry requires a strong, healthy man, and the founders had to exclude sick or old men and women. Improvements are made, and, if all male citizens shall learn to grant women the same rights which they themselves have, I think speculative Masonry will have to learn the same lesson. We are already instituting degrees for our good ladies. No man is excluded on account of race. Most all races have Masonic lodges; a majority of narrow-minded step-brothers do make such exclusions in their lodges. Christians try to exclude Jews, and perhaps vice versa; but it is no more Masonic than it is liberal to exclude women from voting. In my article on Masonry, I did not mean Masonic charity, but most earnestly "human charity," and I differ not at all from Mr. M. G. Griffin, when he says that there is too much spent for "foolish finery." Yes, when we see those gaudy regalias, uniforms, bands, and military, it confirms most conclusively Darwin's theory of the link between the ape and men. I thank Mr. Griffin because he has pointed out many imperfections, and we hope he has given our brethren some good hints. When I speak of the imperfections of societies, I am very sorry to say that even the majority of radicals and the Free Religious Association are not sufficiently "imbued with the principles of charity, justice, and equality"; but we hope sincerely that it will be better soon, and it makes us all happy to see the good leaven working. The next Centennial year will be celebrated by men better developed to manhood. "It must be so!"

CARL H. HORSCH.

DOVER, N. H., June 1, 1876.

A WORD FOR MR. BLAINE.

WASHINGTON, June 10, 1876.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

It is not often that my wrath is stirred by a newspaper paragraph, as it was on taking up the last INDEX, and reading the comments of R. C. on the Blaine and Mulligan episode. The charge of "dishonorable conduct" is there made against Mr. Blaine for getting some business letters from a man who never had any business relations with Mr. Blaine, and who had no jot or tittle of right to the possession of the letters, any more than the sneak-thief has to the "swag" which he carries to a pawnbroker's shop, or puts wherever he thinks it will do the most good. If there is one thing settled in English law, or one principle that is fortified by the decision of American courts and juries, it is the absolute inviolability of a man's private correspondence. I do not care to inquire whether Mulligan got those letters by Fisher's consent, as he says he did, or whether he pilfered them from Fisher's safe, as alleged by Mr. Blaine's friends; he had them without a shadow of right or title to them, and he meant to put them to a dishonorable use,—that of injuring Mr. Blaine, and destroying his chances for a nomination. Mr. Blaine, with that energy and foresight which is a part of his character, seized the correspondence, and defied the committee to test his right of ownership—or his joint ownership with Fisher—of the letters. The gauntlet was thrown down, and the committee did not dare to take it up. And then ensued a "scene," as we commonly say, which it is impossible to give any idea of. The Samson of the House not only went for the rebel "lion," which met the fate of its prototype, but with the jaw-bone of an ass (Mulligan's would-be testimony—the letters in question) he slew of the Philistines that day, if not a thousand, yet enough, and left them lying "heaps upon heaps." He turned the valley of humiliation into a magnificent ovation or triumph. He did more. From standing on the defensive he assumed the aggressive; he "carried the war into Africa," and with such vigor and results, that no one was probably more astonished than Proctor Knott, chairman of the investigating committee. After an hour's equivocation and paltering in "a double sense," Mr. Blaine screwed out of him the damaging fact, that Mr. Knott did receive a telegram from Josiah Caldwell and carried it in his pocket for five days. The pretended doubt of the genuineness of the telegram was the very small knot-hole which Mr. Knott crawled out of to escape the wrath of his tormentor, Blaine.

Mr. Tarbox fared even worse in his late "personal explanation." This gentleman was the hero of the well-known exploit of having surreptitiously possessed himself of a copy of Mr. Blaine's speech on the finances in the early part of the session, and of answering it with a prepared speech the moment Mr. Blaine sat down. Accordingly when Mr. Tarbox with an air of virtuous innocence rebuked Mr. Blaine for referring to words used in the committee-room, as a breach of privilege, he was put down by Mr. Blaine's ready use of the above telling fact to Mr. Tarbox's disadvantage. In the elegant language of the lobby, Mr. Blaine put his foot upon Tarbox, and "squelched" him. But all his enemies combined have not yet "squelched" Mr. Blaine. Whether they have hurt him or not, the Cincinnati convention will soon tell the whole story. J. S.

MR. JAMES' ARTICLES.

DEAR EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

I read your paper, and have read it from its beginning, attentively and with great satisfaction and profit,—not with hearty acquiescence in all its diversity of utterances. But I like it all the better for the positiveness of the editor and the freedom it gives to diversity. It is really multum in parvo, and contains more than a half-dozen of the great papers that are published. I have read with some degree of attention and thoughtfulness the several articles of Henry James and your criticisms upon them.

I am surprised that Mr. James should think to say anything in detail of such life as he attempts to describe that shall be intelligible to any scientific or logical mind. He is quite right in saying that what he attempts to say is as easily apprehended by "any old woman plying her spinning-wheel in the heart of the Green Mountains" as by the most scientific and logical mind, like Huxley or Spencer. Only he does not state it strongly enough. It is more easily apprehended by the old woman, because scientific and logical minds have much to do to put utterly away science and logic before they can be in condition to accept his saying.

Possibly there is such a life as Mr. James would maintain, but I am quite sure it is impossible for him, or anyone else, to state it or talk about it in detail without falling into error. By no possible amount of words, or arrangement of words, can he make out that there is no real individual personality,—but merely an illusion that thinks and lives. Notwithstanding the solidarity of the race, there is the individual, who lives of the whole and for the whole by living in association with the parts, for itself and the parts, and so for the whole. Every time Mr. James says as an individual he is an illusion, he inevitably asserts to the contrary. Say what he may in denial, he says, and that is the end of it.

He must continue in the mystical world, and not attempt logic or much explanation, or he can only make confusion of what he says.

But I have already probably fallen into error in what I have said, and should do so more, if I made more words. J. S. S.

BOSTON, May 20, 1876.

A SUGGESTION.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—At the risk of making double a suggestion which you may have already fully considered, I venture to express the belief that a monthly or quarterly edition of THE INDEX could be profitably published, to be of octavo size, and to embrace the editorials and leading papers.

For preservation, in binding or otherwise, and for reference, the pamphlet-form presents obvious advantages which, I must think, would be sufficiently recognized by the present subscribers of THE INDEX. For the purpose of catching the busy public eye and mind, I suppose the coming great ideas cannot be put out in too many different forms within the pecuniary limits with which your present field of labor is hedged. Very respectfully,

R. B. STONE.

FOREST, Miss.

[The suggestion above made is a good one in itself, though the great expense of such a republication renders it impracticable. It is encouraging, however, to receive so flattering an evidence of the high estimation put upon THE INDEX by its friends.—ED.]

A MATCH HAS been broken off in Chicago between the male and female scions of two prominent families, who, it had been thought, would have made an excellent marriage, since she was young and handsome, and he was old and rich. It appears, however, that they had an irreconcilable quarrel on a very vital subject. He was a very precise man, who used to say that time was money, and unpunctuality was the thief of time, and so on; and, when they were discussing their married life, she said: "Next Easter, you'll give me the loveliest hat and dress in Chicago, won't you, pet?" He said he would. "And," she continued, "you'll take a pew in the very front of the most fashionable church?" "I will," he said. "And," she said, "we'll always go to church nice and late, won't we?" "Nice and early, my love," he said, correcting her. "No, I mean nice and late, of course," she answered. "But, my dear," he remonstrated, "time is money, as Solomon says. If I were to be seen going to church late, people would think I was slothful in business serving the bank. Why do you wish to cultivate the unlovely habit of unpunctuality?" "O, because," she replied, "when you go to church late every one turns round to look at you and see what you have on. Do you think I'm a heathen, and don't want to go to church properly?" Alas! to be wroth with one we love doth work like madness in the brain, and the match is off.—Advertiser.

FUSELI SAID to me once that people generally went to church in proportion to their profligacy. I had it on the tip of my tongue to tell him that I wondered he did not go every day.—Haydon.

CONVERSATION when it is best, is a series of intoxications.—Emerson.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quick advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.
 Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,
 has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

Including
 O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
 T. W. HIGGINSON,
 W. J. POTTER,
 W. H. SPENCER,
 F. W. NEWMAN,
 CHAS. VOYSEY,
 A. W. STEVENS,
 F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,
 AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 CHARLES VOYSEY, England.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.50
Shawl-Straps.....	1.50
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Belwieser.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physica and Politica.....	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Science and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	1.25
The World-Friest.....	1.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	1.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 6 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	8.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.30
COONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
COORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove Reel, bolts, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.50
Historical Pictures. Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	1.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DICHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELLIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising: Adam Bede.....
Romola.....
The Mill on the Floss.....
Felix Holt.....
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. Two Series Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 3 vols.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	2.00
Essays. Second Series.....	2.00
Miscellaneous.....	1.00
Representative Men.....	2.00
English Traits.....	2.00
Conduct of Life.....	2.00
Poems. With Portrait.....	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.....	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	2.00
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMKERTON (PHILIP G.). A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	6.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	2.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAUTWORTH'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....
Mosses from an Old Manse.....
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....
The Marble Faun.....
The English Note-Books.....
The American Note-Books.....
The French and Italian Note-Books.....
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.). Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGLOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGLOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skel-lings.....	1.75
Studies for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Moses the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints. Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analyses and Introductions by E. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities. Poems. Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.....	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL D'O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 3 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
Pre-historic Times.....	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
Elements of Geology.....	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays. Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	1.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Bouscasson. 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	2.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passage from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations.....	2.00
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organisation of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdeed of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping, with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A. D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.80
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Totty Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	1.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	2.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	1.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.). A Shadow of Dante.....	1.50
SCHILLER (H.). Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	1.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.00
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Social, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Recent Discussions in Science. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 1 vol.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	5.00
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	2.50
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorised translation. 2 vols.....	11.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Classic-Room Taine: History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.35
Vanity Fair.....
The Newcomes.....
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....
The Virginians.....
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.....
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Sketches, Sketches, Denis Daural, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humorists, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.50
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.50
TYLDE (EDWARD B.). The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	1.25
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	2.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.00
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sting and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Scatterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

Digitized by Google

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

F. J. PROUDHON: HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS.
PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.
PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.
LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.
THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE.
Demonstration. Axiom.

Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it demands something for Nothing.

Second Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, with a

given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is Homocidal.

Fifth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Sixth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition.
Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.
§ 1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.

§ 2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.

§ 3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.
§ 1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.

§ 2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.

§ 3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUI ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges.....$2.50
Price in Full Calf, blue, gilt edge.....5.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-
TON'S

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

ERINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

T H E

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

LIBERAL BOOKS.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MAN. By Win-
wood Beade.....$3.00
THE SAFEST CREED. By O. B. Frothing-
ham.....1.50
THE CHILDHOOD OF THE WORLD. By
Edward Clodd......75
NATHANIEL VAUGHAN: Priest and Man.
By Frederika MacDonald.....1.50
SOUL PROBLEMS, with other Papers. By
Joseph E. Peck......75
THE CULTIVATION OF ART, and its Relations to Religious Puritanism and
Money-Getting. By A. R. Cooper... .25

JUST ISSUED:

THE CHRIST OF PAUL; or, The Enigmas
of Christianity. By George Reber.
12mo. Extra cloth. 400 pp. Post-
paid.....2.00
PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPH-
ER AND REFORMER. By Charles
Sotheman. Post-paid.....1.25

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPU-LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN
THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place
Boston.

T H E

INDEX

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings.
Remittances should be made by International P. O. Order payable to Francis Elling-wood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIA- TION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.,

for TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by
James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.;
one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W.
Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

Nos. II, III, IV, 10 cts. each; ten for 80
cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen
(Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal
American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two
Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13
and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one
hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter.
10 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred,
$3.00.)

RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing.
25 cts.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE
& CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, April
6, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL
& CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON &
CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT

BETWEEN

Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CENTENNIAL BUSTS.

Jefferson and Paine.

Copies in plaster, boxed, guaranteed against injury by transportation. Price of each,
$50.00. Send orders to S. H. MORSE, 25
Bromfield St., Boston.

THOMAS PAINE.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

Of MORSE'S Bust of Thomas Paine, for sale
at the Office of THE INDEX, 1 Tremont
Place, Boston. Price, 50 cts.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,

and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense
kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Renting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

737 Washington St., Boston.

THE AMERICAN EDITION

OF

MONCURE D. CONWAY'S

SACRED ANTHOLOGY,

A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,
has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.

Address THE INDEX,
1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

BOOKS FOR THINKERS.

Send 25 cts. for THE STYLUS one year,
a Monthly Record and Review of the latest
and best works in Radical, Freethought, and Oriental Literature. It also contains a list of the standard books of this class.

CHAS. P. SOMERBY,

PUBLISHER, BOOKSELLER, AND IMPORTER,
139 Eighth St., New York.

THE GODS, AND OTHER

LECTURES.

By Col. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,

OF ILLINOIS.

This book contains five Lectures, entitled severally: "The Gods," "Humboldt,"
"Thomas Paine," "Individuality," and "Her-etics and Heresies." It is handsomely bound, and will be sent from this office on receipt of Two DOLLARS.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament,"
the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff," etc., etc.
Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by

THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)...$1.50

CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....1.00

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....1.00

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....1.00

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND

OTHER DISCOURSES.....1.00

LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....3.00

THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM

IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp.,
with steel portrait of the author)....2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS!

AN APPEAL TO ALL

Who believe that the United States should be

Absolutely Secularized.

And who favor the movement to carry out
the principle of

STATE SECULARIZATION,

As indicated in the "Demands of Liberalism."

605 WALNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, }
March 1, 1876. }

To the Liberal Leagues and the Liberal Public of the United States:—

The General Centennial Committee, appointed at a convention held in this city last September for the purpose of making all necessary arrangements for a General Centennial Congress of Liberals next summer, have decided to call said Congress to convene at Philadelphia, Saturday, July 1, 1876,—further particulars to be hereafter announced.

Each organized Liberal League will be entitled to send five delegates as special representatives—three in addition to its President and Secretary. But all individual Liberals who sympathize with the general objects and aims of the Liberal Leagues will be equally entitled and welcomed to seats and votes in the Congress.

REPORT PROMPTLY!

In order to lessen as much as possible the expenses of the delegates, each League is requested to elect them as soon as possible, and to report their names to the undersigned through its Secretary. All Liberals, delegates, or individuals who desire and intend to participate in the Convention are requested also to forward personally and immediately their names and full post-office addresses to the undersigned, that he may be enabled to make the most favorable terms possible for their accommodation. If notified early, he hopes to secure for them a considerable reduction in railroad fares, and to provide boarding-places at perhaps half the usual rates of the season.

Donations Solicited!

The Centennial Committee on Finance having through their Chairman transferred their duties to the General Centennial Committee, the undersigned has been appointed to attend to the financial department, and herby appeals to the Liberals of the country for voluntary contributions to the amount of One Thousand Dollars.
This amount will be needed to make the Congress a complete success, though the utmost possible will be done with whatever is contributed. The officers of the union of Liberal German societies propose to raise the same amount for their convention, and have already raised $500.
The Young Men's Christian Association have already spent this year nearly $100,000 in preparation for the Centennial, in the interest of Orthodox superstition;
it would be a pity if all the friends of "Liberty and Light" could not do a hundredth part as much for the cause of national development and free humanity! The money will all be wanted (and much more could be advantageously expended) in providing suitable halls and headquarters, advertising the Congress liberally in advance in the chief dailies of the country, defraying the necessary expenses of desired and invited speakers, paying verbatim reporters, publishing a complete pamphlet report of the proceedings, etc., etc. What is done must be done speedily, since the arrangements should be completed, as far as practicable, by the first of May.

All sums donated will be duly acknowledged in THE INDEX, and a full report of all expenditures will be sent for publication in the same paper. Remittances should be sent to the undersigned, 605 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. Will not all friends of the movement respond heartily and at once?

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

Acting Treasurer.

I believe that Mr. Kilgore is a gentleman of unimpeachable personal integrity, and that all money remitted to him as above will be faithfully and economically devoted to the legitimate uses of the Congress.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

Chairman of the General Centennial Committee.

At the preliminary Convention held at Philadelphia on Sept. 17, 18, and 19, 1875, for the purpose of making arrangements for the Centennial Congress of Liberals, the following were appointed a

General Centennial Committee:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

ALEXANDER LOOS,

ISAAC RHEN,

BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD,

H. S. WILLIAMS,

with power to increase their number to fifteen. The completion and success of the arrangements must depend on the liberality of the friends of the movement, who are respectfully and earnestly solicited to contribute the necessary funds.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1876.

WHOLE No. 340.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civilization impeded, and the most sacred rights of man infringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the practical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land;

Therefore, We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.—The name of this Association shall be THE LIBERAL LEAGUE OF —.

ART. 2.—The object of the Liberal League shall be to secure practical compliance with the "Demands of Liberalism" throughout the country, and especially in —, and thereby to effect the total separation of Church and State in fact as well as in theory.

Also to send delegates to the conventions of the National Liberal League, when organized, and to cooperate heartily with all the liberals of the country in furtherance of the above-named object.

ART. 3.—The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in general, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right.

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement.

ART. 6.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ex-officio delegates to the conventions of the National Liberal League.

ART. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any regular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amendments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever in any State be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion.

ion. No person shall ever in any State be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious practices shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

THE STUDENTS of the University at Rome have begun a movement to erect a monument to Giordano Bruno, the noble martyr to freethought who was burned as a heretic at Rome on Feb. 17, 1600, by the Roman Catholic Church.

LAST MONTH, a farmer in Viola, Minnesota, was fined five dollars for doing some dragging on Sunday; and in Owatonna, in the same State, the City Council passed a new ordinance prohibiting barbers from keeping their shops open on Sundays. Says the editor of the Waseca Leader: "The old New England Blue Laws must be coming in fashion again."

JUDGE WHEELER, nominated by the Republicans for Vice-President of the United States, is declared, as a matter of boast, to be "an elder in the Presbyterian Church." That is nobody's business but his own, provided he understands and performs his duty as an officer in a secular government. But if he carries his Presbyterianism into his official action, or, because of it, upholds any connection of Church and State, then it is everybody's business, and we trust everybody will "mind his own business."

THOSE INTERESTING antediluvians who see a "visitation of God upon the sins of men" in every great disaster (Bishop Haven saw one in the great Chicago fire) make mistakes like that of the elderly colored man last Wednesday, in this city. He was walking along Cambridge Street, when a boy in a provision store hit him hard on the back of the head with a potato. The old man stooped to pick up his beaver hat, and then, turning around, looked up in the sky, and said: "Golly, I 'spec dat was a bolt from heaven."

BEFORE OUR next issue shall appear, the Centennial Congress of Liberals and the Centennial Fourth of July will have passed by. On account of our absence, however, it will be impossible to publish any account of the proceedings until THE INDEX of July 13. Doubtless the daily papers will make more or less mention of the Congress; but we advise our readers not to accept their statements as necessarily accurate. Experience suggests a reasonable degree of caution in this respect. The omens of the Congress are most propitious: may the result be still more so!

IT SEEMS that the Mayor of Newport, Rhode Island, invited the city council to meet the Emperor of Brazil at his house on Sunday evening, June 18. The Newport Daily News was greatly scandalized at this outrage on the "Sabbath," and clamorously rebuked the Mayor. An excellent letter rebuking the News, and justly claiming equal Sunday rights for all under the Constitution, was published by the editor with this reply: "We publish the above at the request of one of our citizens and do not propose to reply to it. We differ entirely from the premises taken, and claim that an official act of this kind is one for which the whole country is morally responsible, and that, while this is a Christian country, Newport is also a Christian city." And this claim is pressed every day with increasing urgency. Take your choice, freemen: you must submit or resist.

THE Congressional Record of June 8 thus reports the remarks of Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, in presenting the Christian Amendment petitions on the preceding day: "I have got before me a large mass of papers which I want to put in a safe place.

They are petitions for the acknowledgment of God and Christianity in the Constitution of the United States. They are signed by 2,964 persons from New York, 9,703 from Pennsylvania, 1,688 from Vermont, and 106 from Massachusetts. I ask permission at this time to present all these petitions, and I do not know to what committee to refer them, but it ought to be the best committee in the House. I will move their reference to the Committee on the Judiciary." The motion was agreed to. Here, it seems, are 14,441 persons willing to petition Congress for the Christian Amendment at this very moment. That fact is a end for radical ruminants.

EARLY IN June, the Committee of the Judiciary, to whom Mr. Blaine's Constitutional Amendment on the school question had been referred by the House of Representatives, decided by a strict party vote not to report the measure to the House for its action at this session. This decision, says the Graphic, "seems to indicate that the Democrats do not desire the school question to come into the present canvass, and will avoid placing themselves on record, at least until after the Presidential election." Could anything more plainly betray Catholic influence in that party? As to the Amendment of Mr. Blaine, we trust that action on it may be delayed as long as possible. It is not such a measure as any true liberal will desire to see pass, for it is non-committal on the most important point,—that of secularizing the public schools. Better wait till the country is ripe for a thorough application of the only truly American principle.

WHEN IT was predicted by some fanatical preachers, in 1852, that God would send his judgments on England, if she threw open her Crystal Palace at Sydenham on Sunday, Frederick W. Robertson, one of the noblest men that ever stood in a Christian pulpit, uttered these characteristic words: "If judgments are in store for our country, they will fall, not because the Sunday trains are not arrested, nor because a public permission is given to the working-classes for a few hours' recreation on the day of rest, but because we are selfish men, and because we prefer pleasure to duty, and traffic to honor, and because we love our Church more than our Christianity, and our Christianity more than truth, and ourselves more than all. These are the things that defile a nation; but the labor and recreation of its poor, these are not the things that defile a nation." What a rebuke to the miserable pharisaism which shuts our own great Exhibition to the poor on Sunday!

THERE ARE MANY stirring and ringing poems in the Secular Song and Hymn Book, issued by authority of the National Secular Society of Great Britain, and edited by Mrs. Besant. It would be difficult to find elsewhere in so small a compass a collection of equal merit. The genius of Whittier (one of whose exquisite lyrics begins the little volume), Elliott, Shelley, Longfellow, Lowell, Shakespeare, Milton, Beaumont, Swinburne, W. J. Fox, Thomas Hood, Emerson, and so forth, is laid under contribution to form a treasury of noble thoughts and stimulating sentiments for daily use. "It is throughout," says the preface, "Republican and Atheistic, thus bearing the twofold stamp of our movement." This self-imposed necessity, we are constrained to say, interferes somewhat with the full success of the attempt. To carry out the theory, changes in some of the poems are made which produce the same effect as the changes made in Christian hymn-books to carry out an opposite theory; and to our own taste the loss is greater than the gain. But the excellence of the collection lies in its earnest, quickening, positive spirit, all for progress, liberty, truth, and universal goodwill; and we wish it could be made available on this side the water. As it is, those who wish for this capital little book must send to Charles Watts, 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street, London. The price in England is one shilling.

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—M. A. McGord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BOSTON, MASS.—F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JEFFERSON, OHIO.—W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary.
 SAN JOSE, CAL.—A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary.
 TOLEDO, IOWA.—J. Reedy, President; E. B. Beckley, Secretary.
 VINELAND, N. J.—John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary.
 JUNCTIONVILLE, NEB.—J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary.
 OLATHE, KAN.—S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary.
 DETROIT, MICH.—W. E. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BREKESVILLE, MICH.—A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 OSCEOLA, MO.—R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary.
 BATH, ME.—F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary.
 BURLINGAME, WIS.—President, J. D. Walter; Secretary, J. D. Kruschke.
 WASHINGTON, D.C.—George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary.
 AUBURN, OHIO.—John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treasurer.
 MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—S. C. Gale, President; W. C. Cowles and Frank J. Mead, Secretaries.
 NEW YORK, N.Y.—D. M. Bennett, President; S. H. Preston, Secretary.
 ST. JOSEPH, MO.—P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary.
 EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
 BALBO, IND.—President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 NEW ORLEANS, LA.—President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 BAY CITY, MICH.—President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson.
 CLEARFIELD, PA.—S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.
 BAUX CITY, WIS.—Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Conrad, Secretary.
 AUGUSTA, WIS.—Davis Jackson, President; George P. Vaulx, Secretary.
 WATERTOWN, N.Y.—L. D. Olney, President; W. A. Howland, L. M. Delano, Secretaries.
 PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mrs. Carrie B. Kilgore, President; John S. Dye, Secretary.
 MILWAUKEE.—Theodore Fritz, President; D. C. Zünig, Secretary.
 MILWAUKEE (Second League).—R. C. Spencer, President; E. Boyd, Secretary.
 NORTHUMBERLAND, PA.—M. B. Priestley, President; Chas. Collins, Secretary.
 NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—E. E. Denniston, President; M. A. Dewey, Secretary.
 MEDINA, MINN.—Allen Grave, President; Taylor Archibald, Secretary.
 COOPERSVILLE, MICH.—George A. Farr, President; H. Potts, Secretary.
 CLINTON HOLLOW, N.Y.—Theodore A. Cookingham, President; Lee G. Graham, Secretary.
 DARIEN, WIS.—Crosby Carleton, President; Daniel Rodman, Secretary.
 SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—J. L. Hatch, President; A. J. Boyer, Secretary.
 ADEL, IOWA.—George B. Warren, President; T. R. North, Secretary.

On National Education as a National Duty.*

BY PROFESSOR MAX MUELLER.

You have done me the great honor of asking me to come to Manchester, in order to distribute the prizes and certificates awarded by the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, at the last local examinations, to the candidates from this town and neighborhood.

I hesitated some time before accepting your flattering invitation, because I could not help feeling that, while those who had performed this office in former years, had by their very presence reflected honor and lustre on these meetings, and had even imparted to them a political importance, I could bring you no such help.

If I allowed myself to be persuaded at last, by the repeated requests of your committee, it was because I believe that, however much I may be excelled by my predecessors in everything else, I need not yield to them in the warm interest which I have felt all my life in the cause of education, in the widest sense of the word; and I may add, because I feel, and have felt from the very beginning, most deeply interested in that system of local examinations which has now been carried on for many years with ever-increasing success, and the results of which we see before us today.

Perhaps few here present recollect the first beginnings of these local examinations, carried on under the auspices of the two universities, Oxford and Cambridge. I recollect them well; and when I see how the tree has grown, and is growing, and spreading its branches wider and wider every year, I feel no slight satisfaction at the thought that I was present when it was planted,—nay, that I rendered some assistance, however small, in planting it.

And, gentlemen, I can assure you it was no easy matter to plant this tree. The first generous impulse came from Oxford, but from Oxford came also the first repulse. I go back in my thoughts to the year 1857, when Mr. Acland, now Sir Thomas Acland, first mentioned to me this idea, that much might be done to improve the middle-class schools all over England, if the universities would undertake to examine them, and to give some kind of academic recognition to the best candidates and to the best schools.

There were some men at Oxford who at once perceived the excellence of such a scheme; but there were others, too, who treated it with open scorn and derision. We were told by some that no one would come to be examined of his own free will; by others, that there would be such a rush of candidates that the university could not supply a sufficient staff of examiners; while as to giving the academic title of associate in arts to candidates who might not know Greek and Latin, that was considered simply high treason.

While these discussions were going on, Mr. Acland and some of his friends resolved to try the experiment, and in June, 1857, they held the first examination of middle-class schools in Devonshire. There is nothing like trying an experiment, and Mr. Acland's experiment proved at least three things:—

1. That the middle-class schools required to be looked into most carefully.
2. That the middle-class schools were willing to be looked into most carefully.
3. That the examinations presented no insurmountable difficulties to frighten the Universities from undertaking this important task.

I was myself one of the examiners at Exeter, and I well remember the enthusiastic meeting held there, for it was the first time that I allowed myself to be persuaded to speak, or rather to stammer, in public.*

Mr. Acland's scheme was soon after accepted by the university; and when I look at the excellent results which it has produced during the last seventeen years all over England, it seems to me that Sir Thomas Acland, the worthy son of a worthy father, has deserved well of his country, and that no honor that the nation could bestow on him would be too high, in recognition of the great and lasting benefit which, by taking the initiative in these local examinations, he has conferred on the nation.

I do not speak at random, and I know I can appeal to all here present, parents, teachers, and pupils too, who have been successfully taught under this system, and are here assembled to-day to receive their prizes and certificates, to support me in saying, that these examinations have been a real blessing to the teachers as well as to the taught.

And their capacity of usefulness is by no means exhausted.

At present, schools consider it an honor, if they can pass a certain number of their pupils, and if a few gain prizes and certificates. The time will come, I hope, when schools will not be satisfied unless they can pass nearly all their pupils, and if at least one-half of them do not carry off prizes and certificates. Till schools consider themselves in duty bound to send up, at certain periods, every one of their pupils to be examined, the true scope of these examinations has not been reached; nay, I fear their object may be defeated, if they encourage school-masters to aim at high excellence in a few rather than at an average excellence in all their pupils.

And not only schools will benefit by these local examinations, but home education also, and more particularly the home education of girls. Allow me to put before you my own experience in this matter. As there was hitherto no good school for girls at Oxford (I am glad to say a high school for girls will be opened there next week), my children had to be taught at home; but I told them, and I told their governess, that I should have them examined every year at these local examinations. That put them on their mettle; it gave a definite direction to their studies; it made them fond of their work, and, in spite of all the drawbacks of home education, the results have been most satisfactory. I sent my two eldest girls to be examined last year, chiefly in order to find out their weak and their strong points; I sent them again this year as junior candidates; and if you will look at the division list which is now in your hands, you will find both their names in a very creditable position. I shall send them again next year, and year after year, till their education is finished; and I can assure all parents who are obliged to educate their daughters at home, that, however excellent their governess may be, they will find these examinations affording a most useful guidance, a most efficient incentive, and, in the end, a most gratifying reward, both to pupil and teacher.

In 1857, however, I had as yet no such selfish interest in these examinations; and you may wonder, perhaps, what could have induced me then to go from Oxford to Exeter in order to be present and to help in the first experiment of these local examinations. Well, you know that education has been for many years our national hobby in Germany,—the one great luxury in which so poor a country as Germany is, and always must be, has freely indulged. But I may confess that I was influenced, perhaps, not only by a national bias, but by what is now called family bias, or atavis, that mysterious power which preserves certain hereditary peculiarities in certain families, and which, if it is true that we are descended from some lower animals, may even help to explain some strange and perplexing features in human nature. My own atavis, or at all events, my great-grandfather, was Basedow (1723–1790), a name which perhaps none of you has heard before, but a name well-known in Germany as the reformer of our national education, as the forerunner of Pestalozzi, as the first who, during the last century, stirred up the conscience of the people of Germany and of their rulers, and taught them at least this one great lesson: that next to the duty of self-preservation there is no higher, no more sacred duty which a nation has to fulfill than—national education.

This sounds to us almost like a truism, but it was not so a hundred years ago. The idea that the nation at large, and each man and woman in particular, is responsible for the proper education of every child, is a very modern idea,—it is really not much older than railways and telegraphs. Great men like Alfred and Charlemagne had a glimmering of that idea, but the times were too dark, too stern for them. During the whole of the Middle Ages we see little more than cathedral and monastic schools, chiefly intended for the education of the clergy, but opened in certain places to the laity also. Schools for the nation at large, and supported by the nation at large, there were none. Then came the Reformation, the very life-spring of which was the reading of the Bible by the laity. The reformers at once called for schools, but it was like a cry in the wilderness. Much, no doubt, was done by the reformers, many of whom were excellent school-masters, many of whom knew but too well how even Christianity could be degraded and well-nigh destroyed in countries where the education of the people had been neglected. Every Protestant clergyman became ipso facto a school-master. He had to see that the children of his parish were able at least to read the Bible and to say the catechism. This is the historical explanation why, in Protestant countries, the school has so long remained a mere appendage to the Church.

*"Some Account of the Origin and Objects of the New Oxford Examinations for the Title of Associate in Arts and Certificates, for the year 1856," by T. D. Acland, Esq. London: J. Ridgway, 1858.

After a time, however, the clergyman, having plenty of work of his own to do, secured the assistance of the sacristan, or sexton, who, in addition to his ordinary duties of bell-ringing, organ-playing, waiting at christenings and weddings, and grave-digging, had now to act as school-master also, and teach the children to read, to write, and to count. This was the beginning of our schools and school-masters; but in Germany even these small beginnings were soon swept away by the Thirty Years' War.

When, in the eighteenth century, people began to breathe again, and look about, the state of the lower and middle classes in Germany, as far as education was concerned, was deplorable. There were church schools, town schools, private schools, scattered about here and there, a few good, some indifferent, most of them bad; but as to any efficient machinery that should secure the proper education of every child in the country, it was never even thought of.

It was my atavis, it was old Basedow, who, about a hundred years ago, raised the first war-cry for national education in Germany. It would take too much time were I to attempt to give you an account of his life (I had lately to write it for the Deutsche Biographie, published by the Bavarian government). It was a chequered life, as the life of all true reformers is sure to be. Perhaps he attempted too much, and was too much in advance of his time. But whatever his strong, and whatever his weak points, this one great principle he established, and it remained firmly established in the German mind ever since: that national education is a national duty, that national education is a sacred duty, and that to leave national education to chance, Church, or charity is a national sin. That conviction has remained ingrained in the German mind, even in the days of our lowest political degradation; and it is to that conviction, and to the nation acting up to that conviction, that Germany owes what she is,—her very existence among the nations of Europe.

Another principle which followed, in fact, as a matter of course, as soon as the first principle was granted, was this: that in national schools, in schools supported by the nation at large, you can only teach that on which we all agree: hence, when children belong to different sects, you cannot teach theology. However irresistible the argument was, the opposition which it roused was terrific. Basedow thought, for a time, that he could frame a kind of diluted religion, which should give no offence to any one of the Christian sects, not even to Jews or Mohammedans. But in that attempt he naturally failed. His was a deeply religious mind, but national education had become with him so absorbing a passion, that he thought that everything else ought to give way to it.

I confess I fully share myself the same conviction. If it were possible to imagine a religion, or a sect, that should try to oppose or retard the education of the people, then I should say that such a religion cannot be a true religion, and the sooner it is swept away the better. I say the same of national education. If there were, if there could be, a system of national education that should exclude religious education, that system cannot be the true system, and the sooner it is swept away the better.

Poor Basedow soon came in conflict with the Church: he was deprived of his professorship in Denmark, though the king, more enlightened than his people, granted him his full salary as a pension for life. In Germany he was excommunicated, not by the Pope, but by the Protestant clergy at Hamburg, who excluded him and every member of his family from the communion. The mob at Hamburg was roused against him, his books were prohibited, and he found no rest till the Duke of Dessau, a man who dared to think and to act at his own peril, invited him to his capital, to help him to introduce into his small duchy a more perfect system of national education.

All these things have become matter of history, and are almost forgotten now, even in Germany. Many of Basedow's theories had to be given up, but the two fundamental principles of national education remained firmly established, and have never been shaken. They have spread all over Germany; they are adopted in Denmark, Sweden, Russia; they have lately found their way into Italy, a country which is making the greatest efforts for national education, knowing that her very existence depends on that.

Two countries only, France and England, still stand aloof. Yet when we hear a minister of instruction in France (Jules Simon) say, "Yes, there are schools, many schools; but one thing is still wanting, and it is for this that I do not die: we have not yet obtained compulsory and gratuitous instruction"; when in England we see that convictions with regard to national education become too strong for party, that Mr. Forster would rather break away from his friends than yield his deep and honest convictions, that Mr. Cross is more liberal, more bold than even Mr. Forster, in favor of compulsory national education; when you consider how one of the most distinguished divines of the Church of England, whose death the country is mourning this very day, insisted all his life on the separation of Church and school-teaching as the only solution of the educational problem; nay, when you remember the words spoken not long ago by your own excellent and outspoken bishop, that it was better for the Church to surrender her schools than to allow the existence of one single inefficient school,—you may be certain that the time has come when England also will recognize these two fundamental principles: education by the nation and for the nation: and complete separation of school-teaching and Church-teaching. And, believe me, as soon as these two principles are acknowledged, most of the difficulties that now beset the educational question, whether theological or financial, will vanish.

*An address delivered in the Free-Trade Hall, Manchester, 27th October, 1875.

The clergy will be relieved from its present false and invidious position. They, whether Protestant, or Nonconformist, or Roman Catholic, will be able to teach during certain hours on week-days, and in Sunday-schools, that religion which it is their right and duty to teach. The time will be amply sufficient, for the less a child learns of theology, as distinct from religion, the better. There will be no conscience-clause, no conscientious scruples, to disturb the teachers of religion. We shall have real, not half-and-half, religious teaching in every school; and as to the proper remuneration, I hold that if every shilling that is now subscribed for Church-schools were given to the clergy, particularly to the poor curates, as the religious instructors of their flock, the money would be well bestowed.

Then, no doubt, the whole charge for national education, a large portion of which is now covered by private charity, will have to be paid by the nation at large, as in the case of the army, the navy, and the civil service.

Whenever I state this, the ready answer I receive is: "Yes, it is very well for a foreigner to say that, but it is an utterly un-English idea; no sensible Englishman would listen to it for one moment."

I always look on that answer as a most hopeful sign; it shows that all other argumentative ammunition has been expended, for no gentleman would fire off that blank cartridge if he still possessed one single ball-cartridge in his pouch.

I am the very last man to say that the German system of national education should be transplanted to England. I speak only of certain broad principles, which are either right or wrong in themselves, and have nothing whatever to do with national character or historical circumstances. No one could have lived half his life in England and half his life in Germany, without knowing how utterly impractical it is to try to transfer English institutions to Germany, or German institutions to England. Germany has had to pay heavy penalties for attempting to copy the English form of constitutional government, and national education in England would be a certain failure, were it to be a mere imitation of the German or the French system. You do not want a minister of public instruction who could look at the clock and then tell you that at this moment every child in France is reading, "Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres." But if you could have a president of the council who could look at the clock and say, "At this moment no child over six or under thirteen is loitering in the streets," would that be so very intolerable?

How much should be left to local boards and authorities in the management of schools, what subjects should be taught, what books should be used, what hours should be kept, what fees should be paid, all these are matters of detail, which would admit of great variety, if only the great principle was once recognized, that the school belongs to the State, and that the State is responsible for its efficiency, as it is responsible for the efficiency of the army, the navy, nay, even of the post office. It is a misdemeanor to convey a letter otherwise than by the post. It is criminal to sell poison. Would it be carrying the same principle too far, if Parliament insisted that no one should open a private school, unless the government was satisfied of the wholesomeness of the moral and intellectual food sold in these schools to helpless children? Paternal government, I know, has not a good sound to English ears; but if anybody has a right to a paternal government, surely it is "these little ones, who should not perish."

These are not questions of politics, they are questions which concern every man, be he English, French, or German. They are religious questions, in the true sense of the word.

I hardly wish to touch on smaller points connected with the great question of national education. However large they may appear at present, they would dwindle away, if once national education was looked upon in the light of a national duty. Take, for instance, the financial difficulty.

By making national education an annual charge on the national exchequer, what is it you do? You simply substitute a national and rational taxation for an irrational and hap-hazard taxation. It is John Bull who pays the taxes; it is John Bull who pays the charities; and the only people who have any intelligible motive for opposing an equitable distribution of the educational taxes are those who do not want to pay their proper share.

Secondly, nothing can be more wasteful than the present system, when every parish, or at all events, every clergyman, wants to have his own little school. By combining three or four schools into one, you would not only save money, but you would be able to bring the teaching power, which is now often miserable, to the highest degree of efficiency.

On this point, if you will allow me, I should like to say a few words more. In order to have a good education you must have good educators. It is true we no longer employ the sexton, who, in addition to bell-ringing, organ-playing, and grave-digging, has to teach the children in school. But it is very bad still. The school-master is still in many places the servant of the clergyman; his work is hard, and he never rises to much more than about £150 a year. What can you expect on such conditions? A young school-master might begin with much less than that, if there were a career open to him. In the army a man begins as a lieutenant, but he may end as a general. Is teaching a lower profession than drilling? In every department of the civil service a gentleman begins with little, but he rises, and he has the prospect of a retiring pension in the end. Is the place of a school-master too low for a gentleman? Let me read you what Niebuhr said about this,—and remember he said it after he had been Prussian ambassador at Rome: "The office of a school-master, in particular, is one of the most honorable, and, despite of all the evils which now and then disturb its ideal beauty, it is for a truly noble heart the happiest path in life. It was the path which I had once chosen for myself, and how I wish I had been allowed to follow it!" Is teaching so very repulsive,—even teaching the A B C? Do gentlemen shrink from offices which seem at first most repulsive in the medical profession? Has a school-master fewer opportunities of doing good than a clergyman? If gentlemen can be inspectors of schools, why could they not be teachers of schools? Make education a branch of the civil service; make the school-masters, what they really are in the true sense of the word, servants of the queen, and you will find the best talent and the best moral stuff in the country ready at hand for making really efficient school-masters.

However, with all the saving that could be effected by combined schools, there would still be, no doubt, a large expenditure at first; only let us call it by its right name; it is not expenditure, it is investment, and the best and most lucrative investment in the world. That is what I often preach to parents who think that the education of their children is too expensive. I do not say that education is not too expensive. It is often scandalously expensive. But I still maintain that it is far better to spend the money on the very best education that can be had than to leave to each child a thousand pounds more. The same should be preached all over the country, till the nation at large—which, after all, consists of so many parents—understands that it will receive far higher interest from capital spent on English education than from capital invested in the English, nay, in the Turkish funds. As foolish parents have to pay their children's debts, foolish nations have to spend for prisons and workhouses, nay, for lunatic asylums, what they might have spent on national education.

But it is not that only. Every nation at present is trying to improve its material by national education; and in the peaceful, but not the less fierce and determined, warfare of commercial competition, in the permanent international struggle for life, depend upon it, the worst-drilled, the worst-educated country will go to the wall. A man in these days who cannot read is like a blind man; a man who cannot write is like a deaf and dumb man. Are those the men whom England wants to rear?

Once show to the people of England what is right, and they will do it. Is England a poorer country than Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Russia, or Italy? If all these countries tax themselves to the uttermost for compulsory and gratuitous education, is England to say, "I cannot afford it"? When slavery was to be abolished, did England count the cost? When, more lately, the army was to be relieved from the stigma of purchase, did Parliament shrink from paying the bill? Whatever the cost, sooner or later, the schools will have to be redeemed. England, in time of war, can bear an income tax of eighteenpence, and call it a flea-bite; the duties of peace, of peace granted to this country by a kind Providence, are as sacred as the duties of war; and if Englishmen have once made up their mind that national education is a national duty, they will think as little of repudiating that national duty as of repudiating the national debt.

It may take some years before all this is realized; but the higher your ideal of national education the better. A man without ideals is a poor creature; a nation without national ideals is poorer still.

I hear it often said that England should do for national education what Germany has done; what Italy is doing. No; that is not enough. We have done our best in Germany, but our best is but poor work. Our difficulties are enormous. Who is to pay for schools and school-masters, such as they ought to be? The soil of the greater part of Germany is poor, and therefore the country will never be rich. Besides, we may do what we like, we shall always live between two symplegades,—between France on one side, and Russia on the other; and we shall always have to spend our best energies in self-defence. There is the strongest feeling among the statesmen of Germany that the greatest efforts will have to be made for improving our national education; only what we want for it is, what we are not likely to get, a long peace, and a Bismarck and Moltke rolled up into one minister of public instruction. In England you have everything, and there is no reason why your national education should not be as much ahead of that of Germany, as the education of Germany is of that of China. You have money, you have peace, you have public spirit, and you have, what is best of all, practical religion; I mean you still do a thing, however much you may dislike it, because you believe it is the will of God. Well, then, invest your money, utilize your peace, rouse your public spirit, and convince the world that one-half, three-fourths, nine-tenths of real practical religion is—education, national education, compulsory, and, it may be, gratuitous education.—Contemporary Review.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

A GLIMPSE AT THE CLERGY.

SCENE:—A minister's study: Mandel seated writing. Enter Terrell, a Radical.

TERRELL.

Good-morning, Mandel! Is your sermon done?

MANDEL.

But just begun. What else can you expect? I tell you, Terrell, 'tis no easy task To grind out two fresh sermons every week, And serve meanwhile as dry-nurse to my flock, Chuck every parish baby 'neath the chin, And pray with toothless grannies by the score, Visit the sick and all who are bereaved, Take tea with some new family each night, Poison my stomach with that heavy cake Of which each housewife has a special kind, Run two or more dull prayer-meetings a week, And, worse than all, endure the martyrdom Of gabbling nonsense at the sociables For three long hours (and at each end a prayer!), And hearing how the mothers' meeting goes, And what's the state of Ann Eliza's cough, And "how much good" some silly sermon did! With all this constant strain of petty calls I get no time to think, much less to read, And I'm fast losing all the brains I had.

TERRELL.

Why do you do it then? Why not confine Yourself to pulpit exercise alone? Let Deacons A. and B. go through the flock And give the required grins and silly words Which make a man acceptable to most.

MANDEL.

Ah! That is quite impossible, my friend, A minister might preach as did St. Paul; But were he not what's called a "social man," Did he not with the women make small-talk, Get up some festival, or, worse than that, Some picnic for the church and Sunday-school, He would be called cold, intellectual; "Good preacher? Yes, but O! so far away! His sermons do not touch my heart, because, Because, you see, he don't come round to tea, And make himself as lively as he ought. Some evenings he just stays at home and reads!"

TERRELL.

How often can the last be said of you?

MANDEL.

Not more than twice a month, the more's the pity. To-night I have my hardest task of all.

TERRELL.

What's that?

MANDEL.

A teachers' meeting. You can judge How I must feel to calmly sit and hear Ideas advanced upon some Bible verse At which I roar in secret here alone! At present we're in Genesis, where God Descends and walks one day in Mamre's plain, Sits down and eats with good old Abraham, Who kills a calf to entertain Him with! My people take all this for very fact; Conceive of the Omnipotent as one Who has like form and feelings with themselves; Believe the world was made in just a week, Or else adopt that silly subterfuge Of saying that the "Days" were ages vast, When it is plain the writer had in mind A very day, and had no other thought. They hold, too, that the rainbow is a sign Of no more flood, hung up at times by God; And should one talk of light's refracted rays, They would snuff heresy and shake their heads. They smile a little at old Jonah's fate, But would not venture to dispute the tale, Because 'tis Holy Writ. This shows you how I must be tortured in my secret soul By seeing all these superstitious myths Believed in as reality to-day.

TERRELL.

Why not instruct them better? Why not say Precisely what you think? 'Tis better far Than to keep on repeating Eastern tales All faith in which you long ago have lost. Fling Verbal Inspiration to the winds! Proclaim the Bible to be what it is,— A history of Jewish thoughts and deeds From mythical to more historic times. Nothing is gained by acting thus a part, Pretending to believe what you do not. You might be helping onward the good time When superstition's reign shall be no more. But now you clog the wheels of liberal thought.

MANDEL.

I cannot, Terrell; I am fettered now By social claims,—a wife and family. I am not rich and cannot risk my place, By trying to infuse my own ideas Into the thoughtless, superstitious minds Of most of those who constitute my flock. The masses are not ready for the truth. Long practice of receiving all their creed From pious ancestors of Pilgrim stock, Without a question or a single doubt, Relieves them of all independent thought, And makes them follow blindly on like sheep. Why should I venture to disturb their faith, Or give them doubts of what they've learned from youth?

TERRELL.

For love of truth! It should be your delight

To help these weaker minds to firmer thought;
To rid them of those dark, distressing creeds
Whose monstrous errors trouble many souls.
Believe me, you will find a ready soil
In which to drop your seed. Men do not live
And read in this enlightened age for naught.
Come, Mandel, be a man! Throw off this cloak!
Stand boldly forth and speak your honest thought!
So shall you win respect and confidence
From all whom you will lead into the light.

(One knocks).

MANDEL.

(Enter Danforth).

Come in!

Ah, Danforth, it is you. Good-day!
You know my friend here, Terrell. We just now
Were speaking of this holy work of ours.
How goes it with you? Are your sermons done?

DANFORTH.

Yes, by God's grace, I have them finished now.
It has been hard to do much this hot week;
But Jesus gave me strength, and I have been Supported by my all-inspiring theme.

TERRELL.

What is it, then, which has so moved your soul?

DANFORTH.

Hell, and damnation of all guilty men.

TERRELL.

What, such a fiery subject for July!
'Tis in bad taste. The season's too extreme.
Leave it till next December, when the thought
Is less exhausting to the human mind.

DANFORTH.

How can you jest, sir, on a theme so full
Of dreadful warning to the human race?
For my part I can think of nothing else.
The awful, endless doom which surely waits
For all who do not place their faith in Christ
Rings in my ears and rends my very soul.

TERRELL.

Stay, let me ask you plainly. You believe
That everlasting punishment will be
The fate of all who in this scanty life
Have sinned and not believed on Jesus Christ?

DANFORTH.

I do most firmly, for my Savior said -
Distinctly and repeatedly that this Should be the portion of the wicked soul.
Believing thus, I let no occasion pass
To warn all persons of their threatened doom.
But oh, alas! What treatment do I meet?
Men laugh at me. The members of my church
Are leaving me, complaining that I paint
Too forcibly the terrors of the law.

TERRELL.

What think you, Mandel? Do you hold this view
Which makes of God a great Inquisitor?

MANDEL.

Not I! That dreadful doctrine has gone by.

DANFORTH.

But it is in the Bible.

TERRELL.

And your church
Has not expelled it from its printed creed.

MANDEL (hesitatingly).

Christ spoke in figures when he talked of Hell,
And Revelation is too strongly drawn.
The doctrine, it is true, stands in the creed,
But it is only a dead letter there.

TERRELL.

Then blot it out! Why cling to idle words
In which no man has longer any faith?
Dare you, dear Mandel, boldly rise and say
In public that this doctrine is absurd,
Unjust, enormous, horrible, and false?

MANDEL.

No, I confess I dare not. As I said,
Times are not ripe yet for a sudden change;
And the rejection of this would involve
A great deal of uneasiness and pain.

TERRELL.

But Danforth says his people are enraged
Because he preaches Hell in all its force;
While you confess you do not dare to state
The contrary of this. In what a plight
Must all your churches be, if this be so?
Still clinging to dead letters and ideas
As fossil and uncouth as mastodons!
And yet objecting sharply if they are Presented fairly to their view! How long
Can such a state of things maintain its hold?

DANFORTH (in prayer).

How long, O Lord, how long?

TERRELL.

Another point:

Do you indeed believe that there exists
An evil Spirit, terrible and vast,
Whom God permits to tempt his children here
And lure them down to sin, and death, and Hell?
And do you further hold that this Arch-Fiend
Has countless emissaries at his call,
Who roam about the world and haunt the souls
Of good and pure ones, whom they tempt to sin?
In short, do you believe in Satan's imps?

DANFORTH.

Alas! I do and must. My sinful soul

Is daily torn by struggles with the Fiend;
And oftentimes evil thoughts arise within,
Which cannot but be caused by wicked imps.

TERRELL.

What say you, Mandel? Is't your doctrine too?

MANDEL.

A thousand times, No! Thank the Lord, I'm free
From such a dreadful incubus of fear
As would be caused by such a horrid creed!
Why! 'Tis that dogma which not long ago
Caused our good ancestors to burn alive
And torture with unutterable woes
Those who were but suspected to be held
Possession of by one of Satan's imps!

DANFORTH.

And yet it is distinctly taught by Christ.

TERRELL.

Aye, so it is. There, Danforth, you are right.
If anything is clearly, plainly taught
In all of the New Testament, 'tis this:
That Satan holds this world in his domain;
That here he roams about with all his train,
Like a great "roaring lion" with its cubs,
And lies in wait for every human soul.
Christ teaches this distinctly. In his words
(If they are well reported) we may find
Dozens of places where he speaks of imps
As dwelling in or striving for the soul.
You, Mandel, in rejecting such ideas
Are quite in sympathy with common-sense,
And the enlightened spirit of the age.
But Danforth holds, no doubt, the Bible view.
Therefore again I say, why not confess
That here your Bible is once more at fault?
Wipe out such nonsense from your Church's creed,
Which neither you nor half your Church believe!

MANDEL.

Ah! Terrell, 'tis an easy thing for you
To calmly sit and bid me speak the truth.
If you but knew the dreadful pangs of doubt
In which I fear to cast my people's souls!
And I might lose my place and thus expose
My wife—

TERRELL.

You think I do not understand
The anguish of a soul which is in doubt?
You should know better, Mandel, when you think
Of what my life's sad history has been.
Was I not born and nurtured in the faith?
And was I not the "child of many prayers"?
Nay, more, so cloudless was my sky of faith
That I prepared, like both of you, to preach.
But with my study came the germs of thoughts
Which, growing stronger as I studied more,
First made me question whether all these words
Which I repeated glibly might be true.
And step by step in patient, constant strife,
Fighting my doubts as firmly as I might,
I saw at last my creed begin to shake.
Point after point was yielded, as the light
Of science and historical research
Poured in upon my scrutinizing gaze.
And one by one the landmarks of my faith
Went drifting by me, and I was alone,
Moving through darkness, though I knew not where!
For years I suffered a slow agony.
My reason drove me onward, but my heart
Clung fondly to those teachings of the past,
Which I had learned beside my mother's knee;
Until I came forth fairly from that curse
Of iron dogmas wrought by brains of men,
Whose thoughts the Church has slavishly received,
Nor looked for others. It has cost me much
Of this world's gain, but I speak not of that.
The wealth of the whole world could not induce
Nor tempt me for one moment to go back
To faith in those old relics of the past.
Now I breathe freely, and I should but die,
Were I shut up again to such a creed!

DANFORTH.

Oh! may the Lord have mercy on your soul,
And upon all who doubt his Holy Writ!
To whom is hid the sight of burning Hell,
And who can speak of Satan with a jest!

TERRELL.

Danforth, I honor you at least for this,
That you are resolute in preaching that
Which you believe as true. My deep regret
Is that you hold such views of God and man
As your great-grandchildren will read with smiles.
Mandel, I pity you with all my heart,
For you persist in staying in the Church
Without endeavoring to give it light.
You ought to be the centre of a force
Which should, judiciously applied, bring round,
Without too quick a wrench of old beliefs,
The glorious liberty of sacred truth.
Will you not promise me to do it now?

(Taking his hand.)

MANDEL (turning away his face).

I cannot, Terrell. Urge me thus no more.

DANFORTH (going out).

I'll pray for both of you two times a day.

TERRELL (aside).

These two men represent the most of those
Who stand to-day within the modern Church:
Fossils and bigots, Bible-worshippers,
Or, when enlightened, featherers of their nests!

J. L. S.

BOSTON, May 25, 1876.

NOTES OF LIBERAL PROGRESS IN MILWAUKEE.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

A few weeks since a "Glimpse" told the readers of THE INDEX that "Chicago had a Sunday Lecture Society," giving briefly from a report of that society an account of the average attendance upon the lectures, with the names of several of the more prominent lecturers. While reading this notice, I wondered why some one interested in liberal progress had not forwarded to THE INDEX a report of the Sunday Lecture Society of Milwaukee. If it be not too late to do this now, I will say that the experiment of Sunday lectures proved a positive success in this city. Although they met with some opposition, and a few Orthodox ministers and church-goers used their utmost influence to suppress it, and at one time almost compelled the society to succumb to this pressure, it is a matter of congratulation, not only to the "society" but to the liberal-minded at large, that the movement was triumphant. The lectures gained steadily in popularity, were largely attended, gave poor people grand opportunities to hear the most popular and talented lecturers in the field, and moreover proved a financial success. The course closed under the most pleasant and favorable circumstances. Two of our ministers were present upon the occasion of the closing lecture, and took the opportunity of speaking their conviction that the Sunday lectures were a power for good. These were Rev. Myron Reed, of the Fourth Congregational Church, and Rev. G. E. Gordon, of the First Unitarian Church of Milwaukee. It is but just in this connection to state that one of the strongest impulses to continue the course in the day of the disheartenment of the society was given by Rev. Mr. Gordon, in a brief but manly and spirited exhortation at one of the lectures. His appeal, backed by the pecuniary aid of the enthusiastic liberals present, turned the tide, and from that day the Sunday afternoon lecture was a perfect success. The society have already held meetings for the purpose of reorganizing and arranging for a course of lectures for the coming season, and Sunday lectures promise to become an established and recognized fact in Milwaukee.

The second annual meeting of the Second Liberal League of Milwaukee was held last evening, June 13. From the time of the formation of this League nothing has been heard of it, or from it, until the past week, when the announcement for this meeting was made. The purposes of the meeting were to elect officers for the ensuing year and to appoint delegates to represent the League in the Centennial Congress of Liberals, to take place in Philadelphia. A cordial invitation was extended to all persons favorable to the complete separation of Church and State, the entire secularization of our government, and the consistent and thorough carrying out of the principles of religious liberty.

The attendance upon the meeting was not large, but there was a manifest spirit and purpose to aid in carrying out the "Demands of Liberalism" as set forth in THE INDEX. That such a meeting could be publicly called and its avowed purposes plainly stated, be attended by representatives of the best classes of society, and be marked by the same decorum pervading any public meeting called for any religious or other purpose, is an indication of the great progress of liberalism in the last twenty-five years. After preliminary reading of the "Demands of Liberalism," and a few remarks by the President of the League, Mr. R. C. Spencer, the Rev. G. E. Gordon addressed the meeting. He stated in substance that he fully indorsed all these "Demands"; that many of the views of this platform he had held for years. Mr. Gordon forcibly urged organization and action, that we might meet the enemy on their own ground. The tone of the remarks made by this gentleman was full of the progressive spirit, and happily pertinent to the theme and the occasion emphasized by "entire sympathy with the objects of the meeting."

The President read a letter from Rabbi Spitz of Temple Emanuel, Milwaukee, who was prevented by official duty from being present, but who expressed his full sympathy with the objects of the meeting.

Mr. Spencer remarked, after the reading of this letter, that he had conversed with several of the ministers of the city upon the subject of these "Demands of Liberalism," who said that they believed entirely in the justice of the "Demands," but did not think it best at present to attend the meetings of the League. (A confused, suppressed murmur followed this last remark quite noticeable. It was like an "audible smile" at these pietists' "policy.") These politic preachers are the least excusable of any. With a knowledge of things as they are, they continue to preach of things as they were. Having escaped themselves in a greater or less degree from superstitions, they keep up a seeming of faith. They even think this course quite meritorious by virtue of their regard for their hearers, whom they credit with the incapability of receiving and accepting what they can receive and accept. This consideration toward the "pew" is highly complimentary, to say the least, and the pulpit would find, were it to test the capacity of the pews with a little more heroic courage, that they were fully prepared to receive and accept the most progressive thought, provided it were put with positiveness in place of policy.

Mr. Gordon, in contradistinction to those other ministers who believe in justice, but "do not think it best at present" to declare themselves on the side of those who not only believe in it, but are willing to fight for it and bear contumely for it, deserves the heartiest recognition from all the liberals in our city. This young minister is a hard worker in his church, and, although almost a stranger in Milwaukee, identifies himself with every public-spirited movement in a straightforward, hearty fashion. His thought is for the most part liberal and clearly outspoken, yet he adheres to many methods in his church that savor of superstition. I don't think, with a lady whom I overheard remarking after the close of the meeting last evening, "that Mr. Gordon cannot honestly stand in his pulpit and on the platform of the League at the same time," because I believe him to be as honest in the conservative convictions to which he strangely and contradictorily clings as he is in the extreme radicalism he fearlessly promulgates. And so the veriest radical of us all will try to forgive him for the communions and baptisms, prayers and service-reading, and the like, in his church, when he comes outside of it and heroically strikes hands with the leaders of the most pronounced liberal movement of the time, trusting he also will try to be forgiving for so much personal mention.

A preamble and resolution was also read by Mr. Gordon, the purport of which was to send a petition from Milwaukee to Philadelphia against the unjust and inhospitable closing of the Exposition on Sunday.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Carl Doerflinger to the effect of urging the Liberal Leagues of Milwaukee to fight against the God-in-the-Constitution Amendment. These resolutions were adopted.

After the election of officers and of delegates, a collection was taken to defray the expenses of the meeting and the surplus voted to be sent to the Congress fund. Several new names were added to the roll of the members of the League, among them the names of a number of young men,—a favorable sign.

This account of the first meeting of any importance of the Second Liberal League may seem of little moment to the larger working leagues throughout the country. Yet it may be of interest to unorganized liberals, and may give an impulse to them to make even a small beginning. No one can tell what may be the outgrowth of even trifling beginnings.

It would be an undeserved slight, if among the notices of liberal progress the name of the Spectroscope should be omitted, a weekly liberal paper published by Mrs. Marion V. Dudley in Milwaukee. This paper partakes of the same healthy courage that stimulated the Sunday Lecture Society and the Liberal League. Its columns are open to the discussion of every subject, and no contribution is refused on account of its opinions. With a preference for radical articles, it will not refuse those which are conservative.

These few hastily penned notes will indicate to the readers of THE INDEX the status of liberal thought and effort in a Western city. The small number in attendance upon the meeting of the League must not be taken as the limit of liberal people in Milwaukee. They can be counted by scores and hundreds who have dropped away from churches and creeds. There has, however, been no attempt heretofore to organize the freethinking, freedom-loving portion of the community. Once an organization is effected and meetings are held, either for active work, or mental stimulus, or social intercourse, there hundreds will gather together, and there may come from some small beginning something which shall mean pleasant and profitable gatherings, such as those in England which Mrs. Besant so delightfully describes. Spite of my admiration both for Mr. Stevens and his ideal individualism, I see no other way to make the radical element useful or a power than to combine interest and effort, and urge the principles of justice and religious liberty with "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether."

I await with interest the action of the Congress of Liberals at Philadelphia. I am sanguine that the course taken by that Congress will stamp itself upon this Centenary anniversary of the birthday of a republic. The questions at issue and to be considered by this Congress are so indissolubly wedded to the ideas of independence which were the germ of our national existence, that the outcome of their agitation must mean and can only mean a grander, truer Declaration of Independence than that which nations are now meeting together to celebrate.

AMELIA W. BATE.

MILWAUKEE, June 14.

* MR. GLADSTONE AND THEISM.

We cheerfully comply with the request of the Rev. John Page Hopps to publish the subjoined in THE INDEX.—ED.

Dear Sir:—Speaking in your Contemporary Review article of the "Theist" (with whom you incline to identify or class the Unitarian), you truly say that he "recognizes one Almighty Governor of the world," who has "placed us under discipline in the world"; but you also say that "in respect to the world unseen, and to its Author," "he is doomed, or counselled, to begin anew," and that, in regard to these, he does not "profit by the vast capital which has accumulated by the labor and experience of his race."

You say "he inherited from no one, and no one will inherit from him." And you put that as the Theist's "theory" and his "goal." Then, contrasting Theism with Ultramontaniam, the Historical School and the Protestant Evangelical School, you say that the method of knowledge under the former is "simply renewable upon a lease to each man for his life."

Give me leave to point out that to some of the most intelligent of your readers this appears to be an absolute reversing of the facts. It is the Catholic or the Evangelical who practically learns nothing from the vast accumulations of the race; who takes his religious knowledge as a man takes a lease of an old house,—for his life; and who has nothing of his own to leave to his successors. The Theist, on the contrary, is precisely the man who does profit by the religious accumulations of the race, who does inherit these accumulations up to the latest moment of his own career, who does leave an inheritance of fresh thought and feeling to his successors, and who, so far from simply leasing a religious house made to his hands by Catholic or Protestant builders, feels it to be his duty and delight to use up the old material in providing a home adapted to the needs of to-day. The Theist is absolutely free to do this, and he is a Theist simply because he declines the order of Catholicism and Evangelicalism,—to learn nothing and forget nothing. He holds that the rich accumulations of religious thought in nations other than the Hebrew, and in connection with religious experiments other than Christian, should be profited by; he holds that the last eighteen hundred years have added much to our grounds of knowledge, to our material, to our methods, to our light, to our capacity, and even to our possibilities of reverent and worthy conceptions of Deity; and he therefore declines to abide by some old things, and decides to hold by many things that are new. In other words, he declines to do the very things you say he does; he declines to neglect the "vast capital which has been accumulated by the labor and experience of his race"; he declines to refuse to inherit from his predecessors and to leave nothing to his successors; he declines to simply renew the lease of the old house for his life. If, however, by inheriting nothing it is meant that the Theist does not begin with a store of final and infallible statements which have been handed down from the past, and can neither be contradicted nor surpassed, then the statement is true; but, in that case, the statement only amounts to the assertion, which no Theist would wish to deny,—that the search after God is, in his judgment, an unclosed chapter in human history. In a similar sense, it may also be true that he is "doomed" to "begin anew," but that is only because he believes in progress even in relation to our knowledge of God; his starting-point, however, is determined by the goal already reached, and his own race is consecrated and sweetened by the loyalty of his own free search for truth.

I know these views as to your statement are held by very many, who, just because they have the greatest possible admiration for your genius and an equal confidence in your moral earnestness, all the more wonder that in this important matter you appear to have turned the facts upside down.

Heartily yours, JOHN PAGE HOPPS.
CROSSHILL, Glasgow, June 1, 1876.

THERE IS A CLERICAL PERSON over in Newark who, being greatly interested in the due observation of Sunday, goes from shop to shop on that day purchasing unlawful beverages and cigars. When Monday dawns he complains of the law-breaking vendors, who are duly fined. This gentleman is described as an "Agent of the Temperance Brotherhood." He is also a Methodist minister, and at a meeting last Monday of such clergymen, he was taken to task for his conduct. There seems to have been no action decisive of this matter of casuistry, as some rebuked and others applauded the self-sacrificing zeal of the brother. One point does not appear to have been raised. If the earnestness of this volunteer detective should result in a well-marked case of inebriety, would he be liable to a fine and costs? Or would he be permitted to plead his excellent motive? We do not mean to dispute this, but we fear that the general sentiment of society would be rather against the conduct of such a philanthropist. Nobody much likes professional informers. They may be useful, but they are not generally believed. There ought to be some better way of closing the gin-shops of Newark on Sunday. When men do evil that good may come of it, they are greatly in danger of doing it for its own sake, especially when their efforts take an alcoholic direction.—N. Y. Tribune.

"SOMETHING are the end,
Some work of noble note may yet be done.
'Tis not too late to seek a newer world—
Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will,
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."—Tennyson.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

F. A. Angell, New York	$1.00
Edouard Hackett, Philadelphia	1.00
Friends in Boston	40.00
Carl H. Hirsch, Dover, N.H.	2.50
T. W. Higginson, Newport, R.I.	2.00
A. Schelling, Philadelphia	1.00
Richard Hackett, Philadelphia	1.00
W. H. Spencer, Sparks, Wis.	10.00
E. M. Harris, Baltimore	1.00
R. M. J. Vail, Port Jervis, N.Y.	1.00
Sank City (Wisc.) Liberal League	20.00
Mrs. M. P. Southworth, Cleveland, O.	5.00
Israel Herz, Oakville, Pa.	1.00
J. J. Hoopes, Philadelphia	1.00
Alex. Cochran, Franklin, Pa.	5.00
B. B. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	2.00
Warren Griswold, " "	1.00
M. Rumberger, Piedmont, W. Va.	1.00
Wm. Sisson, Port Hope, Ontario	1.00
Chas. Nash and sister, Worcester, Mass.	4.00
C. R. Peckham, Newport, R. I.	2.00
S. R. Honey, " "	2.00
J. G. Mills, Goshen, N. Y.	1.00
Geo. W. Julian, Irvington, Ind.	1.00
Alex. Risk, Winthrop, Iowa	2.50
J. O. Bentley, Philadelphia	5.00
J. S. Bonnell, Salem, Ohio	.50
G. B. Frothingham, New York	10.00
Mrs. Ellen J. Harker, Philadelphia	5.00
Mrs. Hannah Serley, Philadelphia	1.00
George Langford, " "	1.00
Thos. Phillips, " "	1.00
Carl Doerflinger, Milwaukee	1.00
Henry D. Maxson, Amherst, Mass.	1.00
A. Friend, New Bedford, Mass.	10.00
Chas. F. Steele, Brooklyn, N. Y.	10.00
Friends in Brooklyn, N. Y.	20.00
S. R. Koehler, Boston	2.00
John Carson, Troy Mills, Iowa	1.00
H. T. Marshall, Brockton, Mass.	1.00
H. C. Gray, Fairleeville, O. (collection)	5.50
J. Sedgbeer, " "	.50

Through Banner of Light	15.50
" Boston Investigator	16.75
" New Age	5.50
M. Altman, New York City	20.00
F. A. Green, Boston	5.00
Friends in Boston	2.00
J. V. Blake, Boston	5.00
A Friend in " "	5.00
Geo. W. Park, " "	3.00
Chas. W. Wendte, Cincinnati	5.00
Robert Moore, St. Louis	10.00
James Eddy, Providence	5.00
W. Eysenbach, Lima, O.	.50
W. L. Foster, East Soughton, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. Mary G. Thompson, Lancaster, Mass.	3.00
John Wise, Philadelphia	1.00
A Friend in New Jersey	10.00
John Gillies, St. Louis	1.00
Robert Collyer, Chicago	50.00
"An English Brother" (25)	27.25
J. W. Frank, Dysart, Iowa	1.00
Louis Löwenthal, Rochester, N. Y.	2.00
B. F. Underwood, Thorndike, Mass.	2.00
Mrs. Wm. Heine, Pleasant Hill, Mo.	1.00
Adam Wolfe, Port Byron, N. Y.	2.00
Thos. H. Matthews, New Bedford	5.00
S. F. Spangler, Winthrop, Iowa	5.00
D. Sandman, Barre Mills, Wis.	1.00
E. R. Brown, Elmwood, Ill.	1.00
C. M. Dennison, New York	5.00
Mrs. Orrin Gillet, Parma, Mich.	5.00
M. Jacoby, St. Louis	2.00
O. W. Heyer, St. Louis	3.00
Philip Godheart, St. Louis	2.00
Mrs. Kotany, St. Louis	1.00
Kohn & Co., St. Louis	2.00
C. H. Shepard, Brooklyn	5.00
William Green, Brooklyn	5.00
Sidney H. Morse, Boston	100.00
Gilbert Cope, West Chester, Pa.	1.00
F. M. Vaughan, Middleboro, Mass.	1.00
E. R. McKenzie, Charlestown, Mass.	1.00
W. C. Fuller, Willimantic, Ct.	3.00
D. P. Wilcox, Yankton, Dakota Territory	1.00
Dr. J. N. Lyman, Columbus, O.	5.00
Daniel G. Crandon, Chelsea, Mass.	1.00
Geo. Lewis, Providence, R. I.	1.00
Jas. Dillaway, Somerville, Mass.	1.00
Liberal League, Minneapolis, Minn.	30.00
David Ferguson, Waupun, Wis.	5.00
Matilda Goddard, Boston	5.00
Banner of Light, Boston	5.00
William C. Gannett, Boston	10.00
Geo. Dimmock, Cambridge, Mass.	2.00
Marcus F. Whitehead, Jersey City, N. J.	2.50
J. Farnsworth, Fort Scott, Kan.	1.00
J. L. Cutler, Quitman, Ga.	3.00
Friends in Dexter, Me.	2.00
Henry Damon, Boston	2.00
L. Kingman, Buffalo, N. Y.	2.50
Dr. L. F. Babb, Eastport, Me.	1.00
John Keppler, New Frankfurt, Mo.	1.00
Joh. Angell, Providence	1.00
A Friend in Concord, Mass.	1.00
J. E. Oliver, Ithaca, N. Y.	5.00
Wm. J. Potter, New Bedford, Mass.	2.00
Lewis G. Jones, New York	1.00
Rabbi S. H. Sonnenschein, St. Louis	2.00
Hon. John B. Henderson, " "	5.00
Rev. J. C. Learned, " "	2.00
James E. Yeaman, " "	5.00
Rev. E. A. Holland, " "	1.00
Hon. A. W. Kelsey, " "	10.00
Jacob Hoffman, Cincinnati	5.00
Joseph Rosenthal, Granby, Mo.	1.00
William Barnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	2.50
Joseph Barnsdall, " "	2.00
S. R. Urbino, Boston	2.00
L. Prang, Boston	5.00
W. H. Studley, Boston	2.00
H. C. Watson, " "	1.00
W. Warren, " "	2.00
A Friend, " "	1.00
Wm. Dudgeon, New Hartford, N. Y.	5.00
Chas. Coffin, New Bedford	1.00
Elizur Wright, Boston	5.00
C. Wheeler, Boston	1.00
Mrs. E. B. Chace, Valley Falls, R. I.	10.00
W. W. Stout, Vienna, Ill.	1.00
George Iles, Montreal, Can.	3.00
Dr. H. Nye, Enon Valley, Pa.	1.00
A. Hiller, " "	1.00
F. Alsdorf, " "	1.00
C. Fischer, " "	1.00
D. A. Robertson, " "	1.00
A. Folsom, Boston	5.00
C. Vonnegut, Indianapolis, Ind.	5.00
C. Vonnegut, Jr., " "	2.50
W. Steinwedell, Quincy, Ill.	1.00
H. O. Glattfield, " "	1.00
A. H. Bates, " "	1.50
Frank Cheney, South Manchester, Ct.	5.00
R. Frisbie, Van Wert, O.	1.00
Liberal Association, Smith Centre, Kan.	1.00
B. M. Smith, Minneapolis, Minn.	2.00
G. Mannfeld, Indianapolis, Ind.	5.00
Ivan Panin, Boston	1.00
D. B. Humphrey, New Bedford	5.00
J. W. Scott, Morrill, Kan.	.50
J. W. Goodrich, Amesbury, Mass.	2.50
John A. Nowell, Boston	5.00
John C. Haynes, Boston	5.00
A. W. Stevens, Cambridgeport, Mass.	5.00
L. A. Saxon, New Orleans, La.	1.00
John Abbott, " "	1.00

June 27.....$760.33
CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 24.

K. Schemann, $4.80; W. H. Dyke, $2; Robt. Bailey, $3; Mrs. M. E. Martin, $4.80; G. A. Atwood, $1; Feodor Boas, $3.20; C. D. Van Vechten, 25 cents; Louis Belrose, $23.25; Mrs. J. Clark, 10 cents; M. E. Sawyer, $3.20; T. A. Hanson, $3.20; E. Q. Ingersoll, $2; H. Stevenson, 25 cents; Anna T. Wood, $3.20; L. J. King, $1; C. Edelheim, $3.20; G. A. Mannfeld, $3.20; G. A. Adams, $3.20; J. Hendrie, $1; A. H. Davis, $3.20; T. Tasker, $3; J. M. P. Bachelier, $2.10; L. T. Ives, $20; B. R. Tucker, 50 cents; G. W. Warren, 60 cents; A. Hansner, 10 cents; N. Millington, $1; A. P. Rose, $4; Wm. Fels, $3.25; T. R. Davis, $3; H. Gerson, $2; N. W. Covell, $3.20; M. L. Linton, $1.50; J. M. Hawks, 20 cents; W. H. Carruth, 15 cents; Dyer D. Lum, $3.80; J. G. Dodge, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

Mar. 10.	Received of F. A. Angell, Passaic, N. J.	$5.00
" 13.	" M. Einstein, Titusville, Pa.	2.00
" 13.	" W. Barnsdall, " "	2.00
" 13.	" E. Whitcher, Boston.	5.00
" 13.	" J. Davidson, Alfred Centre, N.Y.	1.00
" 21.	" Jas. Dillaway, Somerville, Mass.	2.00
" 21.	" M. L. Hawley, Marathon, N.Y.	3.00
" 21.	" R. H. Ranney, Boston.	6.00
" 21.	" F. E. Abbot, Boston.	25.00
" 21.	" C. A. Gurley, Pulaaki, N. Y.	50.00
" 25.	" Emily J. Leonard, Meriden, Ct.	10.00
" 25.	" S. R. Urbino, W. Newton, Mass.	5.00
" 25.	" Jehu Hiatt, Winchester, Ind.	5.00
" 25.	" A Friend.	1.00
" 25.	" C. H. Horach, Dover, N.H.	2.50
" 25.	" Edw. Wigglesworth, Jr., Boston.	15.00
April 1.	" T. W. Higginson, Newport, R.I.	3.00
" 1.	" Israel Betz, Oakville, Pa.	5.00
" 1.	" Mrs. M. P. Southworth, Cleveland, O.	5.00
" 3.	" S. Warbasse, La Fayette, N.J.	2.00
" 3.	" A Friend in New York City.	50.00
" 3.	" Sank City (Wis.) Liberal League.	20.00
" 3.	" R. B. Stone, Bradford, Pa.	5.00
" 3.	" J. D. Lange, New York City.	5.00
" 3.	" Jane P. Titcomb, Boston.	2.00
" 3.	" Alex. Cochran, Franklin, Pa.	5.00
" 3.	" B. B. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	10.00
" 3.	" Warren Griswold, " "	5.00
" 3.	" C. Nash and sister, Worcester, Mass.	4.00
" 3.	" F. E. Nipher, St. Louis.	2.00
" 3.	" K. Hoegh, La Crosse, Wis.	3.00
" 10.	" H. K. Oliver, Jr., Boston.	5.00
" 13.	" S. R. Honey, Newport, R. I.	3.00
" 13.	" A. S. Brown, Worcester, Mass.	5.00
" 13.	" C. B. Peckham, Newport, R. I.	3.00
" 13.	" Geo. W. Julian, Irvington, Ind.	1.00
" 13.	" Alex. Blak, Winthrop, Iowa.	2.50
" 13.	" Jas. Eddy, Providence, R. I.	10.00
" 13.	" G. P. Reynolds (for "Liberals of Shelby, O.")	8.00
" 17.	" J. O. Bentley, Philadelphia.	5.00
" 17.	" J. W. Sulist, Salem, Ohio.	5.75
" 17.	" J. S. Bonnell, " "	.80
" 17.	" M. Schlesinger, Albany.	5.00
" 17.	" O. B. Frothingham, New York.	25.00
" 25.	" Friends in Bristol Co., Mass.	90.00
" 25.	" Mrs. N. H. Crowell, Jefferson, O.	5.00
" 25.	" W. H. Crowell, " "	5.00
" 25.	" J. F. Ruggles, Bronson, Mich.	1.00
" 25.	" Mary E. Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.	2.00
" 25.	" C. Doerflinger, Milwaukee.	2.00
" 25.	" J. A. Heintzelman, Phila.	5.00
May 1.	" D. G. Crandon, Chelsea, Mass.	1.00
" 1.	" S. R. Koshler, Boston.	3.00
" 1.	" Geo. M. Murray, Jersey City.	1.80
" 1.	" H. T. Marshall, Brockton, Mass.	5.00
" 1.	" C. A. Simpson, Saxonville, " "	5.00
" 1.	" J. Copeland, Humboldt Basin, Oregon.	5.00
" 15.	" B. F. Underwood, Thorndike, Mass.	5.00
" 15.	" "An English Brother" (25).	27.25
" 15.	" John Gillies, St. Louis.	1.00
" 15.	" J. W. Frank, Dyar, Iowa.	4.00
" 15.	" L. Lowenthal, Rochester, N. Y.	5.00
" 15.	" M. Landsberg, Rochester, N. Y.	5.00
" 15.	" A. Walther, Brooklyn.	2.00
" 15.	" E. R. Brown, Elmwood, Ill.	2.00
" 15.	" M. Altman, New York City.	20.00
" 15.	" R. E. Grimshaw, Minneapolis, Minn.	5.00
" 15.	" Adam Wolfe, Fort Byron, N. Y.	3.00
" 15.	" F. P. Hicks, " "	1.00
" 15.	" Benj. Gerrish, Jr., Bordeaux, France.	5.00
" 15.	" W. L. Foster, East Stoughton, Mass.	5.00
" 15.	" W. Eysenbach, Lima, O.	.50
" 15.	" C. H. Phillips, Boston.	3.00
" 15.	" W. P. Phillips, " "	1.00
" 15.	" H. S. Williams, " "	5.00
" 15.	" Mrs. Orrin Gillett, Parma, Mich.	5.00
" 15.	" D. Sandman, Barre Mills, Wis.	2.00
" 22.	" C. M. Dennison, New York City.	5.00
" 22.	" James McArthur, Chicago.	20.00
" 22.	" C. H. Shepard, Brooklyn.	5.00
" 22.	" Liberal League, Toledo, Iowa.	10.00
" 22.	" "Boston.	26.10
" 22.	" Mrs. A. L. Richmond.	5.00
" 30.	" L. Scott, Waynesburgh, O.	1.00
" 30.	" E. R. McKenzie, Charlestown, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	" C. K. Whipple, Brookline, Mass.	1.00
" 30.	" E. B. Moore, Charlestown, Mass.	1.50
" 30.	" E. H. Warren, Chelmsford, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" D. Deming, South Bend, Ind.	1.00
" 30.	" S. C. Mason, Moberly, Mo.	1.00
" 30.	" H. C. Hanson, Barnesville, Ga.	.50
" 30.	" A. M. Dent, Weston, West Va.	1.00
" 30.	" F. M. Vaughan, Middleboro, Mass.	1.00
" 30.	" M. P. Barber, Pleasantville, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	" "Cash," Phoenix, N. Y.	1.00
" 30.	" G. Cope, West Chester, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	" Wm. Dudgeon, New Hartford, N. Y.	5.00
" 30.	" H. Andriessen, Beaver, Pa.	2.00
" 30.	" E. A. Spring, Perth Amboy, N. J.	.50
" 30.	" A. Morrison, Braintree, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	" G. Lieberknecht, Geneseo, Ill.	1.00
" 30.	" Sophia B. Carter, Andover, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" "Widow's Mite," Portage City, Wis.	2.00
" 30.	" H. C. Southworth, Stoughton, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	" B. Halliwell, Sandy Spring, Md.	2.00
" 30.	" E. P. Hassinger, Brodhead, Wis.	5.00
" 30.	" D. B. Hale, Collinsville, Ct.	1.00
" 30.	" Rev. J. S. Richards, Liberty, Me.	.10
" 30.	" H. D. Maxson, Amherst College.	1.00
" 30.	" W. B. Studley, Rockland, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	" J. W. Marshall, Plattsburgh, Neb.	2.00
" 30.	" Dr. C. Wesselhoft, Boston.	1.00
" 30.	" C. A. Greenleaf, Chicopee, Mass.	.50
" 30.	" L. Goepfer, Union Village, O.	1.00
" 30.	" W. C. Fuller, Willimantic, Ct.	5.00
" 30.	" Dr. G. E. Francis, Worcester, Ms.	1.00
" 30.	" W. W. Baker, Boston.	5.00
" 30.	" James Parton, Newburyport.	25.00
" 30.	" Dr. J. D. Thorley, Steel Works, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	" H. S. Bacon, Milford, Mass.	5.00
" 30.	" E. C. Darling, Ipswich, " "	2.00
" 30.	" "Friend," Chelsea, " "	1.00
" 30.	" Matilda Goddard, Boston.	10.00
" 30.	" "Cash," Boston.	1.00
" 30.	" Dr. W. P. Wesselhoft, Boston.	2.00
" 30.	" P. A. Chamberlin, Wauseon, O.	1.00
" 30.	" Albertina von Arnim, Longwood, Mass.	3.00
" 30.	" D. P. Wilcox, Yankton, Dak. Terr.	1.00
" 30.	" C. Lohmann & Son, Edwardsville, Ill.	1.00
" 30.	" J. Blain, St. James, Mo.	2.00
" 30.	" H. T. Wright, Washington Hts. Ill.	2.00
" 30.	" P. H. Macgill, Baltimore, Md.	10.00
" 30.	" C. T. Pratt, Pawtucket, R. I.	3.00
" 30.	" J. N. Clark, E. Somerville, Mass.	3.00
" 30.	" T. J. Atwood, Albion, Wis.	1.00
" 30.	" L. Frang & Co., Boston.	10.00

May 30.	Received of W. S. Cunningham, Vienna, O.	$1.00
" 30.	" C. F. Paige, Boston.	2.00
" 30.	" D. E. Mayo, Chelsea, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" Jos. Post, Old Westbury, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" Louise M. Thurston, Lynn, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" J. G. Richardson, Lake City, Minn.	5.00
" 30.	" G. M. Wood, Washington, D.C.	1.00
" 30.	" Liberals of Defiance, O.	17.00
" 30.	" Liberal League, Medina, O.	25.00
" 30.	" Liberal League, Minneapolis.	20.00
" 30.	" J. W. Cabot, Boston.	10.00
" 30.	" D. Ferguson, Waupun, Wis.	10.00
" 30.	" Mrs. H. Grinnell, New Milford, Pa.	1.00
" 30.	" Arethusa Hall, Northampton, Ms.	2.00
" 30.	" J. Scott, Dighton, Mass.	2.00
" 30.	" G. M. Wood, Washington, D. C.	1.00
" 30.	" Thos. Curtis, St. Louis.	1.00
" 30.	" F. Fradley, Brooklyn.	2.00
" 30.	" S. R. Smith, West Winfield, Ct.	5.00
" 30.	" Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Godfrey, Brooklyn.	10.00
June 6.	" Noah Green, New York.	1.00
" 6.	" P. Sidebotham, Fall River, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	" Mary H. L. Cabot, Boston.	1.00
" 6.	" L. Klingman, Buffalo.	2.50
" 6.	" M. A. Blanchard, Portland.	1.80
" 6.	" C. M. Dennison, Brooklyn.	1.00
" 6.	" J. Damon, Ipswich, Mass.	3.00
" 6.	" Cash, Haverhill, Mass.	.50
" 6.	" Dr. L. P. Babb, Eastport, Me.	2.00
" 6.	" Isaiah West, New Bedford, Ma.	1.00
" 6.	" Thos. Nye, Ridgeville, O.	1.00
" 6.	" J. W. Braley, New Bedford.	5.00
" 6.	" J. Keppler, New Frankfort, Mo.	2.00
" 6.	" Beth Hunt, Northampton, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	" Dr. E. B. Foote, New York.	5.00
" 6.	" C. M. Waddell, Argillite, Ky.	2.00
" 6.	" W. R. Morgan, New York.	10.00
" 6.	" C. M. Cuyler, Albany.	2.00
" 6.	" Elbur Wright, Boston.	10.00
" 6.	" B. B. Griswold, Madison, N. J.	2.00
" 6.	" C. Graeter, Vincennes, Ind.	2.00
" 6.	" W. E. Coleman, Leavenworth, Ka.	1.00
" 6.	" J. L. Cutler, Quilman, Ga.	5.00
" 6.	" J. Farnsworth, Fort Scott, Kan.	2.50
" 6.	" M. F. Whitehead, Jersey City, N. J.	2.50
" 6.	" G. Dimmock, Cambridge, Mass.	3.00
" 6.	" H. Lieber, Indianapolis.	5.00
" 6.	" D. B. Morton, Groton, N. Y.	5.00
" 6.	" F. Plimpton, Florence, Mass.	2.00
" 6.	" A. B. Hinchey, Burr Oak, Mich.	2.00
" 6.	" Z. S. Wallingford, Dover, N. H.	2.00
" 6.	" Dr. G. F. Matthes, New Bedford.	2.00
" 6.	" A. Schiller, Keokuk, Iowa.	5.00
" 6.	" M. Peckham, Utica, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	" F. Looser, Brooklyn.	5.00
" 6.	" J. W. Frank, Dyar, Iowa.	5.00
" 6.	" J. Chappellsmith, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" Mrs. M. Chappellsmith, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" Susanna E. Hinkly, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" Margaret Burns, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" C. H. White, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" J. C. Wheatcroft, New Harmony, Ind.	1.00
" 6.	" Wm. Green, Brooklyn.	5.00
" 6.	" M. Fleischmann, New York.	10.00
" 6.	" E. Eising, New York.	5.00
" 6.	" O. O. Friedlander, New York.	1.00
" 6.	" F. Dessaur, New York.	2.00
" 6.	" C. Dessaur, New York.	1.00
" 6.	" G. Riker, New Philadelphia, O.	3.00
" 6.	" Rabbi M. Samfield, Memphis.	2.00
" 6.	" M. S. Devereux, Irvington, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	" E. B. Wolcott, Milwaukee.	2.00
" 6.	" R. M. Whipple, Chicago.	2.00
" 6.	" S. D. Bardwell, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	" Mrs. L. C. Bardwell, Shelburne Falls, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	" W. D. Pitt, Groton, N. Y.	2.00
" 6.	" H. L. Green, Syracuse, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	" E. D. Cowperthwaite, Washington	1.00
" 6.	" J. Wright, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	" B. Breed, Lynn, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	" W. E. Lukens, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 6.	" A. Skinner, Ceresco, Mich.	1.00
" 6.	" F. H. Guitwits, Avoca, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	" J. T. White, New York.	1.00
" 6.	" J. Maddock, New York.	1.00
" 6.	" B. Lindsey, Boston.	1.00
" 6.	" G. Billings, Chicopee, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	" O. K. Crosby, Syracuse, N. Y.	.50
" 6.	" J. Marsh, Northampton, Mass.	1.00
" 6.	" M. Shore, Litchfield, Ill.	.50
" 6.	" Dr. S. Wolfenstein, St. Louis.	1.00
" 6.	" Cash, Indianapolis.	1.00
" 6.	" I. P. Greenleaf, Boston.	1.00
" 6.	" J. Ahrens, Monticello, Ark.	.50
" 6.	" H. Ahrens, Longview, Ark.	.50
" 6.	" L. G. James, New York.	.50
" 6.	" J. Consalus, Troy, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	" A. Keen, Duplain, Mich.	1.00
" 6.	" J. E. Sutton, Olathe, Kan.	1.00
" 6.	" R. B. Miller, Utica, N. Y.	1.00
" 6.	" H. H. Chase, Union City, Mich.	.50
" 6.	" T. Lamory, Concordia, Mo.	.50
" 6.	" T. Tibbets, Augusta, Me.	.50
" 13.	" F. Goodyear, Cortlandville, N.Y.	1.00
" 13.	" John Orth, Boston.	1.00
" 13.	" Henry Damon, Boston.	2.00
" 13.	" Jos. Warbasse, Newton, N. J.	5.00
" 13.	" E. E. Chapin, Rockford, Ill.	.25
" 13.	" T. Martin, W. Boylston, Ms.	1.00
" 13.	" H. B. Fletcher, W. Boylston, Ms.	.50
" 13.	" Nath. Little, Newbury, Ms.	1.00
" 13.	" E. R. Sanborn, Leavenworth, Kan.	1.00
" 13.	" W. H. Farrell, Leavenworth, Kan.	1.00
" 13.	" J. Reedy, Toledo, Iowa.	3.00
" 13.	" B. F. Horton, Dexter, Me.	1.00
" 13.	" W. F. Johnson, Cleveland, O.	6.80
" 13.	" T. J. Crouse, Clinton, N. Y.	1.00
" 13.	" R. S. Perrin, New York.	2.00
" 13.	" L. Lamott, Groton, N. Y.	2.00
" 13.	" F. G. Johnson, Towanda, Pa.	1.00
" 13.	" Rabbi A. Rosenspitz, Nashville.	1.00
" 13.	" E. D. Stark, Cleveland, O.	1.00
" 13.	" J. S. Thomson, Bloomington, Ill.	1.00
" 13.	" Mrs. J. N. Lyman, Columbus, O.	2.00
" 13.	" John Alexander, Shelby, O.	1.00
" 13.	" R. Pritchett, Fort Madison, Iowa.	2.00
" 13.	" Peter H. Clark, Cincinnati.	1.00
" 13.	" Geo. Lewis, Providence.	1.00
" 13.	" B. S. Hopkins, Providence.	2.00
" 13.	" J. S. Bonnell, Salem, O.	1.00
" 13.	" W. T. Menefee, Crittenden, Ky.	1.00
" 13.	" H. W. Gilbert, Philadelphia.	1.00
" 13.	" A Friend in Concord, Mass.	1.00
" 13.	" J. E. Oliver, Ithaca, N. Y.	5.00
" 13.	" Wm. J. Potter, New Bedford.	3.00
" 13.	" R. Wilkin, San Buenaventura, Cal.	2.00
" 13.	" W. S. Shepherd, San Buenaventura, Cal.	2.00
" 13.	" Jacob Hoffer, Cincinnati.	5.00
" 13.	" A. Braasch and friends, Mishicott, Wis.	5.00
" 13.	" W. F. Allen, Madison, Wis.	5.00

June 13.	Received of	L. J. Burch, Modoc, Col.	$.25
" 13.	"	G. A. Hill and friends, San Francisco	5.00
" 13.	"	E. Bentley, Morgan City, La.	1.00
" 13.	"	L. A. Harbaugh, Toledo, Iowa.	3.00
" 13.	"	Cash, Cambridge, Mass.	.50
" 13.	"	E. Z. Penfield, New York.	5.00
" 13.	"	B. O. Old, Georgetown, Col.	1.00
" 13.	"	L. Liebmann, Brooklyn.	2.00
" 13.	"	W. Barnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	2.50
" 13.	"	Miss H. S. Ware, Boston.	5.00
" 13.	"	Eben Turk, Chelsea, Mass.	2.00
" 13.	"	W. H. Saxton, Oberlin, O.	1.80
" 13.	"	J. Miel, Decatur, Ill.	.60
" 13.	"	D. B. Schofield, Baker City, Or.	1.85
" 13.	"	J. C. Rued, San Francisco.	.50
" 13.	"	Jos. Barnsdall, Titusville, Pa.	3.00
" 13.	"	Cash, Delphos, O.	1.00
" 13.	"	H. Frederic, Utica, N. Y.	1.00
" 13.	"	H. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.	.25
" 13.	"	L. Markham, Madison, Ga.	1.00
" 13.	"	G. Fraustenstein, New York.	5.00
" 13.	"	A. Loos, Germantown, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. H. Nye, Enon, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	A. Hiller, "	1.00
" 20.	"	F. Alsdorf, "	1.00
" 20.	"	S. Riddle, "	1.00
" 20.	"	C. Fischer, "	1.00
" 20.	"	D. A. Robertson, Enon, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mr. and Mrs. A. Bates, Milwaukee.	5.00
" 20.	"	Jos. Singer, Chicago.	1.00
" 20.	"	C. H. Vinton, Cambridge, Ms.	1.00
" 20.	"	D. L. McKelzie, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	T. Culver, Rock Falls, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	W. Drury, Verdunett, Ill.	1.00
" 20.	"	J. Gardner, Rochester, N. Y.	1.00
" 20.	"	A. Friend, Elyria, O.	5.00
" 20.	"	N. Houghton, Lake Providence, La.	2.00
" 20.	"	C. P. Somerby, New York.	1.00
" 20.	"	R. G. Fell, Clarence, Iowa.	1.00
" 20.	"	A. A. Raymond, Fond du Lac, Wis.	.25
" 20.	"	R. K. Price, Dexter, Iowa.	.50
" 20.	"	Rev. Robt. Collyer, Chicago.	2.00
" 20.	"	J. E. Boynton, Elyria, O.	2.00
" 20.	"	Rev. H. Powers, Manchester, N.H.	2.00
" 20.	"	H. Bathig, Buffalo, N. Y.	2.00
" 20.	"	Dr. J. M. Hawks, Hyde Park, Ms.	3.00
" 20.	"	R. T. Starr, Rochester, N. Y.	3.00
" 20.	"	John Curtis, Boston.	5.00
" 20.	"	D. Ballantine, Bloomington, Wis.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mrs. P. Phillips, Rondout, N. Y.	1.00
" 20.	"	M. L. Lewis, Providence.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. W. S. Leach, St. Joseph, Mo.	1.00
" 20.	"	J. W. Sulist, Salem, O.	1.00
" 20.	"	Laura Barnaby, Salem, O.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. W. A. Crandall, Napoleon, O.	.50
" 20.	"	O. B. Vose, Forkston, Pa.	.50
" 20.	"	G. McMurray, Jersey City, N.J.	1.00
" 20.	"	S. Ritchie, Racine, Wis.	1.00
" 20.	"	John Turner, Philadelphia.	10.00
" 20.	"	Henry Jones, Three Tons, Pa.	1.00
" 20.	"	Mary Y. Jones, "	1.00
" 20.	"	Joseph Ambler, "	1.00
" 20.	"	Hannah Ambler, "	1.00
" 20.	"	G. A. Atwood, Fort Harker, Kan.	1.00
" 20.	"	Hon. Henry Booth, Chicago.	5.00
" 20.	"	R. P. Titus, Madison, N. J.	1.00
" 20.	"	Ivan Panin, Boston.	1.00
" 20.	"	Dr. J. T. Dickens, Newburyport.	2.00
" 20.	"	F. A. Flagg, Providence.	1.00
" 20.	"	Carl Edelheim, New York.	5.00
" 20.	"	H. G. White, Buffalo, N. Y.	10.00
" 27.	"	Mrs. E. D. Lucas, Boston.	2.00
" 27.	"	Lib. Ass'n. Smith Centre, Kan.	1.00
" 27.	"	A. P. Rose, Jackson, Pa.	1.00
" 27.	"	C. Whitaker, Dubuque.	5.00
" 27.	"	"S. W. E.," New York.	5.00
" 27.	"	"Friend," Troy, N. Y.	1.00
" 27.	"	D. T. Herrick, Burgh Hill, O.	1.00
" 27.	"	D. Patrick, Milford, Mass.	1.00
" 27.	"	D. B. Humphrey, N. Bedford.	5.00
" 27.	"	J. T. Reid, Fishersville, Ky.	1.00
" 27.	"	Chas. Richardson, Boston.	5.00
" 27.	"	W. Hanford, Etua, N. Y.	1.00
" 27.	"	Caroline F. Barr, N. Ipswich, N.H.	1.00
" 27.	"	W. O. Mack, Canby, Oregon.	1.70
" 27.	"	G. W. Mead, Battle Creek, Mich.	.25
" 27.	"	O. A. Bailey, Rowley, Mass.	2.00
" 27.	"	B. M. Smith, Minneapolis.	5.00
" 27.	"	R. Friable, Van Wert, O.	1.80
" 27.	"	P. R. Wright, S. Barbara, Cal.	.50
" 27.	"	Mrs. C. E. Johnson, S. Boston.	2.00
" 27.	"	J. Durst, Iowa City, Iowa.	1.00
" 27.	"	M. Bloom, "	1.00
" 27.	"	J. J. Dietz, "	1.00
" 27.	"	V. Gross, "	1.00
" 27.	"	F. Weber, "	1.00
" 27.	"	E. W. Weir, La Grange, Ind.	5.00
" 27.	"	Mrs. Amy Post, Rochester, N. Y.	1.00
" 27.	"	John Buntin, Newburyport.	3.00
" 27.	"	Dr. J. J. Dunlop, Waterford, N. Y.	5.00
" 27.	"	I. W. Springfield, Wolfboro, N.H.	.50
" 27.	"	Mrs. Eliz. S. Miller, Geneva, N. Y.	5.00
" 27.	"	Dr. G. W. Topping, Dewitt, Mich.	1.00
" 27.	"	Mrs. Eliz. Coit, Columbus, O.	1.00
" 27.	"	A. Magni, New York.	2.00
" 27.	"	A. T. Herrick, Uhrichsville, O.	1.00
" 27.	"	Dr. J. Winslow, Ithaca, N. Y.	5.00
" 27.	"	Jas. C. Smith, Nassau, N. F.	1.00
" 27.	"	W. Goodrich, Ameebury, Mass.	2.50
" 27.	"	Gen. Robt. Avery, New York.	1.00
" 27.	"	Mrs. L. B. Sayles, Dayville, Ct.	2.00
" 27.	"	W. Inott, Cincinnati.	2.00
" 27.	"	J. M. Tunis, Madison, N. J.	2.00

The Index.

BOSTON, JUNE 29, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO OFFICE, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, REV. CHARLES
VOYSEY (England), GEORGE JACOB HOLVOAKE (England),
DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

The Centennial Congress of Liberals will be convened at Concert Hall, on Chestnut Street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets, Philadelphia, on Saturday, July 1, at 2 o'clock, P.M. Concert Hall will seat about two thousand people, giving each a cushioned chair. It has a large stage and two large ante-rooms, and is excellently adapted to secure the comfort and convenience of a large convention.

Railroad officials refuse to make any other reduction in fares than the excursion rates agreed to by all the principal companies, of which all delegates and members can avail themselves. A local committee is at work to secure a list of cheap boarding-places for the accommodation of members. The necessary price will not exceed $1.50 per day, nor be less than $1.00. All who wish to avail themselves of these accommodations should write without delay to D. Y. Kilgore, Secretary, 805 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

In order to enjoy the rights and privileges of membership, it will be necessary for delegates from Liberal Leagues, or other Liberal Societies desiring to join in the Liberal League movement, to be provided with proper credentials signed by their own local officers. Individuals not delegates can receive a certificate of membership on writing for, filling up, and returning a blank form of application which can be obtained by addressing F. E. Abbot, Chairman, 1 Tremont Place, Boston. It can also be obtained at Concert Hall, July 1, at 1 P. M.; and all who may not previously have received their certificates should not fail to present themselves promptly at that time. This is the only way to prevent confusion and vexatious delays to all concerned. Over five hundred certificates have been already issued to applicants for membership; there is every indication of a great increase of this number; and immediate application will save trouble and time in organizing the Congress when it meets.

The following order of business has been adopted by the Committee, subject to ratification by the Congress itself:—

Saturday, July 1: Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

1. Temporary Organization.
2. Appointment of Committee on Membership, and reception of credentials.
3. Address of Welcome, by the President of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
4. Reply, by the Chairman of the General Centennial Committee.
5. Report of the Committee on Membership.
6. Report of the General Centennial Committee.
7. Appointment of Committees on Permanent Organization, on Finance, on Resolutions, and on Address to the People.
8. Consideration of the General Centennial Committee's Report.
9. Consideration of the Constitution of the National Liberal League.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Consideration of the Constitution of the National Liberal League, continued.
2. Report of the Committee on Permanent Organization: election of officers of the National Liberal League.
3. Short speeches.

Sunday, July 2: Morning Session, 10 1-2 A. M.

1. Reading of extracts from letters by distinguished citizens.
2. Address by F. E. Abbot: "The Liberal League Movement; its Principles, Objects, and Scope."
3. Address by Mrs. C. B. Kilgore: "Democracy."
4. Short speeches.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Address by James Parton: "Cathedrals and Beer."
2. Address by B. F. Underwood: "The Practical Necessity of Separating Church and State."
3. Short speeches.

Monday, July 3: Morning Session, 10 1-2 A. M.

1. Address by Charles F. Paige: "Is Christianity a part of the Common Law?"
2. Report of the Committee on Resolutions: free discussion of the proposed methods and measures of the National Liberal League; action of the League on the Resolutions taken singly.

Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

1. Address by Damon Y. Kilgore: "Ecclesiasticism in American Politics and Institutions."
2. Continuation of the discussion and action on the Resolutions.

Evening Session, 7 1-2 P. M.

1. Address—[probably by Charles D. B. Mills].
2. Reports by Delegates from various Liberal Leagues throughout the country.
3. Short speeches.

Tuesday, July 4: 9 A. M.

1. Report of the Committee on Finance.
2. Report of the Committee on Address: "Patriotic Address of the National Liberal League to the People of the United States."
3. Action on the Report.
4. Adjournment.

PICKWICKIAN CATHOLICISM.

The German Roman Catholic Central Society, at their Twenty-first Annual Convention just concluded at Philadelphia, unanimously passed resolutions which they forthwith published as an advertisement, in the following condensed form, in the local papers of that city:—

First. Congratulatory to the Centennial of the Declaration of the American Independence, recalling the part Catholic men took in it, whose names are among the signers, and the assistance Catholic countries gave to establish a republican form of government.

Second. Declares the American Constitution the palladium of civil and religious liberty for all nationalities, and demands the strict adherence to this fundamental principle.

Third. Upon the basis of the Constitution as it is they declare for separation of Church and State.

Fourth. Protests against the calumny and slanders heaped upon Catholics as priest-ridden, and Catholicism being inimical to republican government; declaring that prompt payment of taxes, respect for law and good order, the sacred regard for an oath, are the three principal qualifications constituting a good citizen; that the Catholic Church by its teaching inculcates these qualities; declaring that every good Catholic is a good citizen.

Fifth. That the Church teaches good morals. Freedom is impossible without a proper regard for this principle.

Sixth. Protests against the attempt to transplant to this continent a conflict between Church and State; such insinuating threats coming from whence they may, even from men high in authority in this nation; and declares all such attempts as dangerous attacks on the Constitution of the land.

Seventh. That Catholics as a body are not allied to any one political party, and that the pulpits of Catholic churches are not desecrated by political tirades or by speeches of political demagogues.

Eighth. Refers to the public schools, and declares that parents have an inalienable right to educate their children according to the dictates of their conscience. Claiming freedom in education, declaring the attempt of the State to monopolize education as tyrannical and wrong, they advocate a thorough education and support of schools by voluntary means, and religious instruction necessary.

How little these resolutions really mean, and how adroitly they are worded to delude the careless reader into believing that the Catholic Church in this country proposes frankly to abide by the American principle of the separation of Church and State, can easily be seen by the statements of Rev. F. X. Weninger, D. D., a missionary of the Society of Jesus, who was introduced at the same convention by the President, and who made the leading address of the occasion. The Press of June 8, reporting this discourse, says:—

"In conclusion the speaker stated that, united and joined to the one true Church, the United States would be, in the strictest sense of the term, 'united,' without the present internal division between the various sects. The United States, still so strong, notwithstanding its many different religions, would soon raise itself to an eminence, a power to which there would be nothing equal upon earth. This union with the only true Church, because free from the pressure of despotism, would secure the perpetuity of the United States until the end of time."

In all the profuse protestations made by Catholic orators and journals that they believe in the separation of Church and State in this country, and that it is unjust to hold them responsible for the contrary course of the Church in the Old World or in South America, an acute observer may always detect the cunningly-worded qualifications which enable them to make such protestations without absolute falsehood. It is perfectly easy to reconcile Father Weninger's open prophecy that the United States will yet be "united" with the Catholic Church, and the third resolution quoted above. The convention declared for separation of Church and State "upon the basis of the Constitution as it is." But the Catholics are bound by the Syllabus not to be satisfied with the Constitution as it is. The moment they have the power (if they ever get it), they will conform the Constitution to the Syllabus, which declares it a damnable heresy to hold that "Church and State ought to be separated." They will pass, not an "unsectarian Christian" Amendment, but a Roman Catholic Christian Amendment; and it would be simply idiotic to rely on the smooth and seemingly frank professions of the above resolutions, as proving that Catholics in the United States are ready to accept the secular theory of government. Not in the least. They are ready to capture all who will swallow the bait, but they neither will nor can accept the principle of secular government in good faith. They will endure it as long as they can, and use it meanwhile for their own purposes; but they are pledged by their whole religion, solemnly and publicly expounded by their infallible Pope, to the union of Church and State. And such resolutions as the above, apparently so patriotic and liberal, are nothing but pitfalls for the unwary and traps for unsuspecting dupes.

ECCLESIASTICAL LIBEL.

The following case seems to be of interest, as showing how the principle of individual liberty is contending with authority within the Roman Church in this country. Whether Father Glew's words can be brought within the technical definition of slander, or not, the suit is a manly protest against the tyrannic abuse of private interests by the priesthood.

E. D. C.

No. 2084. Robert C. Fanning vs. James McGlew. This is a suit against a Roman Catholic priest settled over a parish in Chelsea, to recover damages in the sum of $2000, for slander. The plaintiff Fanning was one of the parishioners of the defendant, and was an attendant and worshipper at the church in Chelsea. It seems that Fanning was married by a justice of the peace to Catherine Murphy of Chelsea; that such a marriage being contrary to the rules of the Roman Catholic Church, the defendant, as a priest, publicly denounced the plaintiff. This action was accordingly brought against the priest for slander. The plaintiff complains that on the 8th of November, 1873, the defendant, in the church, on the Sabbath day, in the presence of a large congregation, publicly, falsely, and maliciously accused him of the crime of fornication, using words as follows:—

"There have been parties that have gone and got married out of the Church, and those parties are living in mortal sin. I will call their names to you: Robert C. Fanning, Jr., and Catherine Murphy"; and after calling sundry other names the defendant said:—

"These parties [meaning the plaintiff among others] must come before the altar and give public satisfaction." Also that the defendant accused him of fornication on the 23d of November, in the church by the use of the following words:—

"John Fanning, or Robert, whatever his name is has gone to live with that woman [meaning the wife of the plaintiff], is living in sin, and I will call their names every Sunday until they come before the altar and give public satisfaction. These parties will be coming to me by and by with their bastards for me to christen."

That the defendant also, on the 30th of August, 1874, accused the plaintiff of the crime of fornication as follows:—

"I have heard that a couple have gone and got married out of the parish, and if they do not come and see me before next Sunday I will call their names from the altar. I thought the scandal of a year ago was enough to learn them a lesson; they will run to neighboring priests with a lie in their mouths, or like Gariand's son and Fanning [meaning the plaintiff], who went to a sweep of the town down at the square, who are unlawfully married and living in sin, and they cannot approach the rails of this altar until they have given public satisfaction."

The answer of the priest is, that if any such words were used by him he was justified in using them, in that he was acting at the time in the capacity of priest in the Roman Catholic Church, and had full spiritual and ecclesiastical authority over the plaintiff and his wife, to approve, condemn, and censure them, privately and publicly, for any violations of the teachings, doctrines, and laws of the Church; that the words were spoken from a belief that the plaintiff and his wife were living in violation of the laws of the Church by being married outside of the Church, not by a regularly ordained priest of the Church, to the great scandal and injury of all the members of the parish, and to the injury of the plaintiff and his wife, as the priest was bound by the obligations of his office to teach, and that the words were not spoken maliciously, or with a design to slander the plaintiff, but solely in the discharge of his duty as a priest and pastor.

The case is now on trial for a second time. On trial. A. Russ for the plaintiff, W. Gaston and O. F. Donnelly for the defendant.

Mark's Church might be in spiritual fellowship with the general Episcopal body, and yet not at all fit for the social recognition and fellowship which membership in the Convention involved. One could not help wondering how this Episcopal body, with such views, could be inspired with much zeal for missionary work. (The Convention had devoted one session particularly to the foreign missionary question.) Evidently the members holding such views of the color of the skin as a non-conductor of the spirit of complete religious fellowship, could not expect, or wish even with much ardor, that missionary efforts should result in making full and entire Christians of any colored heathen, involving all the privileges of religious fellowship, unless they believe, as perhaps they do, that missionary effort will eventually convert the color of the skin to a Christian shade of whiteness. At present, it would seem, they mean by "spiritual fellowship" the use of the same Prayer-book and Liturgy on Sunday. For this the colored members of St. Mark's Church are deemed fit. But they are not admissible candidates for that fellowship which extends to the feelings and actions of daily life.

Yet these arguments for excluding the church prevailed in the Convention. When the vote was called—the bishop's name, in fact, had already been called and he had voted for admission,—General Preston arose (he who made last year such a bitterly sectional address at the University of Virginia), and suggested that on the decision of such a solemn question the Divine blessing should be invoked. So the Convention fell upon its knees, while the bishop read a prayer; and then the members stood upon their feet as their names were called and voted not to admit St. Mark's Church to membership, because it was not composed of white Christians.

These facts have seemed to me worth reporting as one of the latest illustrations of ecclesiastical brotherhood. It should be added that a majority of the ministers voted for admission, but a majority of lay delegates, representing the churches, against it. The question, however, cannot be considered as permanently settled, with the bishop and so many clergymen earnestly advocating the broader fellowship.

W. J. P.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

In the nomination of Mr. Tilden the Democrats have undoubtedly selected their most available candidate, and the only one, in our opinion, who can content the election of Mr. Hayes with the least possibility of success. Mr. Tilden is not only a man of integrity but also of great energy and persistence of character, and few men of any party have practically accomplished more positive reform work. He is not only identified with the overthrow of Tweed and the Tammany Ring, and the notorious Canal Ring, but as Governor of New York he has greatly lessened the expenses of administration and decreased the rate of State taxation. No one can doubt that if elected President he would thoroughly reform many abuses which have crept into our national administration, and would surround himself by a Cabinet of accomplished gentlemen who would carry on the various executive departments of the government in an irreproachable manner. The only objection to Mr. Tilden personally, so far as we know, is the reported fact that he is a wonderful manipulator of the political wires, and has pulled them with astonishing adroitness and vigor in order to secure his own nomination.

But in the choice of Mr. Hendricks for the Vice-Presidency the Democrats seem to have taken pains to destroy Mr. Tilden's chances of attracting votes from among those reform Republicans and Independents who have become tired of Republican corruption, and who would be glad to behold the Presidential chair occupied by a man of acknowledged ability and of determined reform purposes. Mr. Hendricks is a man of very little national reputation, and what little he has is not at all enviable, being that of a political trimmer and of an avowed advocate of the soft-money heresy. Already, in answer to a serenade given him at Indianapolis last Friday, Mr. Hendricks has declared that the repeal of the resumption clause of the Act of 1875—a repeal demanded by the St. Louis platform—"carries with it every feature of the law which is bringing about the contraction so hurtful to the interests of the country." Mr. Hendricks, therefore, will favor soft-money as vigorously as Mr. Tilden will favor hard-money, and every genuine reformer will be obliged to face the unwelcome fact that he cannot vote for Mr. Tilden without voting at the same time for the man who represents some of the worst elements of the Democratic party, and who, moreover, in the event of any accident to Mr. Tilden, would become our President. The sop which the Democrats have thus thrown to the soft-money Cerberus in the endeavor to keep together the two wings of their party may bring about a defeat which might have been a victory, if they had had the good sense to associate with Mr. Tilden a man of equally decided hard-money principles. However ardently we may desire administrative reform, we dare not, in the effort to obtain it, risk a sacrifice of national honor by any repudiation of our money obligations, or even jeopardize that honor by further inflation or by the cessation of contraction.

The St. Louis platform, moreover, on the whole, is no better than that adopted at Cincinnati. From a literary point of view (which is not however an essential one in matters of this kind) it is superior to its rival almost beyond comparison. Some of its sentences, especially those referring to Republican corruption, are admirably well put, and must cause considerable wincing on the part of such friends of the present administration as retain any sensitiveness of moral cuticle. The single line with regard to Mr. Blaine, for instance, who is referred to as "late Speaker of the House of Representatives marketing his rulings as a presiding officer," tells the whole story of Mr. Blaine's downfall in the keenest and most crushing manner possible. The essential qualities of the platform are a mixture of good and bad. The preamble is plenty good enough, especially when compared with the meaningless jumble adopted at Cincinnati. The financial plank is strongly in favor of hard-money, but demands a repeal of the Resumption Act, which is as consistent as would be the declaration of a man that he is in favor of paying his debts, but maintains that his promise to pay in ninety days is not to be considered binding. The revenue plank is excellent, and many will regard the public-school plank as preferable to that passed at Cincinnati, as the blow at the Chinese is certainly heavier than the one struck by the Republicans. The civil service reform plank is good, as far as it goes, but must be interpreted in the light of Democratic action in the House of Representatives and elsewhere. With Tilden it would mean one thing; with Hendricks it would mean something entirely different.

The great body of voters of the country had probably determined to vote with the Democratic party on the one hand, or the Republican party on the other, before the nominations were made or the platforms adopted; but the election will be determined in all probability by those who have awaited the results of the Conventions before coming to a decision. Mr. Tilden's rallying cry of Reform! will probably attract many voters, and that it will do so the Republicans have only their own misdeeds to blame. Others who are equally zealous for reform will vote against Mr. Tilden because he is associated with Hendricks, or on account of the Democratic demand for the repeal of the Resumption Act, or because there is good reason to believe that Mr. Hayes may make as excellent a reformer as Mr. Tilden. Others will be determined by the free-trade position of the Democrats as opposed to the ambiguous position of the Republicans. Others will be warned away from the Democrats by their decided soft-money tendencies, as shown, for instance, in the passage of Randall's amendments to the Silver Bill at about the same time that the St. Louis Convention was adopting a hard-money platform. Others believe that, apart from any of the above considerations, the time has not yet come for the restoration of the Democrats to power. Others perhaps are yet in doubt, and will remain in doubt until after the publication of the letters of acceptance of the various candidates; and these letters, we may add, which are usually a matter of form only, certainly promise to exert an unusual influence upon the coming struggle. The October elections also promise to have considerable effect upon those who always like to be upon the winning side.

There was serious danger, and, indeed, the danger still exists, of a stoppage of the wheels of government last Friday night in consequence of the failure of Congress to pass the necessary Appropriation Bills before the expiration of the fiscal year; but at the last moment the two Houses agreed upon a measure providing for the use of unexpended balances, and making small appropriations until the 10th inst. The two Houses have agreed upon and passed the Naval Appropriation Bill, and, as we write, the Conference Committee has come to an agreement with regard to the Post-Office Bill, and the report of the Committee will probably be adopted. Without doubt the Government of late years has not been economically administered, and a great reduction could be made in the regular appropriations without impairing in any way the efficiency of the administration. The House deserves credit therefore for resisting all attempts to keep up extravagance in expenditure. On the other hand, however, the Senate deserves equal if not greater credit for resisting the attempt of the House to alter general laws during the passage of an appropriation bill. The President's salary, for instance, is fixed by law; and all recent attempts to change the amount of salary have failed. The Senate now maintains that the House cannot change the law which fixes the salary by refusing, in the Legislative Appropriation Bill, to appropriate the sum which the law now calls for. The principle maintained by the Senate is a very important one, and will not be relinquished, we trust, because of the present clamor for economy.

The question of the issue of silver coin is disturbing Congress, and if that body be not extremely careful is likely to produce serious disturbance throughout the country. The Senate bill providing for the issue of $10,000,000 of silver coin in exchange for legal tenders came up in the House, and was at first rejected, but was afterwards accepted with amendments proposed by Mr. Randall authorizing the issue of $20,000,000 additional of silver coin in the ordinary disbursements of the Treasury, and providing for the coinage of a silver dollar of the same weight and fineness as that in use in 1861, and that this silver dollar be a legal tender. The Senate bill would help to relieve those who are inconvenienced by the present scarcity of small change, and would neither add to nor take from the present volume of the currency; but the House amendments would turn the bill into an inflation measure, adding to our present currency $20,000,000 of depreciated coin. In the Senate Mr. Jones made a very silly speech in advocacy of silver as a legal tender in the proportion, as compared with gold, of 16 to 1. Inasmuch as silver is now selling in the proportion of 18 to 1, and may soon reach 19 to 1, or turn in the other direction and sell for seventeen to one, a very great amount of thinking need hardly be required in order to understand the futility of Mr. Jones' proposed law. We are sorry to state that a motion was made in the Senate, proposing, in substance, to make the silver dollar a legal tender for any amount, and received a vote of 18 to 14, being lost only on account of the absence of a quorum.

Congressional morality must be in a sad state if it be truly represented by Mr. Frye, of Maine, who made last week, during a debate upon the Geneva Award Bill, one of those speeches so painful to every man who believes that national honor cannot be trifled with without injury. Mr. Frye advocated the distribution of the remainder of the Geneva fund among the ship-owners who suffered from rebel privateers, in direct defiance of the fact that the claims of these ship-owners were ruled out by the arbitrators at Geneva, and that the money received from England and now in our possession is held in trust by us for a clearly specified purpose. Mr. Frye ridiculed those who presumed to ask, What would be thought of us by England? and declared that the newspapers opposing his proposition are subsidized by the insurance companies. The logic of the conduct advocated by Mr. Frye would justify the trustee of a will who is administering an estate for the benefit of children in diverting the children's income to the support of any number of needy favorites who might desire a portion of the money. We hope for a good time to come when one such speech as that of Mr. Frye, would ensure the immediate retirement of any Congressman to private life. In this connection, attention should be called to the excellent speech of Mr. H. L. Pierce, of Massachusetts, on the same subject.

A glance at the topics treated by the members of the graduating classes of several of our colleges during the past week shows that the increasing interest in boating and base-ball has not diverted attention from a consideration of the questions most important to our national welfare. We may regret the fact that politics should intrude into places supposed to be sacred to literature and philosophy, but it is some consolation to know that many of our young men appear to be preparing to take the places of our older politicians, and that they promise to carry with them a little more knowledge and, certainly, no less honesty.

Prince Milan, of Serbia, has left his capital for the frontier to take command in person of the troops in the field, and popular demand throughout Serbia is certainly in favor of a war with Turkey. Montenegro and Bosnia will assist Serbia, and indirect aid is expected from other Turkish provinces as well as from other countries, although it appears to be the present intention of all the great European powers to take no part in the struggle, but to allow Turkey and her rebellious provinces to fight out their battles alone. How long this intention can be adhered to, however, is a very important question, which for a short time at least must remain unanswered.

Communications.

RELIGIOUS HYPOCRISY.

BY E. VON HARTMANN.

TRANSLATED FROM KARL HEINRICH'S "PIONIER," BY PROF. ALEXANDER LOOS.

[In an article on the falsity pervading modern life, written by the author of The Philosophy of the Unconscious and of The Self-Disintegration of Christianity, we find the following passages on religious hypocrisy, the striking truth of which recommends them to the earnest considerations of all to whom religion is more than a blind adherence to traditional creeds from habit or reasons of expediency.—A. L.]

As regards the Church, we live in a period of a much more violent and radical fermentation than that which characterized the age of the Reformation. The traditional forms of ecclesiasticism clash with the opposite tendencies of modern political and social development in an embittered contest, and the dogmatic vessels which hitherto have held the substance of religious consciousness prove inadequate to the scientific consciousness of our time; but the new casks into which the new wine could be filled are not yet provided. The sphere of activity for the Church is constantly being more and more limited by State and society, and the dogmas held thus far are becoming less and less tenable in face of scientific progress. Thus a double antagonism enters every cottage and every palace; tradition tries with a thousand visible and invisible arms to attach man to its sphere, but through thousand times thousand channels the disintegrating ferment of progress enters all the crevices of the structure. Even the most faithful believers are no longer intact from the dawn of enlightenment, and the Roman Catholic peasant would be quite astonished if he could be made to see for how many questions his common-sense has already accepted quite different a solution from that taught by his Church, whose faithful disciple and follower he still believes himself to be. In the case of the city-inhabitant, the difference between his actual belief and the dogma of the denomination to which he nominally belongs is generally quite considerable; but with the well-educated there is so striking an antagonism between their views of the world and the Church doctrine, that for them nothing is left but to close their eyes against the contradiction which pervades their lives. This closing of their eyes against the acknowledgment, that all church-membership has in fact become a palpable lie, is itself possible only on account of a frightful lack of sense of truth; for such a sense of truth, if pervading them with some degree of force, would not allow them thus to humbug themselves. But a more keenly developed intellect also involves the distinct consciousness, that in the most important and decisive points actual belief and church doctrine are in an irreconcilable antagonism; yet from reasons of expediency belief in the latter is hypocritically pretended. What induces so many to adhere to the forms of denominational piety is sometimes a regard for the parents or for the mother-in-law, or for an aunt from whom an inheritance may be expected; sometimes the love of domestic peace; now the restraint of official position and its extraordinary claims; then the fear of obstructing the children's future success in life by their exclusion from the Church; sometimes the intention of giving to the vulgar crowd, for whom the ecclesiastical humbug is said to be indispensable, a good example; sometimes finally, especially with women, it is the apprehension of losing with the ecclesiastical character of education one of the most efficient means for upholding parental authority over the children.

But all these regards cannot justify the falsity of such conduct, so much the less, as here religious consciousness is involved, in which the highest and most sacred things are to be cherished, and the noblest and loftiest desire for truth is to be fostered and developed in the purest manner. All momentary and external advantages which might be attained through such a frivolous play with the most sacred impulses of the human heart, disappear when compared with the injury done to the soul by such damaging disregard of the sense of truth in its noblest form, and all conveniences to be gained for the education of nations and children are as nothing in comparison with the frightful consequences to be looked for when nations or children at some future time shall discover that their leaders and educators have deceived them in the most frivolous and worthless manner, like an unscrupulous nurse who drugs her nursing with opium in order to secure herself some momentary rest. When they see all the awe and reverence with which they regard the sanctuary of the profoundest truths basely abused by those whom they regarded with pious confidence, and for the sake of their own more convenient control directed towards dogmas which their leaders themselves no longer believe in; then it is indeed not to be wondered at, if they in their turn throw all love and faith in truth in general overboard, and likewise with frivolous cynicism give themselves up to worldly falsity. But the best and noblest natures, when discovering the vast deception to which they have been subjected, will burn in just and holy wrath at the false guardians and educators who have stuffed the receptacle of their youthful minds with tales from which they cannot deliver themselves without a struggle that absorbs the best energies of their minds.

Let those rulers and parents well consider this, who, though themselves estranged to faith, and perhaps personally already out of all relation to the Church, yet indulge in the opinion that it is necessary, or at least useful, for the people they rule or the children they have to educate, to be educated in Christian doctrine and Christian piety.

Those, however, who have hitherto followed the beaten track merely from want of courage, may wake up to the terrible consciousness of the fearful responsibility assumed by them, when thus adopting towards their children a course of systematic falsity in the realm of the most sacred and sublime truth.

Let any unbiased observer look around and see how many and serious sins are daily committed among us against these moral principles from indolence, timidity, cowardice, stupidity, and deficient sense of truthfulness, and how religious and ecclesiastical hypocrisy in its active and passive form, as falsehood and as connivance with falsehood, as simulation and as toleration of false syllogisms drawn from silent conduct, pervades all society. It is not saying too much, when I assert that two-thirds of our well-educated men and a small fraction of the well-educated women trespass against the duty of truthfulness in religion in one or the other manner above specified. But nowhere does that word of Fichte prove more strikingly true than here, according to which cowardice is the mother of falsehood, since we cannot but consider most of the lies displayed or admitted in the realm of religions as traceable to cowardice as the principal motive,—to that cowardice which is afraid of giving offence to the weighty bugbear of conventionality. But while our disquisitions showed us the repulsive falsity of our social relations to be mainly traceable to the vanity of woman, in the realms of religion men are the principal exponents of untruthfulness, because in them the great conflict between the old and the new is more strikingly developed than in the women, the majority of whom—even among the better educated classes—are wont thoughtlessly to adhere to the old, while at the same time lacking the ability of attaining to a clear appreciation of the conflicting contradictions, or even to a sure and certain subjective decision of the conflict.

"THE HOLY SABBATH."

The air of pious assurance with which the above choice phrase is bandied about by Sabbatarians would "almost deceive the very elect" into believing that some kind of sanctity attaches to the particular day of the week which they choose to designate by that title. The recent action of the churches, endorsing the decision of the Centennial Commission (in reference to closing the Exhibition on Sunday) because said decision was "in harmony with the gospel of Christ and the law of the land," is a case in point.

The cool impudence of the above assumption challenges our admiration, and might provoke a smile were it not for the serious consequences which result from its practical application.

That the term Holy Sabbath is not applied to the Jewish Sabbath (Saturday), but is applied to Sunday, the first day of the week, and its observance as sought to be enforced by legal enactments, will not be denied. I propose to examine the validity of this claim.

1st. If the Jewish Sabbath was abrogated and the Christian Sabbath established in its stead, of course it must be done by some authority. By what authority: that of Christ? Let us see. Christ disregarded the Jewish Sabbath (Mark ii., 28), but he did not institute one of his own in its stead, or command others to do so. So the Sabbatarians have not Christ for authority.

2d. Was it established by the authority of the Apostles? Let St. Paul answer: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days" (Col. ii., 16). Again: "One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be persuaded in his own mind" (Rom. xiv., 5). Paul at least cannot be made to do service; and, as for the others, they never so much as mention Sunday on any pretext. The Sabbath is mentioned about thirty times in the New Testament, but I defy all Christendom to prove that it once refers to Sunday.

3d. Perhaps "the Fathers" are responsible. Let us inquire of them. Justyn Martyr, A. D. 140, said: "You Jews think, when you have spent a day in idleness, you are very religious. Our God is not pleased with such things. There was no need of Sabbaths before Moses, so there is no need of them since Jesus Christ." Irenæus, Tertullian, and Eusebius held similar views; so it appears that the Christian Sabbath is not established by their authority.

4th. Perhaps the Reformers and Divines know something about it. Calvin says: "Christians, therefore, should have nothing to do with a superstitious observance of days." Martin Luther said: "If anywhere the day is made holy for the mere day's sake, if any set up its observance on a mere Jewish foundation, then I order you to work on it, ride on it, to dance on it, to do anything that shall reprove this encroachment on the Christian spirit of liberty." Melancthon wrote: "The observance of the Sabbath nor any other day is of necessity. There are extant monstrous disputations touching the change of the Sabbath that have sprung up from a false persuasion that there should be worship in churches like to the Levitical worship. They dispute about holy days, and prescribe how far it is lawful to work in them. What are they but snares for men's consciences?" Archbishop Paley says: "The opinion that Christ and his Apostles meant to retain the duties of the Jewish Sabbath, shifting only the day from the seventh to the first, seems to prevail without sufficient reason; nor does any evidence remain in the Scripture that the first day of the week was thus distinguished in commemoration of our Lord's death." Archbishop Whateley, in his Notes on Paul, says: "There is no injunction to sanctify one day in seven throughout the whole of the Old Testament. We never hear of keeping holy some one day in seven, but the seventh day,—the day on which God rested from his labor. Surely, if we allow that the tradition of the Church is competent to change the express command of God, we are falling into one of the most dangerous errors of the Romanists. But in the present case there is not even any tradition to the purpose. Such a change certainly would have been authorized by their express injunction, and by nothing short of that; since an express divine command can be changed or altered only by the same power and distinct revelation delivering it. But not only is there no apostolic injunction (than which nothing less would be sufficient), there is not even a tradition of their having made such a change. Nay, more; it is abundantly plain that no such change was ever made by them."

5th. If, then, it be demonstrated that there is not a particle of authority in the Christian Scriptures, the example or teaching of Christ, his apostles, or the Church fathers, the question may arise, How came we to have a Christian Sabbath at all, and a law enforcing its observance? I reply: Its origin is heathen, and not Christian at all. Sunday had been a heathen festival for ages; but Constantine, the first Christian emperor, found it necessary for the maintenance of his power to engraft a heathen ceremony upon the Church to which he had just become a convert. This epiphyte continued to grow with varying fortunes, till in the sixteenth century in England and Scotland (especially the latter) it attained to full efflorescence. A "slip" from this pernicious plant was conveyed across the ocean in the May-Flower; planted, watered, and nurtured by Puritan piety, it flourished on the virgin soil of America, and its fruit to-day is mortification and disgust. We stand before the assembled civilized world convicted of narrow-minded bigotry, while loudly professing religious liberty and universal brotherhood. The observance of the Sabbath is strictly a matter of religious opinion, and not in any sense one of public or private morals, and is therefore one over which the law has no jurisdiction whatever.

6th. I conclude then that there is not only no divine authority for the Christian Sabbath, but no authority whatever; that the Christians possess no right, either human or divine, to bind heavy burdens upon men's consciences simply because they are in the majority (locally). Majorities often perpetrate gross outrages, and the Sunday law is one of them. It reads as follows:—

"If any person shall do or perform any worldly employment whatever on the Lord's day commonly called Sunday, . . . and be convicted thereof, . . . he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of $5.00, to be levied by distress, or suffer six days imprisonment," etc.

This same Sunday law was conceived in ignorance, born of superstition, cradled in bigotry, clothed with prejudice, and sent forth fully armed and equipped with intolerance to do the dirty work of despotism. It is a most tyrannical infringement upon the sacred rights of conscience, a relic of the dark ages, a fraud, a blot upon our national escutcheon, a thing to be ashamed of and repealed as speedily as possible.

HARRY HOOVER.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., June 12, 1876.

DEATH'S TERRORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

As is very well known, the Orthodox clergy take especial pleasure in picturing to an audience the terrors of the dying moments of infidels; in fact, it is rarely that our rural gospel-dispensers produce any other argument in disposing of scepticism, and it must be admitted that such treatment is abundantly sufficient to add to the faith and bigotry of the unthinking masses. Not an opportunity was lost in the revival here to portray in vivid manner the closing tragedy in the life of the infidel, the minister or speaker in each case drawing from the storehouse of examples that in very many instances have been produced by the inventive priesthood or their tools. This is their resort in their weakness, when no opponent can meet them with the same weapons, even if he so desired. How eagerly they enlarge upon every case of death-bed retraction, however ill-defined may have been the infidelity of the subject! But a case of an opposite character has come under my own observation that will never be made use of in that way; and knowledge of which is carefully confined to as few people as possible.

A young lady died a few months ago who all her life was noted for her piety, purity, and benevolence. She was a member of the United Presbyterian Church, an earnest participant in all church work, and zealously active in the late revival movement. The wicked dreaded her approach in the meetings, for her spotless life would not admit of the usual criticisms. She was gracious and kind to all people, of every class and condition of life, and was universally loved and respected. She fell a victim to consumption's dread inroads. Shortly before she died she became possessed of the illusion that she was doomed everlasting punishment. Tearfully she proclaimed to visiting friends her inability to meet them in heaven, and during her last moments her cries of "Lost! Lost!" nearly crazed her husband. Slight noises she interpreted as her death-knell, and imagined she felt the "hot flames of hell" upon her lips! Thus she died.

Her case is not an isolated one of the kind, nor will freethinkers attach much importance to it, except to note it as an establishment of our pronounced belief that the actions of the dying bear testimony only to their dispositions or the condition of their minds; and in mentioning it I wish to be understood that the young lady's fears were produced by a mind rendered delirious by disease. How unfortunate that death-bed ravings cannot be so accepted in all cases! Religious belief may have much to do with one's state of mind at the dying hour, but I should think a belief in a literal hell and the capricious God of the Bible would be most likely to cause one to dread death. Those of us who have had the seeds of orthodoxy implanted in our minds in childhood know not but that we might retract when our minds become enfeebled by age or disease, though we hope not; but now, when our minds are strong, if we are sincere in our religious convictions, and our deportment is in accordance therewith, we certainly have no reason to fear death. If the following admirable precept was adopted for observance by all people of every shade of belief, death would no longer be looked upon as the King of terrors:—

"Work as though you would live forever;
Live as though you would die to-day."

H.

NEWVILLE, Pa., May 28.

POLITICS in the pulpit is bad enough, but what should be done with preachers who talk business in the house of the Lord? A wretched circuit-rider in Arkansas is reported to have stated in a late sermon that "it isn't loud praying that counts with the Lord so much as giving four quarts for every gallon, sixteen ounces for every pound, and thirty-six inches to the yard." We trust that at the next meeting of his conference that circuit-rider will be promptly asked if he does not believe in justification by faith, and that he will be closely watched to see that he does not indulge in evasive mental reservations. He may try to dodge the question by stating that he does not see that belief in personal honesty is detrimental to an immeasurable exercise of faith; but no such miserable subterfuge should be allowed to save him.—Christian Union.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No gate will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 " " "	8 " "
" 26 " 51 " " "	6 " "
" 52 " " " " "	5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
Rev. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity, as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. O. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

Including
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:
FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
CHARLES VOYSEY, England.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. Voysey has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work: A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUECKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 3 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	5.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
COBBELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Helmholtz and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENÉ). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUBRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 6 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising: Adam Bede. Romola. The Mill on the Floss. Felix Holt. Elias Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	2.50
Wit and Wisdom.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	2.50
Essays. Second Series.....	2.50
Miscellanies.....	2.00
Representative Men.....	2.00
English Traits.....	2.00
Conduct of Life.....	2.00
Poems. With Portraits.....	3.00
May-day and other Pieces.....	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	2.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformation of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	2.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about the Unknown River.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.50
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The Marble Faun.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.30
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-lings.....	1.75
Studies for Students.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Stater's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopea the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance," to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah F. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Begius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Varieties, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 3 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWIS (G. E.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
Elements of Geology.....	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1836 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 3 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.00
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras. Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop.....	1.50
Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Bound the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations.....	2.00
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and M.DCCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Truhy Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours; the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHellen (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMER:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., Geikie cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education; Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.00
Sociology.....	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINIE'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Class-Room Tains. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair.....	5.00
The Newcomes.....	5.00
Adventures of Philip Penderennis.....	5.00
The Virginians.....	5.00
Esmond, and Lord the Widower.....	5.00
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	2.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.....
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.....
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.....
3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.....
4. Four Georges, Humors, &c.....
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces.....
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.00
The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Elements of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.00
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Slings and the Stones. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNEE'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Saunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	5.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pansies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

Digitized by Google

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P. J. PROUDHON: HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS. PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

CHAPTER I.
METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.
PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.
LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.
THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE. Demonstration. Axiom.

Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it demands something for nothing.

Second Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, with a

given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is Homocidal.

Fifth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Sixth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition.
Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.
1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.

2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.

3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.
1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.

2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.

3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUI ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges.....$3.50
Price in Full Calf, blue, gift edge.....6.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-
TON'S

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

BRINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

THE
NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3 50.

LIBERAL BOOKS.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MAN. By Win-

wood Reads.....$3.00

THE SAFEST CREED. By O. B. Frothing-

ham.....1.50

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE WORLD. By

Edward Clodd......75

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN: Priest and Man.

By Frederika MacDonald.....1.50

SOUL PROBLEMS, with other Papers. By

Joseph E. Peck......75

THE CULTIVATION OF ART, and its Relations to Religious Puritanism and

Money-Getting. By A. R. Cooper... .25

JUST ISSUED:

THE CHRIST OF PAUL; or, The Enigmas

of Christianity. By George Reber.

12mo. Extra cloth. 400 pp. Post-

paid.....2.00

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPHER

AND REFORMER. By Charles

Sotherton. Post-paid.....1.25

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE

INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place
Boston.

THE INDEX

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot): (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)

RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, April 5, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts.

Address THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT BETWEEN

Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CENTENNIAL BUSTS.

Jefferson and Paine.

Copies in plaster, boxed, guaranteed against injury by transportation. Price of each, $50.00. Send orders to S. H. MORSE, 25 Bromfield St., Boston.

THOMAS PAINE.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

Of MORSE's Bust of Thomas Paine, for sale at the Office of THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston. Price, 50 cts.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,

and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

757 Washington St., Boston.

THE AMERICAN EDITION

OF

MONCURE D. CONWAY'S

SACRED ANTHOLOGY,

A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,

has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.

Address THE INDEX,

1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

BOOKS FOR THINKERS.

Send 25 cts. for THE STYLUS one year. a Monthly Record and Review of the latest and best works in Radical, Freethought, and Oriental Literature. It also contains a list of the standard books of this class.

CHAS. P. SOMERBY,

PUBLISHER, BOOKSELLER, AND IMPORTER,

139 Eighth St., New York.

THE GODS, AND OTHER

LECTURES.

By Col. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,

OF ILLINOIS.

This book contains five Lectures, entitled severally: "The Gods," "Humboldt," "Thomas Paine," "Individuality," and "Heretics and Heresies." It is handsomely bound, and will be sent from this office on receipt of Two DOLLARS.

Address THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

OF

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Landaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.).....$1.50

CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....1.00

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....1.00

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....1.00

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND

OTHER DISCOURSES.....1.00

LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....3.00

THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM

IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp.,

with steel portrait of the author) ... 2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE CENTENNIAL

CONGRESS OF LIBERALS!

AN APPEAL TO ALL

Who believe that the United States should be

Absolutely Secularized.

And who favor the movement to carry out the principle of

STATE SECULARIZATION,

As indicated in the "Demands of Liberalism."

605 WALNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA,
March 1, 1876.

To the Liberal Leagues and the Liberal Public of the United States:—

The General Centennial Committee, appointed at a convention held in this city last September for the purpose of making all necessary arrangements for a General Centennial Congress of Liberals next summer, have decided to call said Congress to convene at Philadelphia, Saturday, July 1, 1876,—further particulars to be hereafter announced.

Each organized Liberal League will be entitled to send five delegates as special representatives—three in addition to its President and Secretary. But all individual Liberals who sympathize with the general objects and aims of the Liberal Leagues will be equally entitled and welcomed to seats and votes in the Congress.

REPORT PROMPTLY!

In order to lessen as much as possible the expenses of the delegates, each League is requested to elect them as soon as possible, and to report their names to the undersigned through its Secretary. All Liberals, delegates, or individuals who desire and intend to participate in the Convention are requested also to forward personally and immediately their names and full post-office addresses to the undersigned, that he may be enabled to make the most favorable terms possible for their accommodation. If notified early, he hopes to secure for them a considerable reduction in railroad fares, and to provide boarding-places at perhaps half the usual rates of the season.

Donations Solicited!

The Centennial Committee on Finance having through their Chairman transferred their duties to the General Centennial Committee, the undersigned has been appointed to attend to the financial department, and hereby appeals to the Liberals of the country for voluntary contributions to the amount of One Thousand Dollars. This amount will be needed to make the Congress a complete success, though the utmost possible will be done with whatever is contributed. The officers of the union of Liberal German societies propose to raise the same amount for their convention, and have already raised $800 of it. The Young Men's Christian Association here have already spent this year nearly $100,000 in preparation for the Centennial, in the interest of Orthodox superstition; it would be a pity if all the friends of "Liberty and Light" could not do a hundredth part as much for the cause of national development and free humanity! The money will all be wanted (and much more could be advantageously expended) in providing suitable halls and headquarters, advertising the Congress liberally in advance in the chief dailies of the country, defraying the necessary expenses of desired and invited speakers, paying verbatim reporters, publishing a complete pamphlet report of the proceedings, etc., etc. What is done must be done speedily, since the arrangements should be completed, as far as practicable, by the first of May.

All sums donated will be duly acknowledged in THE INDEX, and a full report of all expenditures will be sent for publication in the same paper. Remittances should be sent to the undersigned, 605 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. Will not all friends of the movement respond heartily and at once?

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

Acting Treasurer.

I believe that Mr. Kilgore is a gentleman of unimpeachable personal integrity, and that all money remitted to him as above will be faithfully and economically devoted to the legitimate uses of the Congress.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

Chairman of the General Centennial Committee.

General Centennial Committee:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,

DAMON Y. KILGORE,

ALEXANDER LOOS,

ISAAC RHEN,

BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD,

H. S. WILLIAMS,

with power to increase their number to fifteen. The completion and success of the arrangements must depend on the liberality of the friends of the movement, who are respectfully and earnestly solicited to contribute the necessary funds.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 13, 1876.

WHOLE NO. 342.

CONSTITUTION OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE

Adopted at Philadelphia,

JULY 1, 1876.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, The Constitution of the United States, from beginning to end, in spirit and in letter, is framed in accordance with the principle of the total separation of Church and State; and the Treaty with Tripoli, signed by George Washington as a part of the supreme law of the land, declares emphatically that "the government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion"; and

WHEREAS, Notwithstanding these facts, the administration of the national government, and the administrations and constitutions of the several State governments, maintain numerous practical connections of the State with the Church, thereby violating the spirit of the United States Constitution and the glorious traditions which dedicate this country exclusively to the natural rights of man; and

WHEREAS, The welfare and peace of the republic, the equal religious rights and liberties of its citizens, and the most precious interests of civilization, alike require that all the political and educational institutions of the nation which are supported by taxation should be more faithfully conformed to the spirit of its fundamental law:—

Therefore, We, the members of the Centennial Congress of Liberals, convened at Philadelphia from July First to July Fourth, 1876, hereby associate ourselves together as a permanent organization, and adopt the following

CONSTITUTION.

Name.

ARTICLE I.—The name of this association shall be "The National Liberal League."

General Object.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

Specific Objects.

ARTICLE III.—As means to the accomplishment of this general object, the specific objects of the National Liberal League shall be—

1. To urge the adoption of such a "Religious Freedom Amendment" of the United States Constitution as shall effect the complete secularization of the government in all its departments and institutions, State and National, and shall secure to every American citizen the full enjoyment of his opinions on the subject of religion, whatever they may be, without molestation, disability, or deprivation of any civil or political right.

2. To advocate the equitable taxation of church property; the total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools; the repeal of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath; the cessation of all appropriations of public funds for religious institutions or purposes of any kind; the abolition of State-paid chaplaincies; the substitution of simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury for the judicial oath; the non-appointment of religious fasts, festivals, and holidays by public authority; the practical establishment of simple morality and intelligence as the basis of purely secular government, and the adequate guarantee of public order, prosperity, and righteousness; and whatever other measures or principles may be necessary to the total separation of Church and State.

3. To promote the formation and multiplication of local auxiliary Liberal Leagues throughout the country in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, in order to institute combined and vigorous agitation for the adoption of the "Religious Freedom Amendment," and, pending its adoption, to secure through State and municipal action the accomplishment of the various special reforms above enumerated.

4. To defend through the courts, by the combined efforts and means of the liberals of the country, any American citizen whose equal religious rights are denied, or who is oppressed, on account of any opinions he may have held or expressed on the subject of religion.

5. To promote, by all peaceable and orderly means, active propagandism of the great principles of religious liberty and equal rights, devotion to truth for its own sake, and universal brotherhood on the ground of a common humanity: more particularly, to establish a Liberal Lecture Bureau for the mutual benefit of hearers and lecturers, by which the formation of local liberal societies may be facilitated and stimulated, and by which liberal lecturers of sufficient ability and unblemished moral character, without the least discrimination on account of their religious opinions, may be encouraged, furnished with employment, and helped to devote themselves to the liberal cause.

6. In all other proper and practicable ways, to promote the final emancipation of the State from the control of the Church, and to foster the development of that natural intelligence and morality which constitute the necessary and all-sufficient basis of secular government.

Membership.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

Annual Congress.

ARTICLE V.—The Annual Congress of the National Liberal League shall be held at such time and place and with such sessions as the Board of Directors may announce; and public notice of the Congress shall be given at least one month previously. The first Annual Congress shall be held in the year 1877. Other conventions of the League may be held at such places and times as the Board of Directors shall appoint.

All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Officers.

ARTICLE VI.—The officers of the National Liberal League shall be a President, six or more Vice-Presidents, a Secretary and Assistant Secretary, a Treasurer, a Board of Directors, an Executive Committee, and a Finance Committee. All these officers shall be elected at the Annual Congress, and shall hold their offices for one year, or until others are chosen in their stead. The Board of Directors shall have power to fill any office of the League that may be left or may become vacant before the meeting of the Annual Congress succeeding their own election.

President.

ARTICLE VII.—The President's duty shall be to preside at the Annual Congress and other conventions of the League, and at the meetings of the Board of Directors; and to countersign all orders upon the treasury duly drawn by the Secretary.

Secretaries.

ARTICLE VIII.—The Secretary's duty shall be to keep the records, complete lists of members, and other papers of the League, and also of the Board of Directors; to report promptly to the Board of Directors all facts communicated to him by the Secretaries of local auxiliary Leagues, and to prepare a careful condensation of the same for the Annual Congress; and to conduct such correspondence as usually pertains to his office. It shall be the duty of the Assistant Secretary to assist in this work under the Secretary's direction.

Treasurer.

ARTICLE IX.—The Treasurer, after giving security satisfactory to the Board of Directors, shall receive and hold all funds of the League, subject to orders duly drawn by the Secretary and countersigned by the President. He shall report the state of the finances of the League at every Annual Congress, and oftener if required by the Board of Directors or Finance Committee; and upon the election of a successor he shall deliver to him all the property of the League that he may hold.

Board of Directors.

ARTICLE X.—The President, Secretary, Treasurer, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Chairman of the Finance Committee, shall constitute the Board of Directors, which shall be intrusted with the general management and control of the affairs of the League from year to year. They shall make a full report of their doings on the first day of each Annual Congress. All appropriations from the treasury shall be by vote of the Board of Directors.

Executive Committee.

ARTICLE XI.—The Executive Committee shall be composed of one member from each State and Territory of the Union, and shall act under the instructions of the Board of Directors. It shall be the duty of each member of the Executive Committee to select and associate with himself four other good citizens of his own State or Territory, as the Executive Sub-Committee for that State or Territory, and he shall be himself the Chairman of the same and promptly report its organization to the Secretary of the National Liberal League. Each Sub-Committee shall appoint a Local Agent in as many of the cities and towns of its own State or Territory as possible. It shall be the duty of each Local Agent, with the help and coöperation of the State Sub-Committee, to organize, if possible, a local auxiliary Liberal League in his own city or town, to report its organization promptly to the Chairman of the State Sub-Committee, and to promote by its means the general objects of the National Liberal League.

The Chairman of the Executive Committee shall be elected as such by the Annual Congress, and shall be ex officio a member of the Board of Directors.

Finance Committee.

ARTICLE XII.—The Finance Committee shall be composed of three members, elected by the Annual Congress. It shall be their duty to devise ways and means for raising such funds as may be needed for the successful prosecution of the work of the League, and to carry them into execution with the help of the Board of Directors.

The Chairman of the Finance Committee shall be elected as such by the Annual Congress, and shall be ex officio a member of the Board of Directors.

Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XIV.—Charters so issued shall contain Constitutions substantially similar to this Constitution, but adapted to local wants, providing for regular and frequent meetings to promote the mental and moral culture and general social enjoyment of the members, for Children's Fraternities to promote the welfare and happiness of their children, for Relief Committees to supply the needs of sick, poor, or distressed members, and in general for whatever may conduce to the private benefit as well as the public usefulness of the local Leagues.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient coöperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

ARTICLE XVII.—It shall be a special duty of the Secretary of each local auxiliary Liberal League to furnish the Secretary of the National League with a complete list of all the members with their post-office addresses in full, and a list of the officers, and also to furnish him with prompt information of all important action, of his own local League.

Amendments.

ARTICLE XVIII.—Amendments to this Constitution may be made at any Annual Congress of the National Liberal League by a three-fourths vote of the qualified members present. But no amendment shall be made, unless the proposed amendment shall have been published together with the required public notice of the Annual Congress which is to act upon it.

OFFICERS

OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, ELECTED AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 1, 1876.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Illinois.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irrington, Ind.
 HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM,.....New York.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSENTHAL,.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LICK,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Detroit, Mich.
 HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,.....New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SEAYER,.....Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.

Secretary.

R. H. RANNEY,.....1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 R. H. RANNEY.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,.....Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS,.....Arkansas.
 J. L. HATCH,.....California.
 E. B. HAZZEN,.....Connecticut.
 S. S. WALLIHAN,.....Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAY,.....Iowa.
 HERMANN LIEBER,.....Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Illinois.
 J. E. WALLACE,.....Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD,.....Maine.
 A. WARREN KELSEY,.....Missouri.
 FRANK J. MEAD,.....Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE,.....New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,.....Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORN,.....North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS,.....Rhode Island.
 R. PETERSON,.....Texas.
 SAMUEL WATSON,.....Tennessee.
 J. O. BARRETT,.....Wisconsin.

[The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.]

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.
 HARLAN P. HYDE.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS BY DISTINGUISHED CITIZENS.

From the Hon. E. P. HURLBUT, of Albany, N. Y.

I regret that I cannot promise you any work of the pen in aid of the cause you have so much at heart, and so ably advocate; but if I can attend at Philadelphia, I may report myself to the League, as one sympathizing in its objects. If my name—long withdrawn from the public, and unknown to the present generation—can serve your association, you are at liberty to use it in the manner suggested; though I shall regret receiving of your honors without being able to help in any of your work. Some thirty years ago, when the Constitution of New York was about to be revised, I labored for the abolition of the religious test, and secured it, in favor of witnesses in courts of justice. I am no longer young, and my hopes for our institutions are not so sanguine as they were then; still they are worth fighting for on account of the theory alone. Perhaps a generation may arise worthy to uphold them, the present exhibiting more of ignorance and less of innocence than consist with popular rule.

From the Hon. SAMUEL E. SEWALL, of Boston, Mass.

I am so much in favor of the general objects of the National Liberal League that I cannot refuse to be nominated as one of its vice-presidents, if it is thought that my name will help the cause in any degree. I must add that at this moment the third section of the proposed amendment, as it seems to me, requires some modification. With the first, second, and fourth, I concur heartily and entirely. Every year that passes renders the adoption of new constitutional protection for religious freedom more and more urgent.

From the Hon. NATHANIEL HOLMES, of St. Louis, Mo.

I concur entirely in recommending the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and in the general objects and purposes of the movement, so far as I am at present informed of them; and if you and other friends of the cause think the use of my name as a vice-president can be of any service, I shall not withhold my consent. It is probable I may be in Philadelphia about the time mentioned; and, if so, I shall take pleasure in attending the Congress.

From the Hon. HENRY BOOTH, of Chicago, Ill.

I am heartily in favor of the total separation of Church and State by the proposed amendment to the Constitution; and you are at liberty to use my name as one of the vice-presidents of the League to be organized for that purpose, if you think proper.

From the Hon. GEORGE W. JULIAN, of Irvington, Ind.

I have yours of the 4th, requesting the privilege of nominating me as one of the vice-presidents of the National Liberal League. Of course you are at liberty to do so. It will not win for me popular applause; but I would accept the position as one of high honor, and it affords me real pleasure to comply with your personal wishes, and to thank you for the compliment which they express. As to your proposed "religious freedom amendment," I decidedly approve of it. Some very slight verbal changes might be made; but it covers the whole ground more fully, and accomplishes the desired purpose more completely and explicitly than any proposition I have noticed. It would totally and absolutely separate Church and State, and nothing less than this should be accepted.

From the Hon. ELIZUR WRIGHT, of Boston, Mass.

The importance of the work to which the Congress of Liberals is called cannot be over-estimated, as it seems to me; and I should count it a great honor, as well as pleasure, to be allowed to participate in it. But there seems no probability that I shall be able to attend it, or have any spare means or strength to devote to the great cause in which it is enlisted. The proposed amendment to the Constitution, it seems to me, must commend itself to every fair-minded man as worthy of a place in that instrument, if it really means to be a guarantee of the rights of conscience. Only the enslavers of souls can possibly object to it. Since it is a fact that many people are laboring to turn the Constitution into a theological creed, the sooner we know that they cannot succeed the better. Nothing short of the "Religious Freedom Amendment," it seems to me, can settle this question as it should be; and all sincere religionists should be in favor of it for the sake of religion itself. . . . If it is only to "stand up and be counted," of course you may depend upon me; and I shall not back down from any place you see fit to put me in as a name.

From Mr. O. B. FROTHINGHAM, of New York City.

My name for the other purpose you entertain is wholly at your disposal. I shall be proud to be associated with the men you mention, and proud to hold such a position in such a cause.

From Mr. WILLIAM J. POTTER, of New Bedford, Mass.

Certainly, put my name on the vice-presidents' list, if I can thus serve the movement. . . . As to the desirableness of the general object of the Liberal League movement, the secularization of the State and of the State schools, and the importance of the proposed Constitutional amendment—as the specific, practical aim of the National Liberal League,—there is no difference of opinion between you and me. If there be any difference between us, it is upon the proportion which this work bears to the whole free religious movement; but I believe in the work itself, though not able to give to it that intense devotion which it has found in you.

From Mr. R. P. HALLOWELL, of Boston, Mass.

I am heartily in favor of the establishment of a Liberal League that shall be national in fact as well as in name. With the understanding that Mr. Frothingham and Mr. Potter are to be identified with the proposed national organization, I consent to serve as one of the vice-presidents.

From Mr. JAMES PARTON, of Newburyport, Mass.

I am honored by your proposing me for vice-president of the League. Publicity in all its forms and for all its reasons is painful to me, but in this cause I will do everything I can. I have lived but to promote it. Make me vice-president if you think it best.

From Mr. FRIEDRICH SCHUENEMANN-POTT, of San Francisco, Cal.

I certainly most cordially consent to your kind proposition to add my name to your list of vice-presidents of the forthcoming Centennial Congress of Liberals. Although, to my utter regret, I shall be unavoidably prevented from being personally present in Philadelphia, my whole heart and soul will be with you on the occasion; and "quidquid in me est ingenii, quod sentio quam sit exiguum," will always be, as it has been before, devoted to our common cause.

From the Hon. ABRAHAM PAYNE, of Providence, R. I.

On my return from New York, I find yours of the 4th. You are at liberty to use my name for the purpose proposed.

From the Rev. MINOT J. SAVAGE, of Boston, Mass.

Believing as I do in the main principles that compose the platform of the Liberal League, and sympathizing with the object of the National Congress of Liberals soon to meet in Philadelphia, you have my hearty consent to use my name as one of your vice-presidents. The State will be what it ought to be only when it is made purely secular.

From Rabbi B. FELSENTHAL, of Chicago, Ill.

By your proposal to nominate me as one of the vice-presidents of the National Liberal League, I feel much flattered. That I indorse heartily all the aims and objects of the League I need hardly assure you.

From the Rev. W. H. SPENCER, of Sparta, Wis.

We Spartans have talked about forming a Liberal League and sending you names, but it seems so superfluous and formal a thing to do, as our society is of itself a big Liberal League practically, that we have not organized for that special purpose. Of course I approve of the work for which the Leagues are organized, though I confess I do not probably regard it as of so much and pressing importance as I think you do. . . . If you think my name respectable enough to sandwich between the famous preachers and judges you mention, I can have no objection, but wouldn't they?

From Mr. SAMUEL L. HILL, of Florence, Mass.

I certainly have no right to imagine it of any importance, favorable to the cause you wish to promote, to have my name published as one of the vice-presidents of the Centennial Congress of Liberals. However, I shall not object to your proposing it, if you wish to. The enclosed check for one hundred dollars I can believe may be useful.

From the Rev. J. L. HATCH, San Francisco, Cal.

Yours of May 10 would have been sooner answered, but for the fact that Mr. Lick has for several weeks been quite ill, and no one was allowed to see him. He is somewhat better now, though still quite feeble. I called upon him yesterday at his hotel, the Lick House, and gave him your letter requesting the use of his name as one of the vice-presidents of the National Liberal League. He authorized me to give you his cheerful assent.

From E. W. MEDDAUGH, Esq., of Detroit, Mich.

You are at liberty to elevate me to the vice-presidency, or to use me in any other way that in your judgment will help, in the slightest degree, the good cause. . . . I have repeatedly read your proposed amendment to the Constitution, and do not see how it can be improved.

From the Hon. ROBERT DALE OWEN, of New Harmony, Ind.

If you think my name as one of the vice-presidents can be of any service, pray use it. You know, I am sure, how entirely I agree with the spirit of the proposed amendment. Coming down to particulars, I think the words—"or in which religious practices shall be observed"—had better be omitted, seeing that the entire ground is covered without them. James' definition of "true religion and unde-filed" does not embrace any sectarian doctrine whatever; and it is almost the only definition of the word to be found in the New Testament. I regret that, having already engaged rooms on Lake George for the summer, I shall not be able to be present at your July meeting.

From Mr. KARL HEINZEN, editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston, Mass.

If you think that my acceptance of a nomination as one of the vice-presidents of your League in Philadelphia can do any good to your cause, which as far as it goes is also my own, I can have no objections to it. But I deem it my duty to tell you that I am a decided atheist and materialist, and must leave it to your consideration whether this may be obnoxious or not.

From Rabbi ISAAC M. WISE, editor of the "American Israelite," Cincinnati, Ohio.

If possible I will be present at the Congress, to work with you; if I cannot, I write you a letter. If you form a Liberal League to unite this element, I am willing to be one of them, officer or private, as it may be deemed most advantageous to the cause. Anyhow I will work with you.

From Mr. D. M. BENNETT, editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York City.

I confess I should feel honored by the distinction you named, in connection with the Liberal League, and would readily accept the position. But I fear I will be unable to be with you. . . . Any honor, however, you may see fit to confer upon me will be gratefully appreciated.

From Mr. HORACE SEAYER, editor of the "Investigator," Boston, Mass.

I see by your kind note of the other day that you wish to make a vice-president of me! I thank you for the honor, though I am not at all ambitious in that line; but as I am friendly to every movement that is liberal, and of course to the League, if you think that my name can be of any advantage, you can use it in the manner you suggest.

From Mr. MORITZ ELLINGER, editor of the "Jewish Times," New York City.

In reply I would state that I shall cheerfully contribute all that is in my power to the success of the cause in which, I believe, we labor in common. Dispose of my name and my humble services as you deem proper.

From Mr. B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.

I appreciate and thank you for the honor, and have only to say that, if you think my name will help promote the object of the League, you are at liberty to add it to the list of Vice-Presidents to be presented to the Congress. I need not assure you of my earnest, hearty sympathy with the purposes of the Liberal League. I know of nothing now presented for the consideration of the American people more important than the secularization of the government, so that there shall not be even a remnant of that union of Church and State which has, wherever it has prevailed, been a prolific source of mischief to free institutions. It is absolutely necessary to secure to all citizens, without regard to belief, equal rights and impartial religious liberty. The proposition to secure guarantees against any connection between Church and State, as well as to remove everything inconsistent with a purely secular government that now exists, by constitutional amendments such as you have proposed, meets with my entire concurrence, and will have my hearty support. We need only persevere in the noble movement, and success will yet crown our labors.

From the Rev. ROBERT COLLYER, Chicago, Ill. [This letter was received in Boston on July 7, it being then too late to present Mr. Collyer's name to the National Liberal League for election; but undoubtedly the Directors will vote at their first meeting to add his name to the list of vice-presidents, under the circumstances.]

I am entirely willing to go on the list, with your explanation. I think we mean the same thing.

From Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS, Boston, Mass.

I entirely agree with the proposed amendment, and shall give it my hearty support. But many years since I decided not to join any more societies. I have done my share of such work and responsibility, so excuse me from the vice-presidency.

From Mr. WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Boston, Mass. [This letter was received and publicly read at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, July 3.]

BOSTON, June 30, 1876.

DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I shall not be able to attend the meetings of the National Liberal League at Philadelphia; but if its object is solely to eliminate from our Constitutions and Statute-Books whatever shows the remotest leaning toward a union of Church and State, or that is designed or calculated to give preference to any form of religious belief over another, or that subjects the religious opinions of any person to a proscriptive test, or that grants to religious bodies peculiar rights and privileges whereby their property is exempted from being equally taxed with other property, then I cordially give it my approval. And I do not see why it should not strongly commend itself to all classes, as a matter of justice and equality, whatever may be the opinions they entertain concerning religion. Nay, those opinions, being widely variant and utterly irreconcilable, furnish ample reason why they should be left to stand or fall upon their own merits, and why there should be no supremacy on the one hand or subordination on the other. They belong to the domain of conscience, and, cost what it may, conscience must be left free. What can be more reasonable than this? To reject it is to strike at the foundation of popular government, and to inaugurate the reign of priestcraft, usurpation, and tyranny.

The function of the State is purely secular. It is to see that equal rights are enjoyed, and the general welfare promoted; but it has no right to decree, for example, that any book or any day or any place is holy, or to except church-property from taxation, or to appropriate any portion of the public money for sectarian purposes, or to enforce the reading of the Bible in the public schools, or to proclaim when it behooves the people to fast for their sins or feast for their abundance, or to require any religious test for office, suffrage, naturalization, or giving testimony in the courts. Yet it has assumed this as a part of its prerogatives; thus establishing a dangerous precedent, in contravention of republican principles, and, in my judgment, in violation of the spirit of Christianity itself,—Christianity as taught by its Founder, and not as exemplified in our day and generation.

Let the League make it clear in its spirit and utterances that it has no ulterior object in view; that it does not seek a conflict with any form of religion or with any religion as such, but is in antagonism only with what seeks to fetter the conscience, to define what is heresy, to mingle sectarian with secular affairs, and to keep in countenance that union which is specially to be abhorred: namely, the union of Church and State. In that case, occupying as it does common ground, it cannot fail to advance the cause of free institutions.

Yours for the freedom of body and mind,

WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE

TO THE

PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Adopted at Concert Hall, Philadelphia, on the Fourth of July, 1876.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4, 1876.

FELLOW-CITIZENS:—

Assembled in convention in this historic city, and on this historic day, we, the members of the National Liberal League, offer you our sympathetic congratulations on the completion of the first hundred years of the existence of our common country as one of the great nations of the earth. With you, we remember in profound gratitude the toils, sacrifices, and achievements of our forefathers; with you, we pay a tribute of deep veneration to the patriotism, the self-abnegation, the valor, the statesmanship, the wisdom, the resplendent virtues and the wonderful abilities which were the true fountain-head of our national being; with you, we exultingly commemorate the speaking of that bold word which a century ago launched into human history the first great political proclamation of the natural rights of man, and electrified the world with that sublime Declaration of Independence which has made the Fourth of July one of the deathless festivals of mankind. We share in the universal outburst of joy and pride which has hailed with the shouts of forty rejoicing millions the rising of this day's sun.

In full sympathy, therefore, with the spirit of this grand occasion and the spirit of those whose noble passion for liberty made it grand, we respectfully address you on a theme closely connected with their heroic and immortal labors. The dominant purpose of their hearts and the proud achievement of their hands were the foundation of a free commonwealth on the self-evident equality of all men with respect to their natural rights. The Constitution which with consummate sagacity they framed for the execution of this purpose rests on no other basis; it was ordained and established in the name of "the people of the United States," and in no other name; it speaks by the collective authority of all the individuals who compose "the people"; it recognizes the will of "the people," carrying into effect the dictates of their natural reason and natural conscience, as the ultimate source and origin of all political power. No one man, no one class of men, can show any natural right to rule the rest, except the right which is might; and that right is tyranny, usurpation, immorality, wrong. From this absolute absence of any natural right to rule mankind, whether as lodged in one or in a few, results the self-evident equality of all men in the right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." That magnificent and inspiring principle is the soul of the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution to which it ultimately led; it was the soul of the Revolutionary War, has been the soul of all our subsequent history, and will be the soul of all our future greatness. Strike out of the fundamental law of the land this recognition of equal individual rights, and, before another hundred years shall have rolled by, the proud fabric of the republic will have crumbled into impalpable dust.

Now a free Commonwealth thus conceived and established, a national Constitution thus framed and ordained, presuppose the separation of Church and State; they can exist only by virtue of this principle; they must perish if ever this principle should be abandoned. As an abstraction, it has become a stereotyped phrase of American politics, a mere truism which nobody disputes, a mere tradition which it is the fashion to pass from mouth to mouth and not examine too closely in its bearings on existing usages or institutions. What does it mean? That the natural intelligence and moral sense of mankind, no matter what may be their views on the subject of religion, are adequate to all the proper purposes, functions, and powers of civil government; that it is never necessary to step outside of the circle of natural human faculties "in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." These are the objects, and the only ones, which the Constitution was framed and ordained to secure; and the principle of the separation of Church and State means that they can be secured by the faculties which inhere in simple humanity, as such,—nay, more, that they will be defeated by permitting the Church to interfere with the workings of a civil government based on faith in the sufficiency of these universal and natural human faculties to protect all the interests of society. Such a government as this is a purely secular one; that is, it confines itself strictly to the secular objects above enumerated, and remands the whole subject of religion to the people in their individual capacity. It can establish no national Church and have no national religion; it favors none, it persecutes none, it recognizes none; it deals only with the political interests of the people, and has nothing to do with their religious interests further than to maintain their religious liberties and protect their equal religious rights. That is what the principle of total separation of Church and State means; and that is the general theory taken for granted in every line of our national Constitution. Without it, there could be no "government of the people, by the people, for the people"; without it the liberties of the individual, the natural rights of man, would vanish altogether. So long as the State exists by the sole will of the people, the people's liberties are self-protected and therefore safe; but so soon as it becomes in any degree, directly or indirectly, dependent on the Church, the people's liberties in that same degree must depend on the will of those who govern the Church. What fate in that case awaits the people's liberties, history with terrible plainness tells.

It is eminently fitting, therefore, on this great day of the nation's Centennial year, to recur to the fundamental principle of the Constitution, and to address to you our plea for a higher fidelity to it. The duties it imposes on the people with respect to the better protection of equal rights in religion are too little heeded or understood; and the public dangers which flow from this neglect are so grave, yet so insidious and unperceived, that no excuse is needed for this appeal. Not in the spirit of partisans, seeking some selfish advantage over their fellow-citizens, but rather in the spirit of patriots, concerned for the common welfare of their countrymen and the universal interests of mankind, do we now, weighing well our words, deliberately and solemnly affirm these propositions to be vital and momentous truths:—

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large, are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

If these propositions are true (and who can show that they are not true, or not in strict conformity with the tenor and spirit of the Constitution?) we respectfully submit to you that they merit the attention of every enlightened and patriotic statesman, and of every just and large-minded citizen. They show that, as a nation, we are not to-day living in harmony with our own great national idea,—that a new “irrepressible conflict,” unsuspected by the vast majority, is certain to involve us once more in civil convulsion, unless its causes are removed. Either our Constitution must be changed to suit our practices, or our practices must be changed to suit our Constitution. The principle of secular “government of the people, by the people, for the people,” must be eventually abandoned, or eventually obeyed more faithfully. The issue touches the very existence of our political system, which cannot long survive in open violation of the very ideas which gave it birth. By exempting church property from taxation; by supporting chaplains out of the public treasury; by appropriating public funds for sectarian institutions; by permitting Bible-reading and other religious services in the public schools, and thus perverting the public school system, for which all alike are taxed, into an instrument of religious propagandism by only a part of the people; by appointing religious fasts and festivals in the name of the government; by using the judicial oath instead of simple affirmation; by enforcing on the entire public the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath, and by various other practices too numerous to mention,—we unite Church and State, and fail to carry out the essential principle of the Constitution. The Church is thus permitted to seize the whole power of the State, and compel large classes of citizens to contribute involuntarily to the support of religious opinions which are not their own. That is the result of all State favoritism to any particular religion; and it cannot be reconciled with the fashionable professions of regard for religious liberty.

All these real but unacknowledged connections of Church and State constitute at the same time private wrongs, public immoralities, and public dangers. They are private wrongs, felt to be such by rapidly-increasing multitudes of citizens, because they compel men to pay public homage to a faith which is not their own, and thus wound them deeply in their conscience and their self-respect. They are public immoralities, because they violate the great laws of justice, freedom, and equal rights, which are the very soul of political ethics. They are public dangers, because they sanction sectarian usurpations, inflame sectarian ambitions, and powerfully tempt to new sectarian encroachments; because they create an accumulating mass of precedents for trampling under foot the broad principle of the total separation of Church and State on which our whole government is founded; because they habituate the people to a semi-ecclesiastical administration of the State, breed fanatical plots against religious liberty and equal religious rights, and chafe thousands of our best and noblest citizens with a consciousness of religious oppression; in fine, because they sow the seeds of petty brawls in many places over politico-religious questions which ought never to arise, and because they have already brought the country face to face with an issue of terrible gravity, in our national politics, touching the future relation of the Church to the public school system. These facts are the general justification of the movement which has culminated in the formation of the National Liberal League, and for the appeal which we now make to your reason and conscience.

In his “Farewell Address,” George Washington bequeathed you these grave and pregnant words of wisdom: “Towards the preservation of your government and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite not only that you steadily discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretexts. One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown.”

The warning here uttered was not unnecessary. For years this “spirit of innovation upon the principles” of the Constitution has been at work. A party, whose public advocates include scores of men high in political and ecclesiastical position, has been regularly organized to secure the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution which shall formally recognize “Almighty God as the author of national existence and the source of all power and authority in civil government,” “Jesus Christ as the ruler of nations,” and “the Bible as the fountain of law and the supreme rule for the conduct of nations.” This party publish a weekly newspaper, and have just held a convention in this city, in furtherance of their object. We thus see the fell “spirit of innovation upon the principles” of the Constitution, against which the venerated Washington has so solemnly warned us, seeking already “to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown,” and aiming a fatal blow at the greatest of all the great principles of that instrument,—the principle of the total separation of Church and State. The effect of this amendment, if adopted, will be to make evangelical Christianity the established religion of the United States, and to that extent to make its churches the Established Church. Such a change would be more than a mere “innovation,”—it would be a revolution, the destruction of this democratic republic and the substitution of an ecclesiastical theocracy.

We therefore deem it our solemn duty to follow the wise counsels of Washington, and to “resist with care” the insidious workings of that “spirit of innovation” which now boldly assails the very foundation of our free government by attempting to “undermine what cannot be directly overthrown.” We see that the pretext of these ecclesiastical revolutionists is the alleged duty of “preserving the existing Christian features of our government”: that is, the exemption of church property from taxation, the reading of the Bible in the public schools, the Sunday-Sabbath laws, and so forth. We see that, so long as these abuses continue, the advocates of the Christian Amendment of the Constitution occupy a strong vantage-ground in their assaults upon the great charter of our liberties; that these abuses, having no foothold in the Constitution, possess no guarantee of continuance in the supreme law of the land; and that all who are determined to perpetuate them must sooner or later rally to the standard of the Christian Amendment. We see, therefore, that the existence of these abuses is to-day a standing invitation and summons to revolutionize the government, a perpetual temptation to disloyalty of a fanatical and therefore most dangerous kind. In this attitude of affairs, true statesmanship requires the removal of evils whose consequences can only be miseries, crimes, and political strife embittered by religious hate.

With these facts and principles before us, we have voted in convention to petition Congress to recommend to the several States for adoption such a “Religious Freedom Amendment” to the Constitution as shall effectually separate Church and State in fact as well as in theory, and protect all individual citizens in their equal religious liberties and rights. We now appeal to you to give your support to this great measure by your signatures, your voices, and your votes; and we present these brief reasons for our appeal:—

1. The “Religious Freedom Amendment” is not in any sense a change of the Constitution or an innovation either with regard to its spirit or its special provisions. On the contrary, it is a measure in precisely the same spirit as now pervades the Constitution, being based on the identical principle which, as we have shown, everywhere underlies it,—a measure which will only give greater extension to this principle, and make it supreme in the governments of the several States as well as in the national government.

2. The proposed amendment, being designed solely to preserve and perfect the existing secular character of the Constitution, is a thoroughly and wisely conservative measure, in the very best sense of the word. It aims, not to undermine, but to confirm and strengthen and enlarge what already exists.

3. It is justly and impartially protective to all religions, while prohibiting special State favors to any. It is not hostile to any religion which is in favor of the equal religious liberties and rights of all American citizens. Whoever is in favor of these equal rights and liberties is estopped from accusing it of hostility to his own religion. It is hostile to nothing but the claim to tyrannize.

4. The proposed amendment is an eminently timely measure to bring forward now. The public school amendment of the Hon. James G. Blaine, already proposed in Congress and evidently destined to come up for action before long, is a compromise between the ecclesiastical and the secular theories of government; if passed, it will not have the effect of secularizing the public schools, but will leave undisturbed the chief evil to be reformed. The welfare of the country demands that no studied ambiguity should be permitted in a Constitutional amendment on this subject; and no amendment which, like Mr. Blaine’s, will keep the Bible in the schools, and thereby fail to separate Church and State in the public school system, ought to be adopted. But the great danger of the hasty adoption of this compromise amendment, with all its vagueness and ambiguity, renders it timely and expedient that a thoroughly secular amendment should be now pressed without delay upon the public attention, that the case may not go against liberty by sheer default.

5. The “Religious Freedom Amendment” is a necessary measure, judged by a high and broad and enlightened statesmanship. For a hundred years the general tendency of our national development has been in the direction of a gradually increasing liberation of the State from preëxisting ecclesiastical trammels; but quick and watchful eyes are not wanting to detect the signs of a turn in the tide. The long conflict over the slavery question absorbed the political energies of the nation, and left dormant the other great conflict now beginning to reveal itself respecting the relations of Church and State. But now that the slavery question has been finally settled by a Constitutional amendment, the Church question is the only one of a sufficiently permanent and universal character to take its place; and indications multiply that it is forcing itself into the arena of political activity. The campaign of last summer in Ohio; the President’s speech at Des Moines in September and his annual message to Congress in December; Mr. Blaine’s public school amendment proposed in Congress and the countless others elsewhere; the public school planks in the platforms adopted by numerous State and national party conventions; and the certainty of a fresh discussion of the school question in the Presidential campaign of this summer and autumn,—all these and other signs point to an impending agitation on issues involving the relations of Church and State which can only end in a new Constitutional amendment. True statesmanship suggests that the amendment be such as shall really end the agitation. But, unless the entire Constitution is to be revolutionized, no amendment can do this which does not absolutely separate Church and State. Other solutions will be partial, sectarian, transient; that solution alone can be final. We therefore hold that the “Religious Freedom Amendment” is the only measure which can permanently eliminate the Church question from party politics, because it is the only measure which can ever settle that question in harmony with the Constitution. Does not true statesmanship point to its early adoption?

Fellow-citizens, we must go backward or forward:

to stand still is as impossible for nations as for men. Two Constitutional amendments are offered to you for your choice, embodying two opposing principles between which human ingenuity will search in vain to find a mean. One fatally entangles the State with the Church, and plunges this young republic into all the bitterest embarrassments of the Old World. The other proclaims the absolute emancipation of the State from all these embarrassments, and sets her forever free, with her face to the future. The one violates the whole spirit of the Constitution, strikes a deadly blow at the very heart of Liberty, and foredooms the nation to a career from which it may well shrink back aghast. The other carries the Constitution up to a higher and nobler fulfillment of its own matchless ideal, makes Liberty and Love kiss each other, and sets the crown of a resplendent destiny on the nation’s brow. One or the other, by the irresistible logic of ideas and events, must in some form be ultimately incorporated in our fundamental law: when, and how soon, it is for you, the people of the United States, to say. But our duty is discharged. Our cause is still that of our forefathers, whose great Declaration of Independence echoes forever “through the corridors of time”; and here, on the hundredth anniversary of that mighty word, we as solemnly declare the STATE’S TOTAL INDEPENDENCE OF THE CHURCH. Will you ratify this new word of freedom?

RESOLUTIONS

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3 AND 4, 1876.

I.

Resolved, That the National Liberal League, convened at Philadelphia from July 1st to July 4th, 1876, respectfully petitions the Senate and House of Representatives, in Congress assembled, to recommend to the several States for adoption such a “Religious Freedom Amendment” of the United States Constitution as shall effect the total separation of Church and State in all branches and departments of the government, National, State, and municipal, and protect all American citizens in the enjoyment of their equal religious rights and liberties; that petitions be circulated throughout the country in support of this petition, and, if possible, a million signatures to the same be obtained; and that the Board of Directors of the National Liberal League are hereby instructed to carry this resolution into effect.

II.

Resolved, That we recommend and urge the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League in every city, town, and village of the country where ten brave men and women can be found to take the lead in the matter, for the purpose of instituting earnest and combined agitation in favor of equal rights respecting religion, and in favor of such a Constitutional Amendment as shall guarantee them.

III.

Resolved, That all American citizens, whether orthodox or heterodox, Christian or non-Christian, possess an equal natural right to hold, to utter, and by all orderly and peaceable means to propagate their private religious opinions; that they all possess an equal right not to be taxed, directly or indirectly, for the support of religious opinions they do not hold, of religious societies of which they are not voluntary members, or of religious services they do not personally approve; that they all possess an equal right to employ their time, and the whole of it, as they judge fit, just so long as they commit no positive trespass on the equal rights of others; that they all possess an equal right to enjoy for seven days of the week all public libraries, art-galleries, museums, parks, gardens, thoroughfares, or other institutions or facilities for the support of which they are taxed, and not to be debarred from such enjoyment on Sunday because a part of the people do not choose to avail themselves of these things on that day; in fine, that they all possess an equal right to live under a government which shall respect all men’s private religion, but favor no man’s.

IV.

Resolved, That morality is the supreme interest of civil society; that its foundations lie in the natural relations of man to man; that its great laws of right and wrong shine by their own light, and are only darkened when thrust under the bushel-basket of ecclesiastical patronage; that truthfulness, honor, integrity, courage, self-respect, patriotism, are natural and not theological virtues; and that such virtues as these, fostered by the establishment of a thorough civil service reform and the abolition of machine politics, are the sole fountain of that purified public morality for which every upright citizen longs.

V.

Resolved, That, so long as the Church insists on retaining its present political privileges, in violation of justice, liberty, and equal rights, it is guilty of oppression, sets an example of public unrighteousness, renders its social influence immoral to that extent, and thus helps to demoralize the community at large.

VI.

Resolved, That the principle of State Secularization means that the free State has its own sufficient basis in the laws and needs of human nature, totally independent of the Church,—that this basis is the social necessity of maintaining equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and educated intelligence in all the citizens,—and that this object is defeated by permitting the Church or any other organization to usurp its own authority in any degree.

VII.

Resolved, That we affirm the immense moral importance of the principle of State Secularization, and the moral obligation of all good citizens, irrespective of their religious creeds, to join heartily in the movement to carry it more consistently into practice.

VIII.

Resolved, That the State Secularization question can never be got out of politics until it is settled forever by being settled right.

IX.

Resolved, That the Liberal League movement has nothing whatever to do with the Christian or any other religion as such, either to favor or to oppose it; that it is directed simply against certain glaring political usurpations of the Church, certain actual and grievous interferences by it with the State; that the purpose of this movement is eminently positive, defensive, and constructive, not negative, aggressive, or destructive, since it only seeks to carry out more faithfully the principle of divorce between Church and State on which the Constitution was founded, and thus fulfil Washington's ideal of a purely secular State; that the Christian or anti-Christian character of this movement is solely a question of private interpretation, to be answered by each member of the Liberal League according to his own definition of Christianity; that all citizens who favor the total separation of Church and State are in good faith cordially invited to work with us; and that no Christian can accuse the Liberal League of being anti-Christian without thereby confessing that Christianity as he himself understands it condemns the separation of Church and State.

X.

Resolved, That the National Liberal League has nothing to do with existing political parties as such. We will neither coquet with them nor be used by them; we propose a great political object in which all good citizens of every party should unite; we will seek to further this object by no secrecy, underhandedness, or political trickery of any kind, but frankly appeal to public opinion and public support. Other things being equal, we will vote for such candidates as favor this object, and withhold our votes from such as oppose it; but we shall do this in the independent exercise of our individual judgments, and enter as a League into alliance with no political party.

XI.

Resolved, That universal education is the only safeguard of universal liberty; that no child in the republic should be permitted to grow up without at least a good common school education; that the public school system cannot be sustained in equal justice to all except by confining it strictly to secular instruction; that all religious exercises should be prohibited in the public schools; that the permission of such exercises in them is a perversion of public funds raised for educational purposes to the purposes of religious propagandism; and that to allow in these schools the present practice of Bible-reading, prayer, and singing of religious hymns, or the use of text-books which are so written as to inculcate religious dogmas of any kind, is a great moral wrong to large classes of citizens.

XII.

Resolved, That the non-committal Constitutional Amendment, proposed in Congress by the Hon. James G. Blaine and reserved for action until next winter, which simply provides that no public lands or public funds devoted to school purposes shall "ever be under the control of any religious sect," or "be divided among religious sects or denominations," will, if adopted, still leave the Protestant sects undisturbed in their present collective mastery over the public school system, and therefore ought not to be adopted, unless so amended as to prevent any sect or number of sects from exercising control over the public schools.

XIII.

Resolved, That the Bible, being regarded as a book of sacred character and of religious authority by only a part of the people, is to all intents and purposes a sectarian book; and we protest against the permission of its use in the public schools on the pretence of its being a non-sectarian book, as a manifest evasion of the truth, and a wilful disregard of the equal religious rights of the people.

XIV.

Resolved, That in no flippant or defiant spirit, but rather with a deep desire that the national government should be just to the whole people, we protest against the recent proclamation of President Grant, inviting the people to celebrate the Fourth of July by religious observances. We deny emphatically the right of the President to issue a civil proclamation of any religious fast or festival, to assume as President a strictly ecclesiastical function, to entangle the State with the Church by interfering with the people's free control of their own religious observances, and to cast the stigma of governmental disapproval on those citizens who do not choose to comply with this unwarranted, officious, and impertinent invitation. We declare the manifestly increasing disposition of the government to meddle in matters of religion, and to yield to the instigation of ambitious sectaries who take this method of establishing their own civil supremacy, to be a tendency of vast peril to the perpetuation of religious liberty. We remind President Grant of the nobler example of his great predecessor in office, Thomas Jefferson, who, according to the historian, "refused to appoint days of fasting or thanksgiving, on the ground that to do so would be indirectly to assume an authority over religious exercises which the Constitution has expressly forbidden. A recommendation from the Chief Magistrate, he thought, would carry with it so much authority that any person or sect disregarding it would suffer some degree of odium." And we pointedly remind President Grant of his own advice to the people last September at Des Moines, substantially reiterated in December in his Annual Message to Congress, but now so glaringly disregarded by himself—"KEEP THE CHURCH AND THE STATE FOREVER SEPARATE."

XV.

Resolved, That we would most scrupulously respect the right of church-goers to enjoy their Sunday worship unmolested and undisturbed; and we ask them to respect the equal right of those who do not choose to join them to enjoy their own Sundays in equal freedom.

XVI.

Resolved, That the closing of the International Exhibition on Sundays is a fresh usurpation of political power by the Church,—a gross infringement of the equal religious rights and liberties of the people, who have all been taxed by public appropriations for the Exhibition,—a bitter and grievous wrong to the poor and laboring classes, who are thus in great measure debarred from enjoying precious advantages which they of all classes have the best right and the most need to enjoy,—and a monstrous denial of the religious equality of all citizens who disbelieve in the alleged sacred character of Sunday.

XVII.

Resolved, That F. E. Abbott, B. F. Underwood, George W. Jullian, D. Y. Kilgore, James McArthur, W. J. Potter, R. P. Hallowell, Mrs. Dr. Pratt, and Mrs. Kilgore, are hereby appointed a committee to attend the next meeting of the United States Centennial Commission on Wednesday, July 5, to present the protest of the National Liberal League against the closing of the International Exhibition on Sundays.

XVIII.

Resolved, That the conversion of the United States government into a Missionary Society by the present administration, which has made it an avowed object to "Christianize the Indians," and carries it out by employing sectarian missionaries as paid officials of the government, is another in the long and growing list of encroachments on the principle of secular government.

XIX.

WHEREAS, The United States statutes relating to the Treasury Department, Section 3517, expressly provide that—"Upon the coins there shall be the following devices and legends: upon one side there shall be an impression emblematic of liberty, with an inscription of the word 'Liberty,' and the year of the coinage, and upon the reverse shall be the figure or representation of an eagle, with the inscription 'United States of America' and 'E Pluribus Unum,' and a designation of the value of the coin;" and

WHEREAS, The Director of the Mint, without authority of law and on his own motion alone, has seen fit to inscribe on several of the coins, particularly on the new silver quarter-dollars and half-dollars, the legend "In God we trust;" therefore

Resolved, That the Director of the Mint deserves the severe censure of the people and dismissal from his office for this great abuse of the trust reposed in him.

Resolved, That placing such an inscription on the national coinage is analogous to striking the stars from the national flag and inserting the cross in their stead, or throwing down the statue of Liberty from the dome of the national Capitol and setting up that of the Virgin Mary in its place; and that such cunning, stealthy, and dangerous encroachments of the sectarian spirit on the secular character of the government should call forth the loud and swift rebuke of an outraged people.

XX.

Resolved, That we hereby appeal to the country for funds to carry on the vitally important work for which we have organized; that we believe there is abundant wealth and abundant enthusiasm ready to aid us, just as soon as our objects are thoroughly understood and widely known; and that we rely confidently on the generosity of the patriotic public not to permit this great cause to languish for want of the all-essential means.

XXI.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns, and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

XXII.

Resolved, That the Directors are instructed to ascertain, if possible, by direct inquiry, whether the Presidential candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties are in favor of strictly secular government and of the special measures we advocate; and to communicate the result to the public.

XXIII.

Resolved, That the resolutions of sympathy with this movement presented by Professor Loos on behalf of the German "Union of Radicals" are received with pleasure and respect; and that, while the National Liberal League expresses no collective opinion on the points inquired about, we hold ourselves individually free to favor or to oppose any measures not included in the specified objects which we have organized to accomplish.

XXIV.

Resolved, That this League receives from the Michigan State Association of Spiritualists its able and earnest statement of the objects of the National Liberal League, and tenders thanks for its assurance of co-operation in the promotion of these objects.

XXV.

Resolved, That, recognizing the obvious fact that the support of the objects of the National Liberal League must depend chiefly upon the strength of public sentiment in their favor, we hereby tender our thanks to those brave journals which now, in the comparative infancy of our movement, are giving it their encouragement and influence on account of its intrinsic excellence.

XXVI.

Resolved, That we hereby tender our thanks to the publisher and editor of the Boston Investigator for their brave and earnest advocacy of the secularization of the government, in past years when the Liberal League was unknown and when their efforts were but poorly appreciated.

XXVII.

Resolved, That we regard the bust of Thomas Paine now on our platform, executed in marble by Sidney H. Morse, for presentation to the city of Philadelphia, and designed for permanent preservation in Independence Hall, as a noble and fit testimonial to his heroic and patriotic public career.

XXVIII.

Resolved, That our thanks are due, and are hereby tendered, to Mr. and Mrs. Kilgore for their arduous and efficient labors in behalf of the National Liberal League.

XXIX.

WHEREAS, The Evangelical Alliance has presented to the world, as the platform of a possible cooperative unity among elements characterized by diversity, the following epitome of thought: In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity; therefore,

Resolved, That we adopt and promulgate as the true scientific basis of organization the following motto or epitomized statement: In things demonstrated and certain, unity; in whatsoever can be doubted, free diversity; in all things, charity.

XXX.

Resolved, That this League, while it recognizes the great importance and the absolute necessity of guarding by proper legislation against obscene and indecent publications, whatever sect, party, order, or class such publications claim to favor, it disapproves and protests against all laws which, by reason of indefiniteness or ambiguity, shall permit the prosecution and punishment of honest and conscientious men for presenting to the public what they deem essential to the public welfare, when the views thus presented do not violate in thought or language the acknowledged rules of decency; and that we demand that all laws against obscenity and indecency shall be so clear and explicit that none but actual offenders against the recognized principles of purity shall be liable to suffer therefrom.

Resolved, That we cannot but regard the appointment and authorization by the government of a single individual to inspect our mails, with power to exclude thereupon whatever he deems objectionable, as a delegation of authority dangerous to public and personal liberty, and utterly inconsistent with the genius of free institutions.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

"WHEN IN THE COURSE OF HUMAN EVENTS."

A CENTENNIAL PRAYER.

O thou, beneath whose valiant hand
The conquest spreads from land to land,
Till earth's extremest ends record
Thy victory and own thee lord;
Thou in whose image gods were fair,
To thee, O man, I raise my prayer!

A hundred years of eager toil
Have turned our wheels and tilled our soil
Since, faithful to their proud decree,
Our fathers made us one and free,
And now we bid the world behold
Our wealth increased a hundredfold.

May memory of the sterner days
When virtue took the place and praise,
Make clear the truth that wealth, apart,
But swells the purse to shrink the heart;
And leave us like our fathers, strong
To love the right and hate the wrong.

While science with her dawning light
Makes dim the guiding star of night,
And baffled by the break of day
Bewildered millions seek the way,
O keep us on the course begun,
And haste the rising of the sun!

Build us an altar, rock on rock,
Whose time-defying strength shall mock
The winds and floods of doubt, till all
Have spent their weary force and fall:
An altar where the true may bring
The true heart's wealth in offering.

Beneath a single flag unite
The scattered bands that waste their might Against the leagued hosts of vice,
In unavailing sacrifice:
"And, cast in some" more human "mould,
Let the new cycle shame the old!"

BELLEMOSE.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 8.

A. C. Douthitt, $5; E. B. Chace, $3.20; Mrs. W. A. Stebbins, $3; Samuel Cole, $3; J. H. Holley, $3; J. F. Locke, $1.50; A. H. Underwood, $1.50; M. Shove, $3.20; G. A. Denison, $3; J. G. Jenkins, $1.25; David Felmley, 85 cents; J. O. Barrett, $1.50; Cash, 25 cents; J. McArthur, $5; John Logan, $4.04; N. P. Ames, $3.20; F. A. Maxse, $14.85; H. McNair, $2.25; J. E. Oliver, $10; T. Rush, 85 cents; W. A. Butler, $2; Mrs. C. R. Abbot, $3.50; S. Harrington, $3.20; E. S. Barker, $3.20; W. Carpenter, $3.10; D. R. Lamson, $2.

* John G. Whittier, "Centennial Hymn."

The Index.

BOSTON, JULY 13, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CENNEY, REV. CHARLES
VOYSEY (England), GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England),
DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

July 6. Already acknowledged	$1398.75
" 11. Received of Mrs. B. Iveson, Lynn, Mass.	2.00
" 11. " Julia Iveson, " "	2.00
" 11. " Isabella Iveson, " "	2.00
" 11. " G. B. Stebbins, Detroit	1.00
" 11. " " Shelby, O.	.50
" 11. " W. Boynton, N. Ipswich, N.H.	1.00
" 11. " F. A. Day, Castana, Iowa	5.00
" 11. " W. E. Darling, Amesbury, Mass.	2.00
" 11. " J. Churchill, Champlain, N.Y.	2.00
" 11. " J. Hoskin, Rochester, N.Y.	1.00
" 11. " J. Demarest, Lafayette, N.J.	2.00
" 11. " B. Gardner, Florence, Mass.	.50
" 11. " H. B. Mason, Lockport	1.00
" 11. " W. F. Nick, Erie, Pa.	1.00
" 11. " G. Chamberlain, Long Ridge, Ct.	5.00
" 11. " J. DeGodt, Greenville, Del.	.50
" 11. " C. W. Newton, Castleton, Ill.	1.00
" 11. " W. H. Sherman, Milwaukee	2.00
" 11. " J. S. Lyon, Springfield, Mo.	.25
" 11. " (?) New York City	2.00
" 11. " Mrs. L. C. Smith, Rochester, N.Y.	.25
" 11. " T. Marshall, Economy, Ind.	2.50
" 11. " G. Ealand, Shelby, O.	.50
" 11. " G. W. Smith, Shelby, O.	.50
" 11. " G. Wadsworth, Dexter, Me.	1.00
" 11. " A. W. Cadman, Jacksonville, Ill.	1.00
" 11. " W. Bray, Lambertville, N. J.	1.00
" 11. " G. M. Murray, Jersey City, N.J.	2.00
" 11. " J. D. Atkins, Florence, Mass.	2.00
" 11. " Mary Osborn, Boston	3.00
" 11. " Thos. Knight, Ceresco, Mich.	.50
" 11. " Isaac Liebmann, Atlanta, Ga.	1.00
" 11. " R. S. Barker, Newport, R. I.	5.00
" 11. " C. Collins, Northumberland, Pa.	1.00
" 11. " Dr. S. M. Whistler, Harrisburg, Pa.	1.00
" 11. " D. C. Hauxhurst, Battle Creek, Mich.	1.00
" 11. " Julia M. Smith, " "	.50
" 11. " C. Ford, " "	.50
" 11. " C. Merritt, " "	.50
" 11. " Julia E. Revere, " "	1.00
" 11. " Josephine F. Marsh, " "	1.00
" 11. " Mrs. S. M. Rockwell, " "	1.00
" 11. " Julia A. Pierce, " "	.50
" 11. " W. Merritt, " "	1.00
" 11. " Mrs. H. H. Whitney, " "	.50
" 11. " Mrs. M. C. Harper, " "	.50
" 11. " Hattie Snow, " "	.50
" 11. " Dr. M. H. Garcia, " "	.50
" 11. " E. H. Perry, " "	.50
" 11. " Grace E. Packer, " "	.50
" 11. " T. B. Skinner, " "	1.00
" 11. " M. Vesale, " "	1.00
" 11. " Henry Fiegl, New York City	2.00
" 11. " John C. Haynes, Boston	5.00
" 11. " Job Angell, Providence	1.00
" 11. " Wm. Rotch, Fall River, Mass.	5.00
" 11. " Sec'd Lib. League, Milwaukee	12.20
" 11. " Harry Hoover, Clearfield, Pa.	5.00
" 11. " T. Davis, Indianapolis	5.00
" 11. " Dr. A. Hühne, Rondout, N. Y.	3.00
" 11. " G. Thorn, Clearfield, Pa.	2.50
" 11. " O. Ditson & Co., Boston	5.00
" 11. " J. B. Walters, Clearfield, Pa.	5.00
" 11. " A. L. Monroe, Rockford, Ill.	2.00
" 11. " A. H. Brockway, Brooklyn	1.00
" 11. " Henry Gersom, Atlanta, Ga.	1.00

$1507.95

DAMON Y. KILGORE, Acting Treasurer.
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

THE "THOUSAND DOLLAR FUND."

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTIONS OF $100 EACH FOR THE CENTENNIAL CONGRESS OF LIBERALS.

April 15. A Friend in Boston (paid)	$100.00
April 28. Miss Marian Hovey, Boston (paid)	100.00
April 17. Wm. H. Sayward, Dorchester (paid)	$25
May 3. Free Lecture Ass'n, New Haven	$75
May 8. Nath. O. Nash, Boston (paid)	100.00
May 13. Samuel L. Hull, Florence, Mass. (paid)	100.00

$500.00

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, in trust.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

Acknowledged July 6.	$760.33
Preston Day, Castana, Iowa	1.80
W. E. Darling, Amesbury, Mass.	2.00
C. N. Norris, Yonkers, N.Y.	2.00
Benjamin Breed, Lynn, Mass.	1.00
Mary Osborn, Boston	3.00
Thomas Marshall, Economy, Ind.	2.50
Mrs. E. Crosby, Portage City, Wis.	1.00
A. M. Lee, New York City	2.00
John Scott, Dighton, Mass.	2.00
Wm. N. Allen, Philadelphia	5.00
Friends at Congress of Liberals	45.50
James N. Clark, East Somerville, Mass.	3.00

$824.33

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

THE LISTS of subscriptions acknowledged this week may not be quite complete, but Mr. Kilgore writes: "Tell the donors they will get credit for all sums received either by Mrs. K. or me."

A FEW applications for membership in the Centennial Congress of Liberals have been received, dated after the adjournment of the convention. We are sorry that we cannot in such cases return the certificate of membership, as the Congress is no longer in existence.

POOR GENERAL CUSTER and his gallant command have fallen victims to the Indians, who have bloodily revenged the nation's violation of their treaty rights. The initial wrong was ours, in allowing the invasion of the Black Hills by government troops and greedy gold-hunters.

A. GAYLORD SPALDING, of Anoka, Minnesota, sends a petition for the opening of the Centennial Exhibition on Sundays, signed by twenty-four citizens of that State. We are sorry to say that it is now of no use: the United States Centennial Commission have refused to open the doors to the people.

A DISTINGUISHED liberal of Rhode Island has just conferred upon us the degree of "that fiery Ignatius Loyola of religious radicalism, Francis E. Abbot." In grateful appreciation of this compliment to our Jesuitical proclivities, we issue in return an INDEX diploma to that moderate Erasmus of the Liberal League movement, Thomas W. Higginson.

TWO NEW Liberal Leagues are reported to us. One is at Eureka, Michigan, with J. W. Page as President and Mrs. J. E. Sevy as Secretary. The other is at Oil City, Pennsylvania,—Henry McVeagh being President, James Robertson Secretary, and Walter Stevenson, James Jack, James Moore, D. W. McLean, and Mrs. William Jack delegates to the Congress of Liberals.

THE BEST and most spirited convention of woman-suffragists we ever attended was that of the National Woman Suffrage Association at Philadelphia, on the Fourth of July, 1876. Mrs. Mott, Mrs. Stanton, Mrs. Lockwood, Mrs. Spencer, Miss Cozzens, and a New York lady whose name we did not catch, all made excellent speeches; but Miss Anthony carried off the palm by her "rebellious" speech, giving an account of her judicial battle with Judge Hunt and her audacious presentation of the "Declaration of Rights" in Independence Hall on that very morning, in defiance of the authorities of the occasion. It was the "pluckiest" address we ever listened to. Miss Anthony set an example of energy and determination worthy of all imitation by the Liberal League.

MR. MORSE addresses to us the following note: "Dear Mr. Abbot,—You suggest in THE INDEX of June 22 that the remaining subscriptions to the Paine bust be sent directly to me, with the view, I suppose, to facilitate their speedier public acknowledgment. I shall be absent from home so much during the summer months, however, that it will be much more to my convenience if subscribers will continue to send their contributions to Mrs. Kilgore at Philadelphia. Yours, S. H. MORSE." It is to be hoped that this enterprise will not be allowed to drag along all summer, as if the liberals were really indifferent to its success. The sneers of the Orthodox will be as thick as flies in August, if the Paine bust is not soon paid for. Though not quite completed, it was exhibited on the platform at Concert Hall, and elicited a resolution of hearty approval from the Congress, together with a contribution of money on the spot. Mr. Morse expects to finish it in a few days, but it cannot be presented to the city of Philadelphia till the subscription is closed up and the marble pedestal purchased. Will not some one or more liberals possessed of means contribute promptly the amount (we believe it is not over three hundred dollars) which is needed to complete the subscription?

IN THE REPORT of the Executive Committee of the American Unitarian Association, read at the recent annual meeting of that body, the following passage occurs: "Rev. Mr. Bond, at Los Pinos, and Rev. Mr. Danforth, at White River Junction, as agents among the Ute Indians, are doing a good work. Nominated by us, their salary is paid by the government. [The italics are ours.] Although this mission promises no brilliant result, what nobler work can we do than to give to the Indian a Christian civilization?" What, indeed? The next step will be to nominate ministers to Unitarian pulpits at the East, and get the government to pay their salaries too. The Methodists and Unitarians are equally pleased at getting the government to pay the salaries of their own missionaries. The other Protestant sects and the Roman Catholics will want their share before long, and we shall have the Church fairly established in the United States as a national institution. And there are self-supposed liberals who see no evil in all this, but think it preposterous to complain of a general tendency so fatal to secular government! It is fortunate for them that others are less sleepy and less disposed to submit slavishly to such encroachments on the rights of the people.

THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

The Centennial Congress of Liberals was a wonderful, a dazzling success. It will mark an epoch in the history of the nation. It accomplished more than we dared to believe was really possible; it avoided perils which we knew to be imminent and menacing. It was the beginning of a definite movement, on a scale of as yet unsuspected vastness, for an object identical with the whole future welfare of this great republic. If ever we exulted over an event pregnant with blessing to mankind, it was when the National Liberal League, on the Fourth of July, 1876, completed the noble record of its first convention. The infant Hercules is born at last.

Let us not be misunderstood. We do not measure the success of the Congress by numbers. If that were the proper test, its success must be considered moderate. We did not anticipate a large local audience, nor was it indeed as large as we hoped to see. But the heat of the Philadelphia sun was tropical in its fierce intensity; the streets were thronged with eager swarms; the city was the focus of a nation's jubilation over the crowning of its first marvellous century; processions with bands of music paraded before the doors of Concert Hall, deafening the ears of the listeners and drowning the voices of the speakers, who strove in vain to make themselves heard even a few feet from the stage; the endless rumbling of cart-wheels and of ever-passing horse-cars filled with uproar what might have been the quiet intervals; the physical discomfort of the heat and noise was almost unendurable. Yet three hundred and fifty were present on Saturday, and between four and five hundred on Sunday; and no one on the spot could wonder that, at such a time, the general attractions of the Centennial City and the mighty magnet of the International Exhibition drew away many even of the delegates of the Congress themselves. The only wonder was that so many remained to transact the business of the convention.

One hundred and sixty-seven regularly accredited members, from all parts of the country, reported themselves to the officers, and are now enrolled as charter-members of the National Liberal League. The Liberal Leagues of Clearfield County, Pa., San Francisco, Cal., New York, N. Y., Oil City, Pa., Milwaukee, Wis. (First Liberal League), St. Joseph, Mo., Philadelphia, Pa., and Boston, Mass., were represented; as were also the "Freie Gemeinden" of Philadelphia, Washington, and Milwaukee, the "Radical Democracy" of Milwaukee, the "Union of German Radicals," the "Investigator Society" of Boston, and the "First Congregation of the Religion of Humanity" of New York. These fifteen organizations were represented by thirty-seven delegates; the rest were individual members from Iowa, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Connecticut, Arkansas, New Jersey, Georgia, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Washington Territory, Missouri, California, Kansas, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas, Minnesota, Canada East, and Germany. That the Congress of Liberals fairly represented the nation, and was therefore successful in this very important respect, is self-evident. Considering, moreover, that all the members were obliged to defray their own heavy expenses, notwithstanding these hard times, it is clear that one hundred and sixty-seven representatives of the (about) eight hundred persons who signed the applications for certificates of membership were a very creditable proportion of the whole number; and this fact shows how deep an interest in the Congress has been taken all over the country.

But the feature of the Congress which, we confess, fairly delighted us and more than compensated for the enormous labor, anxiety, and exhaustion of the long preliminary preparation, was far more important than this merely superficial success. We refer to the spirit evinced by these men and women in their collective action. Notwithstanding a few trivial and transient interruptions of the prevailing harmony of the occasion, we venture to say that no convention was ever held in which good sense, good feeling, good purpose, and good action were more conspicuous. The members had come together with so evident a determination to accomplish the main objects of the Congress, that it was enough simply to explain the true intent and bearing of the plans submitted in order to sweep away all captious objections. They were clear-headed, independent, wise, generous, appreciative, sympathetic, and unmistakably in earnest. Depend upon it, a new day is dawning for American liberalism. The National Liberal League, born in the national climacteric of grand memories and heroic traditions, has caught the spirit of the elder time; it will wear the crown of its glorious birth-hour as not unworthy to inherit such a proud distinction; it will win the young, the brave, the ardent, the unselfish, to its noblest of all causes, and offer a field for every quality that marks the hero of thought and of action. No longer "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought," but putting ideas into deeds, liberalism is already beginning to make the dry bones rattle; and more and more, as the years roll by, will it give scope and career to those who burn to do some hero-work for liberty before they die. The National Liberal League calls for volunteers to take up the task of organizing the army of freedom; it calls upon those who have at once a full purse and a full soul to furnish the sinews of war; and this, not to subdue, but to free—not to conquer the Church, but to emancipate the State. A pledge of a mighty future was given in the promptness, the earnestness, the practical wisdom and intrepid spirit of the Congress of Liberals: the National Liberal League into which it resolved itself will be heard from in due time, if the liberals of the country are not hopelessly steeped in apathy and sluggishness.

We took no notes of the proceedings, being far too busy for that; nor do we design to make any formal report of the essays, the speeches, the discussions, etc., in THE INDEX. The pamphlet report of the Congress, which will be published in due time (probably not for two or three months), will supply these details. But enough is published in THE INDEX this week to show the general results of the convention. The Constitution of the National Liberal League explains very fully the character of the organization, which is designed to be a practical, efficient, working body, for the execution of definite purposes. The first and most important of these is the adoption of a "Religious Freedom Amendment" to the United States Constitution; and the grounds and reasons of this measure are set forth at length in the "Patriotic Address." Other important results of the Congress were the series of resolutions debated, amended, and adopted on Monday and Tuesday, July 3 and 4.

But the list of Vice-Presidents of the National Liberal League, together with the extracts from letters which follow, constitute together an argument of irresistible force in favor of the League; and it is an argument which will compel the public to listen respectfully to what the League has to say. When such men as these declare themselves in favor of any liberal measure in terms so emphatic and strong, none but bigots will oppose and none but the malicious will sneer. No more cogent demonstration of the wisdom and necessity of the Liberal League movement is possible than is contained in that list of names and the letters that back it up, which we commend to the close attention of friend and foe alike. Politicians will hate and fear this movement; statesmen will cordially approve it. The secular press will ignore it as long as possible, and then disagree touching its merits; the religious press and the pulpit will before long let loose upon it their bitterest denunciations. But the people, however violent may be the preliminary contention, will in the end set the seal of their approval on the "Religious Freedom Amendment," and make it a part of the national Constitution. Not until then will this question of State Secularization be settled; but when it is once settled, the whole nation, bigots alone excepted, will unite to bless the National Liberal League.

THE FIRST BATTLE-FIELD.

One of the resolutions adopted by the National Liberal League on July 3 appointed a committee of nine to present in person to the United States Centennial Commission, who were announced to hold a meeting on July 5 in their building on the Exhibition grounds at Philadelphia, the protest of the League against the continued closing of the Exhibition on Sundays. The committee met immediately after the final adjournment of the League on the Fourth of July, and appointed Messrs. Abbot and Potter to draw up a protest and present it with suitable remarks on behalf of the committee. This protest (which will be found on the next column of this issue) was submitted to the committee on the following day at the "Headquarters of the Press" building, approved, and signed by all the members of the committee then present. The committee then proceeded to call on General Hawley, President of the Commission, to inquire how and when their protest would be received. General Hawley, after some consultation, requested the committee to return at 2 P.M., on the same day, to learn the decision of the Commission respecting its reception.

Punctually appearing at the appointed time, the committee were informed by General Hawley's secretary that they were to be received by the Commission at 2 P.M. of the following day, July 6. This postponement was extremely inconvenient, as several members of the committee desired to leave Philadelphia that night. A note was then sent to General Hawley, requesting leave for this reason to present the protest at once. The General soon appeared and announced that the Commission had adjourned for the day. Nothing was left but to submit to the delay.

Accordingly, on July 6, those of the committee who could remain reassembled at the appointed hour, and were admitted to the Commission's room. Hon. Geo. W. Biddle, of Philadelphia, was first heard on behalf of an immense petition, signed by some 60,000 workmen of Philadelphia, for the opening of the Exhibition on Sundays at noon; and strong appeals in support of it were also made by Messrs. Blankenburg and Wilbur. We were then called upon to present the petition of the National Liberal League, and Mr. Potter was also heard in support of it. Mr. Isaac C. Davidson then presented another petition signed by 1200 workmen for the same object.

Rev. T. P. Stevenson, editor of the Christian Statesman, followed in a speech against opening the Exhibition on Sunday. He attempted to create odium against the National Liberal League by pulling out a copy of THE INDEX, and reading the "Demands of Liberalism," as the platform of the League, although they had not been adopted by it or even submitted to it at all in that form; and he omitted parts of the "Demands," especially that portion of the eighth "Demand" which declares that "all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty." The effect of this omission was to convey the intimation that the National Liberal League is opposed to morality altogether!

The gross injustice of this garbled reading (which we are disposed to consider as not really intended, for we have a sincere respect for Mr. Stevenson's character as a man) made the committee desire that a correction should be made. So we addressed a note to General Hawley, requesting leave to make it. Leave being granted, we said that the "Demands of Liberalism" were not the platform of the National Liberal League, which had never acted on them in that form, but merely our individual platform in the paper we edited; and that Mr. Stevenson omitted parts in the reading which, if read, would have given a very different tenor to the whole. The effect of this statement was marked. But the mind of the Commission was already made up; and next day, as we learn, they voted to adhere to their previous vote to close the doors on Sundays.

Thus for the first time the National Reform Association (the Christian Amendment party) and the National Liberal League were brought directly face to face. It was a defeat for the latter; but it was a defeat which, like that at Bunker Hill, is a victory in disguise. The Church, by trampling insolently on the rights of the whole people and especially by scorning the plea of the working-men for simple justice, is arraying against itself the great bulk of the people and paving the way for its own crushing overthrow. But its power is immense to-day, and will override liberty, justice, and equal rights until the people have learned the lesson of organization thoroughly. The National Liberal League is the only means by which these supreme interests of humanity can be protected; and such defeats as this will soon teach the people that they must remain slaves of the churches, unless they organize in Liberal Leagues all over the land for the defence of their own freedom against the tyrant.

PROTEST

OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE AGAINST CLOSING THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION ON SUNDAYS, PRESENTED AT THE MEETING OF THE UNITED STATES CENTENNIAL COMMISSION, ON THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 6, 1876.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4, 1876.

TO THE PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS OF THE CENTENNIAL COMMISSION:

Gentlemen,—At one of the sessions of the National Liberal League, just organized at Concert Hall in this city, a committee, consisting of F. E. Abbot, B. F. Underwood, George W. Julian, D. Y. Kilgore, James McArthur, William J. Potter, R. P. Halliwell, Mrs. Dr. Pratt, and Mrs. Kilgore, was appointed and instructed to present to your honorable body the protest of the League against the closing of the International Exhibition on Sunday, together with a list of the officers and members.

In obedience to these instructions, the undersigned members of this Committee respectfully present the following, as the leading reasons of this protest:—

1. The Exhibition is a National affair, sustained in large measure by the impartial taxation of the whole American people, without the least regard to their religious beliefs; and the equal rights of the whole people ought to be scrupulously protected by the officers to whom its management is intrusted. But it is a denial and infraction of their equal religious rights to exclude the whole people from the Exhibition on Sundays, merely because a part of the people believe Sunday to be a holy day. Such a belief justifies those who hold it in staying away from the Exhibition on Sundays; but it does not justify them in keeping others away from it. The Church has no right, under the Constitution, thus to impose any part of its creed on the State, or to claim for those who believe it any temporal advantage over those who disbelieve it.

2. The closing of the Exhibition on Sundays is a grievous practical wrong against the working classes, who especially need and would prize the educational influences offered in this magnificent display of the products of all countries, but who are now debarred from visiting it on the day when it is most convenient for them to do so, and who must in consequence either keep away altogether, or visit it on a day when they must suffer an additional tax by the loss of their daily wages. The right of the working-man in this country to visit the Exposition on Sundays is certainly as good as that of the Emperor of Brazil and his attendants, for whose convenience, it is reported, the Sunday restriction has been removed and the alleged sacredness of the day violated.

Respectfully yours,

F. E. ABBOT.
B. F. UNDERWOOD.
GEORGE W. JULIAN.
DAMON Y. KILGORE.
JAMES MCARTHUR.
WILLIAM J. POTTER.
RICHARD P. HALLIWELL.
MARY PRATT, M. D.
CARRIE B. KILGORE.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

Mr. Hayes, in his letter of acceptance, speaks first of civil service reform as the question of "paramount interest," and shows that he fully and clearly apprehends the nature of the reform demanded. He pledges himself, if elected, to do all in his power to overthrow the doctrine, "to the victors belong the spoils." He would remove the appointing power from the control of members of Congress; would make tenure of office to depend upon personal character and the performance of duties; would return, therefore, to the principles and practices of the founders of the government; recognizes the necessity of making civil service reform "thorough, radical, and complete"; and, that he may have no temptation to use executive patronage to his own advantage, states, somewhat needlessly we think, his "inflexible purpose, if elected, not to be a candidate for election to a second term." With reference to the currency, he regards "all the laws of the United States relating to the payment of the public indebtedness, the legal tender notes included, as constituting a pledge and moral obligation of the government which must in good faith be kept." He gives a cordial approval to the resolution upon the public school system; declares that what the South most needs is peace, and that peace depends upon the supremacy of the law; and assures his "countrymen of the Southern States" that his administration will be one which will "regard and cherish the interests of the white and of the colored people, both and equally, and which will put forth its best efforts in behalf of a civil policy which will wipe out forever the distinction between the North and South in our common country." It would be difficult for any one, aside from those who are wedded to our present corrupt system of civil administration, to find any fault with the tone or the statements of Mr. Hayes' letter, and it will undoubtedly do a great deal toward awakening the interest of reformers in his favor, and restoring his chances of success, so much impaired by Republican folly and corruption.

On the 25th of June Gen. Custer, with five companies of his own regiment, attacked a large Indian village on the Big Horn branch of the Yellowstone River in Montana, but being surrounded by overpowering numbers, was killed, together with every officer and soldier of his immediate command, numbering over three hundred. Major Reno, who had also attacked the same Indians with the remaining companies of the regiment and been repulsed, was able, fortunately, to entrench himself upon a bluff, and after constant fighting for two days and a night, was saved from Custer's fate by the arrival of Gen. Terry. So completely was Reno surrounded that although Custer and his five companies had been killed within a few miles of him, he knew nothing of their fate until after Terry's arrival. Gen. Custer's name had become well-known throughout the country, partly because of his services during our civil war, more recently through his leadership of the Black Hills expedition, and still more recently by his appearance before an investigating committee at Washington, where his outspoken testimony concerning the corruptions existing in connection with post-traderships is said to have given serious offence to the President. His "Life on the Plains," also, and his "War Memoirs," now running in the Galaxy, had made his name familiar in literary circles, and gave promise

* Mr. Julian authorizes the addition of his name to this protest, though he was not present at the time to sign it.

(he was only thirty-seven years of age) of a good degree of literary success in the future. It is a singular coincidence, by the way, that his last paper in the Galaxy is entitled, "Battling with the Sioux on the Yellowstone."

Custer's sad fate—which for his family is made extremely sad by the death of two of his brothers, a brother-in-law and a nephew, all of whom were with him—promises to give renewed interest to the present difference between the Senate and House of Representatives concerning the transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department. The Indian Bureau cannot get along now without the assistance of the army, as is shown by the fact that General Terry was sent upon his expedition, at the request of the Interior Department, to punish the Indians for leaving their reservation, and to compel them to return thereto. A transfer of the Indian Bureau to the care of army officers would not mean an exterminating war waged against the Indians, as some sentimentalists seem to imagine, but stricter accountability on the part of those having the Indians in charge, and, consequently, less cheating of the Indian, less dissatisfaction on his part, and less frequent occasion to use the army to "punish" him. At present we go through the farce of making a formal treaty with an Indian chief, as though he were the accredited representative of a civilized and sovereign power, and shortly after we treat him as pauper, or a child, or an escaped malefactor, and expect the wretched savage to behave himself with all the docility of "Mary's little lamb," notwithstanding our inconsistencies. Our Indian policy—be it dignified as "peace" or "Quaker"—is a miserable sham, which has already cost unnecessary millions of money, and far too many brave men's lives.

The various celebrations of our Centennial Anniversary seem to have been conducted throughout the country with satisfactory success, and, on the whole, with much better taste than our usual Fourth of July celebrations would have led one to expect. That at Philadelphia seems to have been carried on with wonderful enthusiasm, and the illuminations and processions in New York and elsewhere were exceedingly brilliant. The orations, also, so far as we have been able to look them over, compare favorably with those delivered in previous years. It is to be regretted that the Centennial Commissioners did not add to the effect of the celebration at Philadelphia by ordering the doors of the Exhibition to be thrown open to the people on Sundays, but unfortunately they decided, by a vote of 29 to 10, taken last week, to keep the doors closed on that day.—General Hawley going to the extent of declaring that he would not dare to vote in any other way. The vote is an unfortunate one from many points of view, and is another evidence of the provincialism of the American mind, a provincialism which is due to more causes than we have space at present to specify, and which time and added knowledge will enable us to outgrow. It is to be hoped that the voyage to Europe, and to Asia also, may yet be greatly shortened and cheapened, and that many of our good and pious church-people may thus have an opportunity to discover that there are still a few things in which America may profitably take a few lessons from the Old World.

The proceedings attending the National Anniversary have naturally overshadowed somewhat the effect of the other proceedings which ordinarily would be of considerable interest. The National Woman's Suffrage Association, for instance, has held a convention in Philadelphia for the purpose, we believe, of promulgating a "declaration of independence" for women; and the American Woman's Suffrage Association has also held a convention in the same place in order to commemorate an anniversary of the voting of women in the Province of New Jersey. We regret that we have not seen any full report of either of these conventions. The Convention of Liberal Leagues is reported to our readers in full in other columns. The Germans of Philadelphia unveiled on the Fourth of July, in Fairmount Park, a monument to Humboldt; and in this connection, also, may be mentioned the fact that both Houses of Congress have voted unanimously to complete the Washington Monument, and have appropriated $100,000 for that purpose.

The House, we are sorry to state, has adopted the majority report of the Committee on the Geneva Award. The dishonesty of this report we have previously explained, and are pained to be obliged to add to the roll of dishonor, that is, to the list of those who have actively supported the accepted bill, the names of Mr. Hale, of Maine, and, most surprising of all, Mr. Seelye, of Massachusetts. Mr. Seelye is a professor in and may yet be president of Amherst College; he is also a Doctor of Divinity, and many people have entertained great hopes with regard to his congressional career. We cannot impute to him any intentional dishonesty in this matter, nor can we attribute to him the damn-the-odds spirit of Butler or Frye. We can only regret, therefore, the distressing muddle into which he has permitted himself to get. That Professor Seelye, however good his impulses, is not a man of very clear perceptions, has been abundantly demonstrated heretofore—in his advocacy, for instance, of the God-in-the-Constitution Amendment, and in his speech on the transfer of the Indian Bureau,—but we never expected, with reference to a matter which involves only the plainest principles of morality, to find him numbered with the cheats and the scalawags.

Mr. Bristow has been before the "whiskey" Committee which has required him to give an account of the part borne by the President in the prosecution of the whiskey-rings. Mr. Bristow has declined to answer the questions of the Committee on the ground that conversations between the President and a Cabinet officer are matters of highest privilege, and cannot be divulged on the call of an investigating committee. If the Committee carry the matter into the House, the week is likely to witness a lively debate in Washington. Apart from this question between Mr. Bristow and the Committee, there is undoubtedly a great deal which the public would like to know concerning Grant's relations to the "whiskey" prosecutions. Not only is Bristow allowed to depart from the Cabinet without any expressed regret by the President, but his departure is followed immediately by that of Treasurer New and of Solicitor Wilson, the latter of whom was Bristow's right-hand man in the famous prosecutions. And, moreover, as soon as the leading men are away, Grant orders the peremptory discharge of Yaryan, Chief of the Special Agents, the man who did the active work of ferreting out the rascals, and whose good conduct and ability are approved, in the highest terms of praise, by both Bristow and Wilson. And on top of Yaryan's discharge comes that of Colonel Dyer, the lawyer who conducted the prosecutions at St. Louis. Let it not be forgotten that the Republicans adopted a civil service reform plank in the Cincinnati platform, and approved the administration of President Grant. If the Republicans do not contrive to turn themselves out of office, it will be because of the stupidity or chicanery of the Democrats rather than because they deserve to remain where they are.

The two Houses of Congress are still at a deadlock with reference to the Appropriation Bills. The Conference Committee upon the Diplomatic and Consular Bill came very near to an agreement, but finally failed and a new committee will probably be appointed. The Senate has been occupied chiefly since the 6th inst., with the trial of Belknap, but has found time to appoint a commission of three senators to investigate the subject of Chinese immigration. Both Houses will unite probably in a resolution to extend last year's appropriations for ten days longer, pending the disagreement with regard to new appropriations. The House passed a bill requiring the Pacific Railroad companies to create a sinking fund to reimburse the United States; and Pinchback's claim for remuneration has been favorably acted upon by the Senate. Mr. Blaine has resigned his position as Representative from Maine, and accepted the appointment of United States Senator, tendered him by Governor Connor, in place of Mr. Morrill who has at last accepted the Secretaryship of the Treasury. Inasmuch as Messrs. Fisher and Mulligan, as we write, are probably before the Judiciary Committee at Washington testifying with regard to Blaine's letters and telegrams, it is to be hoped that Governor Connor may not be furnished with additional reason for regretting his appointment.

It is somewhat difficult to understand the newspaper reports of the results of the engagements which have thus far taken place between the Servians and Turks. So far as we have been able to get at the facts the present condition of affairs is about as follows: one division of the Servian army, and probably the main division, under General Tchernayeff, has moved in a south-easterly direction, crossed the frontier, repulsed a Turkish attack, and is now going toward Sophia, having in front of it, however, a large Turkish army under Osman. A second division, under General Zach, which moved in a southerly direction, has met with a severe defeat, and has either recrossed the frontier or is near Novi Bazar, in Bosnia. A third division, under General Olympia, has also met with a severe defeat upon the south-western frontier; while a fourth division has crossed the Drina and held its own against Turkish attack upon the north-western frontier. A small force of 5000 Servians has crossed the Timok on the eastern frontier and gone into Bulgaria. The results thus far, on the whole, appear to be decidedly unfavorable to the Servians. The Turkish irregular troops are reported to have committed terrible outrages in Bulgaria. The Prince of Montenegro is said to be moving to the support of Zach's army, and Zach has been superseded in command by the Servian Minister of War on account of his defeat.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, June 19, 1876.

I have before told you of our "monster petition" against any further grants to the Royal family until a statement of their present income has been laid before Parliament. This petition was presented on Friday last, and caused a considerable amount of excitement in the House of Commons. The petition was made up into a huge roll, the signatures covering paper of nearly a mile in length. It was rolled on a strong mahogany pole, and encased in brown American cloth, and bound with scarlet ribbon. In all 104,330 signatures were appended, and of these 102,937 were in one roll, the odd 1,393 forming a small second volume, they having arrived too late to be attached to "the monster." It having been announced that the Duke of Connaught (formerly known as Prince Arthur) was shortly to be married to the Princess Frederica, daughter of the ex-King of Hanover, and that an additional £10,000 a year was to be asked for, besides his present income of £15,000, with an annuity of £8,000 to the princess in case she should survive him, Mr. Burt, M. P., for Morpeth, and other members interested in the question, thought that it would be wise to present the petition at once, before Mr. Disraeli, with that suddenness which distinguishes him, should ask for the further grant. Accordingly, on Friday afternoon, we deposited our monster in a carriage, with Mr. Bradlaugh and myself on guard, and followed by two other carriages, conveying the Misses Bradlaugh, Mr. Watts, M. and Mme. De Lubez, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Ramsay, we trotted away through Hyde Park to the House of Commons. Seven of us had a statutory right to accompany the petition, and Mr. Bradlaugh and Mr. Watts walked first, carrying the large roll between them; I followed with the smaller one, and four others brought up the rear.

Westminster Hall is probably known by many of the readers of THE INDEX. It is a huge hall, forming part of the Houses of Parliament, opening into Palace Yard. Along one side are a number of smaller halls, courts of justice; along the other are ranged statues of English monarchs. At the end of the hall, opposite the door, is a great flight of steps, leading to the corridor through which is reached the outer lobby of the Commons' House. No one, without a ticket of admission, may pass along this sacred corridor. A number of people had congregated in Westminster Hall, and greeted us with loud cheers as we entered, carrying the petition along the whole length of the Hall. The noise brought out the white-wigged barristers from the courts, surprised at so sudden a disturbance of the usual stately calm, and the cheers heralding our approach penetrated to the House above, and gave notice of the anti-royalist petition. At the entrance to the corridor the way was barred by the police, who kept back the crowd, and it was only by some persistence that the mystic seven got through. The outer lobby reached, we were surrounded by an inquiring throng of gentlemen waiting admission to the galleries of the House. Passing through these, we entered the second corridor, and there waited awhile, as the bell was ringing for a division, and nothing could be done till that was over. Only members and peers of the realm were admitted to the serene atmosphere in which we now found ourselves, and many questions assailed us as to what signified the huge roll over which the tall figure of our chief stood guard, erect and motionless as a soldier on duty. The division over, Mr. Burt and Mr. Macdonald appeared and led the way into the inner lobby, thronged with members, who crowded curiously round the roll, as it was placed on the door-mat, the uttermost limit of intrusion permissible to non-members.

Mr. Burt is a man of some mark in the House, because of the force behind him. He was sent there by the sturdy miners of Northumberland, and is now supported by them, while he pleads their cause in the House. He is a quiet, modest, loyal-hearted man, speaking with the accent of his fellows, the "Northumbrian burr," but speaking also with directness and force, so that he is always listened to in the House with attention and respect. He is recognized as one of the working-class representatives, and as such he was selected to present the petition. Mr. Macdonald, M. P., for Stafford, is the President of the Miners' Association, and wields a considerable power in the country. He, too, has spoken boldly against the wasteful expenditure of public funds on the Brunswick family, and was therefore asked to share with Mr. Burt the duty of presenting our monster; the smaller roll was also committed to his care. The petition was carried within the House by these two gentlemen, and was hailed with some cheering, some laughter, and some marks of disapprobation, and there it stands to witness to the displeasure testified by upwards of 104,000 English citizens towards Royal grants, a displeasure shared by a huge additional mass whom lack of time and labor alone prevented us from reaching.

The London and provincial press report the proceedings, a notice being inserted in every paper I have seen. They characterize it as "an unusual incident," "a remarkable petition," "an extraordinary petition," or "a monster petition," and many seem doubtful as to what such a demonstration may portend. Meanwhile the crown is drifting into rougher and rougher waters. The large towns furnish enthusiastic audiences which cheer to the echo every republican utterance. I have lately chosen as the title for a political lecture the question: "Republic or Empire: which?" and the answer rings back ever in scornful laughter at the Empire, in loving welcome to the Republic. Disraeli continues to play our game by disgraceful jobbery in the government patronage. The ex-King of Hanover, a turned-out refugee from Germany, who was rejected as not good enough for a petty German kingdom, is raised here to the rank of an English general, and his son is made into a colonel. To add to the ex-king's qualifications, he is blind, and, therefore, especially well-fitted to perform his duties. Bitter is the indignation felt by honest Englishmen that our army should be thus degraded, and that a cast-off German king should be elevated to the command of English soldiers. To still further improve matters, a certain Prince Louis of Battenburg, another German adventurer, has just been raised to the rank of lieutenant in the navy over the heads of one hundred and fifty-seven of his seniors, having qualified himself for his advancement by attending the Prince of Wales in his Indian tour. He has been appointed to a ship, so that he may draw his full pay, and has then been immediately granted leave of absence! And yet people over here talk of American corruption. The fact is that you let vulgar common people profit by the corruption, and that is manifestly wrong. No one would say anything to you, if you would be discreet enough to make people into princes before you permit jobbery on their behalf.

Lord Amberley's work, published posthumously, on the religious beliefs of the world, seems likely to create some interest and excitement. It is issued to the public to-day, copies for review being distributed earlier. A short preface has been written to it by Lord Amberley's mother, the Lady Russell, who is said to be an earnest Christian. This introduction is only a veiled apology for the work, entreating those who may feel pained by the attacks on religion contained in the book, to remember that the views expressed therein were formed after earnest and careful thought, and that the author himself suffered in resigning his creed. The book is dedicated to Lady Amberley in a few words that remind one of Mill's dedication of his work on Liberty to his beloved lost wife. Lord and Lady Amberley were knit together by the closest ties of love and thought, and the husband scarce recovered from his wife's death during the short time that he survived her. They were buried side by side in unconsecrated ground by their own expressed desire; but since the funeral of Lord Amberley their grave has been desecrated, and the dead bodies have been removed into "hallowed" ground. Few outrages more thoroughly cowardly have been perpetrated on freethought during late years than this insult to the helpless dead.

I am just now going off to lecture on the question: "Is the Church of England worth preserving?" The town is Birkenhead; the population churchy. Every lecture given here on this subject has been interlarded with objections in the form of vegetables, eggs, and stones, and I am a little curious to see my audience. It seems so disgraceful to have meetings broken up in this fashion, that I have deliberately chosen disestablishment for my subject, desiring to see if an orderly meeting cannot be held in favor of it, spite of the Church folks. It is consoling to know that violence of this kind is always the sign of a falling cause, and that the Church is most effectually injured by its friends acting in this fashion, since it disgusts all decent people with a party which uses such weapons. If I escape safely from these Church cats, I will duly relate my experience in my next letter.

Communications.

PROUDHON AND HIS CRITIC.

BY BENJ. R. TUCKER.

The student of Proudhon must have laid down THE INDEX of June 23d, containing Stephen Pearl Andrews' article on "Proudhon and his Translator," with a feeling of pleasure not unmixed with pain; pleasure at meeting at last with an elaborate and scholarly criticism of this author and his work, dealing in argument rather than ridicule; and pain at finding this same criticism so alloyed with error and careless misstatement as to greatly detract from its value. The wicked lies and stupid sneers with which the press has almost uniformly greeted the translation into English of What is Property? I have chosen not to notice, believing that a book which cannot defend itself against assaults of such a character had better die at once; but when so able and keen a critic as Mr. Andrews is known to be carelessly misrepresents—by implication rather than direct statement—the theories advocated in the work, justice to his author's memory compels the translator to fulfil the duty imposed upon him by the function which he has assumed, by entering a protest and insisting on fair play. Those who have intelligently read the book already, will discover, without further help of mine, the discrepancy between Proudhon's doctrines as stated by himself and the idea that a novice would form of them in taking them at second-hand from Mr. Andrews. That those also, whose knowledge of Proudhon is yet to be acquired, may appreciate this discrepancy, I shall endeavor, as far as possible, in this article, to "let the master speak for himself." Before proceeding, however, to a detailed examination of the matter in hand, I must first thank Mr. Andrews for his handsome recognition of Proudhon's virtues and abilities, and his clear and accurate insight into his character. Had he understood his writings as well as he understands the man, there would be no call for this expression of dissent.

The first point calling for attention is the critic's assumption that Proudhon, in saying that "property is impossible," meant that it cannot exist even temporarily or contingently. He says: "But if property is impossible, then it cannot exist; and if it cannot exist, then it does not exist; and why should Mr. Proudhon write a big book to do away with what does not and never did have any existence?" Now let us listen to Proudhon (page 40, outlining his arguments): "Considering the fact of property in itself, we shall inquire whether this fact is real, whether it exists, whether it is possible. Then we shall discover, singularly enough, that property may indeed manifest itself accidentally; but that, as an institution and principle, it is mathematically impossible. So that the axiom of the school—ab actu ad posse valet consequutio: from the actual to the possible the inference is good—is given the lie as far as property is concerned." True, Mr. Andrews says immediately afterwards: "Of course the literal meaning of what he says is absurd"; and proceeds to show what he really did mean; but then where is the pertinency of our critic's first argument? Why should Mr. Andrews write half a paragraph to refute what Proudhon never did mean? The only effect of such a course is the same as that which the former repeatedly charges upon the latter's writings, viz.: the confusing of the reader's mind. It is virtual misrepresentation.

In the next two paragraphs we find the same thing repeated. The critic first makes the following lucid statement of Proudhon's understanding of the word property, for which he deserves great credit, nearly all previous critics having failed to grasp and state this vital point: "What he means by property is that subtle fiction which makes that mine or thine of which we are out of possession, for which we have no present use, but which by this subtle lie we may recall at our option, using it, in the meantime, to subjugate others to our service, by taking increase for its use, in the form of rent, interest, and the like." Then, after warning (very properly) his readers that unless this sense of the term property is constantly borne in mind, the author is certain to be misunderstood, he immediately dismisses it from his own mind, and indulges in the following remarks: "It is, however, not true that property, even so restricted in definition, is robbery, pure and simple. It is not proprietorship, but the use of proprietorship, to extort increase, which is vicious in principle." What is the meaning of this sudden twist in the critic's logic? If this "vicious use of proprietorship" is the very thing which Proudhon regards as the essence of proprietorship, how can Mr. Andrews deny that property, according to Proudhon's restricted definition, is robbery? The state of the reader's mind, when he reached this point of the criticism, must have been "confusion worse confounded." Indeed, the present writer hardly dares follow this line of thought further, for fear that, despite his intimacy with the views in question, he will begin to feel muddled himself.

The critic next falls into the error of supposing that his author favors the forcible intervention of society to control the property relations of individuals. This misapprehension, in view of the slightly misleading character of some of Proudhon's phrases, is partially excusable; but a close reading reveals the fact that the only control which he favored is that which is exercised, not through institutions based on physical force, but through the natural operation of the law of equitable exchange. "He (Proudhon) also leaves us very much in the dark as to the precise social machinery by which he would have the world organized and run. He is far more specific with regard to what he would abolish than with regard to what he would construct." Why should he treat of organization in a work devoted to analysis? This objection is thus answered by Proudhon in the closing passage of his preface: "On the following conditions, then, of subsequent evidence, depends the correctness of my preceding arguments: the discovery of a system of absolute equality in which all existing institutions, save property, not only may find a place, but may themselves serve as instruments of equality: individual liberty, the division of power, the public ministry, etc.—a system which better than property, guarantees the formation of capital and keeps up the courage of all; which, from a superior point of view, explains, corrects, and completes the theories of association hitherto proposed, from Plato and Pythagoras to Babeuf, Saint Simon, and Fourier; a system, finally, which, serving as a means of transition, is immediately applicable." Proudhon was no less keenly alive to the necessity of organization than is Mr. Andrews himself. He fulfilled the above promise in his subsequent works by developing his theory of mutualism, which was to find its first external expression in the organization of credit on a gratuitous basis by a system of banking which he devised, the results of which would be so vast and beneficent that one fears to present even the barest outline of them, for fear of so awakening the incredulity of the reader as to blind him to the truth of the principles involved.

Mr. Andrews next objects to Proudhon's use of the term anarchy to denote order, for the reason that, while the Greek arche, from which it is derived, meant both "personal government by arbitrium" and the government of inherent laws and principles, Proudhon confined it to the former of these ideas. It is difficult to see why he had not as good a right to confine it to the former, as had Mr. Andrews, when coining the word Pantarchy, to confine it to the latter.

The worst instance of misrepresentation, however, contained in the whole criticism, occurs in the following sentences: "At the 56th page the author propounds the theory that there was a primitive state of social equality; that our departure from it is a degeneracy; that we are to return to that state of nature, etc. Surely our social theories are in advance of that idea now. Man never returns to prior conditions. He advances to new conditions which reproduce the spirit of primal states, but in still newer forms, which embody also the good of what now is. We pass from an undifferentiated state to differentiation, and thence not backward but forward to integration. So the equality which Proudhon so aspired after will never come in the simple primitive form, but it will come in a higher and scientifically adjusted form." Now, it is assumed here that Proudhon said the precise opposite of what he really did say. Suppose we compare this rendering of the 56th page with the 56th page itself (and I ask any fair-minded person if it is not expressed in terms so unmistakably plain that no ordinarily careful reader could fail to understand it): "To suppose original equality in human society is to admit by implication that the present inequality is a degeneration from the nature of this society,—a thing which the defenders of property cannot explain. But I infer therefrom that, if Providence placed the first human beings in a condition of equality, it was an indication of its desires, a model that it wished them to realize in other forms; just as the religious sentiment, which it planted in their hearts, has developed and manifested itself in various ways. Man has but one nature, constant and unalterable: he pursues it through instinct, he wanders from it through reflection, he returns to it through judgment; who shall say that we are not returning now?" And yet, in the face of this, Mr. Andrews would have us believe that Proudhon wanted to go back, not only to the old spirit, but to old forms! The fact is, the idea expressed by Mr. Andrews in his formula of unism, duism, and trinitism, was completely developed by Proudhon in 1845 in his Contradictions Economiques (the only difference being that the latter used the terms thesis, antithesis, and synthesis), and for him to say that "Proudhon never attained to it" is almost impudent. Proudhon borrowed it from Hegel, to whom he credited it; and Colonel William B. Greene traces it back even further than this, finding its origin in the Jewish Kabbala.

The criticism of Proudhon's remarks upon equality is, I confess, partially correct. He claimed too much when he said that equality was synonymous with society, and made a more accurate statement afterwards in calling it a sine qua non of society; but that this trivial error affords a "loophole of escape to the proprietor of every grade" from the crushing logic of the rest of the work, I utterly fail to see. I must not close without referring to the animus of Mr. Andrews' article, which is best exhibited in his statement that "Proudhon belongs as definitely to the past, at this day, and to the mere history of ideas, as Ptolemy after Copernicus." Has it come to this, then, that in this fast age we progress so rapidly that a single decade suffices to blot out the memory and destroy the usefulness of one of whom the Pantarch even is compelled to speak so highly? The hint is a very broad one; and it does not take the eye of Argus to discover that the Copernicus of our social system is named Stephen Pearl Andrews; and when Proudhon's translator is advised to waste no further time on such a useless task, but to be sure that he is doing the "best thing possible," it is evident that the best thing possible, in the critic's view, is to join the Pantarchy, and work therein. The whole article is an almost shocking revelation of the practice of the Pantarch in persisting in selfishly subordinating what he considers the comparative worthlessness of others to what he considers his own superlative worth.

"GOOD TO DIE BY."

EDITOR INDEX:—

The old saying that "infidelity will do to live by but not to die by," has been so often repeated both by the clergy and laity, that among them it is accepted as true without questioning. Until their minds can be disabused of this error, we never can get them to accept our views in regard to the inspiration of the Bible. We may be able to convince them that the Bible is not the inspired word of God, but they will still cling to the Christian religion, so long as they can be induced to believe that even an infidel cannot die without the consolation of the Church, and that he always recants and joins the church before he dies, if he be not cut off suddenly.

If we cannot consistently die, as we live, infidels, then the sooner we recant and go back to Christianity, or some other religion that we can live and die by, the better: but I am persuaded that infidelity will do to die by, just as well as to live by, and that an infidel can pass through the dark valley with as much fortitude, peace, and resignation as the Christian can. Death has no terrors to him who has been true to himself and lived up to his honest convictions of duty; no guilty conscience is there to accuse him of sin. He does not acknowledge its existence, because, if the Bible be not God's word, there is no sin, for sin is the violation of God's law as revealed in the Bible. To the infidel death is but the passage into an unknown and untold future. Now a death-bed, it has been truly said, is a "detector of the heart"; and until we have by our death-bed confessions convinced the people that this old saying about infidels not dying without calling in the aid of the Church is not true, we ought not to expect them to accept our views. Our death-bed confessions alone will be accepted by the Orthodox as honest and sincere. They do not give us credit for being honest in our opinion while we are enjoying life and good health, but say, "Just wait till he comes to his dying bed, and he will talk differently; he will then recant."

The consistent death of one infidel will do more to convince such people than all the evidence and logic we can produce that the Bible is not the inspired word of God. Is not the Christian always on the alert to secure the testimony of the dying saint as to the truthfulness and consolation of his religion? Why then should we neglect such testimony when we know that it has so much weight with our Christian friends?

My object in writing the above is to try and impress upon the minds of all those who do not believe in the inspiration of the Bible the importance of seeing to it that their death-bed confessions give out no uncertain sound, and also that their dying declaration on this most important subject receive due publicity. Let every one now, while in good health, while his mind is not weakened by disease nor distracted by thoughts of parting from friends, commit to writing his views on this subject, and also what ceremonies he would have observed at his funeral. This would enable us to dispense with the services of the clergy. Every one owes it to the living to give his dying testimony as to the honesty of his convictions.

ENON VALLEY, PA.

MORS.

"THE PRESBYTERIAN CLERGY are the loudest, the most intolerant of all sects; the most tyrannical and ambitious, ready at the word of the law-giver, if such a word could now be obtained, to put their torch to the pile, and to rekindle in this virgin hemisphere the flames in which their oracle, Calvin, consumed the poor Servetus, because he could not subscribe the proposition of Calvin, that magistrates have a right to exterminate all heretics to the Calvinistic creed. They pant to reestablish by law that holy inquisition which they can now only infuse into public opinion." —Jefferson's Works, Vol. IV., pp. 358, 322.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON.

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. B. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity, as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

Including

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
 T. W. HIGGINSON,
 W. J. POTTER,
 W. H. SPENCER,
 F. W. NEWMAN,
 CHAS. VOYSEY,
 A. W. STEVENS,
 F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—God in the Constitution, by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—The Sabbath, by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—Compulsory Education, by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 CHARLES VOYSEY, England.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of these several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. Voysey has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	Price.
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps.	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
New Poems.	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights.	1.50
Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.	2.00
Edelweiss.	1.00
German Tales.	1.00
BACON'S Essays.	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physics and Politics.	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.	2.00
The Rising Faith.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.	2.25
The World-Priest.	2.25
The Tall Student.	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 8 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	5.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Post-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.	2.00
CLARKE (DR. R. H.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old. Of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.	.20
COXWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies."	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewski, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor."	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	4.00
Journal of Researches.	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourses on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Poets. A Study.	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.	1.00
Comprising— Adam Bede. Romola. The Mill on the Floss. Felix Holt. Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of The Spanish Gypsy.	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.	3.00
Essays. Second Series.	3.00
Miscellanies.	2.00
Representative Men.	2.00
English Traits.	2.00
Conduct of Life.	2.00
Poems. With Portrait.	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold.	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.	2.00
Society and Solitude.	2.00
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.	5.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	5.00
Elective Affinities.	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Creed of Christendom.	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.00
The Unknown River.	5.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.	1.00
Child World. Part First.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.	1.50
The Marble Faun.	1.50
The English Note-Books.	1.50
The American Note-Books.	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books.	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton.	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.	1.50
Atlantic Essays.	2.50
Oldport Days.	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.	2.00
Suburban Sketches.	2.00
Venetian Life in a Note-Book.	2.00
Italian Journeys.	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three."	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.	1.25
Bits of Travel.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.00
More Criticism on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.	1.50
Songs of Seven.	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeltons.	1.75
Studies for Stories.	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Bye.	1.25
Mopse the Fairy: A Story.	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.	1.50
No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Joseph P. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerostatics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Diseases. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.	3.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.	3.00
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.) What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	1.50
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	2.00
50c
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	5.00
Elements of Geology.	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	2.50
The Subjection of Women. Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	1.50
Autobiography.	2.25
Memorial Volumes. His Life and Works.	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.	2.00
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire.	2.00
Rousseau. 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-Time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.	1.50
Kkkoos from Kentucky.	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.50
Phases of Faith, or, Passages from the History of my Creed.	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations.	2.00
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. C. B. Frothingham.	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and M.DCCCLV. A Christmas Story.	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.	1.50
The Trotty Book.	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.	1.50
Hedged in by Sin.	1.50
The Silent Partner.	1.50
What to Wear?	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.	1.50
SCHellen (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.	.30
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.	.30
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.	1.25
First Principles.	1.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.	1.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.	5.00
Philosophy of Style.	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.	2.00
Sociology.	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.	3.00
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER.) Pink and White Tyranny.	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.	.50
STRAUSS (D.F.) The Old Faith and the New.	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorised translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.50
The Classic-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W.M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair.	1.25
The Newcomes.	1.25
Adventures of Philip Fendennis.	1.25
The Virginians.	1.25
Esmond, and Lovell the Widower.	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.
3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.
4. Four Georges, Humors, &c.
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.	2.00
The Maine Woods.	2.00
Cape Cod.	2.00
Letters.	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.	2.00
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.	1.00
Light and Electricity.	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.	1.25
Heat as a Mode of Motion.	2.00
On Sound.	2.00
Radiant Heat.	5.00
Forms of Water.	1.50
Lectures on Light.	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.	.50
TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures.	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Shing and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.	3.00
Vols. III, IV. and VI., each.	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.	1.00
Seventy Years.	1.50
Back-Log Studies.	2.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.	1.50
Essays and Reviews.	4.00
Character and Characteristic Men.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
Successes and its Conditions.	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.	.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.	1.50
Real Folks.	1.50
The Other Girls.	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.50
Child Life.	1.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX.

1 Tremont Place Boston.

Digitized by Google

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P. J. PROUDHON: HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS.
PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.

PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.

LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.

THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE.

Demonstration. Axiom. Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition. Property is impossible, because it demands something for nothing.

Second Proposition. Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition. Property is impossible, because, with a

given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is Homotopia.

Fifth Proposition. Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Sixth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition. Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition. Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition. Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.

1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.
2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.
3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.

1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.
2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.
3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUIN ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges $3.50
Price in Full Calf, blue, gilt edge 6.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

ERINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

THE

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3 50.

LIBERAL BOOKS.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MAN. By Win-

wood Reade $3.00

THE SAFEST CREED. By O. B. Frothing-

ham 1.50

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE WORLD. By

Edward Clodd75

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN: Priest and Man.

By Frederika MacDonald 1.50

SOUL PROBLEMS, with other Papers. By

Joseph E. Peck75

THE CULTIVATION OF ART, and its Relations to Religious Puritanism and

Money-Getting. By A. R. Cooper25

JUST ISSUED:

THE CHRIST OF PAUL; or, The Enigmas

of Christianity. By George Reber.

12mo. Extra cloth. 400 pp. Post-

paid 2.00

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPHER

AND REFORMER. By Charles

Sotheran. Post-paid 1.25

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE

INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Sent to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)

RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

THREE ESSAYS ON RELIGION.

By JOHN STUART MILL, is now for sale at this office. Price—Two dollars and fifty cts. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT

BETWEEN
Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CENTENNIAL BUSTS.

Jefferson and Paine.

Copies in plaster, boxed, guaranteed against injury by transportation. Price of each, $50.00. Send orders to S. H. MORSE, 25 Bromfield St., Boston.

THOMAS PAINE.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

Of MORSE'S Bust of Thomas Paine, for sale at the Office of THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston. Price, 50 cts.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,

and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

757 Washington St., Boston.

THE AMERICAN EDITION

OF

MONCURE D. CONWAY'S

SACRED ANTHOLOGY,

A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,

has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.

Address THE INDEX,
1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

THE GODS, AND OTHER

LECTURES.

By Col. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,

OF ILLINOIS.

This book contains five Lectures, entitled severally: "The Gods," "Humboldt," "Thomas Paine," "Individuality," and "Heretics and Heresies." It is handsomely bound, and will be sent from this office on receipt of Two DOLLARS.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Landaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by

THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)... $1.50

CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION..... 1.00

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER 1.00

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS..... 1.00

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND

OTHER DISCOURSES..... 1.00

LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER..... 3.00

THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM

IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp.,

with steel portrait of the author) ... 2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

A GRAND VOLUME!

The World's Sages, Infidels, and Thinkers.

Biographies of over 200 eminent Free-thinkers of all ages, by D. M. Bennett. Crown octavo, new type, 1000 pages, with steel portrait of author, and a fine Family Record. To be issued in a few weeks. Price $3.00, post-paid. No money required until book is ready for delivery. Contents circular free. Orders solicited by J. FRANCIS RUGGLES, Bibliopole, Bronson, Mich.

THEODORE PARKER:

A Biography. By Octavius Brooks Frothingham. With Heliotype Portrait. 1 vol. 8vo. $3.00.

An exceedingly interesting memorial of a very remarkable man—one of the striking figures in American history. Mr. Frothingham has given a large number of Parker's letters and journals not previously published; he has written in the light reflected upon Parker's words and efforts by the momentous events of the last fifteen years, which have brought out in bold relief the sagacity, wisdom, and heroism of Theodore Parker's career; and he has written so candidly, and with so profound an appreciation of Parker's characteristic qualities, that his book is of surpassing interest.

The NEW YORK TRIBUNE closes a four and a half column review of this book by saying: "It holds up a remarkable specimen of robust manliness whose form and lineaments can be studied with equal advantage by friend and foe."

Sent, postage prepaid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX,
Tremont Place, Boston.

LABOR REFORM.

The History of Co-operation in England:

Its Literature and its Advocates.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

VOLUME I.

THE PIONEER PERIOD—1812 to 1844.

A masterly work, indispensable to all who are interested in the rights of labor and the best method of securing those rights.

Sent to any address by mail, post-paid, on receipt of TWO DOLLARS, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

MONEY

AND THE

MECHANISM OF EXCHANGE.

BY

PROF. W. STANLEY JEVONS, M.A., F.R.S.

A new and thoroughly scientific treatise, giving a clear and simple exposition of the "past and present monetary systems of the world, the materials employed to make money, the natural laws which govern their circulation, the several modes in which they may be replaced by the use of paper documents, and, finally, the method in which the use of money is immensely economized by the cheque and clearing system now being extended and perfected."

CONTENTS.

- CHAPTER I.—Barter.
" 2.—Exchange.
" 3.—The Functions of Money.
" 4.—Early History of Money.
" 5.—Qualities of the Material of Money.
" 6.—The Metals as Money.
" 7.—Coins.
" 8.—The Principles of Circulation.
" 9.—Systems of Metallic Money.
" 10.—The English System of Metallic Currency.
" 11.—Fractional Currency.
" 12.—The Battle of the Standards.
" 13.—Technical Matters relating to Coinage.
" 14.—International Money.
" 15.—The Mechanism of Exchange.
" 16.—Representative Money.
" 17.—The Nature and Varieties of Promissory Notes.
" 18.—Methods of Regulating a Paper Currency.
" 19.—Credit Documents.
" 20.—Book Credit and the Banking System.
" 21.—The Clearing House System.
" 22.—The Cheque Bank.
" 23.—Foreign Bills of Exchange.
" 24.—The Bank of England and the Money Market.
" 25.—A Tabular Standard of Value.
" 26.—The Quantity of Money Needed by a Nation.

Sent post-paid on receipt of $1.75, by THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 20, 1876.

WHOLE No. 343.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Illinois.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM,.....New York.
MR. WM. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HALLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT,.....San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....Boston, Mass.
RABBI B. FELSANTHAL,.....Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Florence, Mass.
MR. JAMES LICK,.....San Francisco, Cal.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Detroit, Mich.
HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,.....New Harmony, Ind.
MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEAVER,.....Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
RABBI ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.

Secretary.

R. H. BANNEY,.....1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
R. H. BANNEY.
J. A. J. WILCOX.
D. Y. KILGORE.
H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,.....Pennsylvania.
S. J. MATHEWS,.....Arkansas.
J. L. HATCH,.....California.
E. B. HAZZEN,.....Connecticut.
S. B. WALLIHAN,.....Colorado.
HARWOOD G. DAY,.....Iowa.
HERMANN LIEBER,.....Indiana.
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Illinois.
J. E. WALLACE,.....Louisiana.
MONROE A. BLANCHARD,.....Maine.
A. WARREN KELSEY,.....Missouri.
FRANK J. MEAD,.....Minnesota.
WILLIAM LITTLE,.....New Hampshire.
LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,.....Nebraska.
GEORGE WILLIAM THORN,.....North Carolina.
GEORGE LEWIS,.....Rhode Island.
R. PETERSON,.....Texas.
SAMUEL WATSON,.....Tennessee.
J. O. BARRETT,.....Wisconsin.

[The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.]

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.
HARLAN P. HYDE.

GLIMPSES.

ANOTHER new Liberal League is reported to us at Berlin Heights, Ohio. President, Mrs. Mary Overton; Secretary, William B. Harrison.

AT TORONTO, Canada, the International Young Men's Christian Association has just held its twenty-first annual convention. The report of the committee announced 704 organizations on this continent, with a total membership of 80,933.

A SUBSCRIBER suggests that the Christian sectaries who have shut up the Exposition on Sundays be required to hold themselves responsible for the threatened financial deficiency. If that proposition could be carried out, it might have the effect of precipitately opening the doors.

IF YOU wish to aid powerfully in the Liberal League movement, go to the editor of your local paper and persuade him to publish as much as possible of the proceedings of the Philadelphia convention, contained in last week's INDEX. All the League movement needs is to be known: its immense moral force will do the rest. But the press will let it alone as long as possible, and every live liberal has a work in this direction which can be and ought to be done at once.

THE WHEELING (West Virginia) Intelligencer remarks: "It has leaked out that the date of Mr. Dandorf's letter agreeing to be a candidate for reelection to Congress shows it to have been written on Sunday. If this is true, that he was actually guilty of writing a political letter on Sunday, it affords good grounds for defeating him, and sending some fellow to Washington who will date his Sunday letters on Saturday." The latter suggestion jokingly illustrates the kind of morality which is the glory of pious politicians.

THE STOCKTON (California) Daily Independent of July 7, in its account of the procession on the Fourth, says that it had "a car containing four beautiful plaster-busts of Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, and Tom Paine, and a full length statue of the Goddess of Liberty standing on a pedestal upon which were painted in gilt letters names of heroes of the Revolution. On either side of the Goddess were gilded columns supporting an arch thrown over her head bearing the motto: 'These are my jewels.' On the sides of the car were the names of all the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The whole car was conspicuous for its pure simplicity and beauty, and excited much admiration." The busts of Jefferson and Paine were the workmanship of Mr. Morse, who executed them on the special order of the Stockton liberals for this occasion.

THE LONDON SUNDAY LEAGUE lately assembled at the gates of the British Museum, at the National Gallery, and in Hyde Park, to pass the following resolutions: "This meeting on behalf of trade and the industrial interests of the metropolis indignantly protests against the oppressive closing of the national galleries and museums to those who desire to use them on the only day in the week when the great mass of the people can visit them; and further, this meeting respectfully but firmly warns the present government that this rational extension of public liberty has been patiently waited for and legally sought without avail for many years." That is precisely such work as awaits the Liberal League in America. Only let its appeals be made, not only in the name of "trade and industrial interests," but still more emphatically in the name of justice, equal rights, and religious liberty.

ANSON MERRILL, Deputy Sheriff at Manchester, N. H., has just died in that city. The Daily Union of July 14 praises his character highly, and bears this testimony to the brave and peaceful manner in which he passed away: "He was a good officer, active and energetic in his business. Mr. Merrill was equally positive in his religious views. He believed that upon the subject of God and immortality he knew as much as any man, that is, nothing. He often expressed a wish for immortality, saying that, if there was a life beyond the grave, he was prepared to enjoy it; but if there was no life beyond, he was just as well off as any man who had ever lived. During his last sickness, which was very brief, he was in the full enjoyment of his mental faculties, and conversed freely till within a few minutes of his death. Almost the last words which he spoke to his children, who were present, were, 'Be brave; be true. . . Press onward, ever onward in the path of duty.' He died July 6, 1876, calmly, peacefully, like one going to sleep." Could he have died more nobly, or with better words upon his lips, if he had been a Christian?

THE Christian Union, if it deliberately sets about it, is capable of getting more muddled than any other journal (except one) that occurs to us: "President Grant's declaration that the Bible is the sheet-anchor of all our liberties is one of those popular and melancholy delusions which constitute the darkest cloud of our national future." It happens, however, to have been a light for us in our national past, and until THE INDEX substitutes some other 'sheet-anchor' which will hold as well, the nation must continue to harbor the above-mentioned melancholy delusion. The 'secular Constitution' which THE INDEX offers is not a satisfactory substitute, if it is to stand as an isolated instrument; for it would evidently be worth nothing unless men had faith in it. And the reason they have faith in it is because it confirms the citizen in the enjoyment of those rights through which alone he can find his highest development. The 'secular Constitution' guarantees that a man may become, without let or hindrance, what the Bible would have him become, and for this reason it commands our respect. There are some cables we cannot afford to slip—certainly not the one THE INDEX has let go." Why does not the Christian Union prepare to die in defence of the thesis that the Bible is the best Cook-Book ever published? Or the most accurate Railway Guide? Or the only divinely inspired Chess Manual? It has just as much to do with our "liberties" as it has with cookery, railroads, or chess,—and no more.

THIS is the brutal manner in which Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, comments on the Paine bust enterprise in the Christian at Work of July 13, a sheet edited by him at New York:—

SEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR TOM PAINE. The work of monument-building and biography is being slightly overdone. It matters not how big a scamp a man is, after he is dead he will find a eulogist, and a minister to preach him to glory. Aaron Burr, the heap of compost, and Lord Byron, the slush of London society, after departure won books of panegyric. Now a subscription is started for raising a monument to Tom Paine, in Independence Hall, at Philadelphia. Seven hundred dollars have already been promised. This is because Tom Paine wrote a book called Common Sense, and other tracts of a patriotic character, at the opening of the Revolution. But shall that make us forget that he wrote the most vulgar and nefarious assault on Christians, and that he died in a filth that would make a pig-sty seem a parlor? We put Tom Paine's Age of Reason against Tom Paine's Common Sense. The former did a thousandfold more harm than the latter did good. He who wars against the Holy Scriptures is not fit to have his picture, or bust, or monument in Independence Hall with the faces of George Washington and John Quincy Adams.

Will not somebody start a subscription to have a monument in Westminster Abbey of the hero of the gunpowder plot; or in our common schools to Herod; or in our churches to Nero? Come now, get out your dollars, and have put in bronze and marble the forms of Robespierre, and Jim Fisk, and Bill Tweed, and all the other political or financial villains of the past and present.

Seriously, we hope that the most consecrated spot of American patriotism will never be disgraced by the visage of Tom Paine, who lived like a fool and died like a beast. The righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance, but the name of the wicked shall rot.

N.B.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, as above.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns, and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

Isolation.

CLASS-DAY ORATION AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, JUNE 23, 1876.

BY R. J. YOUNG,

ORATOR OF THE DAY.

It is the misfortune of a mind not yet mature to be teeming with radical opinions. And in the advocacy of these views there is often displayed an earnestness and confidence which contrast strangely with the caution and conservatism of experienced age. Impulsiveness is natural in youth; temperate judgment comes only with increasing years. The young man glances out with an eager gaze upon the vast fields of knowledge which stretch away on every side. Inspired and excited by the scene, with only the teachings of his books to guide him, he bursts forth in ill-judged criticism and dogmatic comment; while men who have lived longer and learned more than he marvel at his enthusiasm and smile at his conceits.

The world without us is a perpetual study, where observation and experiment are the guides to wisdom. There it is that the tyro too often gives utterance to hasty conclusions, speaking with a vehemence and boldness which sadly need the tempering influence of time. But there is also a great world within us, no less wonderful and grand than that without, yet differing widely in the method of its contemplation. Here are no hidden places where age alone can enter and from which youth is forever barred. Consciousness is the key which unlocks all the chambers of the soul, and the inquiring mind need but look in upon itself to gain a revelation which youth does not invalidate and age cannot efface. Let us, then, shunning those subjects in which experience alone gives wisdom, talk for a time of things which make direct appeal to consciousness for confirmation.

My theme is Isolation. There is a double meaning in the word. When used with reference to man as a member of society, it signifies seclusion and separation. Such is the isolation of the hermit, who bids the world farewell, and fixes his residence in some secret spot where he can dwell apart from all his fellows. Such is the isolation of the cynic, who looks upon the busy work of life with a contemptuous eye, scoffing at the virtues and railing at the follies of his fellow-men. Such is the isolation of the sorrow-stricken, shunning the prying gaze of an unsympathizing world, content to sit apart and bear the burden of his grief alone. Thus is Isolation a ready refuge and a frequent remedy for weariness, misanthropy, and woe.

But when used with reference to man as an intellectual and moral being, Isolation becomes the synonym for independence. Strength of mind and dignity of character are its natural offspring, and man attains his highest, best development through its influence and inspiration.

The age of dogmatism has passed away. The era of inquiry has begun. Men no longer receive their opinions by dictation; they now form opinions for themselves; while tradition—so long regarded as the sacred oracle of truth—is now made to undergo the searching inquest of freethought. The world which once seemed a mass of nobodies, under the leadership of a few superior minds, has grown into a vast army of integers, each of which acts under the influence of an independent intelligence. There is food for reflection in these changes. They teach us that the noblest and highest condition of mental and spiritual life is an independent one. It is the most natural state, as well; for the history of each human being's life is but a record of emancipation from dependence and helplessness and the attainment of independence and of power. The life of man is but one perpetual process of Isolation.

Every soul needs some retreat into which it can withdraw itself for reflection and repose. It is the one great proof of the individuality of man that he can thus shut out the world and hold communion with himself. In consciousness is found the indisputable evidence of personality. To clothe this personality with dignity and worth is the great work of life. All other duties flow from this, on this are based all rights; and he who does not first purify and strengthen his own soul can only be a snare and hindrance to his fellow-men.

The soul finds its sweetest nourishment in solitude, so that to the thoughtful man his life should be but one continual feast. For life is bounded and hemmed in by solitude. It issues from the silent mystery of birth; it ends in the silent mystery of death; and from the very moment when first into the nostrils is breathed the living soul, to the time when the frail tenement of flesh gives up its guest, the personality of man is wrapped in a solitude through which no earthly eye can pierce.

De Quincey has described, with all the eloquence of his matchless pen, the experiences of his infancy and childhood. He shows us that even a prattling child, whose body is so helpless and dependent, can feel and realize the Isolation of its soul:—

"Solitude," he says, "though silent as light, is, like light, the mightiest of agencies; for solitude is essential to man. All men come into this world alone; all men leave it alone. Even a little child has a dread, whispering consciousness that if he should be summoned to travel into the Eternal Presence, no gentle nurse will be allowed to lead him by the hand, nor mother to carry him in her arms, nor little sister to share his trepidation. King and priest, warrior and maiden, philosopher and child, all must walk those mighty galleries alone. The solitude, therefore, which in this world appeals and fascinates a child's heart, is but the echo of a far deeper solitude through which already he has passed, and of another solitude, deeper still, through which he has to pass; reflex of one solitude, prefiguration of another.

"O, burthen of solitude, that cleavest to man through every stage of his being; in his birth which was, in his life which is, in his death which shall be! Mighty and essential solitude, thou wast, and art, and art to be. Thou broodest over every heart which sleeps in the nurseries of Christendom. Like the vast laboratory of the air, which, seeming to be nothing, or less than the shadow of a shade, hides within itself the principle of all things, solitude, for the child, is the Agrippa's mirror of the unseen universe. Deep is the solitude in life of millions upon millions who, with hearts swelling forth love, have none to love them; deep is the solitude of those who, with secret griefs, have none to pity them; deep is the solitude of those who, fighting with doubts and darkness, have none to counsel them. But deeper than the deepest of these solitudes is that which broods over childhood, bringing before it, at intervals, the final solitude which watches for it and is waiting for it within the gates of death."

In striking contrast with this natural Isolation of the spiritual life is the original state of bodily dependence. Strange must this contrast seem to the wakening consciousness of infancy. Strange must be the voiceless thoughts that dwell within the chambers of a young child's brain. Within it dwells the dawning evidence of individuality. Without, it sees a vast display of objects which it slowly learns to distinguish from itself. And, in the continual exercise of its organs of sense, adding evidence from one source to evidence from another, it finds confirmation of the instinctive faith which dwells within its tiny breast, that it is indeed a separate existence. Youth, with its changing experiences, succeeds to childhood; and long ere manhood comes, with its grave responsibilities and cares, the individual has realized the fullness and completeness of his Isolation.

The growth and development of his body have borne witness to it; the widening of his field of knowledge has attested it; the insight he has gained into the characters of friends has furnished proof; the many occasions when he has had to act independently and freely have given testimony; and, lastly, if he has lived for a time without the pale of home restraints, he slips into manhood with a settled conviction of the weighty truth that he is by nature and by right an isolated, independent being.

A New England scholar whose brilliant talents and pure life merit far wider recognition than they now receive has drawn a most interesting parallel between the individual and the atom. The doctrine of the atomic constitution of matter had its origin five centuries before the beginning of our era. To trace its course down through the history of philosophic thought would be too long a task; but whoever casts even a passing glance at the current literature of science cannot fail to recognize the old, old doctrine, changed somewhat by modern investigation, yet not robbed of one essential feature, and only rendered more certain by the logic of the ages.

It is an accepted axiom of science that matter cannot be annihilated. Matter may be divided and divided and divided again, but there is a point beyond which division cannot go. At this ultimate point is found the atom. How these primary atoms first united to form composite substance is a question which still baffles and divides the scientific world. It is sufficient for our purpose, however, to remember that all material substance is made up of multitudes of atoms, each of which is a separate entity.

Starting with this fact, Francis Abbot has drawn his parallel. He notes the agreement of atom and individual in their etymology. The meaning of atom is "not to be cut;" the meaning of individual is "not to be divided." And as the atom preserves its identity and oneness, despite the decomposing power of subtlest alchemy, so the individual, clothed in the armor of a natural Isolation, defies all efforts to destroy the unity of the soul. Circumstances and surroundings may be in continual change; the very thoughts and opinions that fill the mind may be altered or forgotten; but there is an ever-abiding consciousness dwelling in the breast, that, shielded from these changes and unaffected by them, is personality. To this instinctive feeling the natural language of the lips gives quick response, for every independent judgment is uttered in the name, and by the authority, of the indestructible "I."

"In other words," says Mr. Abbot, "the self-conscious unit which is named I is a constant and necessary element in all thought, all knowledge, all feeling, all volition; it cannot possibly be resolved into a stream of successive impressions or states of consciousness, for it accompanies them all, is presupposed by each and every one of them, and alone gives them unity or coherence. Apart from all speculation, considered simply as a fact which must be acknowledged as a fact, this unity of personality, this atomism of the soul, must be accepted in its entirety. Whether I have existed heretofore, or shall exist hereafter, I refuse to be extinguished as an absolute unit while I do exist; and so much as this science that deserves the name will at once concede to me. I am not a mere facsimile of impressions, a mere bundle of sensations, a mere row of beads without a string; I am myself; and that self, from its beginning to its end, if end it is to have, is absolutely one."

In their natures, then, the individual and the atom are allied. What of the functions they severally fulfill? 'Tis here we see the beauty of the parallel; and if the emphasis laid upon the individuality of man has smacked of selfishness, and seemed to shut out the beneficent principles of a broad philanthropy, now will the better truth appear.

The atom fulfills its proper office when it combines with other atoms to form a material substance. The individual finds his proper sphere in uniting with other individuals to form society. The most famous atomist in ancient Greece taught that atoms first came pouring down through space in parallel straight lines, never touching or coalescing. It was not until, by some deviation in the stream, atoms were thrown together in whirls and eddies, that the revolving earth took form and rose from chaos. So must the unnumbered streams of influence that flow out from individual lives be joined in close companionship before the mighty fabric of society can be built up. Thus, by a seeming paradox, does Isolation become the foster-nurse of all philanthropy.

For through Isolation man attains the highest possibilities of his being, and in giving to society the weight and influence of a well-developed manhood he most fully does his part in improving the condition of his fellow-men.

Here we see the complete circle of an individual life. The body has its times of growth, maturity, decay. Beginning in helplessness it slowly gathers strength and firmness, loosening one by one the bands that bind it to its natural protectors. For a brief season it enjoys maturity; and then the inevitable process of dissolution comes, rounding life's circle by consigning the body to the dust from whence it rose.

The soul, too, gradually attains the full realization of its selfhood; and while developing, as did the body, by independent exertions, it discovers the proper sphere for the use of its increasing powers, in the great work of bettering the order of things to which by nature it belongs. Thus does it complete the circle of its existence, by devoting itself to the good of society, from whose most sacred institution it has sprung.

Such is the double history of the individual life. Again to quote:—

"Beginning in a tiny germ hidden from all observation, the individual is a portion of another organism, the impinging of a sacred maternal life into a form destined to become an objective, new, and independent organism in the outer world. Its history is that of ever-increasing isolation. Detached from the mother's body, clinging to the mother's hand, going out from the sheltering roof of home, mixing in alien and transient scenes, yet ever concentrating within itself more and more that is unknown to others and communicable to none—verily, it is a life of increasing loneliness that the individual leads. All this is simply the penalty and the glory of increasing individuality, 'rounding to a separate mind.' Yet all the while is this individual reëntering again into the Universal. He forms close and dear ties into which he pours his very soul; he mingles with other lives, and merges his interests, his hopes, his thoughts, his volitions, in ever-widening circles of human life; he becomes more and more a part of the great human world that surrounds him. And, if he be not a petty soul, he mingles the current of his own being more and more with the great currents of the universe, and finds peace, even in his increasing solitude, through an ever-increasing oneness with the All."

The worth and necessity of Isolation are most happily exhibited in the proper prosecution of reforms. True reform, like true charity, begins at home; and the man who sincerely wishes to do good service in humanity's great cause will first equip himself with power and purity. The character of the whole depends on the character of the parts. Society can possess no excellence which it does not get from its individual members. Then is it not most arrant egotism to preach crusades against the faults of others, while one's own character lacks the very elements that might make him helpful to his fellows?

"And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?"

"Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, let me pull out the mote out of thine eye, and behold a beam is in thine own eye?"

"Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

Carlyle has pitifully told us that the man who tries to reform the world is a fool—let him first reform himself! Many and many a good cause has been doomed to hopeless failure for the simple reason that it was cursed with unworthy champions. The world is quick to detect insincerity and untruth, and when men who are neither truthful nor sincere assume control of a reform, be its object never so worthy, the whole scheme staggers and groans under the weight of infamy and reproach justly cast upon its leaders. He who aspires to do his fellow-men a service should first consider his own strength. As the individual feels his powers expanding, he attains to a clearer, higher appreciation of his own work in life; and his zeal in the service of humanity may be measured by his faithfulness in fitting himself for the important task.

If sought in society demands reform, the true man will not be slow to give all needed help; but first he will equip himself with the complete habiliments of war, so that he may do battle worthily, bringing no dishonor to himself or to his cause. And when once within the lists he will fight valiantly until the end is gained.

Isolation is the true reformer's armory. Many a noble champion of a noble cause has there found the weapons with which to win a glorious victory.

To Isolation England owes the character of him who led the Barons in their struggle with King John. When the unwilling monarch met the great men of his realm at Runnymede, and recognized his subjects' rights by the grant of Magna Charta, to Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, the richest meed of victory belonged. In 1205, a contest rose between the Churchmen and King John as to who should fill the See of Canterbury. Disregarding the demands of both, Innocent III. bestowed the place on Langton; but not until the King was humbled to the condition of a vassal to the Pope of Rome was the new Archbishop allowed to land on English soil. Once there, Langton was numbered among the friends of civil liberty. He discovered and proclaimed the long-forgotten charter of King Henry I. He prevailed upon the barons to unite their forces and their fortunes, and demand their ancient rights. He refused to lead the powers of the Church to further King John's plans. He disregarded the demands of Innocent himself, when ordered to excommunicate the rebellious barons. Through all that eventful struggle, ending in the granting of the Great Charter, Langton was the very embodiment of that independence which he so much loved. He was Primate of England; but the man rose high above the office; and to his own personality there attached a nobility, and dignity, and power that no title could enhance. He was a Roman prelate, and yet a lover of liberty. He was the pet of a Pope, and yet the firm defender of the temporal against the spiritual power. He was foisted upon England as the price of her disgrace, and yet lived to confer on her unnumbered blessings. He stood at first the living emblem of England's slavery to Rome, and yet became the apostle and high priest of her deliverance from bondage to both Pope and King.

From ancient England we turn to modern Italy, seeking a second illustration of our theme; for the influence of Isolation is bounded by no age or clime. It is the spring of 1849, and the civilized world is anxiously awaiting the issue of events at Rome. The city is girt about with fortifications and defences. The walls are guarded at every point. Streets and squares are filled with barricades, while in the capital is gathered a little army of devoted patriots, ready to do and to dare for the republic of Rome! The power of France, obedient to the exiled Pope, hastens to the attack; and now, before the battlements of the Eternal City, there is to be a struggle for Italian unity and independence.

Who heads the hosts of freedom in this contest? Among the many thousands of brave men within the walls of Rome, who stands preëminent in zeal and courage? Of all who have toiled and sacrificed, of all who have labored and endured, whose name deserves first mention?

To Garibaldi is this proud distinction due. He is the leader of the people. He, above all others, is most earnest and most brave. He it is, who has struggled longest and suffered most that Italy might become a free, united nation.

What is the secret of this hero's power? How gained he such a wonderful control over the hearts and minds of men? The story of Garibaldi's life reads like a romance. It is the history of a growing individuality, stamped with the impress of one unwavering purpose. In boyhood he dreamed of a United Italy; and when upon his father's ships he heard the sailors sing of the fair land from which they sailed, his young heart beat quick with hope that some day there would indeed be an Italy of which men might sing with pride. In his youth he learned of plans that were even then forming for the restoration and redemption of his land; and from that time he made this cause his own. In early manhood he went to South America and rendered service, never to be forgotten, to the republicans of Rio Grande. But through these years Italy was ever in his thoughts. He left family and friends, not alone to aid a struggling people on an alien shore (though he did this grandly), but also the better to fit himself for the mighty contest that was coming on at home. And when at last the contest came, how eagerly he hurried to his post! The part he bore in that strange strife, from its auspicious beginning to its unhappy end, stands as an enduring monument to Garibaldi's greatness. The man had led a life of Isolation. In the quiet of his thoughts he made his plans and preparations. In the conduct of his life he ever kept one end in view. And when the time was ripe for action, the pent-up powers that had been gathering within him burst forth in such a blaze of glory that the whole world marvelled at his deeds.

Nor are our own times lacking in examples. There was one man in public life, of whom death has but lately robbed us, who was conspicuous for his love of Isolation. Through it he attained a most marvellous development of mind and character; and, withal, he had a passionate love of the right and hatred of the wrong, that made him prince of all reformers of our day.

Charles Sumner's great opportunity came to him unthought; but it did not find him unprepared. When the legislature of Massachusetts sent him to the Senate, it changed the whole current of his life. It took him from a scholarly retirement and sent him forth as champion in a momentous strife. It called upon the man of letters to leave his books, and busy himself with the concerns of suffering humanity. Wise was the choice that Massachusetts made. Nobly did her Senator perform the work to which he was assigned. The cause of emancipation needed a leader, whose mind should be replete with learning, and in whose heart should dwell a fearless, deathless loyalty to duty. Every want was satisfied in Sumner. The manner of his life had made him what he was. He courted solitude. Books were his delight. Study was his almost constant occupation. In society, both in this country and across the sea, he enjoyed the companionship of the first statesmen and scholars of the time. Everywhere and always he was intent on the perfect development of his character, striving to make it strong and pure. And when his native State called on him to use his ample powers in furthering a great reform, he sprang to the front, displaying the full wealth of his equipment; and in all that makes man loved as friend or feared as foe, he towered high above every other champion on either side.

His whole life is a tribute to the worth and power of a well-rounded individuality. Isolation, indeed, mourned a worthy son when the funeral-bells tolled Charles Sumner's requiem. He was a man "without fear and without reproach."

In fine, then, Isolation is the power that moves the world. It works on society through man, regenerating and purifying the one by developing and strengthening the other. It leads man to recognize his own personality, and the rights which naturally attach thereto. It incites him to strengthen and adorn that personality, that it may serve some useful purpose in the world. And when injustice attempts to deprive him of his inborn rights, man rises in the dignity of his Isolation to repel the foul assault. Isolation does more than this for man. When once he has arrived at a full realization of his own dignity and worth, the great truth dawns upon him that he is but one of a vast assembly of independent entities. There are other natures like unto his own, with similar abilities and similar desires. There are other beings, each of whom is conscious of his own personality, and justly claims for it a recognition. When this thought takes full possession of the mind, man holds out his hand to man as to a brother, and between them there arises a reciprocity of rights. Thus does Isolation exercise a double influence on man. It tends to make him worthy of the world's regard, and it moves him to respect the sacred and inviolable rights of others.

How beautiful is a pure and lofty character! What nobility inheres in well-developed manhood! How happy is the life of him, who, having clothed his personality with dignity and grace, devotes himself to the amelioration of his neighbor!

Such is the character and such the life made possible by Isolation. It ennobles and purifies the aspirations of the soul. It strengthens and expands the mind, equipping it with the power of independent thought. It dwells within the heart like a benediction, filling it with a charity which, in its encircling arms, enfolds humanity.—The Chronicle, Ann Arbor, Michigan, June 30, 1876.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

"PROUDHON AND HIS TRANSLATOR" AGAIN.

BY STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

IN THE INDEX of July 13, 1876, Mr. Benj. R. Tucker criticises my criticism of Proudhon, published in a previous issue of THE INDEX (June 22). Permit me to use a small portion of space for a reply. For the most part the tone of Mr. Tucker's article is elevated and courteous, his appreciation of what he approves in mine ample and generous, and his discriminations in behalf of Proudhon full of a devotedness alike honorable to the head and heart of the disciple. In some of the cases in which he finds fault with me I think he has misapprehended me; in others our judgments differ; in one or two he is partially right, and in one, at least, he is in danger of falling below the dignity of the occasion, and dealing in the insinuation of bad motive, and in vituperation.

In my comments on Proudhon's use and repeated use of the phrase "property is impossible," I did not deny, but distinctly affirmed, that, in the sense he meant, he made out his case. I was simply showing that it was a blinding statement for the ordinary reader, instead of an illuminating one; more calculated, as I said, to astound than to convince; to repel than to attract; to confuse than to enlighten—wholly apart from the question whether there might or might not be a hidden sense in which it was true, and in which, if the reader would go along with him (a fact rendered doubtful by the seeming absurdity), he might convince him of its truth.

In my first sentence (objected to), I was stating, not my own ultimate estimate of the proposition, which I reserved for the next sentence, but the natural train of reasoning which would pass through the mind of the reader at its announcement; the first-blush impression; and it seems that I, too, presumed too much, as I was accusing Proudhon of doing, upon the intelligence of my reader, and for want of more explication of the idea failed to be understood. I was endeavoring to show that the love of such surprises—stating what, in a sense to be afterwards explained, is essentially true, but which when first put seems absurd—sometimes prevents Proudhon from being lucid or easily apprehended. It was a trivial criticism, if you will, upon style merely; but it was what I thought, and I think so still.

Mr. Tucker's next point is allied with this. He adopts and praises my rendering of Proudhon's meaning in his celebrated aphorism, Property is robbery. I had said this: What he means by property is that subtle fiction which makes that mine or thine of which we are out of possession, for which we have no present use, but which by this subtle tie we may recall at our option, using it in the mean time to subjugate others to our service by taking increase for its use, in the form of rent, interest, and the like. In this definition there are two branches, one covering the proprietorship, and the other a nefarious use of that proprietorship, which I say, and Mr. Tucker assents, Proudhon associates, as if inseparable, with the proprietorship itself. Either the necessity or the propriety of this association I deny, and because I do so, Mr. Tucker accuses me of forgetting and departing from the beautiful definition I had just made of Proudhon's formula. I hope that simply showing that I understand a man does not bind me to agree with him. Having defined Proudhon's meaning, I then dissent, in part, from the correctness of his idea. Mr. Tucker's head is set whirling, he says, by this complication of discriminations, and he is afraid he will get muddled if he does not at once desist from the effort to comprehend me. I would gently encourage him to try again. He will get possession of his wits presently, and the whole thing will come clear to him.

If Mr. Tucker had been old enough to have taken an interest in the old anti-slavery discussions, he would have been familiar with the question, whether slave-holding is, in itself, sinful, or whether it is the abuses of the power it gives which are so. The same question arises here whether it is proprietorship, per se, which is wrong, or only an oppressive use which may be made of the power it gives. Differently from my verdict in the case of slavery, I was now favoring the latter view, pointing out the fact that Proudhon involves the two things in the same definition, and objecting that they ought not to be so confounded. Is there anything so awfully confounding in all this? Whether Proudhon is right or I am right, I am certain that Mr. Tucker's mental capacity is amply good for the comprehension of the difference.

The space which I can presume on in the columns of THE INDEX will not allow me to make a full answer to Mr. Tucker's points in his next paragraph. He concedes that I am partially justified in one of my views by the language of Proudhon, though he thinks Proudhon meant otherwise. In that particular the onus lies with him. Upon the other point, my mere opinion and general estimate, not from this particular book, but from his whole labors, that the genius of Proudhon was, in predominance, critical and destructive, rather than constructive, I have at least, in respect to manner, the concurrence of an authority to which Mr. Tucker greatly defers. What I said was mildness itself compared with a dictum of his friend William H. Green. I quote from his little work called Mutual Banking (pp. 21, 22). He is speaking of Money and Banking, a work by William Beck, assuming also Mr. Beck to be the writer. "In the pages of Proudhon," Mr. Green says, "socialism appears as an avenging fury, clothed in garments dipped in the sulphur of the bottomless pit, and armed for the punishment of imbeciles, liars, scoundrels, cowards, and tyrants; in those of Mr. Beck, she presents herself as a constructive and beneficent genius, the rays of her heavenly glory intercepted by a double veil of simplicity and modesty. Mr. Beck's style has none of the infernal fire and profundity which cause the reader of the Contradictions Economiques to shudder; you seek in vain in his sentences for the vigor and intense self-consciousness of Proudhon; yet the thoughts of Proudhon are there."

I come now to what Mr. Tucker most, and with most show of reason, complains of. I said that Proudhon proposed a return to a primitive state of equality, whereas (as I also meant) the true thing is a constant advance to higher states of scientific harmonization between equality and inequality. Mr. Tucker admits, if I understand him, that I am right in insisting on the inequality, as an equal factor,—what Proudhon wholly omits,—and I admit that my language does not imply a sufficiently careful reading of the fifty-sixth page. I was misled by the inconsistency on equality of conditions as the whole truth; the designation of the departure from an assumed primitive equality as a "degeneracy" (which from my point of view would be a growth); the phrase that if Providence placed the first human beings in a condition of equality it was an indication of its desires, etc., and by the repeated use on the same page of the phrase "returning to," with reference to this idea of equality. My eye catching these phrases, I thought that I recognized the old, familiar doctrine about returning to a state of nature, and I partly overlooked the modifying words "in other forms," which I ought to have noticed. Measured, therefore, by the standard which I now see Proudhon entertained, I did him injustice; but measured by what I had in mind, as the true mode of viewing the subject, and by his failure explicitly to insist on the ideas of growth and advance, instead of degeneracy and return, I doubt whether the injustice is more than apparent. Such as it was and is, however, it was wholly unintentional that I should fall to present his idea fairly, and I am obliged to Mr. Tucker for correcting me. I could make myself better understood on this difference between growth and degeneracy with more space to expand the subject.

As if to pay me off for this oversight, Mr. Tucker adds in this connection, that my three universalistic principles, Unism, Duism, and Trinism, were known to Proudhon from Hegel in Germany, called by them Thesis, Antithesis, and Synthesis; that they go back to the Kabbalists, etc. In the announcement of all this, substantially, I am beforehand with Mr. Tucker, as more familiarity with my ideas would have made him aware; only, to be particular, it was Fichte, back of Hegel, who first explicitly propounded Thesis, Antithesis, and Synthesis. In The Basic Outline of Universalism, I have traced the same ideas also to Pythagoras, and, indeed, with proximate definiteness they form the staple of thought of all the great classifiers and thinkers of all ages and countries. But they are not, for that reason, either, on the one hand, false, nor, on the other hand, sufficiently explicit and definite to have a specific scientific value. Unism, Duism, and Trinism, while substantially like the other trio, are still vitally different. The likeness, or sameness, is readily apprehended; the difference not so readily, without a conscientious study of the subject. It consists in identifying Thesis, Antithesis, and Synthesis with the root-ideas of the mathematics, thereby carrying them over from vague philosophizing generalizations, and converting them, by this new alliance, into the basis of the unity of the sciences, and into an absolute guide for all classifications, mental and physical, from the broadest generalizations to the minutest particulars. The difference is, therefore, the new and the main element, and it is that which Mr. Tucker has failed to appreciate.

Frankly, then, it is to the study and comprehension of this discovery that I hoped to divert Mr. Tucker's attention, as I once thought he gave me some reason to think that I might. In my first article I veiled my intention somewhat, ex gratia modestly, to assert the existence of a better way; although I have never quite comprehended why it should be immodest to tell a truth simply because it is a big one. But Mr. Tucker has penetrated the "animus" of my allusion to prior great changes in the scientific status of things.

Yes, certainly, it has come to this, that a single decade is quite sufficient to change the proper method of scientific investigation, provided that, during that decade, a real and all-comprehensive discovery touching that very matter has been made. Whether such a discovery has been made or not is a simple question of fact, and need not be the occasion of bad blood. It has been said, I think by the editor of some of Proudhon's works, that he discovered nothing, but elucidated much. If, then, to his genius of elucidation and device are due views so profound that "one fears to present even the outline of them, lest he may overtop credulity," how much more critical the situation, if a discovery as single and definite as anything of Kepler or Newton were in question, and which claimed to traverse the ground traversed by Proudhon, to furnish a canon of criticism upon what has been done, and to reveal an ocean of new truth not heretofore dreamed of!

Yes, precisely what I mean is that Mr. Tucker would ward off future regrets, and save half a lifetime, if he could and would come squarely up abreast of the real questions of the hour, and cease to act upon old methods when a better is known. I am sorry it is an offence for me to tell him so. The Pantarchy is not exactly something to be "joined," as one joins the Methodist Church, or a debating society, but rather something to be arrived at by increased knowledge; but one can be helped in the matter, if he is not too captious. Mr. Tucker may, perhaps, recognize the probability that there were, in France, during the lifetime of Proudhon, several brave and noble-minded young Tuckers, whose clear and impartial comprehension of him, and whose sympathy and devoted help, would have been everything to "the master"; but that they were too busily and earnestly engaged in just waking up to the appreciation of the thought of some thinker of the just-previous age, and consequently, perhaps, predisposed to disesteem him, without any adequate effort to understand him. He may, perhaps, even conceive that Proudhon might, years before, have studied, comprehended, absorbed, and transcended the very thought which these young devotees were so assiduous in mastering, and which, if mastered, might help, in another twenty years, to bring them to the vantage-ground which he then occupied, and was only too anxious to share with them. Can he not think that, if they could have seen it so, they would have saved him and economized their forces, if they had begun at the other end in his school, and gone back, subsequently and incidentally, upon the past; and can he not also think that true as all this might have been, he would only have made himself suspected, and have got himself snubbed for his pains, if he had ventured to tell them so? There is so much human nature in people, that it is difficult to tell what, under certain circumstances, one should do. What right has Mr. Tucker to talk flippantly of my "foolishly persisting" in asserting the transcendent value of what he cannot judge of? How does he know that every word of what I say, and more, is not true? Is he sure that it is not he that is making the blunder of arrogance? The dogmatism of ignorance is as old, and, I suppose, as immodest, as the dogmatism of knowledge.

THE MORAL SIDE OF THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

THE INDEX, I believe, has ever been ready to defend right in every field of human action, and to give a reason for the faith it upholds; but in occasional out-givings on the great financial question of the day, the tone seems to be more the reflection of Boston than reason.

The terms "soft" and "hard money" have little significance in expressing the practical financial question before the country.

At this time there is a difference of about twelve hundredths between the value, or purchasing power, of a gold dollar and a greenback dollar. This difference the government stands pledged to add to the greenback dollar in a little more than two years, meanwhile holding the greenback dollar free from taxation.

But it is perfectly plain that this increase of purchasing power cannot be given to the greenback dollar without a corresponding decline taking place in everything else. If a yardstick is lengthened, it takes more cloth to measure the same number of yards. If the size of the bushel is increased, it takes more grain to fill it; and when government, by mere legislation, increases the value of money, it decreases by the same act the value of everything else. The effect is precisely the same as if more gold were to be added to a given coin. That is, currency, if kept idle, is guaranteed growth, as it were, in the hands of the holder; but, if invested as capital in production, it is certain, under the same law, to lose through the decline of that which is produced. Hence money is necessarily withdrawn from use as capital, and there is everywhere forced idleness of labor and stoppage of production.

But this is not all, nor the worst, of the evil that follows this policy.

The withdrawal of money from use, under the influence of the existing Resumption law, reacts in a more than geometrical ratio on prices generally, and that in two ways. First, it is only money, as John Stuart Mill has shown, that is offered in the market against goods, that acts on prices; and hence the withdrawal of money from the open market amounts in effect to a contraction of the currency far greater than the Treasury Reports show; and, secondly, the constant decline in prices decreed by the Resumption act necessarily destroys confidence in the success of enterprise and industry, and with confidence go all instruments of credit that in ordinary times play so important a part in the affairs of trade and business.

Under these influences prices decline till to-day the great staples, wool, cotton, iron, steel, and, in fact, products generally, are lower in currency than they were in gold, on the average, for the ten years preceding the war. Debtors are ruined because the government has altered the value of money so that often twice the property is required to discharge the same debt that would have been necessary, if prices had remained as they were when the debt was created. Laborers who, by industry and economy, have applied their earnings to a home fund that the smallest balance takes all to satisfy it now. Industry finds no profit; idle money alone brings gain.

I think the above are facts which no one looking over the field can deny. On what principle, then, of equity or right is a course that brings these results in its train to be justified? It is a mistake to suppose it is sanctioned by any sound principle of political economy; for if there is any one thing clearly taught, it is that the value of money cannot be arbitrarily altered in any country or at any time without working the greatest injustice, either to debtors or creditors.

We have heard from the stump and from the press continually of the wickedness of altering the value of money by depreciating it, whereby creditors are cheated; but never a word as to the wrong of altering it by appreciation, whereby debtors are robbed.

The moral side of the press (THE INDEX not excepted) has been quick to point out the unfairness of cheating creditors by depreciating money, but seldom anything denunciatory of cheating debtors by changing, through legislation, the value of money, whereby a double amount of property is required to pay a given debt.

The entire debts of the country, private, municipal, State, and national, gauged by the quantity of property or commodities required to discharge them, have been nearly doubled since 1873, and as the last act in a drama of wickedness unsurpassed in any country, we have deposed silver from its place as money, and declared for gold only, simply because it is the more valuable and will give more to creditors.

It is susceptible of positive proof that the demonetizing of silver by Germany, and taking gold in its place, has, by increasing the uses for gold, operated to permanently augment the value of this metal throughout the world, by at least eight per cent., and the demonetizing of paper (greenbacks) money in this country, and calling for gold to take its place, must enhance the value of gold, as compared with other things, ten or twelve per cent. more.

Hence, with all the decline in prices we are no nearer gold than we were three years ago. With the single standard it is possible for a foreign state, India, for instance, by demonetizing silver and adopting the gold standard alone, to augment the burden of our national debt by ten or twenty per cent., by simply raising the value of the standard that measures it.

Now we have no disagreement to adjust with the advocates of metallic money, but we denounce the present Resumption policy as, in effect, a gigantic system of robbery,—robbery of the debtor, by arbitrarily appreciating the value of money while in use, as the common measure of value in all the exchanges of the country, robbery of industry, by causing a forced depreciation of everything produced. Now where is the justification of this policy? If THE INDEX can point it out, it will have discovered principles of ethics unknown to the writer. The only justification ever heard is that during the war money was depreciated, and thereby creditors wronged. Granted; and certainly it is just as wrong to cheat creditors by arbitrarily depreciating money as it is to rob debtors by appreciating it; and without here raising the question of the wisdom of the policy of the government at that time, nothing could justify it but that condition of things which justified taking the citizen and compelling him to serve in the army or navy at such rate of pay as the government saw fit to prescribe, and in such kind of money, too, as the government in its extremity could give him. But if taking the person was justifiable, who would say taking capital was not likewise justifiable,—for is not life more than meat, the body more than raiment?

But we are not now righting a wrong done then. That can no more be than severed limbs can be restored, or the exact value of each and every life given to save the nation determined, and adequate compensation rendered.

We are simply committing another wrong—a wrong immeasurably greater than that of depreciating the value of money then, for then only creditors were wronged, but now not only all debtors are equally wronged, but industries are overthrown, and labor everywhere forced into idleness; for the ulterior consequences of altering the value of money by appreciating it are the reverse of depreciation in their influences on industries, trade, and commerce, as Hume long ago pointed out.

We hold, then, this truth to be self-evident—that it is as wrong to alter the value of money whereby debtors are robbed as it is to alter it so that creditors are cheated. In other words, if he who would pay but one dollar where two dollars are owed cheats, he is not much short of a thief, at heart, who would exact two dollars where but one is due. The principle is not changed in either case if the difference is wrought by the chicanery of legislation.

Mr. James Wilson expresses this when he says (Capital, Currency, and Banking): "When governments or monarchs interfere with or alter the intrinsic value of money, a practical fraud is committed on all existing creditors if its value is depreciated, and on all existing debtors if its value is appreciated."

Mr. J. R. McCulloch with no less truth says: "To elevate the standard after it has been for a considerable period depressed is not a measure of justice, but of new injustice."

Greenback notes, as evidences of debt merely, must not be confounded with greenback money. As evidences of debt simply—certificates of the Treasury due at sight,—every one could be paid, as the rest of our war-debt has been largely paid, in thirty days, without the least shock to business.

If five per cent. bonds will sell for gold, they will for greenbacks. I repeat, then, as mere certificates of the Treasury due at sight, the greenback notes could be taken up in thirty days without disturbing anything. But that is not the problem we are trying to work out. It is to retain the greenback currency as money, and, while in use as money, change its value, and then, at the end of a given time, demonetize it and pay it as a debt; and this for the reasons above given we hold is what no government has a moral right to do. We hold it to be as wrong in ethics as it is unsound in political economy.

But it is rather the moral aspect of the question that we have chosen to bring out in this letter, and it is more especially that aspect of the question that we have desired to see presented in THE INDEX.

A. J. WARNER.

MARIETTA, Ohio, July 13, 1876.

GENERAL DIX ON CHURCH TAXATION.

Ex-Governor Dix, of New York, a few months ago published a letter in the Albany Journal which is so extraordinary a production as to merit preservation in these columns as a curiosity of Orthodox literature. When the most eminent Christians betray such wrong-headedness in treating a question of simple morality, and such ingenuity in devising excuses for robbing the community at large, the pretension of the churches to be exempted from taxation on the score of exerting a "good moral influence" becomes an unconscious but cutting satire on themselves. Church exemption, being a violation of good morals, is neither more nor less than one species of civic immorality; and the longer it is continued, the more completely and irremediably are the churches destroying their own prestige as the supposed guardians of the moral interests of mankind. Premising that nobody expects to put God on the tax-list, that the only proposition is to require the owners of church property to pay their just share of the public expense of protecting it, and that the motives of those who favor this proposition are quite as respectable as the motives of those who oppose it, we invite attention to General Dix's typically Orthodox effusion:—

NEW YORK, March 7, 1876.

MY DEAR SIR:—

"I was surprised and grieved to learn that the taxation of church edifices had been seriously and even earnestly advocated before the Committee of Ways and Means in the Assembly. It is virtually a proposition to impose a tax on the worship of Almighty God, unless it is rendered in the open air, or in some building already subject to taxation. No one objects to the taxation of any church property devoted to secular uses. It is the imposition of taxes on houses of worship that is so objected to as a profanation of that which should be held sacred.

"One of the advocates of the measure commends to us the example of the primitive Christians in regard to out-door service, as if a parallel could be drawn between the climate of Judea, radiant with sunshine and perennial bloom all the year round, and ours, in which (extraordinary seasons excepted) we are buried in snow two or three months, and pinched with cold, even when under cover, two or three more.

"Another says that the Apostles achieved their successes without churches.

"But these references to the habits of the early followers of the Savior manifest an extremely superficial knowledge of ecclesiastical history. The last supper was administered by Him in an upper room, and most of His teachings were in the synagogues. The Acts of the Apostles show that they preached in the Temple at Jerusalem, whenever they were allowed to do so, and in the synagogues at Antioch, Thessalonica, Athens, Corinth, Ephesus, and wherever else they went. They used Jewish houses of worship because they had none of their own. After the ascension of their Divine Master his followers were for a long period of time the objects of Jewish and Pagan persecution, sustained by the temporal authorities, and their worship was conducted in hiding-places, sometimes in catacombs in the bosom of the earth. If they had been blessed with the religious toleration which we enjoy, and had our wealth, there is every reason to believe that they would have built houses of worship as tasteful and costly as our own. The instinct of all communities of men is to erect for the worship of their Creator edifices responding to their conceptions of His majesty and his beneficence. There are, as we all know, more inexpensive than expensive houses of worship; but it is because, in the great majority of religious societies, there is an inability to do more. It is creditable to Christians of all denominations that their expenditures for religious worship are only limited by their pecuniary means. We cannot doubt that the primitive Christians entertained as elevated views of the dignity of the service due to their Heavenly Father as their Israelitic predecessors, who built the Temple of Jerusalem. The Divine Founder of our faith gave an impressive proof of His conception of the sacred character of edifices consecrated to the service of God, by driving the money-changers out of the temple,—the only act of violence in His meek and compassionate life; and I trust we shall have courage and reverence enough to imitate His example, and prevent the money-changers from getting a foothold in our houses of worship and converting them into dens of thieves.

"As soon as the primitive Christians ceased to be objects of persecution and were protected by their civil rulers, they began to erect expensive houses of worship; and from the era of Constantine they converted splendid Pagan temples to the service of their Maker. There are now in the city of Rome seven or eight of these temples reclaimed from heathenism and consecrated to Christian worship. From that day to this—during the lapse of nearly sixteen hundred years,—no government has undertaken to make church-edifices pay tribute for the privilege of worshipping God. Even the Pagans, through the veneration in which they held the temples dedicated to their idols, manifest more reverence than the promoters of this raid upon religious worship. No movement has given such encouragement and comfort to unbelievers who would create every possible impediment to the progress of Christian teaching, as this proposal to tax church-edifices. Sectarian dissensions have succeeded in driving religious instruction out of the public schools; and now cupidity and unbelief would break down the Sunday-schools by pecuniary impositions upon the edifices in which they are held, and set communities and neighborhoods at work to calculate the cash value of religious worship.

"It is difficult to conceive that the proposition could have had its origin in any other breast than one unfriendly to all church organizations, or one in which the love of money is the predominant passion. If those who have set on foot this movement want more money, let them tax their rum, their tobacco, their pictures, fast horses, game-dogs, liquor-saloons, dance-houses, clubs, theatres, diamonds, equipages,—everything, in short, which ministers to their pleasures, their tastes, and their sensual indulgences. Nay, let them tax their seminaries of learning, their institutions devoted to human science, and even the grounds in which the unconscious bones of their ancestors repose, rather than invade with mercenary exactions the edifices devoted to the worship of Almighty God, and to the teaching of our duty to Him and our neighbors.

"Some of the abettors of this movement have had the magnanimity to let us understand that they are ready to compromise with the Sovereign Ruler. They will make reasonable concessions. They will allow one thousand dollars of the value of each of His churches to be exempt from taxation, and only exact of Him payment on the residue. They may, perhaps, go so far as to allow Him two thousand dollars,—as much as it would cost a well-to-do farmer to house his horses and his horned cattle. There is a degree of sublimity in this condescension which beggars all comment, and I dismiss it. With those who think the Almighty sufficiently honored by rendering Him homage in buildings no better than barns and outhouses, no matter how abundant the pecuniary means of the worshippers, and who attach no more sanctity to one class of those edifices than to the other, it would be equally fruitless and humiliating to hold any parley or conference. In manifold instances both in the Old and New Testaments a house of worship is called the house of God, and it is always named with appropriate expressions of reverence. The universal heart responds to this designation; and no matter how humble the edifice consecrated to His service, all men when within its hallowed walls feel more sensibly than they do amid the turmoil of the outer world that they are in the presence of the Omnipotent Being, by whom the great forces of the universe are moved and controlled, and that by ignoring Him they renounce all hope of a higher state of existence.

"The scheme should be repudiated and denounced in all its parts. One can hardly debate it without a feeling of abasement. It is not a subject for human logic. It is not a problem of profit and loss, to be argued by religious obligation on one side and financial cupidity on the other. It is a matter of instinct, of inborn reverence, of the consciousness which every mind, not perverted by the sophistications of worldly science, has of its own immeasurable inferiority to the Sovereign Ruler of the universe, and of the homage it owes Him as its creator and redeemer. There is something revolting to the moral sense in its normal state in the idea of making a mercenary profit out of an edifice consecrated to His service. When this inner sense is wanting, argument is fruitless.

"The most attractive objects which meet us in our travels in Europe are the cathedrals. Amid all the wars, the bloodshed, the barbarities, the desolation which nations have visited upon each other, under the misguidance of their evil passions, these monuments of their faith and their devotion come out from the dark background of the picture in bright relief as sacred tributes to the Creator of the universe. No man can stand beneath their domes and vaulted roofs without feeling that they atone for much of the wrong committed by their authors, who lavished on them without stint the wealth they would otherwise have wasted on ostentatious gratifications or unholy indulgences. Heaven forbid that the lesson of these comparatively uncivilized ages should be lost on us, and that in this day of intellectual light and social refinement the tax-gatherer should be sent to fill his bag of lucre by levying contributions on the sanctuaries of the living God!

"I do not believe that any community which seeks to throw its secular expenses on the worship of God, by levying contributions on the edifices consecrated to His service, can long escape the chastisement it provokes. It is not necessary to look for special visitations of ill as manifestations of His displeasure. Cupidity, selfishness, rapacity, the profanation of things which should be held sacred, carry with them, by the force of immutable laws, the retribution denounced by the codes they violate.

"All religious denominations have the same interest in preventing their houses of worship from being desecrated and secularized by taxation. As was beautifully expressed by Madame de Staël: 'Their ceremonies are strongly contrasted: but the same sigh of distress, the same petition for support, ascends to heaven from all.'

"It seems to me that this whole movement is calculated to create in the breasts of reflecting persons a feeling of profound sorrow and unmitigated disgust. The proper mode of treating it is to scout it out of the committee rooms, legislative halls, and social circles which it has defiled by its presence. To give it any countenance would be to furnish new ground for the national reproach too often cast upon us, that the almighty dollar is the chief object of our adoration.

"Very truly yours,

"JOHN A. DIX.

"ORLANDO MEADS, Esq., Albany."

THE TWO INDIAN POLICIES.

Some of the Canadian journals are discussing what ought to be done should the hostile Sioux be defeated by the United States troops, and driven over the border; and it seems Mr. Taylor, United States Consul at Winnipeg, has been publishing letters predicting trouble in case such an event should occur, unless a treaty should be framed to meet the contingency. A writer in the Winnipeg Standard, Mr. Morgan Coldwell, reviews the whole subject, and as his views undoubtedly represent those of the majority of Canadians, they are worthy of notice. He holds that a treaty binding the Canadian government to treat the Sioux as enemies, in case they should, after defeat, take refuge on Canadian soil, would be a violation of the sacred right of sanctuary, which the British government would never permit; but even if such a treaty were practicable it would be in the highest degree impolitic. The policy, he says, of Canada and that of the United States with regard to the Indian have been widely different, and any entangling alliance with the United States on the Indian question would be likely to involve Canada in the same troubles that have cost us so dear. In Canada the tribes are peaceable, molesting no one, while upon this side of the border bloody and costly Indian wars constantly rage. We quote from his argument:—

"We will not change our policy with regard to red men; we will continue to mete out to them the same measure of justice, and afford them the same protection, as we accord to white men. So far our hands are clean,—no Indian blood stains them; under our rule no Indian has ever been put to death by the government, except by the same process of law that sends the white man to the gallows."

What Mr. Coldwell asserts is unfortunately true. When Indians are robbed or murdered by the whites in Canada, the transgressors are punished with as much severity as if it were whites who had been wronged, while all the agreements made with the Indians by the Canadian authorities are fulfilled with scrupulous exactness. With us, however, the Indians are treated as if they had no right even to existence; friendly and peaceable bands have been wantonly slaughtered, not only by frontier ruffians, but by regular troops acting under the orders of officers so high in rank as Gen. Sheridan; and the agents of the government who have been appointed to disburse the enormous appropriations made for the Indians have robbed them without mercy. Hundreds of innocent lives in unprotected settlements have been sacrificed to this ruinous and dishonest policy, and no one can foresee what the end will be, now that our people have undertaken to wrongfully wrest from the most warlike Indian nation on the continent the last remnant of their lands, after the government had solemnly guaranteed to protect those Indians in the sole and exclusive possession thereof. It is no wonder that the Canadians, who have enjoyed the benefits of an entirely different policy, look with disfavor upon any proposal for an agreement which would expose them to the disastrous effects which have resulted from our faithless dealings with a weaker race.—N. Y. Sun, July 12.

IF LIFE be a pleasure, yet since death also is sent by the hand of the same Master, neither should that displease us.—Michel Angelo.

ENTHUSIASM is the leaping lightning, not to be measured by the horse-power of the understanding.—Emerson.

THERE is a youth of the soul growing out of the age of our life.—E. G.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 5.

J. Gillies, $3.20; N. A. Hayward, $3.20; H. S. Thomas, $1.25; R. D. Israel, $1.90; D. Ferguson, $2; W. H. Crowell, $3.20; E. Butterworth, $3.20; J. G. Jenkins, $2; J. A. Gager, $3.20; F. A. Angell, $2; M. C. Macmillan, 10 cents; C. S. Metcalfe, 20 cents; J. A. Morton, 10 cents; Chas. F. Schirmer, $3.20; John Bentley, $3; J. M. Lyon, $3.20; G. A. Lane, 20 cents; H. Willis, 10 cents; Cash, 80 cents; J. L. Stoddard, $1.35; W. B. Stone, 30 cents; W. F. Hopkins, $1; Chas. Voysey, $25.87; L. Tucker, $3.20; J. Burnham, $2; R. J. Turnbull, $4; I. N. Stern, $3.20; L. Kingma, $5.20; J. D. White, $3; Mrs. R. P. Maynard, $1.00; H. C. Wilmer, $3; Peter Newcomer, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credits.

N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

N. B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, AUGUST 10, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 36 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERNEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

Acknowledged August 3,	$1025.08
Dr. G. F. Matthews, New Bedford, Mass.,	2.00
A. Friend at the Congress of Liberals,	17.50
J. E. Dixon, Springfield, Mo.,	1.00
R. M. E. Cooper, Springfield, Mo.,	1.00
D. R. Sparks, Alton, Ill.,	2.00
James Long,	2.00
Wm. Armstrong,	2.00
G. D. Mayden,	2.00
A. Seeley,	2.00
A. C. Lovejoy,	1.00
J. Vansant,	1.00
M. Bassey,	1.00
M. Wilkinson,	1.00
E. M. Goulding,	1.00
Walters,	1.00
M. M. Topping,	2.00
H. B. Bowman,	2.00
G. S. Raper,	1.00
J. A. Bruner,	1.00
C. M. Crandall,	1.00
M. C. Pierce,	1.00
J. L. Drummond,	2.00
Seeley & Hoffmeister, Alton, Ill.,	2.00
A. M. Drury,	1.00
M. J. McPike,	1.00
R. D. Maywood,	1.00
C. Kruse,	1.00
E. W. Minar,	2.00
A. J. Roger,	1.00
M. C. Moritz,	1.00
A. Mather,	1.00
W. Best,	2.00
T. M. Ferley,	2.00
W. A. Farman,	1.00
Thomas Dimmock, St. Louis,	5.00
Geo. P. Delaplaine, Madison, Wis.,	3.00
	$1094.58

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.,
805 Walnut St., Philadelphia.
PHILADELPHIA, July 31.

THE PIQUANT little parable about General Hawley, in THE INDEX of July 27, should have been credited to the Philadelphia New Century for Woman of July 8. The Boston Herald, to which we attributed it by mistake, gave the proper credit; but as we had never heard of the above paper before, we did not understand the credit at the time.

MR. A. E. MACOMBER, whose name is gratefully remembered by all warm friends of THE INDEX, has published an exceedingly valuable and interesting article on "Mortgage Credit Companies: the Crédit Foncier in France and Germany." Everybody interested in real estate will find this paper full of historical information and instruction of a very unusual kind. Mr. Macomber is qualified by experience and rare business capacity to treat his theme with the authority of an expert. This passage well illustrates the quality of his article: "The truth is that our financial system is defective on that side of it which has to do with long loans and land mortgages. The necessity of making loans easier of access to the farmers and other land owners is a question of great importance. This difficulty is at the bottom of much of the greenback agitation in the West. The farmers of Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois complain that they are forced to pay 10 to 12 per cent. for money, and that it is often unattainable at that rate. Hence they cry aloud for more and cheaper money. What they need and what they mean is that a demand exists for more capital than can be loaned." Mr. Macomber points to the newly-organized Mortgage Security Companies as "the coming institution, especially adapted to meet the demands of the most neglected industrial interest in the United States." The article is to be found in Locke's National Magazine for May, 1876, and can be had for ten cents from J. P. Jones, Toledo, Ohio.

F. R. A. ANNUAL REPORT.

The report of the annual meeting of the Free Religious Association for 1876 is published in pamphlet form.

It contains a full abstract of the discussion at the business meeting; the annual report of the executive committee; address by the president, O. B. Frothingham; essay, by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; also essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches;" with the addresses that followed it, by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss.

Price, single copy, 40 cents; package of three, $1; postage paid. Address Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

W. J. POTTER, Secretary.

NON-RESISTANCE AND NON-AGGRESSION: A SHORT STUDY IN ETHICS.

According to the first gospel, Jesus taught thus in the Sermon on the Mount: "But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

Paul taught similarly: "Recompense to no man evil for evil." "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever, therefore, resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil."

These passages express the general tenor of the whole New Testament, and are nowhere in spirit contradicted by other passages, so far as we can recall them. It is true that both Peter and James (we raise no question of authenticity now, but take the Scriptures as they are received) counsel Christians to "resist the devil"; but it is the devil alone, and not human aggressors, as appears from James himself, who says to "rich men": "Ye have condemned and killed the just [i.e. the faithful Christian], and he doth not resist you." The virtues everywhere enjoined by the New Testament are such as submission to established power, passive endurance of all its abuses, obedience to tyranny itself, meekness under provocation, resignation and non-resistance under injustice, etc. The perpetual existence of wrongs and outrages is simply taken for granted; the necessity of their occurrence is assumed; no methods or measures are contemplated to prevent them; retribution for them is left wholly to God. "Vengeance is mine: I will repay, saith the Lord." The times are so badly out of joint that it is not worth while to undertake to set them right; no Christian is charged with the task that was too heavy for the melancholy prince of Denmark. Assuming the universal prevalence of human injustice, without creating either desire or purpose to resist it, the New Testament simply teaches men to endure it unresistingly, with expectations of recompense in another world.

Now what is the natural and necessary consequence of such ethical teaching? We hold its influence to be equally unfortunate both as regards individual character and social welfare.

On the one hand, the Christian doctrine of non-resistance exalts that into a virtue which is in truth nothing but a weakness. To inculcate non-resistance as the highest or noblest manner of meeting injustice is to confound all moral values, and lose sight of the law that to acquiesce in wrong of any sort is to be demoralized by it—to suffer disintegration in the constituent fibres of character itself. Injustice is always an invasion of the sacred precincts of individuality, a reckless and ruinous encroachment upon the domain of existence marked out and reserved for the individual by Nature. To permit it, when the prevention of it is within the compass of one's power, is to allow hostile squatters on one's private estate, to suffer a portion of one's moral being to be wrested from the rightful possessor. Repeat this process often enough,—let the individual become habitually and callously passive when his rights are trampled on by others,—and his character is utterly destroyed. The man who suffers himself to be thus contemptuously overrun by any and every aggressor deteriorates morally in precisely the same manner as the woman who lives a life of prostitution; they both have lost the protective and conserving sense of the inviolability of their own individualities, and die the same spiritual death. There is no way to preserve the interior integrity of one's being but to resent and resist to the uttermost every attempt to break through that "sphere of right" which surrounds each one of us, and which must be defended from every assailant as the very citadel of the soul. "Every man, whatever his high position," says Colonel Bronnen, in Auerbach's On the Heights, "stands opposed to others enjoying equal rights in their own sphere, thus forming a barrier of right." It is no more a duty to preserve this barrier on the one side than on the other; it is no more a duty not to be unjust to others than it is to repel injustice to ourselves. It is moral death to throw down this barrier, and non-resistance levels it with the ground. Nothing but absolute powerlessness can justify any one in the passive endurance of injustice; and non-resistance, instead of being a virtue, is either a sign of outward weakness or of moral dissolution.

On the other hand, the doctrine of non-resistance exerts an equally baleful influence on social welfare. Every high interest of society suffers by the prevalence of injustice, and demands that it shall be averted in all possible ways. Those who commit injustice are the most dangerous foes to society, because they undermine the foundations of public security, public confidence, and public peace. If any individual adopts a principle of action which gives immunity to the perpetrators of injustice, he becomes a conscious or unconscious accomplice in their wickedness, and connives in their evil purposes and deeds. Now the whole experience of mankind proves that violations of equal rights (i. e. all acts of injustice), unless checked by effective penalties, tend to multiply rapidly; depredators and desperadoes desire nothing so much as passive submission in their victims, nor are they in the least disarmed by it; on the contrary, they despise the very non-resistance which helps them to their booty. Hence the necessity of civil law for the repression of such acts and the protection of their victims. But civil law cannot be maintained except by the active support of the citizens themselves; they must be disposed to take measures against the unjust, or civil law becomes a mere dead letter. In other words, each citizen must be disposed to defend his own rights, as an indispensable means of defending the rights of all; he must act on the principle of resistance to wrong, not non-resistance, out of regard to the general welfare. He must resist the aggressor upon his own individuality, not merely for his own sake, but for the sake of all his fellow-citizens, whose rights are imperilled at the same time by the escape of the guilty. In a large and broad sense, every man who acts on the principle of non-resistance commits a social crime of the same order as that known as "compounding with felony," and is a bad citizen to that extent. There must be a universal and jealous defence of private rights, or else the public welfare is undermined. "Christian" morality, therefore, just so far as it inculcates the doctrine of non-resistance, tends not only to degrade the moral character of the individual, but also to deprave, to demoralize, and to disintegrate civil society.

The moral and civil salvation of the world, however, has been brought about by the inveterate persistence of natural impulses, as opposed to artificial theological precepts. Self-assertion, or the instinctive vindication of individual rights against aggression, has rescued mankind from the moral and civil ruin into which Christianity, if practicable, would have plunged them. Everybody admits that it is impossible to "live up to" the precepts of the Christian gospel; but few suspect that it is because they are distorted and false, and that mankind are immensely better off by reason of this very impossibility. The world lives by its own non-Christian code, and always will; nature is too strong for theology to subdue. There is a natural morality based on recognition of the simple facts of life,—on knowledge of the practical necessities of social existence; and it will create its natural fruit far better when the Christian delusion has been dissipated, as it will be inevitably by the mere development of the general intelligence.

Now natural morality, dealing with society as an aggregation of constituent individuals, teaches one broad moral principle which not only corrects this theological infatuation of non-resistance, but which also lays the axe to the root of all social wrongs. It is briefly this: every individuality is inviolably sacred from all invasion just so long as it invades no other individuality. This principle teaches the absurdity of non-resistance, and commands every individual to repel all injustice, by moral means if possible, by legal means if that fails, and by forcible means if both fail; and it commands non-resistance only when effective resistance is impossible. But it does more than this. It forbids non-resistance, it is true, as demoralizing both to the individual and to society; but it also commands non-aggression. The very same principle which teaches the inviolability of one individuality teaches equally the inviolability of all other individualities; prohibiting the passive surrender of self as the victim of injustice, it also prohibits the active aggression of self as the perpetrator of it. Here is the great curative power of natural morality, whether as regards private character or public welfare. Educate all men from childhood never to submit to wrong, but also never to commit it; and the necessity of resistance to wrong disappears with the disappearance of wrong itself. Abolish aggression, and there will be no possibility of resistance. It is the great practical lesson of non-aggression that the world needs to learn, and until that lesson is learned, the pulpits that preach the gospel of non-resistance are whistling against the wind. So long as injustice is perpetrated, just so long will men resist it; and they would commit moral suicide if they did not. But when children are trained to cherish profound reverence for the equal rights of others, to refrain most scrupulously from all encroachment upon them, and thus to exercise the all-comprehensive virtue of self-control by universal ideas, then all need for resistance will be outgrown, and the era of brotherly love will indeed arrive.

Why has Christianity failed so utterly to preach this great and sublime doctrine of non-aggression—the very root of all social righteousness? For the very same reason that it has preached the false and pernicious doctrine of non-resistance: namely, its almost total ignorance of equal rights. If it had ever seen the necessity of preserving equal rights, it could never have counselled the total and voluntary sacrifice of them through unresisting submission to the aggressor. If it had been wise enough to teach non-aggression, it would have been too wise to teach non-resistance. There is scarcely a glimpse of the sacredness of equal human rights in the whole New Testament—scarcely a vague suspicion of the inviolability of individuality as such. That was not an ancient conception; it is the greatest product of modern civilization; and it is destined to do away with Christianity altogether. The religion of the future is embodied where people least think to look for it—in the Constitution of the United States and in the National Liberal League which would bring it to full fruition. The principles there contained are the fountain of peace, of happiness, of universal love, because they are the divine principles of equal justice to all. It is through equal justice to all that universal peace and love must come; there is no other way. And natural morality lays the corner-stone of the new temple in its short, simple, omnipotent principle of Non-AGGRESSION.

INTERNATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE.

There are two points of what may be called the moral of the Philadelphia International Exhibition that I do not remember to have seen dwelt upon by the correspondents who have attempted to discourse upon what they have there seen.

The thought that first specially impressed me, and that kept coming back, was, What a great place is held, among the different nations of the world, by the peaceful arts and industries of civilization, and what vast numbers of people everywhere are quietly devoting themselves to these pursuits, instead of following the more ambitious courses of politics or the more perilous courses of war, though these last are the more conspicuous affairs, of which we are constantly hearing, and which are apt to give nations their chief acquaintance with each other. Consider Spain, for instance. For several years Spain has been in the turmoil and strife of civil war. Her affairs have been bruited around the world. But it has been almost wholly of her political and military affairs that we have heard,—of revolution succeeding revolution, of the wars with Don Carlos and Cuba, of successive administrations, republican, military, monarchical, vainly attempting to govern the State; and we have heard of these things so exclusively that it seemed as if society in all its aspects must be disorganized and given over to anarchy. Yet Spain presents one of the finest sections in the Exhibition. The variety, skill, and beauty of her manufactured fabrics are worthy of the pride with which they have evidently been arranged. In view of her recent history they must excite the wonder of all who look at them. Perhaps the representatives of her industries and her present government have taken special pains in the exhibit, for the purpose of counteracting any impression which other nations may have got of her commercial ruin. But on any theory, the part that Spain takes in the Exhibition is amazing, and shows that, in spite of her civil commotions and wars, great multitudes of her people cannot have been greatly disturbed in their industrial arts and economies. And this is a great tribute to human nature, and to the inherent soundness of modern progress in civilization. The mass of mankind, not only in Spain but in all countries that are now making history, are devoted, even in the midst of civil and international wars, to the interests of peace and progress.

Naturally, Spain at this time is the most conspicuous example of this fact, but by no means the only example. Turkey, before her present war, has been for years the scene of gross civil maladministration, and we have heard but little of her affairs, except of her political disorders and impending bankruptcy. Yet Turkey makes no mean show in the Exhibition. So of other countries. The things that we hear about them through the newspapers and telegraph are most likely to be the things that are least to their credit,—the political blunders and crimes, the sway of ambitious demagogues, the strifes and revenges of nations against each other; but the International Exhibition acquaints the nations with the better side of each others' character and doings,—with the silent industrial and moral forces that keep their constant sway over the majority of people, and are quietly building up the national welfare, prosperity, and happiness.

Another reflection that specially impressed me at the Exhibition was, How is it possible for so many religions as are indirectly represented in this international demonstration to come thus together without learning more of toleration and respect for each other? Here are not only exhibits of the peaceful industry of Christians, but also of Jews, Mohammedans, Brahmanists, Confucians, Buddhists,—and all brought together on terms of equality. It is, in one aspect, a kind of Peace Congress of the different religions of mankind. Now there is a wide-spread popular opinion among Christians (of course not prevailing among the most enlightened), that all nations that are not of the Christian faith are in a condition of barbarism. But such an exposition as is here made of the industries and arts of non-Christian peoples cannot but help to correct this opinion; and to start, also, the question whether a people that can do the things which are represented here by nations called heathen can be so very barbarous in their religious beliefs and practices as they are commonly supposed among Christians to be. International commercial acquaintance tends to international religious acquaintance. I have noticed that men who have been much in countries of different faiths are apt to become broad and liberal in their religious views. They learn that human nature is everywhere essentially the same, and that, under some variety of form, it shows everywhere essentially the same capacities for moral and religious ideas. A retired sea-captain recently told me that the people, of all whom he had met in his life, who seemed to him to live most nearly in accordance with the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount were a people in a little community of India, called heathen. And one of the indirect results of every international industrial exhibition is to increase this kind of acquaintance of the religions with each other: an acquaintance which must in time manifest the fact of a kindred lineage among the different faiths of mankind.

I said above that the different religions met in the International Exhibition on equal terms. To this statement, unfortunately, the exception has to be made, that the Christian exhibitors, though acting the part of hosts, being the majority, unjustly and unhandsonely require all exhibitors and visitors of other faiths to do homage to the Christian "sacred day,"—and this though exhibitors of other faiths contribute to the success of the Exhibition by taking part in it on days by them deemed "sacred."

W. J. P.

GUIBORD is to be silently buried, but the ground will be cursed all the same. The ground was cursed, if we remember, in the year 1, at a celebrated interview with Adam and Eve.—New York Graphic.

A FEW DAYS ago a Norwich man bought a chest of tea in Providence, and on opening it found a stone inside, weighing nearly eleven pounds. He remarked that the weights of Providence are mysterious.

A MINISTER out West made all the doctors in his congregation mad by preaching from the text, "In his disease Asa sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians. And Asa slept with his fathers."

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

Mr. Tilden declares, in his letter of acceptance, that "the present depression in all the business and industries of the people has its principal cause in excessive governmental consumption"; that Federal and local taxation together, for the last eleven years, amounts to the enormous sum of $7,500,000,000; that taxation was aggravated, moreover, by unscientific and ill-adjusted methods of taxation, and by a bad financial policy; and that "for these eleven years, governmental consumption has been a larger portion of the national earnings than the whole people can possibly save, even in prosperous times, for all new investments." The remedy for the present state of affairs is to be found in obedience to the "old homely maxim, 'Live within your income'"; and in order that waste of income may be readily detected and stopped, he suggests that all appropriation bills be regulated and made distinct by a constitutional amendment, and that all independent legislation in them be forbidden. An accessory cause of business depression, Mr. Tilden suggests, "is to be found in the systematic and unsupportable misgovernment imposed on the States of the South." He believes that "the moral influence of every good citizen" should be exerted "to establish a cordial fraternity and good-will among citizens" of the different races at the South; that the constitutional amendments should be universally accepted; and that the President should do all in his power "to protect all its citizens, whatever former condition, in every political and personal right." With reference to resumption, to which question at least one-half of his long letter is devoted, Mr. Tilden believes that the national banks could resume without difficulty, and without injury to any one; that Government is the sole delinquent; but that Government resumption need not be a work of difficulty. But, with regard to resumption, preparation "is everything"; without it, "a legislative command fixing a day, an official promise fixing a day, are shams." "It cannot be doubted that the substitution of a system of preparation without the promise of a day, for the worthless promise of a day without a system of preparation, would be the gain of the substance of resumption in exchange for its shadow." With reference to our national debt, Mr. Tilden believes that the interest thereon could be reduced gradually at least one per cent., which would save $17,000,000 per year, and that this sum, invested at 4 per cent., would pay the whole debt in thirty-eight years. Mr. Tilden states, next, the principal evils of our present civil service, and advocates a thorough reform, which, however, he is convinced can be made permanently effective only by an amendment to the Constitution disqualifying the President for reelection. The letter concludes with a well-written paragraph referring to his personal experience of official life.

Of the letter of Mr. Hendricks it is hardly necessary to give an outline. He indorses the St. Louis platform; declares that the President alone should not be blamed for all the abuses of the present administration, but that "Congressional and party leaders have been stronger than the President"; discusses the financial question, favoring gradual resumption, and the repeal of the Resumption Act; believes that the Cooley system should be abolished; favors civil service reform; declares that the public schools should not be involved "in political or sectarian controversy"; speaks briefly of the Southern question; and closes with a complimentary reference to Tilden. The letter is much better than we had expected from Hendricks, and nothing in it need be seriously criticised, with the exception of his discussion of the financial question, which is wholly vitiated by his opening assertion that "gold and silver are the real standard of values." Had he said gold and tin, or rags, or copper, the absurdity of his statement would have been apparent at once; yet any one of these three articles is just now more stable and a more "real standard of values" than silver.

The Democrats surely have no reason to be ashamed of the letter of their chief candidate. It is unusually able and adroit; is admirably expressed throughout; and, in the main, must command the universal assent of political reformers. This may be strong praise, but the letter fully merits it. Mr. Tilden, in fact, has written his own best campaign speech, and it is safe to prophesy that at least nine-tenths of Democratic stump oratory for the coming three months will consist of amplifications of the good points of his letter. What Mr. Tilden says of the necessity of economy in administration; of misgovernment at the South; of the need of civil service reform; and of the preparation for resumption—cannot be disputed. It must be a galling fact, moreover, for the Republican managers to reflect upon, that many of Mr. Tilden's statements are made effective solely because of their own dishonesty and bad management, and not by reason of any arraignment of their party's principles. At least one-half of Mr. Tilden's letter, for instance, and that which he undoubtedly considers the most important part, could not have been written at all if the Republicans of the last Congress had supported their own Resumption Act with the legislation it manifestly called for; and here we should state distinctly that while we admit the validity and brilliancy of much of Mr. Tilden's reasoning upon the question of resumption, we do not admit the correctness of his conclusion that the Resumption Act should be repealed, or, at least, that its repeal would be a matter of indifference. We hold, instead, that every sentiment of national honor should urge us to put forth the most strenuous efforts to resume specie payments on the first of January, 1879, and that the suggestion of repeal should only be listened to and accepted at the very last moment and with deepest humiliation,—with the same feeling, in fact, with which an honest man shoves aside the note he has promised to pay, and intended to pay, and labored to pay, and allows to go to protest at last only because he cannot possibly pay.

What we have just said becomes more effective in the light of the recent action of the House of Representatives. On the day of the publication of Mr. Tilden's letter, and after it had been read and approved by the members of his party in the House, a repeal of the Resumption Act was forced through by a vote of 106 to 86, and this was done in utter disregard of what Tilden had written concerning the absolute necessity of preparation for resumption, and in spite of the persistent opposition of the best Democratic leaders. The repeal was put through evidently as a sop to Democratic inflationists, against a swarm of whom Mr. Tilden, if elected, would be obliged to wage a deadly war, the result of which can hardly be foreseen. On the score of ability and acquirements, and the possession of statesmanlike views, no one can question Mr. Tilden's fitness for the presidency; but it becomes daily more apparent that Mr. Tilden is not representative of the genuine sentiment of the Democratic party. With reference to civil service reform, the payment of the public debt, the introduction of independent legislation in appropriation bills, and preparation for resumption, the present Democratic House has not only done nothing in accordance with the principles advocated by Mr. Tilden, but has done all that it could to weaken the effect of what had been attempted by its Republican predecessors.

Mr. Cox, of the Banking and Currency Committee, introduced in the House, on Saturday, a bill which was passed appointing a commission of three Representatives, three Senators, and three experts, to inquire, first, into the change which has taken place in the relative value of gold and silver, with the causes and effects thereof; second, the policy of the restoration of a double standard in this country; third, the policy of continuing legal tender notes concurrently with the metallic standard; and, fourth, the best manner of providing for facilitating the resumption of specie payments. The commission is to report by the 15th of January next, and, if well made up, might do some good service in calling attention to correct financial views, but is more likely to be so made up that its report or reports would be of no value. Mr. Boutwell, in the Senate, introduced a weak imitation of the poorest part of the above, calling for the appointment of a similar commission to inquire into the expediency of coining a legal tender silver dollar, and appropriating $10,000, to pay the expenses of the commission.

The Judiciary Committee of the House made a unanimous report exonerating Proctor Knott from the charge of suppressing Caldwell's dispatch in the Blaine inquiry; but Knott, taking advantage of the occasion to lose his temper and to make an uncalled-for speech, the Republican members of the Committee withdrew their names from the report, and it was recommitted. The report of the Naval Committee with reference to Robeson was referred to the Judiciary Committee. A great deal of time has been consumed in "filibustering" against the passage of Bland's "Silver" Bill. The question of sectarian appropriations from the public school funds has been taken out of the presidential canvass by the almost unanimous adoption (166 to 5) of the substance of Blaine's proposed amendment to the Constitution.

The Senate acquitted Belknap, not because it believed him innocent, but because most of the Senators who had denied the jurisdiction of the Senate entered a formal vote of "Not guilty," on the ground of non-jurisdiction. It may be remembered that, at the time of Belknap's impeachment, we took the ground that the Senate had no jurisdiction in his case, and so far as this goes, therefore, we are not sorry that the case is now left where in our judgment it seemed to belong several months ago. But we are extremely sorry that this result has been reached by a very tedious, stupid, and unjust process, and we cannot quite justify those Senators who, believing Belknap to be guilty, voted not guilty on the ground of non-jurisdiction, after the Senate, which should be recognized as the court of ultimate appeal in this matter, had declared in favor of jurisdiction. The result, however, is likely to prevent a great deal of possible political mischief, and may be cheerfully acquiesced in, therefore, especially if Belknap be now "jugged" by the criminal court which has indicted him.

One good result of late Congressional investigations may be seen in the withdrawal of Mr. Godlove S. Orth as candidate for governor of Indiana, and the nomination of Benjamin Harrison in his place. Mr. Orth, it will be remembered, resigned his position as Minister to Austria and came home for the purpose of running for Governor in his State; but one of the investigating committees found out that some time ago Mr. Orth, while a member of Congress and serving upon the Committee on Claims, had acted at the same time as attorney and agent for Venezuela in presenting certain claims before his own committee. This discovery, duly emphasized by opposition newspapers, was a little too much for Republican stomachs in the present condition of Indiana politics, and Mr. Orth now retires to private life, we trust to remain there.

The temperance cause, which is always more or less prominent in Massachusetts, seems to be making considerable progress of late, and to be carried on with more than customary good sense. "Reform clubs," which take no political action, are numerous and active in the eastern part of the State; and in Boston, especially, the license law seems to be attended with some good results, nearly three hundred places in which liquor was illegally sold having been closed within the past ten days. The number of arrests for drunkenness, also, for the present year is less than for either of the two years preceding. Another good sign is the fact that the consumption of lager beer, and soda, and mineral waters has increased enormously within two years, while during the same period the consumption of spirits and the stronger ales and mixed drinks has greatly diminished. One of the most encouraging signs, however, is a recent occurrence among the Baptists. The Rev. E. P. Eddy, of Hyde Park, who must be a man of considerable courage, read a long and apparently able paper, the other day, at a meeting of Baptist ministers, in opposition to prohibitory liquor-laws. Although it is evident enough that, with reference to the temperance cause, "the fools are not all dead yet," nor are some of them likely to die for a long time to come, it is nevertheless a very hopeful sign when so bright a gleam of good sense shines from so unpromising a spot as a Baptist ministers' meeting.

The news from Servia would be more interesting if the details could be clearly understood. The Turkish force opposed to the Montenegrins seems unable to cope with them. The Servians have won at least one important battle during the past week, but they have also lost more than one, and the Turks on the south-eastern frontier are preparing to invade Servia.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, July 20, 1876.

It is pleasant to hear that American freethinkers are proud to share in the privilege of raising a statue to the memory of the great freethought martyr, Giordano Bruno. It is possible that some of the less studious readers of THE INDEX may not know much about Bruno, and that a slight sketch of who he was, and the reasons for which we honor him to-day, may, therefore, be acceptable to very many.

Giordano Bruno was born at Nola, a small town near Naples, in the year 1550, and in his youth he clad himself in the robe of the Dominican, and plunged deeply into study, sheltered by the walls of the monastery from the tumult of that turbulent age. Study, however, led him away from the dogmas of the Church; transubstantiation did not approve itself to his intellect; the immaculate conception raised doubts in his mind; Aristotle, whose philosophy was followed by all doctors of the Church, was very unsatisfactory to him; he embraced the theories of Copernicus, and thus placed himself in opposition to Catholicism; he wrote a satire on the monkish orders; finally, he made Italy too hot to hold him, and fled from the fangs of the Inquisition. On his arrival at Geneva he found no welcome. Geneva was pledged to the Aristotelian philosophy, and would have none of this heretic assailant; so he passed on into France, visited Lyons and Toulouse, and once again fled for his life from the latter city. At Paris he found some rest. He disputed in the Sorbonne, and gained much credit; but his refusal to attend mass prevented his becoming an accredited professor, and put him in considerable danger. The protection of the king, however, and his popularity among the students, saved him; he was young, eloquent, beautiful, learned, and he drew large audiences of pupils, in spite of his heresy. In Paris he remained a year, and then, A.D. 1583, he crossed the Channel into England, visited the English Court, became intimate with Sir Philip Sidney, and distinguished himself in a philosophical tournament held at Oxford. "The earth is immovable, the universe is finite and movable," said the University, with Aristotle and Ptolemy. "The earth revolves, and the universe is infinite," said Bruno, relying on Philolaus and Copernicus. Very hot grew the battle, and clouds gathered round the bold heretic. At Oxford he taught publicly until opposition became so strong that once again he was forced to flee, and he returned to Paris in 1586, and again publicly disputed against Aristotle. Paris cast him out, as reward, and he took refuge in Germany, teaching in Würtemberg, in Prague, in Helmstedt; excommunicated, he persisted in lecturing. At Würtemberg he might have rested in peace, for the University protected him. But Bruno could not rest. The burning love of truth possessed him, and he must needs teach everywhere, that the truth might be made known. So on he went, teaching the theories of Copernicus, reviving the atomic theory of Lucretius, spreading materialism, denying the authority of Scripture as decider in scientific disputes. He wrote, as well as spoke, on logic, on metaphysics, on cosmography, and at last, in an evil hour, he returned to Italy and to death. He taught publicly in Padua, and was hunted out of the city; to Venice, the beautiful, he fled, and here they ran him down; he was seized by the officers of the Holy Office, and thrown into the dungeons of the Piombi. Here, for six years, they kept him in horrible solitude; no books, no pens, no paper; nothing to break that awful weariness and monotony. He was forty-two when they buried him in this living grave; he was forty-eight when they brought him out, and carried him to Rome. There two years more of prison-life awaited him, during which the greatest controversialists of the Roman Church—Bellarmine among them—strove in vain to force him into denying the truth he knew. At last they gave up in despair, and he was led before the Grand Inquisitor, San Severino, excommunicated as atheist, and handed over to the civil arm to be punished

"without shedding of blood," i.e., to be burnt alive. They forced him on his knees to hear his sentence, but no word for pity escaped him; only he said, as he rose, and boldly looked straight at his terrible judges: "I think that you pronounce that sentence with more fear than I feel in hearing it." A week after they led him to his death, Feb. 17, 1600. In the Champ de Flore the stake was raised, and, dressed in the hideous Inquisition robe, he walked calmly to his death. A priest pressed the crucifix on him, but he turned aside and refused to touch it, and never flinched as they tied him to the stake; silent he was to the very end, quiet, serene, fearless, giving his noble life into the hands of his mistress, Truth, and leaving his body as a stepping-stone for those who should come after him, and should triumph where he had fallen.

Such was the man who died in 1600; such is the memory to which we do homage in 1876. In the city where Bruno died Bruno's statue shall arise, and the martyr of the seventeenth century shall become the hero of the nineteenth, proving the truth of his own glorious words: "To know how to die in one century is to live for all centuries to come."

In philosophy, Bruno was a materialist, and he was a pantheist rather than an atheist. To him the world was the expression of the Supreme Intelligence, no more apart from God than the word is apart from the voice which speaks it. Lewes, in his History of Philosophy, thus writes of him:—

"Bruno admits the existence of only one Intelligence, and that is God. This Intelligence, which is perfect in God, is less perfect in inferior spirits; still less so in man; more and more imperfect in the lower gradations of created beings. But all these differences are differences of degree, not of kind. The inferior orders of beings do not understand themselves, but they have a sort of language. In the superior orders of beings intelligence arrives at the point of self-consciousness,—they understand themselves and those below them. Man, who occupies the middle position in the hierarchy of creation, is capable of contemplating every phase of life. He sees God above him; he sees around him traces of the divine activity. These traces, which attest the immutable order of the universe, constitute the soul of the world. To collect them, and connect them with the Being whence they issue, is the noblest function of the human mind. Bruno further teaches that, in proportion as man labors in this direction, he discovers that these traces spread abroad in Nature do not differ from the ideas which exist in his own mind. He thus arrives at the perception of the identity between the soul of the world and his own soul, both as reflections of the Divine Intelligence" (Vol. II., pp. 108, 109). "Bruno's creed was pantheism. . . . He taught that God was the Infinite Intelligence, the Cause of causes, the Principle of all life and mind, the great Activity, whose action we name the universe. But God did not create the universe; he informed it with life,—with being."

Debates are still the order of the day, and one on the disestablishment and disendowment of the English Church, between Mr. Bradlaugh and Mr. Simpson, a candidate for the representation of Liverpool in Parliament, which has been held in that Tory stronghold, has caused great excitement. Hitherto the arguments of the Church in Liverpool have been of a very forcible character; they have consisted of stones, vegetables, eggs, with an occasional dead cat to give piquancy to the repast, and these weapons have driven all anti-establishmentarians from the platform. My own lecture at Birkenhead was the first which was carried through in peace. During this debate, there was a good deal of interruption at times, but it was very easily suppressed, and the arguments were brought to a conclusion without any extraneous aid to the Church in the shape of missiles flung at the secularist. The leading Liverpool paper has dealt very fairly with both sides, and as a sign of the growing liberality of thought this is very encouraging.

The sale of the Freethinkers' Text Book, to which I drew the attention of the readers of THE INDEX, is something enormous for a freethought work of so solid a character, and speaks volumes for the desire that must exist really to study these great problems of religion. For the book is somewhat dry, and contains close argument, and is not a work that would commend itself to the ordinary, careless reader, in search of amusement. The first part, which was issued in April last, is now in its sixth edition, and continues to sell rapidly, and that is a fair success to attain in three and one-half months. Few things, perhaps, do more to raise the National Secular Society in general estimation than a success of this kind, and it is encouraging to know that our ranks contain so many students and thinkers, and are recruited from the more thoughtful class of the community. All around us progress is becoming more and more marked, and the eastern sky begins to brighten to the dawning.

We shall anxiously look forward to the accounts of the proceedings of the Centennial Congress of Liberals, which seems to have met with so hearty an approval among you on the other side. It has been pleasant to watch the growing length of subscriptions, until, at last, a terror has come upon me lest THE INDEX should contain nothing else. May the conclusion of the work be as successful as its commencement, and the radical movement will then have left its mark on this glorious Centennial year.

"I'm TWO YEARS older than you," said a little eight-year-old girl to a New Bedford boy the other day. "Well, I don't care," was the reply. "I'm going to wear trousers soon, and that you'll never do."

Communications.

THEN AND NOW.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

The more I read, and the further I look into this Christian Amendment movement, the more firm is my conviction that its outcome will be to subjugate the free conscience, to enforce Sunday laws, to extort money from the whole tax-paying people of this country to support churches and their dogmatic claims.

It is an attempted outrage so subtle that the average citizen will acquiesce in it without realizing its bearing upon his natural rights. On reading those extracts from the press of the country on the Centennial Congress of Liberals, I am astonished to see the open apostasy of some public journals, and saddened to find such blindness to the grave issues involved in this struggle. The most glaring apostasy is that of the Christian Union. In January, 1871, that journal said editorially:—

"The friends of the measure are not likely ever to agree among themselves. The convention which met in Philadelphia on the 18th inst. to consider this subject refused to accept a phraseology which simply recognizes the Deity, and insisted upon including in the amendment the name of Jesus Christ as well. A party in behalf of the Holy Spirit, which is so conspicuously slighted, will be next in order; and then the way will be open for a proposition to recognize the 'Vicegerent of Christ on earth,' as the true source of power among the nations! If the proposed amendment is anything more than a bit of sentimental cant, it is to have a legal effect. It is to alter the status of the non-Christian citizen before the law. It is to affect the legal oaths and instruments, the matrimonial contracts, the sumptuary laws, etc., etc., of the country. This would be an outrage on natural right."

We may well regard the decided change of tone manifest in your quotation as the most just cause of concern which has lately developed. What means this new attitude? Could anything be stronger than the language used by the Christian Union at the birth of this movement,—that it was "an outrage on natural right"? Yes, it is an outrage on natural right! Let us not fail to press this fact on the attention of the unwary. It is idle to talk about "the genius of our people," "the natural development of American institutions," etc. Let the warning be continually rung in the ears of the common people, that under this movement their status is to be changed. There is need for somebody to be terribly in earnest in this matter, when such papers as the New Age can treat it cavalierly, and when once staunch friends in the realm of journalism assume a treacherous front towards a power that two years ago they vigorously opposed.

A. BRIGGS DAVIS.

WORCESTER, Mass.

[We agree emphatically with the above letter, except in one point. We do not believe that the ultimate outcome of the Christian Amendment movement will be its victory; we have no fear whatever that freedom will not conquer in the end. Certain parties take a malicious pleasure in attributing "terror" and "fright" to THE INDEX, because it points out steadily the vast dangers of this movement; but they know so well the falsity of their own representations that it would do no good to correct an error which is wilfully committed. The Christian Amendment movement is winning successes every day through the blind and even stupid indifference of the people, and the outcome of these things must be either subjugation or a desperate struggle with the usurper. We believe that it will be the latter, and that thus Christianity will at last destroy itself in this country by proving itself to every freeman to be the deadliest foe of freedom and equal rights. Let the issue come when it must: it will make very plain who is afraid. —ED.]

"DRAWING THE FIRE."

F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—I have just looked over the newspaper comments in THE INDEX of July 27, on the call for the Centennial Congress of Liberals. Military men have sundry devices to "draw the fire" of an enemy, and so learn the force and disposition of their opponents. You have drawn the fire well, and a singular fusillade it is. Taxation of church property and discontinuance of Bible-reading in schools seem to gain some growing favor, while yet meeting a deal of bigoted opposition; but the "holy Sabbath" must be guarded by the strong arm of law! What a revelation of pious horror of the infidel aims and irreligious spirit of the League! A want of comprehension of the situation and a blind prejudice against heretics are the saddest features of these newspaper comments; yet these are relieved by gleams of a partial light and proofs of waning bigotry. On the whole, I think twenty years ago would have shown a darker revelation. We have not wrought in vain.

I know not how pure religion and spiritual culture can be better helped than by banishing from our statute books every vestige of force or favoritism touching matters of conscience. Let Christian and Pagan, Bible and Koran, Sunday and Monday, Materialist and Spiritualist, be equal before the law, and righteousness and truth will win such triumphs as are not possible otherwise. Bigotry and dogmatism fear this state of things; true religion courts it.

"Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

said an earnest Hebrew in New Testament days. "Where the spirit of the sect is, there is slavery," is good gospel for to-day, and true as the Hebrew's word.

If we have made valuable approaches (thanks to the framers of our national Constitution) toward a separation of Church and State, we have realized such benefits therefrom as to show the need of perfecting that separation, and this is the object of the Liberal League. Possibly its methods and minor demands may not be perfect (I find no fault with them myself), but these can shape themselves in due time.

There is need of organized effort for its great and leading objects. The "God-in-the-Constitution" movement, the great organization of Young Men's Christian Associations, the newspaper extracts in your INDEX, show that need plainly enough.

You asked us to attend the Philadelphia meeting, but, unfortunately for me, I could not. The League starts on a good path; let the people see that it moves on.

Yours truly,

G. B. STEBBINS.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug 2, 1876.

DEDICATION OF A NEW HALL.

On Sunday, July 30, a new hall in Shoemakertown, Pa., some eight or ten miles from Philadelphia, built and owned by Edward M. Davis, was dedicated to freethought and speech, and to all entertainments that go to improve and elevate human character. This hall is twenty-eight by fifty feet, and about thirty-five feet high, and cost $3,500. The main hall is on the second floor, and will comfortably seat three hundred persons, with an ample stage at one end. Descending by a stairway from the stage, is a smaller hall adapted to school purposes, with two dressing or retiring rooms at one end.

A pouring rain that flooded the streets of the city, and made wading necessary to locomotion in the country, did not prevent the presence of one hundred or more persons at the appointed hour. Mr. Davis opened the meeting with appropriate remarks, stating why it had fallen to his lot to build the hall. Others felt the need of such a place, and were willing to aid, but perfect agreement could not be had respecting the uses to be made of it. Mr. Davis wished unrestricted liberty for the utterance of all honest convictions, and all kinds of amusement, tending to pleasure, recreation, and improvement, and as no one was ready to cooperate upon this ground, he had himself built it. He said his object was not so much to propagate his own views as to excite to thought and interest on all subjects that concerned human welfare. Honest conviction he respected, whether in accordance with his own or not. He said years ago he had taken part in a discussion on the sin of American slave-holding in a school-house near by, and, after listening to his opponent's remarks, he said to himself, "That man is more a friend than a foe to human freedom." So it proved, for it was none other than Robert Collyer, of Chicago, whom he had invited there to dedicate this new hall, and whom he then presented to the audience.

Mr. Collyer said that when among strangers, he could easily enough commence a speech, but among friends and old acquaintances, such as he met there, he was somewhat embarrassed, because he wished to be upon his best behavior, and do all things in the best way. However, Mr. Davis had aided him by requesting that he give a brief autobiographical sketch, and (as his address was only the first dedicatory one,—for every one given there would dedicate the hall to human good, if the objects had in view in its erection were carried out) he felt free to use the time in speaking of himself, trusting that his experiences might be of profit to the young men present. He narrated his early life in England, without advantages of school, means, needed comforts; his emigration to America, at the age of twenty-six, with a young wife, and his finding work at his trade of blacksmithing, in the hammer-factory in the town where this new hall was built; his call to Chicago seventeen years ago. This he termed the first chapter of his discourse, refraining from allusion to the brilliant record of his ministry there. He said he had learned what he considered to be four important secrets of life: first, the power to do a good, honest day's work,—power both of body and disposition; second, the power to make a good home, where equality and not subjection was the law; third, the power to save time by performing whatever work came to hand, without waiting for something better-liked to turn up; and, fourth, the power to be contented with these things. Not that he disapproved of discontent, in the sense of improving all conditions of life; this was healthy and to be encouraged.

No description can do justice to the hearty, easy flow of thought and humor which made a long address seem like participation in a delightful conversation.

The venerable Lucratia Mott, who occupied a chair on the platform by Mr. Collyer's side, followed in remarks upon the religious character of the occasion, the motives for the building of the hall being religious in their very nature,—being with reference to the highest good of the minds and hearts of the people. She thought when Mr. Collyer had attended a few more women's rights meetings, he would put a little more stress upon the aid rendered by women to men, and gracefully reminded him of his indebtedness to his wife for her criticisms upon his early sermons. She had epitomized her thoughts of the true marriage relation thus: "The independence of the husband and wife is equal; the dependence mutual and the obligations reciprocal."

John M. Spear referred to the three marked persons who had addressed the meeting, and said it was a rare man who would build a hall for purposes so disinterested and useful, and referred to the Radical

Club of Philadelphia, which Mr. Davis had conducted so generously for a number of years. He felt that the service such a course rendered to liberalism and human advance was invaluable, and all honor was due the man who afforded such opportunity and hospitality.

C. H. SPEAR.

PHILADELPHIA.

THE MOTTO "IN GOD WE TRUST."

EDITOR INDEX:—

A young friend has sent me several copies of your paper, all of which I have carefully read. As a born radical of some forty years, I find much in your paper, in general terms, with which I can agree; but there are one or two points in the platform adopted by the Congress of Liberals which I don't think are consistent with your own teaching. As a lover of, and a seeker for, truth, I am always ready to look for it and to receive it from any source, when rationally proved to be truth. I am not, and never have been, a member of any church or sect, and can truly say that I believe in none and in all; that is to say, I believe that all sects and religions have done some good, by helping more or less to prepare the world for the good time coming, when unselfish love shall be the motive power of humanity.

The chief point I wish briefly to refer to (as I have no right to intrude too much upon your time and space, before I know whether a little will be intrusion) is this:—

The objection to the use of "In God we trust," which I believe was first put upon the gold coins during the war.

There seems to be a general acknowledgment by almost all the liberal leaders that there is a God. At the same time I suspect that many of them have only a vague idea of a blind Force operating in Nature, much like the Orthodox idea of the soul or spirit,—a sort of floating ether, or next to nothing. Now if you do really, not in your memory alone, but in your heart or inmost consciousness, believe in a God of love and infinite goodness, as the Creator and Sustainer of all things, how can you, consistently with reason, object to stand upon an open avowal of trust in him? What would you think of a child who should say that he loved and trusted his father, and yet objected to its being inscribed upon any of his books or keepsakes, or upon any gift he wished to give his father?

If you don't really believe in the existence of any personal God, as the Creator and Father of all, then your objections are consistent.

W. M. E.

AMHERST, Va., July 22, 1876.

[We object to any religious motto on the national coinage, not because we disbelieve in God (for all our readers know to the contrary), but because we have enough sense of justice not to wish to force our belief on those who do not share it. We have no objection to the motto "In God we trust," as an individual merely; but we have the strongest objection to it as a citizen of the United States. Some of our fellow-citizens are atheists, and their rights are just as sacred as our own. If they were in a majority, they would have just as much right to stamp "There is no God" on United States coins as we have to stamp "In God we trust" upon them. Would not our correspondent be aggrieved by such an atheistic motto on the coins? Yet the atheist is just as much aggrieved by the present motto; and his rights are just as good as our correspondent's. When will the world learn to refrain from doing an injustice which it is in their power to do? The Liberal League would teach a lesson in brotherly love by teaching all men to be just to each other.—ED.]

DRESS IN 1776.—Fashions changed a hundred years ago as they do now, and perhaps it would be impossible to give an exact picture of the costumes of different classes at any one given time. But, in general, it may be said that gentlemen wore small clothes, knee-buckles, and buckled shoes; coat broad-skirted, wide-cuffed, and lace-ruffled, and a brown, gray, claret, or other color; long waistcoats with broad flaps over the pockets, cocked hats, and in many cases wigs and powdered hair. The small sword was a common article of full dress, while scarlet cloth and gold and silver laces, with showy buttons, were resorted to by patricians on important occasions. The ladies made up their silks, and satins, and brocades into sacks and petticoats, hooped and trailed, set off with ruffles, and variously patterned and bedecked, according to the style of the hour. They spent much time upon the hair, and the arrangement of the head-dress for the great party or grand ball was a very complicated operation.—Edward Abbott's "Revolutionary Times."

A LITTLE GIRL in Genesee County, N. Y., attending church on a summer's day and seeing many in white bonnets, whispered to her mother and asked: "Ma, does Mrs. God wear a white bonnet?"

A MODEL will, duly executed and witnessed, was recently presented for probate at Plymouth, Mass., of which the following is a verbatim copy: "July 12, 1875. I give all my property to my wife."

"JOHN, I WISH you'd close that door!" said an irritable father to his son. "Your mother must be scolding somebody at the other end of the hall, there's such a draught from that quarter."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.
 Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity, as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

Including
 O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
 T. W. HIGGINSON,
 W. J. POTTER,
 W. H. SPENCER,
 F. W. NEWMAN,
 CHAS. VOYSEY,
 A. W. STEVENS,
 F. E. ABBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS.

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shaw-Straps.....	1.00
Work; a Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	1.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	0.50
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUCHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 21 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.50
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Ownership.....	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Maria Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Poets. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede.....	1.00
Bombyla.....	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.....	1.00
Felix Holt.....	1.00
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 1 vol.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.00
Essays. Second Series.....	2.00
Miscellanies.....	2.00
Representative Man.....	2.00
English Traits.....	2.00
Conduct of Life.....	2.00
Poems. With Portraits.....	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.....	3.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	2.00
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	6.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Thoughts about Art.....	1.00
The Unknown River.....	6.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second. Child World. Part First.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The Marble Faun.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Benurban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.80
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	3.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel- ings.....	1.75
Studies for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopse the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
V. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.00
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versibilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 3 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 1 vol.....	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL D.C.) What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
Pre-historic Times.....	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
Elements of Geology.....	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. 3 vols.....	3.00
Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERRIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte.....	1.50
Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.50
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire.....	2.00
Boussieu, 2 vols.....	6.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Vol. I.....	2.50
Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swinagh Bound the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoe from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Ministry.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations.....	2.00
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations, A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.80
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trotty Book.....	1.50
Mad Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Redged in.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTON (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.00
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	1.50
SCHILLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	31.50
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	1.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.00
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	1.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.00
Sociology.....	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	0.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Classic Room Taine, History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.....	3.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.35
Vanity Fair.....	1.35
The Newcomes.....	1.35
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....	1.35
The Virginians.....	1.35
Edmond, and Lovel the Widower.....	1.35
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.35
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces.....	1.35
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.00
The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.00
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.00
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	2.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	2.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauntering.....	1.00
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX

1 Tremont Place Boston.

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P. J. PROUDHON: HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS. PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.

PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.

LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.

THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE. Demonstration. Axiom.

Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition.

Property is impossible, because it demands something for nothing.

Second Proposition.

Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition.

Property is impossible, because, with a

given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because it is Homocidal.

Fifth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Appendix to the Fifth Proposition.

Sixth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition.

Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition.

Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.

§ 1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.

§ 2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.

§ 3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.

§ 1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.

§ 2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.

§ 3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUI ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges.....$3.50
Price in Full Calf, blue, gilt edge.....6.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-TON'S

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

BRINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

T H E I N D E X

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Free Thought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street, LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

LIBERAL BOOKS.

THE MARTYRDOM OF MAN. By Win-

wood Reade.....$3.00

THE SAFEST CREED. By O. E. Frothing-

ham.....1.50

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE WORLD. By

Edward Clodd......75

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN: Priest and Man.

By Frederika MacDonald.....1.50

SOUL PROBLEMS, with other Papers. By

Joseph E. Peck......75

THE CULTIVATION OF ART, and its Relations to Religious Puritanism and Money-Getting. By A. K. Cooper... 25

JUST ISSUED:

THE CHRIST OF PAUL; or, The Enigmas

of Christianity. By George Reber. 12mo. Extra cloth. 400 pp. Post-

paid.....2.00

FREDOT BYSSHE SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPHER AND REFORMER. By Charles

Botheran. Post-paid.....1.25

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE INDEX

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

Nos. II, III, IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)

RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

THREE ESSAYS ON RELIGION.

By JOHN STUART MILL, is now for sale at this office. Price—Two dollars and fifty cts. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts.

Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT

Between Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CENTENNIAL BUSTS.

Jefferson and Paine.

Copies in plaster, boxed, guaranteed against injury by transportation. Price of each, $50.00. Send orders to S. H. MORSE, 25 Bromfield St., Boston.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES, and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS, 757 Washington St., Boston.

THE GODS, AND OTHER LECTURES.

By Col. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, OF ILLINOIS.

This book contains five Lectures, entitled severally: "The Gods," "Humboldt," "Thomas Paine," "Individuality," and "Heretics and Heresies." It is handsomely bound, and will be sent from this office on receipt of Two DOLLARS.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

HOMES FOR THE INSANE.

The increasing belief that our insane and nervous people can receive more judicious and humane treatment in intelligent families than in large, locked institutions has induced the opening of an office at 3 Beacon Street, for the purpose of facilitating intercourse between persons who wish board for themselves or for their nervous friends, and families who will receive such boarders. Books and periodicals relating to the treatment of insanity will be for sale at the office; and all persons wishing consultation on this subject are invited to call, or address Mrs. M. E. BERRY, No. 3 Beacon Street, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)...$1.50

CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....1.00

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER 1.00

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....1.00

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....1.00

LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....3.00

THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author) ... 2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE; to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.

Before next summer, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President

R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1876.

WHOLE No. 347.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practicing the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

GLIMPSES.

THE ADVERTISEMENT on our last page will give additional information about the Secular Review, to which Mr. Holyoake alludes in his interesting letter of this week.

MR. FRANCIS HANFORD, principal of a Chicago high school, has just been shot by Mr. Alexander Sullivan, Secretary of the Board of Public Works, whose wife Mr. Hanford had charged (among other things) with plotting the exclusion of the Bible from the schools. Sullivan is a Catholic, while Hanford was a Methodist.

ARCHBISHOP PURCELL, in the Cincinnati Catholic Telegraph of August 10, makes this declaration, which asserts still the right of the Catholics not to be taxed for public schools, but offers to "waive" this right for the present: "No doubt justice and equality would entitle the Catholic people of this country to exemption from taxation for the support of other schools, or to a share of the public school funds in proportion to the number of pupils in the schools, but even this we are disposed to waive in your favor."

IN THE Independent of August 10, Col. Higginson has a ringing article on the Hamburg massacre in South Carolina. It closes with these admirable words: "In case of burglary, we look to the owner of the roof to vindicate his rights by following up the guilty party. There is one man in the nation upon whom the next step in duty now devolves. If he is faithful, he has a hard task before him. If he shrinks, he will have a more sudden downfall than any man has yet sustained, from the respect and confidence of the whole American people. That man is Governor Chamberlain, of South Carolina." These words breathe the spirit of the true anti-Christian, who recognizes the duty of "vindicating his rights" and protecting the rights of others. At least in this passage, Col. Higginson is really an anti-Christian without intending it.

THE BALTIMORE Gazette sees some vitality in the school question: "Zach. Chandler and the men who are managing the Republican campaign are already in the field with their pamphlets and documents, stirring up the seeds of strife and fanaticism among our people. Four campaign documents going to prove an alliance between the Democratic party and the Catholic Church, arraigning the party for its inaction on this question, have been issued and scattered broadcast over this and other States. There is only one way to meet the issue they have presented, and that is by taking high and strong ground upon this school question. It must be taken out of the campaign, and the way to take it out is to pass the amendment which a Catholic Congressman from this State has prepared, and is ready to offer. We entreat the leaders of the Democratic party to take measures to keep this firebrand out of the canvass; to crush out an issue which will undoubtedly be raised, and which will bring ruin and destruction to the Democratic party."

DR. BELLOWES has apparently more practical sagacity in the matter of organization than all the rest of the Unitarian denomination combined. He sees and points out (with at least one metaphor of very questionable taste) the absurdity of having both a National Conference and a Unitarian Association,—one with a system of delegate representation, but no treasury, and the other with a treasury, but no representation. With the object he would attain (that is, the consolidation of a new Christian sect as a body possessed of power and influence, and dedicated to the "Lord Jesus") we have no sympathy whatever; but we admire the clear sense and executive faculty which make him discontented with a mere childish toying with organization. The Unitarians, as a sect, have given up liberty for Christ; now they will command increased respect by showing that they are at least in earnest in the "Lord's" cause. Their National Conference, which is soon to be held at Saratoga, ought either to be developed into a vigorous executive body or else abandoned as an addled egg that can never be hatched. Of course we look on as a mere spectator; but we have an involuntary respect for business energy even in a dubious cause, and think it about time for the Unitarian denomination to desist from its endless and unsuccessful attempts to ride two horses at once. The better horse is the old Unitarian "Free Inquiry"; but if they prefer the "Lord and King" preamble, why not bestride him as if they really wanted to take a ride?

THE NEW YORK Daily Graphic of August 8 had this wise warning, which should be well heeded: "Something in the line of what is called 'the Blaine amendment' to the Constitution will need to be adopted sometime, but the discussion of the question is not yet sufficiently mature for action. The House has precipitately passed it, prohibiting in set terms the use of public funds for the support of 'sectarian schools,' probably fancying that it will have some sort of influence in creating capital for some party or candidate. Let us have no demagoguism now. To pass an amendment concerning sectarian schools without defining what is meant by sectarian schools is puerile folly. President Grant in his Des Moines speech was sufficiently specific when he declared that the public schools should be wholly secular, and should teach neither religion nor atheism. Let Congress be at least as specific before thrusting a vast and serious question before the people for discussion during a presidential contest. All would cordially support an amendment against appropriations to sectarian schools if sectarianism is defined to be everybody's religion but ours; but the question which now begins to challenge attention is not merely whether Catholic schools shall receive public money, but whether Protestant schools shall; whether King James' Bible, or the Douay, or some other, or none at all, shall be read by or to the pupils; and whether revival hymns and theological songs shall be sung in concert. The discussion of the question is not yet mature, and until it is this new amendment to the Constitution had better be allowed to sleep."

WITH WHAT serene superficiality the Nation delivers itself on the school issue! Never was there a more melancholy exhibition of sancta simplicitas on what the Graphic, with more insight, truly describes as "a vast and serious question": "We have ventured at several times to express the opinion that the belief, apparently prevalent among the Republicans, that the Bishop of Rome was in secret league with the Democrats for the purpose of breaking up our common-school system was unfounded, and have been often assured that we did not appreciate the bitterness of the feeling about the matter in Ohio and other parts of the country. It has always been our sincere conviction that the Democrats cared little or nothing for the Pope, and the Pope almost as little for the Democrats, and that the whole excitement was got up by General Grant, and Mr. Blaine, and other politicians, as a good political cry. We have never seen anybody who, of his own knowledge, knew of a conspiracy against the public schools, though we have seen people who had seen somebody else who had 'just returned from the West,' and reported the most terrible state of feeling somewhere about it. But that it would be of any appreciable importance in the present canvass we have never believed, and the vote in the House on the Blaine school amendment may be taken as full and conclusive proof that we were right. The amendment (which is a cruel blow at the Pope, and was devised by his greatest enemy on this side of the Atlantic, with the exception perhaps of General Grant) was passed by the Democrats in the House without any discussion or debate to speak of, by a vote of 166 to 5. This looks as if the Jesuits would be kept at bay for some time yet."

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

An Agnostic's Apology.

FROM THE LONDON "FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW" OF JUNE 1, 1876.

BY LESLIE STEPHEN.

AN attempt has recently been made to obtain currency for the new nickname—Agnostic. Protests against nicknames are foolish; foolish because unavailing, and foolish because nicknames are always harmless. A protest in this case would be especially foolish; for the nickname in question seems to indicate a distinct advance in the courtesies of controversy. The old theological phrase for an intellectual opponent was Atheist—a name which still retains a certain flavor as of the stake in this world and hell-fire in the next, and which, moreover, implies an inaccuracy of some importance. Dogmatic Atheism—the doctrine that there is no God, whatever may be meant by God—is, to say the least, a rare phase of opinion. The word Agnosticism, on the other hand, seems to imply a fairly accurate appreciation of a form of creed already common and daily spreading. The Agnostic is one who asserts—that no one denies—that there are limits to the sphere of human intelligence. He asserts, further, what many theologians have expressly maintained, that those limits are such as to exclude at least what Mr. Lewes has so happily called "metempirical" knowledge. But he goes further, and asserts, in opposition to the theologians, that theology lies within this forbidden sphere. This last assertion raises the important issue; and, though I have no pretension to invent an opposition nickname, I may venture, for the purposes of this article, to describe the rival school as Gnostics.

The Gnostic holds that our reason can in some sense transcend the narrow limits of experience. He holds that we can attain truths not capable of verification, and not needing verification, by actual experiment or observation. He holds, further, that a knowledge of those truths is essential to the highest interests of mankind, and enables us in some sort to solve the dark riddle of the universe. A complete solution, as every one admits, is beyond our power. But some answer may be given to the doubts which harass and perplex us when we try to frame any adequate conception of the vast order of which we form an insignificant portion. We cannot say why this or that arrangement is what it is; we can say, though obscurely, that some answer exists, and would be satisfactory if we could only find it. Overpowered, as every honest and serious thinker is at times overpowered, by the sight of pain, folly, and helplessness, by the jarring discords which run through the vast harmony of the universe, we are yet enabled to hear at times a whisper that all is well, to trust to it as coming from the most authentic source, and to know that only the temporary bars of sense prevent us from recognizing with certainty that the harmony beneath the discords is a reality and not a dream. This knowledge is embodied in the central dogma of theology. God is the name of the harmony; and God is knowable. Who would not be happy in accepting this belief, if he could accept it honestly? Who would not be glad, if he could say with confidence, The evil is transitory, the good eternal: our doubts are due to limitations destined to be abolished, and the world is really an embodiment of love and wisdom, however dark it may appear to our faculties? And yet, if the so-called knowledge be illusory, are we not bound by the most sacred obligations to recognize the facts? Our brief path is dark enough on any hypothesis. We cannot afford to turn aside every ignis fatuus without asking whether it leads to sounder footing or to hopeless quagmires. Dreams may be pleasanter for the moment than realities; but happiness must be won by adapting our lives to the realities. And who that has felt the burden of existence, and suffered under well-meant efforts at consolation, will deny that such consolations are the bitterest of mockeries? Pain is not an evil; death is not a separation; sickness is but a blessing in disguise. Have the gloomiest speculations of avowed pessimists ever tortured sufferers like those kindly platitudes? Is there a more cutting piece of satire in the language than the reference in our funeral service to the "sure and certain hope of a blessed resurrection"? To dispel genuine hopes might be painful, however salutary. To suppress these spasmodic efforts to fly in the face of facts would be some comfort, even in the distress which they are meant to alleviate.

Besides the important question whether the Gnostic can prove his dogmas, there is therefore the further question whether the dogmas, if granted, have any meaning. Do they answer our doubts, or mock us with the appearance of an answer? The Gnostics pride themselves on their knowledge. Have they anything to tell us? They rebuke what they call the "pride of reason" in the name of a still more exalted pride. The scientific reasoner is arrogant because he sets limits to the faculty in which he trusts, and denies the existence of any other faculty. They are humble because they dare to tread in the regions which he declares to be inaccessible. But without bandying such accusations, or asking which pride is the greater, the Gnostics are at least bound to show some ostensible justification for their complacency. Have they discovered a firm resting-place from which they are entitled to look down in compassion or contempt upon those who hold it to be a mere edifice of moonshine? If they have diminished by a scruple the weight of one passing doubt, we should be grateful: perhaps we should be converts. If not, why condemn Agnosticism?

I have said that our knowledge is in any case limited. I may add that, on any showing, there is a danger in failing to recognize the limits of possible knowledge. The word Gnostic has some awkward associations. It once described certain heretics who got into trouble from fancying that men could frame theories of the Divine mode of existence. The sects have been dead for many centuries. Their fundamental assumptions can hardly be quite extinct. Not long ago at least there appeared in the papers a string of propositions framed—so we were assured—by some of the most candid and most learned of living theologians. These propositions defined by the help of various languages the precise relations which exist between the persons of the Trinity. It is an odd, though far from an unprecedented, circumstance that the unbeliever cannot quote them for fear of profanity. If they were transplanted into the pages of the Fortnightly Review, it would be impossible to convince any one that the intention was not to mock the simple-minded persons who, we must suppose, were not themselves intentionally irreverent. It is enough to say that they defined the nature of God Almighty with an accuracy from which modest naturalists would shrink in describing the genesis of a black beetle. I know not whether these dogmas were put forward as articles of faith, as pious conjectures, or as tentative contributions to a sound theory. At any rate, it was supposed that they were interesting to beings of flesh and blood. If so, one can only ask in wonder whether an utter want of reverence is most strongly implied in this mode of dealing with sacred mysteries; or an utter ignorance of the existing state of the world in the assumption that the question which really divides mankind is the double procession of the Holy Ghost; or an utter incapacity for speculation in the confusion of these dead exuvie of long past modes of thought with living intellectual tissue; or an utter want of imagination, or even a rudimentary sense of humor, in the hypothesis that the promulgation of such dogmas could produce anything but the laughter of sceptics and the contempt of the healthy human intellect.

The sect which requires to be encountered in these days is not one which boggles over the Alloque, but certain successors of those Ephesians who told Paul that they did not even know "whether there were any Holy Ghost." But it explains some modern phenomena when we find that the leaders of theology hope to reconcile faith and reason, and to show that the old symbols have still a right to the allegiance of our hearts and brains, by putting forth these portentous propositions. We are struggling with hard facts, and they would arm us with the forgotten tools of scholasticism. We wish for spiritual food, and are to be put off with these ancient mummeries of forgotten dogma. If Agnosticism is the frame of mind which summarily rejects these imbecilities, and would restrain the human intellect from wasting its powers on the attempt to galvanize into sham activity this caput mortuum of old theology, nobody need be afraid of the name. Argument against such adversaries would be itself a foolish waste of time. Let the dead bury their dead, and Old Catholics decide whether the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son or from the Father alone. Gentlemen indeed who still read the Athanasian Creed, and profess to attach some meaning to its statements, have no right to sneer at their brethren who persist in taking things seriously. But for men who long for facts instead of phrases, the only possible course is to allow such vagaries to take their own course to the limbo to which they are naturally destined, simply noting, by the way, that modern Gnosticism may lead to puerilities which one blushes even to notice.

It is not with such phenomena that we have seriously to deal. Nobody maintains that the unassisted human intellect can discover the true theory of the Trinity; and the charge of Agnosticism refers, of course, to the sphere of reason, not to the sphere of revelation. Yet those who attack the doctrine are chiefly believers in revelation; and as such they should condescend to answer one important question. Is not the denunciation of reason a commonplace with theologians? What could be easier than to form a catena of the most philosophical defenders of Christianity who have exhausted language in declaring the impotence of the unassisted intellect? Come, has not more explicitly enounced the incapacity of man to deal with the Absolute and the Infinite than a whole series of Orthodox writers. Trust your reason, we have been told till we are tired of the phrase, and you will become Atheists or Agnostics. We take you at your word; we become Agnostics. What right have you to turn round and rate us for being a degree more logical than yourselves? Our right, you reply, is founded upon a Divine revelation to ourselves or our church. Let us grant—it is a very liberal concession—that the right may conceivably be established; but still you are at one with us in philosophy. You say, as we say, that the natural man can know nothing of the Divine nature. That is Agnosticism. Our fundamental principle is not only granted, but asserted. By what logical device you succeed in over-leaping the barriers which you have declared to be insuperable is another question. At least you have no prima facie ground for attacking our assumption that the limits of the human intellect are what you declare them to be. This is no mere verbal retort. Half, or more than half, of our adversaries agree formally with our leading principle. They cannot attack us without upsetting the very ground upon which the ablest advocates of their own case rely. The last English writer who professed to defend Christianity with weapons drawn from wide and genuine philosophical knowledge was Dean Mansel. The whole substance of his argument was simply and solely the assertion of the first principles of Agnosticism. Mr. Herbert Spencer, the prophet of the Unknowable, the foremost representative of Agnosticism, professes in his programme to be carrying "a step further the doctrine put into shape by Hamilton and Mansel."

Nobody, I suspect, would now deny, nobody except Dean Mansel himself ever denied very seriously, that the "further step" thus taken was the logical step. Opponents both from within and without the Church, Mr. Maurice and Mr. Mill, agreed that this affiliation was legitimate. The Old Testament represents Jehovah as human, as vindictive, as prescribing immoralities; therefore Jehovah was not the true God; that was the contention of the infidel. We know nothing whatever about the true God, was the reply, for God means the Absolute and the Infinite. Any special act may come from God, for it may be a moral miracle; any attribute may represent the character of God to man, for we know nothing whatever of his real attributes, and cannot even conceive him as endowed with attributes. The doctrine of the Atonement cannot be revolting, because it cannot have any meaning. Mr. Spencer hardly goes a step beyond his original, except, indeed, in candor.

Most believers repudiate Dean Mansel's arguments. They were an anachronism. They were fatal to the decaying creed of pure Theism, and powerless against the growing creed of Agnosticism. When theology had vital power enough to throw out fresh branches, the Orthodox could venture to attack the Deist, and the Deist could assail the traditional beliefs. As the impulse grows fainter, it is seen that such a warfare is suicidal. The old rivals must make an alliance against the common enemy. The theologian must appeal for help to the metaphysician whom he reviled. Orthodoxy used to call Spinoza an Atheist; it is now glad to argue that even Spinoza is a witness on its own side. Yet the most genuine theology still avows its hatred of reason, and distrusts sham alliances. Dr. Newman is not, like Dean Mansel, a profound metaphysician, but his admirable rhetoric expresses a far finer religious instinct. He feels more keenly, if he does not reason so systematically; and the force of one side of his case is undeniable. He holds that the unassisted reason cannot afford a sufficient support for a belief in God. He declares, as innumerable writers of less power have declared, that there is "no medium in true philosophy between Atheism and Catholicity, and that a perfectly consistent mind, under those circumstances in which it finds itself here below, must embrace either the one or the other." * He looks in vain for any antagonist, except the Catholic Church, capable of baffling and withstanding "the fierce energy of passion, and the all-corroding, all-dissolving scepticism of the intellect in religious matters." † Some such doctrine is in fact but a natural corollary from the doctrine of human corruption held by all genuine theologians. The very basis of Orthodox theology is the actual separation of the creation from the Creator. In the Grammar of Assent, Dr. Newman tells us that we "can only glean from the surface of the world some faint and fragmentary views" of God. "I see," he proceeds, "only a choice of alternatives in view of so critical a fact; either there is no Creator or he has disowned his creatures." ‡ The absence of God from his own world is the one prominent fact which startles and appals him. Dr. Newman, of course, does not see or does not admit the obvious consequence. He asserts most emphatically that he believes in the existence of God as firmly as in his own existence; and he finds the ultimate proof of this doctrine—a proof not to be put into mood and figure—in the testimony of the conscience. But he apparently admits that Atheism is as logical, that is, as free from self-contradiction, as Catholicism. He certainly declares that though the ordinary arguments are conclusive, they are not in practice convincing. Sound reason would of course establish theology; but corrupt man does not and cannot reason soundly. Dr. Newman, however, goes further than this. His Theism can only be supported by help of his Catholicity. If, therefore, Dr. Newman had never heard of the Catholic Church, if, that is, he were in the position of the great majority of men now living, and of the overwhelming majority of the race which has lived since its first appearance, he would be driven to one of two alternatives. Either he would be an Atheist or he would be an Agnostic. His conscience might say, There is a God; his observation would say, There is no God. Moreover, the voice of conscience has been very differently interpreted. Dr. Newman's interpretation has no force for any one who, like most men, does not share his intuitions. To such persons, therefore, there can be, on Dr. Newman's own showing, no refuge except the admittedly logical refuge of Atheism. Even if they shared his intuitions, they would be necessarily sceptics until the Catholic Church came to their aid, for their intuitions would be in hopeless conflict with their experience. I need hardly add that, to some minds, the proposed alliance with reason of a church which admits that its tenets are corroded and dissolved wherever free reason is allowed to play upon them is rather suspicious. At any rate, Dr. Newman's arguments go to prove that man, as guided by reason, ought to be an Agnostic, and that, at the present moment, Agnosticism is the only reasonable faith for at least three-quarters of the race.

All, then, who think that men should not be dogmatic about matters beyond the sphere of reason or even conceivability, who hold that reason, however weak, is our sole guide, or who find that their conscience does not testify to the divinity of the Catholic God, but declares the moral doctrines of Catholicity to be demonstrably erroneous, are entitled to claim such Orthodox writers as sharing their fundamental principles, though refusing to draw the legitimate inferences. The authority of Dean Mansel and Dr. Newman may of course be repudiated. In one sense, however, they are simply stating an undeniable fact. The race collectively is agnostic, whatever may be the case with individuals. Newton might be certain of the truth of his doctrines whilst other thinkers were convinced of their falsity. It could not be said that the doctrines were certainly true, so long as they were doubted, in good faith, by competent reasoners. Dr. Newman may be as much convinced of the truth of his theology as Mr. Huxley of its error. But speaking of the race and not of the individual, there is no plainer fact in history than the fact that hitherto no knowledge has been attained. There is not a single proof of natural theology of which the negative has not been maintained as vigorously as the affirmative. The fact is notorious.

You tell us to be ashamed of professing ignorance. Where is the shame of ignorance in matters still involved in endless and hopeless controversy? Is it not rather a duty? Why should a lad who has just run the gauntlet of examinations and escaped to a country parsonage be dogmatic, when his dogmas are denounced as erroneous by half the philosophers of the world? What theory of the universe am I to accept as demonstrably established? At the very earliest dawn of philosophy men were divided by earlier forms of the same problems which divide them now. Shall I be a Platonist or an Aristotelian? a nominalist or a realist? Shall I admit or deny the existence of innate ideas? Shall I believe in the possibility or in the impossibility of transcending experience? Go to medieval philosophy, says one smart controversialist. To which medieval philosophy, pray? And why should I believe you rather than the great thinkers of the seventeenth century, who agreed with one accord that the first condition of intellectual progress was the destruction of that philosophy? There would be no difficulty, if it were a question of physical science. I might believe in Galileo and Newton and their successors down to Adams and Leverrier without hesitation, because they all substantially agree. But when men deal with the old problems, there are still the old doubts. Shall I believe in Hobbes or in Descartes? Can I stop where Descartes stopped, or must I go on to Spinoza? Or shall I follow Locke's guidance, and end with Hume's scepticism? Or listen to Kant, and, if so, shall I decide that he is right in destroying theology or in reconstructing it, or in both performances? Does Hegel hold the key of the secret, or is he a mere spinner of jargon? May not Feuerbach or Schopenhauer represent the true development of metaphysical inquiry? Shall I put faith in Hamilton and Mansel, and, if so, shall I read their conclusions by the help of Mr. Spencer, or shall I believe in Mill or in Mr. Lewes? State any one proposition in which all philosophers agree, and I will admit it to be true; or any one which has a manifest balance of authority, and I will agree that it is probable. But so long as every philosopher flatly contradicts the first principles of his predecessors, why affect certainty? The only agreement I can discover is, that there is no philosopher of whom his opponents have not said that his opinions lead logically either to Pantheism or to Atheism.

When all the witnesses thus contradict each other, the prima facie result is pure scepticism. There is no certainty. Who am I, if I were the ablest of modern thinkers, to say summarily that all the great men who differed from me are wrong, and so wrong that their difference should not even raise a doubt in my mind? From such scepticism there is indeed one, and so far as I can see, but one, escape. The very hopelessness of the controversy shows that the reasoners have been transcending the limits of reason. They have reached a point where, as at the pole, the compass points indifferently to every quarter. Thus there is a chance that I may retain what is valuable in the chaos of speculation, and reject what is bewildering, by confining the mind to its proper limits. But has any limit ever been suggested, except a limit which comes in substance to an exclusion of all ontology? In short, if I would avoid utter scepticism, must I not be an Agnostic?

Let us suppose, however, that this difficulty can be evaded. Suppose that, after calling witnesses from all schools and all ages, I can find ground for excluding all the witnesses who make against me. Let me say, for example, that the whole school which refuses to transcend experience errs, from the wickedness of its heart and the consequent dulness of its intellect. Some people seem to think that a plausible and happy suggestion. Let the theologian have his necessary laws of thought, which enable him to evolve truth beyond all need of verification from experience. Where will the process end? The question answers itself. The path has been trodden again and again, till it is as familiar as the first rule of arithmetic. Admit that the mind can reason about the Absolute and the Infinite, and you will get to Spinoza. No refutation of his arguments, starting from his premises, has ever been even apparently successful. In fact, the chain of reasoning is substantially too short and simple to be for a moment doubtful. Theology, if logical, leads straight to Pantheism. The Infinite God is everything. All things are bound together as cause and effect. God, the first cause, is the cause of all effects down to the most remote. In one form or other, that is the conclusion to which all theology approximates as it is pushed to its legitimate result.

Here, then, we have an apparent triumph over Agnosticism. But nobody can accept Spinoza without rejecting all the doctrines for which the Gnostics really contend. In the first place, revelation and the God of revelation disappear. The argument according to Spinoza against supernaturalism differs from the argument according to Hume, in being more peremptory. Hume only denies that a past miracle can be proved by evidence; Spinoza denies that it could ever have happened. As a fact, miracles and a local revelation were first assailed by Deists more effectually than by sceptics. The old theology was seen to be unworthy of the God of Nature, before it was said that Nature could not be regarded through the theological representation. And, in the next place, the Orthodox assault upon the value of Pantheism is irresistible. Pantheism can give no ground for morality, for Nature is as much the cause of vice as the cause of virtue; it can give no ground for an optimistic view of the universe, for Nature causes evil as much as it causes good. We no longer doubt, it is true, whether there be a God, for our God means all reality; but every doubt which we entertained about the universe is transferred to the God upon whom the universe is moulded. The attempt to transfer to pure being or to the abstraction Nature the feelings with which we are taught to regard a person of transcendent wisdom and benevolence is, as theologians assert, hopeless. To deny the existence of God is, in this sense, the same as to deny the existence of no-God. We keep the old word; we have altered the whole of its contents. A Pantheist is, as a rule, one who looks upon the universe through his feelings instead of his reason, and who regards it with love because his habitual frame of mind is amiable. But he has no logical argument as against the Pessimist, who regards it with dread unqualified by love, or the Agnostic, who finds it impossible to regard it with any but a colorless emotion.

The Gnostic, then, gains nothing by admitting the claims of a faculty which at once overturns his conclusions. His second step is invariably to half retract his first. We are bound by a necessary law of thought, he tells us, to believe in universal causation. Very well, then let us be Pantheists. No, he says; another necessary law of thought tells us that causation is not universal. We know that the will is free; or, in other words, that the class of phenomena most important to us is not caused. This is the position of the ordinary Deist; and it is of vital importance to him, for otherwise the connection between Deism and morality is, on his own ground, untenable. The ablest and most logical thinkers have declared that the free-will doctrine involves a fallacy, and have unravelled the fallacy to their own satisfaction. Whether right or wrong, they have at least this advantage, that, on their showing, reason is on this point consistent with itself. The advocate of free-will, on the other hand, declares that an insoluble antinomy occurs at the very threshold of his speculations. An uncaused phenomenon is unthinkable; yet consciousness testifies that our actions, so far as they are voluntary, are uncaused. In face of such a contradiction, the only rational state of mind is scepticism. A mind balanced between two necessary and contradictory thoughts must be in a hopeless state of doubt. The Gnostic, therefore, starts by proclaiming that we must all be Agnostics in regard to a matter of primary philosophical importance. If by free-will he means anything else than a denial of causation, his statement is irrelevant.

For, it must be noticed, this is not one of the refined speculative problems which may be neglected in our ordinary reasoning. The ancient puzzles about the one and the many, or the infinite and the finite, may or may not be insoluble. They do not affect our practical knowledge. Familiar difficulties have been raised as to our conceptions of motion: the hare and tortoise problem may be revived by modern metaphysicians; but the mathematician may continue to calculate the movements of the planets, and never doubt whether the quicker body will, in fact, overtake the slower. The free-will problem cannot be thus shirked. We will admit that a competent reasoner can foretell the motions of the moon; and we admit it because we know that there is no element of objective chance in the problem. But the determinist asserts whilst the libertarian denies that it would be possible for an adequate intelligence to foretell the actions of a man or a race. There is or is not an element of objective chance in the question; and whether there is or is not must be decided by reason and observation, independently of those puzzles about the infinite and the finite which affect equally the man and the planet. The anti-determinist asserts the existence of chance so positively that he doubts whether God himself can foretell the future of humanity; or, at least, he is unable to reconcile Divine prescience with his favorite doctrine.

In most practical questions, indeed, the difference is of little importance. The believer in free-will admits that he can make an approximate guess; the determinist admits that our faculty of calculation is limited. But when we turn to the problems with which the Gnostic desires to deal, the problem is of primary importance. Free-will is made responsible for all the moral evil in the world. God made man perfect, but he gave his creature free-will. The exercise of that free-will has converted the world into a scene in which the most striking fact, as Dr. Newman tells us, is the absence of the Creator. It follows, then, that all this evil, the sight of which leads some of us to Atheism, some to blank despair, and some to epicurean indifference, and the horror of which is at the root of every vigorous religious creed, results from accident. If even God could have foretold it, he foretold it in virtue of faculties inconceivable to finite minds; and no man, however exalted his faculties, could by any possibility have foretold it. Here, then, is Agnosticism in the highest degree. An inexorable necessity of thought makes it absolutely impossible for us to say whether this world is the anteroom to heaven or hell. We do not know, nay, it is intrinsically impossible for us to know, whether the universe is to be a source of endless felicity, or a ghastly and everlasting torture-house. The Gnostic invites us to rejoice because the existence of an infinitely good and wise Creator is a guarantee for our happiness. He adds in the same breath that this good and wise Being has left it to chance whether his creatures shall all, or in any proportion, go straight to the devil. He reviles the Calvinist, who dares to think that God has settled the point by his arbitrary will. Is an arbitrary decision better or worse than a trusting to chance? We know that there is a great First Cause; but we add that there are at this moment in the world some twelve hundred million little first causes which may damn or save themselves as they please.

* History of my Religious Opinions, p. 322, 3.

† Id., p. 379.

‡ Grammar of Assent, p. 392.

The free-will hypothesis is the device by which theologians try to relieve God of the responsibility for the sufferings of his creation. It is required for another purpose. It enables the Creator to be also the judge. Man must be partly independent of God, or God would be at once pulling the wires and punishing the puppets. So far the argument is unimpeachable; but the device justifies God at the expense of making the universe a moral chaos. Grant the existence of this arbitrary force called free-will, and we shall be forced to admit that, if justice is to be found anywhere, it is at least not to be found in this strange anarchy, where chance and fate are struggling for the mastery.

The fundamental proposition of the anti-determinist, that which contains the whole pith and substance of his teaching, is this: that a determined action cannot be meritorious. Desert can only accrue in respect of actions which are self-caused, or in so far as they self-caused; and self-caused is merely a periphrasis for uncaused. Now no one dares to say that our conduct is entirely self-caused. The assumption is implied in every act of our lives and every speculation about history that men's actions are determined, exclusively or to a great extent, by their character and their circumstances. Only so far as that doctrine is true can human nature be the subject of any reasoning whatever; for reason is but the reflection of external regularity, and vanishes with the admission of chance. Our conduct, then, is the resultant of the two forces which we may call fate and free-will. Fate is but a name for the will of God. He is responsible for placing us with a certain character in a certain position; he cannot justly punish us for the consequences; we are responsible to him for the effects of our free-will alone, if free-will exists. That is the very contention of the anti-determinist; let us look for a moment at the consequences.

[TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

[For THE INDEX.]

THEISM AND MODERN SCIENCE.

All movement is circular or parabolic; we know no instance of movement along a straight line. The track of worlds and of ideas is of one pattern; all reasoning ends where it began—if carried far enough; the mind's first intuitional impulses are wonderfully similar to the conclusions it afterwards arrives at by patient thought and scrutiny. Let us institute a parallel between theism, a product of early rudimentary thought, and the idea of the indestructibility of force, a prominent element in modern advanced thought, making its inductions assumably from the widest attainable range of observation.

Theopoesy is ever the work of youthful, undeveloped persons and ages. All incarnations of the supernatural are of prehistoric origin. Man when we first gain any half-accurate knowledge of him is too old, too much probability-ridden, to invent new deities.

Perception is busy every moment of our lives; we see an unending procession of shapes when we close our eyes, and in our dreams remembered or forgotten. Vision is inseparable in our minds from the idea of being, and each sees himself; no two see alike, but each in some degree creates the forms he beholds. All nature is a mirror in which we discover our own likeness; it reflects to us not only the present, but the past and future. Most, if they have not entirely forgotten their childhood, know something of the faculty and lack of faculty by which its active, uncorrected, nascent visual sense peoples space with reflections of itself and its possibilities. How much more we see then! All objects are fresh and unexhausted; each sticks out boldly by itself, and is not yet classified into indistinguishable uniformity with a thousand others.

The child sees giants in combat, misshapen, crouching dwarfs, brandished weapons, heraldic monstrosities of his own invention, in the dim, gnarled forest; in the late twilight he is shadowed by forms that are almost entirely his own creation—all manner of weird, elfin analogues to the sinister aspect of the hour. Venus and all beautiful forms are but half hidden by sunny sky and wave; the mountainous brows of Jupiter and Odin are revealed by the lightning's flash riding the midnight storm.

The child-man has yet learned little to distinguish what he imagines from what he sees; images swarm all about him; is it strange that they are anthropoid? Would it not be strange if they were otherwise? He names them, fears them, loves them, divides the world with them, gives them the unknown, the invisible, the secret cause-sources of all things, for their habitation. The primary reason for theism is the imaginative, highly chromatic, self-tinctured eye of the new-born race; the fulness of that faculty (and lack of faculty) of which we all preserve a share, of seeing human faces and figures on blotched, discolored walls, in the configurations of the landscape, in the seething convolutions of the cloud-chaos—everywhere where the gaze meets dim cross-lights and indistinct outlines. The creation of the theistic embryo was evidently entirely involuntary—not motivated by any stirring of the causal instinct; that comes afterwards.

It is a long way from the visions darkly divined in the obscurity of thicket or cavern to the God of Theodore Parker, or the author of Ecce Homo. The human, personal part of deity we see to be the play of the eye and the imagination; the philosophic aspect of deity—God as cause—is the after-work of the reason. To see one's self everywhere mirrored; to feel images that exist in the eye and the brain more than elsewhere; the teeming fertility of the child-mind, not yet blighted by chilly rationalism, revelling in the swarming beauties and horrors of fairy and polytheism; slow accretion of the causative quality around the primal, sensuous form—burying the original conception out of sight; the consolidation of all modes of divine energy, or monotheism; recognition of the universality and unity of all-embracing force in its many interconvertible expressions,—thus we may roughly sketch the scale of mental development. It is from the sense-blurred eye, the joy-bewildered glamour of the anthropoid, to the undeceivable contemplation of the sad, brave thinker. As the sud-capsule mocks the bud, so the foldings and unfoldings of the flower, man, are alike in their first and last; all cycles contain a central destiny, completion; the only satisfying ideal of the last culture is the fresh, free, volcanic mind of the new-created savage, not yet emasculated of blood-fed fantasy, not yet dried down by much reading and indigestion into a mere critic's pair of scales. We tire at last of everything but that close intimacy with Nature which few save children and savages are wise enough to undeviatingly adhere to as the greatest possible good. We come back at last into the true path from which, in stormy middle life, passion and ambition may have diverted us. Respectabilities, imposing institutions, general enlightenment, security of life for lives not worth preserving, yea, even steam-cars, telegraphs, and national debts, are none too great compensation for the defection of that aboriginal vigor of body and mind which grows best in the sheltering obscurity and unstimulating quiet of savage life, and which, while it makes cultivation possible, is unfailingly corroded thereby.

The polytheist felt himself surrounded by mysterious, irresistible powers to be feared and obeyed, which he, child-like, inferred were beings animated by like instincts with himself. The mind, in its highest intensity of instructed vision (clearness always purchased by loss of coloring or poetic quality), conceives an unknowable reservoir of influence surrounding on all sides the sense-illuminated arena in which we go through our little parts. The irresistible impartiality of force, which kills its creatures with the same genial vigor of elemental influences with which it produces them, is to be feared, its wide modality is to be studied and obeyed; its infinite beauty attracts our love.

That speck in time and space which consciousness reveals to us rests on all sides on the unknown; from the unknown and back into its arcana come and go the forces that make life and its surroundings. Deity is the logical perception of this truth personified. God is a pure negation, the sum of our ignorance; and the most bigoted scientist must admit that our ignorance immeasurably exceeds our knowledge. The idea of the conservation of energy is God impersonal—monotheism divested of the infantile personal quality which properly belongs only to polytheistic conceptions. To declare that force is indestructible is simply to affirm that our powers of observation reach but a short distance; it is to comprehend that motion, when it appears to us to desist, merely passes into some mode latent to our senses, rejoins the great total of unknown, insensible force from which it came. Pure monotheism and the theory of the conservation of energy are inferences to which the causal instinct drives us, and are at bottom the same. The deeper our gaze penetrates into the relativity of phenomena, the more firmly we become grounded in the belief that cause and effect are inseparable and equipotent, that the point of contact between cause and effect is the work of the senses,—is the degree of greatest perceptibility to our senses of natural operations.

The history of the elevation of a race-type shows always, as one of its accompaniments, a progress from polytheism to monotheism, and it is impossible to stop there. The mind that has arrived at the stage of strict monotheism must find that conception growing more and more an idea, a dynamic generalization, and less and less a person. He whose imagination is only vivid—or literal—enough to see one God cannot long expect to see any. Theism proper, being so largely the work of the fancy, must be nourished by the fancy; undertake to transplant it into the domain of reason, and its vitality exhales.

Science, intellectual freedom, and eclecticism, the reign of the pure decarnated idea, succeed monotheism as naturally as it succeeds polytheism. Progress, even unto extinction, is the universal law. The most grossly sensuous conceptions of the first crude experimenters in God-fiction are some sons higher than the awe-struck crouching of dumb hearts before tempest or avalanche.

No creed or theory of existence is worthy the name that is less than universal; we believe all; the unintelligible, cateleptic mutterings of the mystic, bearing in his hyperæsthetic brain heaven and hell and all mysteries that have been and will be; we believe the exuberant, obscure histories of the sense-and-Nature-intoxicated children of the slimes, ere pain and thought woke souls within them; we have almost seen the riotous concourse of faun and satyr through the underbrush; we know that we have seen wonderful and beautiful things, for we are not yet so old and rational that we have all forgotten; epos, idyllic fantasy, winged jest or wingless, sprawling lustiness, the immense tyranny of the ether, the fearful suction of the molten underworld, the serene impenetrability of all-brooding fate,—in our depth each of us contains the germ, blossom, or dead-ripe fruit of all myths.

We search after interior, wondrous truths in hidden and remote times and places, but the glare of the present disturbs no mysteries; the meridian sun shining on the thronged thoroughfare uncovers nothing more distinctly than the eternal reticence of the vital essence which is kneaded into every clod and every soul. There is one sole wonder, at last—the perpetual miracle of animal existence; and the brighter the light turned on that fact, the more wonderful and undecipherable it becomes. Science interprets enigmas no faster than it discovers new ones. That inorganic existence should ever, in any measure of time, produce organic life, and maintain and improve it, is the sum of all that is wonderful; after that, all is matter of course. Many—perhaps most—minds find this inconceivable, and seek to deny it, and evade the necessity of its inference by some fanciful hypothesis which only puts the difficulty a little further off.

The universal, impersonal intelligence, the movement of the inorganic world which produces the organic world, are, in comparison with our limited personal intelligence, the ocean to a dew-drop. Human intelligence is condensed, concentrated, made vivid, lovely, and odious, by the mystic wool of passionate caprice and unaccountable individual taste; buys its divergence from the universal with imperfection and limitation. The cosmical movements know not caprice nor fallibility; God is all-wise; the atom is all-wise; savant and devotee equally recognize an omniscient omnipresence. The antilogy of coupling personality with universality is obvious; these are ideas that meet only as extremes meet. Man is the extreme of self-consciousness and intense life; the slightly-guessed universal forces are the opposite extreme of unconscious serene existence—not, indeed, life in our sense, knowing neither our felicities nor our sorrows. The universe of inanimate existence is absolute intelligence undisturbed by passion, which is the dower and the doom of imperfection. Passion is the basis of personality, and the extra-human cannot be called personal in our sense. After all, this is perhaps a verbal entanglement, and the difference between the extreme possible concepts of personal and impersonal is wholly of degree or quantity.

There is, from unknown sources external to our consciousness, a continuous succession of infractions on our senses. The sum of these constitutes phenomenalism, and includes physical science. These movements, appearances, or external causes of sensation, we perceive not to be isolated, capricious, or causeless, but related and coherent. But we do not infer that we follow all their relations; phenomenalism means manifestations of force: that trifling part of the whole, of which we are sensible. Force is the all-comprehending generalization; we do not conclude, when its manifestations change their form, or vanish from our perception, that their energy has become extinct. There is no completed or isolated action. All movement is effect, but it is equally cause,—its precedents and its subsequents exactly equal to each other and to itself. Latent energy, potential force,—these phrases generally mean little but the defectiveness of our powers of observation. Perfection is a modal aspect of cerebral force; conception, otherwise than as a classification of percepts, is unintelligible. The idea of the conservation of energy is neither new nor fanciful; it is old as human thought and axiomatic as the multiplication table; it is the logical necessity which we are under of viewing existence as fleeting in form, eternal in essence, and consequently a plenum to which nothing can be added, and from which nothing can be taken away. Forms must fade, for form is the track, the outline of movement, and must change with its changes: form is the mutative aspect of force. Force may become latent to the senses, but not to the reason: to admit that it may be converted into less than its equivalent is to affirm the possibility of universal annihilation.

GEORGE E. TUFTS.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

DECLINE OF THE CLERICAL PROFESSION.

Within six years two professorships have been added to the Divinity School, one in 1869, and one in 1872; and the amount of instruction given therein has quite doubled. The school never before offered such advantages as it has offered since 1872; yet the number of its students does not increase.

	1871-72	1872-73	1873-74	1874-75	1875-76
No. of regular students,	21	11	19	15	12
No. of special students,	9	9	2	4	3

The causes of the small resort to the school are doubtless many and complex, but the unsettled condition of the clerical profession is a principal cause. How much the relation of the college to that profession has changed may be clearly seen in the following significant figures:—

	1661-1670	1761-1770	1861-1870
Whole No. of Bachelors of Arts in the ten yrs.,	69	422	993
No. of ministers among those graduates,	31	121	57
Percentage of ministers,	.45	.29	.05%

In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the ministers among the graduates were almost all of one sect; but among the fifty-seven ministers of the ten classes from 1861 to 1870 inclusive, several sects are represented.

The condition of the school is to be deeply regretted, for the sake both of the public and of the university,—of the public, because the community sorely needs to avail itself to the utmost of every agency competent to produce a learned and vigorous clergy; and of the university, because it finds itself ineffective in a department of great historical and actual dignity and worth, in which for the first half of its existence Harvard College rendered its greatest service to the State. To remedy the feebleness of the school seems to be beyond the power of its learned and devoted Faculty, of the governing boards, and of the administration of the university. The causes of its depression lie beyond their control.—Extract from the Report of the President of Harvard College for 1875-6.

THE TRUE STORY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON AND HIS LITTLE HATCHET.—Almost everybody knows our oldest inhabitant, "Old Uncle Isaac," but how old he is nobody knows. We called upon him the other day, and are now willing to swear on our faith in his word that two hundred years of "sarvin' de Lo'd" will not more than fill the bill. Of course, Uncle Isaac is pious; all darkies who live to the age of one hundred and fifty years are pious. One of the first things which enlisted our attention, after entering Isaac's house, was a small hatchet, hung above the ample fire-place on two or three rusty nails; and it, of course, became the subject of inquiry. We were astounded at learning that it was the identical hatchet with which that mischievous little George Washington had hacked the favorite cherry-tree in his uncle's garden. We endeavored to make Isaac understand that the garden was not the uncle's but the father's. Isaac's memory was good and our history at fault. He knew because he was "thar." He had gone "wid Mas' Jawge for to see his uncle, and his uncle took him into the garden and showed him de cherry-tree, and told him dat was de fust cherry-tree dat ever come over to dis country, and dat in about so many years de tree would ba'r fruit, and dat he would send Mas' Jawge some sho'. Mas' Jawge was a mighty independent little cuss, and says to me, arter his uncle had gwine in de house, says he, 'Ike'—for I was a youngster den—Ike, I fen't gwine to wait on uncle for dem cherries; I'es gwine to cut dat tree right down, and will take it 'long home wid us.' Says I, 'Don't you do it, honey, for if you does your uncle he'll skin you 'live.' 'Jiat as soon be skinned as not,' says Mas' Jawge; 'I'es gwine to hab dat 'ar tree.' So he goes and gits dat are same identicle tool, and purty soon he was whackin' away at dat tree. And I don't think de chile had chopped more'n several licks before de ole gentleman,—dat's his uncle—he come a slippin' out'n de gooseberry bushes wid a wattle, and de way he flaxed dat chile was a absalom sia. De chile flung dat same little hatchet at his poor uncle, and jist more'n got out dat gadding; and when I cotechd up wid him he was a swearin' like a mate on a steamboat. Now, sar, dat's de true story, sar. Dese little one-hoss school-books dey don't know nuffin' 'bout it. W'y, bless your soul, honey, I went home wid him, and Mas' Jawge, and I staid all night wid him, and I followed him to Braddock's 'feat, and I got lost dar, and I kep' a comin' out West, 'cordin' to de device of Mr. Hoss Greenly dat killed Mr. Burr, and I was 'mong de Injuns for 'bout seventy-five year afore dis country was settled by de fust white woman."

We had given Uncle Isaac a "snort" when we went in, and we gave him another and came away. He's booked for the Centennial.—Ironton (Mo.) Register.

MR. LEONARD SWETT, of Chicago, gives this estimate of President Lincoln's legal powers: "As a trial lawyer, he had few equals and no superiors. He was as hard a man to beat in a closely-contested case as I have ever met. He was wise in knowing what to attempt and what to let alone. He was fair to the court, the jury, and his adversary, but candor compels me to say that he by practice learned there was power in this. He was candid and he was fair, but he knew how to make just the most of this. As he entered the trial, where most lawyers object, he would say he 'reckoned' it would be fair to let this in or that, and sometimes, when his adversary could not prove what Mr. Lincoln knew to be the truth, he would say he 'reckoned' it would be fair to admit the truth to be so and so. When he did object to the court, after he heard his objection answered, he would often say, 'Well, I reckon I must be wrong.' Now about the time he had practised this three-quarters through a case, if his adversary didn't understand him, he would wake up in a few minutes finding that he had feared the Greeks too late, and wake up to find himself beaten. He was wise as a serpent in the trial of a cause, but I tell you I have got too many scars from his blows to certify that he was harmless as a dove. When the whole thing is unravelled the adversary begins to see that what he was so blandly giving away was simply what he couldn't get and keep. By giving away six points and carrying the seventh he carried his case, and the whole case hanging on the seventh he traded everything off which would give him the least aid in carrying that. Any man who took Mr. Lincoln for a simple-minded man would very soon wake up on his back in a ditch."

WALT WHITMAN thus describes the scene in the theatre at Washington after Lincoln was shot: "A moment's hush, incredulous—a scream—the cry of murder—Mrs. Lincoln leaning out of the box, with ashy cheeks and lips, with involuntary cry pointing to the retreating figure: 'He has killed the President.' And still a moment's strange, incredulous suspense—and then the deluge!—then that mixture of horror, noises, uncertainty—(the sound, somewhere back, of a horse's hoofs clattering with speed)—the people burst through chairs and railings, and break them up—that noise adds to the queerness of the scene—there is inextricable confusion and terror—women faint—quite feeble persons fall, and are trampled on—many cries of agony are heard—the broad stage suddenly fills to suffocation with a dense and motley crowd, like some horrible carnival—the audience rush generally upon it—at least the strong men do—the actors and actresses are still there in their play costumes and painted faces, with mortal fright showing through the rouge, some trembling, some in tears—the screams and calls, confused talk—redoubled, trebled—two or three manage to pass up water from the stage to the President's box—others try to clamber up—etc., etc., etc. And in the midst of that night-pandemonium of senseless hate, infuriated soldiers, the audience, and the crowd—the stage, and all its actors and actresses, its paint-pots, spangles, and gas-lights—the life-blood from those veins, the best and sweetest of the land, drips slowly down, and death's ooze already begins its little bubbles on the lips."

CAMP-MEETINGS in Ohio are characterized by such extravagance of word and deed that they may be described without irreverence as religious spasms. The pilgrims from the Embury Park Camp-Meeting, at Loveland, returned to Cincinnati, Ohio, in a happy frame of mind. They sang hymns on the train, tossed hats, clasped hands, and were as boisterous as children on a half-holiday. "Bless the Lord!" cried one brother, clapping his hands, and thrusting out his foot after the departing form of one of the passengers with whom he had been shaking hands. One brother went down the aisle of the car. "Sister," said he, "I am all clean now. All the dirt, and all the smoke, and all the cobwebs are washed out of me, and I am all clean. God bless you!"—Tribune.

THE MANNER in which missionaries are received when making their evangelistic tours often presents strange contrasts. In one place recently visited by a Ningpo party of brethren, they were reverently taken into the ancestral hall of the village, and amid the tablets of the forefathers of their attentive hearers, they preached the doctrine which will in the end overthrow the ancestral worship of China. In the very next place the party were treated so rudely that they were obliged to spend the night in some boats on the river, and were roused in the morning with a volley of stones and the salutation: "Foreign devils, get up. Let us look at you."—Independent.

A SYRIAN convert to Christianity was urged by his employer to work on Sunday, but he declined. "But," said the master, "does not your Bible say that if a man has an ox or an ass that falls into a pit on the Sabbath day he may pull him out?" "Yes," answered Hayop, "but if the ass has a habit of falling into the same pit every Sabbath day, then the man should either fill up the pit or sell that ass."

SUNDAY AT THE "WORLD'S FAIR."

RECOMMENDED FOR CAREFUL PERUSAL BY THE UNITED STATES CENTENNIAL COMMISSION.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

"It is the king's highway that we are in, and in this way it is that thou has placed the lions."—Bunyan.

What! shut the gardens! lock the latticed gate!

Refuse the shilling and the fellow's ticket!

And hang a wooden notice up to state,

"On Sundays no admittance at this wicket!"

The birds, the beasts, and all the reptile race

Denied to friends and visitors till Monday!

Now, really, this appears the common case

Of putting too much Sabbath into Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

The gardens—so unlike the ones we dub

Of tea, wherein the artisan carouses,—

Mere shrubberies without one drop of shrub,

Wherefore should they be closed like public houses?

No ale is vended at the wild Deer's Head,

No rum, nor gin, not even of a Monday;

The Lion is not carved—or gilt—or red,—

And does not send out porter of a Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

The Bear denied! the Leopard under locks!

As if his spots would give contagious fevers!

The Beaver close as hat within its box;

So different from other Sunday beavers!

The Birds invisible, the Gnu-way Rats,

The Seal hermetically sealed till Monday;

The Monkey tribe, the family of Cats—

We visit other families on Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

What is the brute profanity that shocks

The supersensitively serious feeling?

The Kangaroo—is he not Orthodox

To bend his legs, the way he does, in kneeling?

Was strict Sir Andrew, in his Sabbath coat,

Struck all a-heap to see a Cont mundi?

Or did the Kentish Plum-tree fail to note

The Pelicans presenting bills on Sunday?

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

What feature has repulsed the serious set?

What error in the bestial birth or breeding,

To put their tender fancies on the fret?

One thing is plain—it is not in the feeding!

Some stiffish people think that smoking joints

Are carnal sins 'twixt Saturday and Monday;

But then the beasts are pious on these points,

For they all eat cold dinners on a Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

What change comes o'er the spirit of the place,

As if transmuted by some spell organic?

Turns fell Hyena of the Ghoulish race?

The Snake, pro tempore, the true Satanic?

Do Irish minds (whose theory allows

That now and then Good Friday falls on Monday)—

Do Irish minds suppose that Indian Cows

Are wicked Bulls of Bashan on a Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

There are some moody fellows, not a few,

Who, turned by Nature with a gloomy bias,

Renounce black devils to adopt the blue,

And think when they are dismal they are pious;

Is't not possible that Pug's untimely fun

Has sent the brutes to Coventry till Monday?

Or perhaps some animal, no serious one,

Was overheard in laughter on a Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

What dire offence have serious fellows found

To raise their spleen against the regent's spinney?

Were charitable boxes handed round,

And would not Guinea Pigs subscribe their guinea?

Perchance the Demoiselle refused to moult

The feathers in her head—at least till Monday;

Or did the Elephant, unseemly, bolt

A tract presented to be read on Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

At whom did Leo struggle to get loose?

Who mourns through Monkey tricks his damaged clothing?

Who has been hissed by the Canadian Goose?

On whom did Llama spit in utter loathing?

Some Smithfield saint did jealous feelings tell

To keep the Puma out of sight till Monday,

Because he prayed extempore as well

As certain wild itinerants on Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

To me it seems that in the oddest way

(Begging the pardon of each rigid Socus)

Our would-be keepers of the Sabbath day

Are, like the keepers of the brutes, ferocious.

As soon the Tiger might expect to stalk

About the grounds from Saturday till Monday

As any harmless man to take a walk,

If saints could clap him in a cage on Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

In spite of all hypocrisy can spin,

As surely as I am a Christian scion,

I cannot think it is a mortal sin

(Unless he's loose) to look upon a lion.

I really think that one may go, perchance,

To see a bear, as guiltless as on Monday

(That is, provided that he did not dance;

Bruin's no worse than bakin' on a Sunday)—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

In spite of all the fanatic compiles,

I cannot think the day a bit diviner

Because no children, with forestalling smiles,

Throng, happy, to the gates of Eden Minor.

It is not plain, to my poor faith at least,

That what we christen "Natural" on Monday,

The wondrous history of bird and beast,

Can be unnatural because it's Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

Whereon is sinful fantasy to work?

The Dove, the winged Columbus of man's haven?

The tender Love-bird, or the filial Stork?

The punctual Crane, the providential Raven?

The Pelican, whose bosom feeds her young?

Nay, must we cut from Saturday till Monday

That feathered marvel with a human tongue,

Because she does not preach upon a Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

The busy Beaver, that sagacious beast,

The Sheep that owned an oriental shepherd,

That Desert Ship, the Camel of the East,

The horned Rhinoceros, the spotted Leopard,

The creatures of the great Creator's hand,

Are surely sights for better days than Monday;

The Elephant, although he wears no band,

Has he no sermon in his trunk for Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

What harm if men who burn the midnight oil,

Weary of frame and worn and wan of feature,

Seek once a week their spirits to assail,

And snatch a glimpse of "Animated Nature"?

Better it were if, in his best of suits,

The artisan who goes to work on Monday

Should spend a leisure hour amongst the brutes

Than make a beast of his own self on Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

Why, zounds! what raised so Protestant a fuss

(Omit the zounds, for which I make apology)

But that the Papists, like some fellows, thus

Had somehow mixed up Deism with their theology?

Is Brama's Bull (a Hindu god at home)

A Papal Bull to be tied up till Monday,

Or Leo, like his namesake, Pope of Rome,

That there is such a dread of them on Sunday?—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

Spirit of Kant! have we not had enough

To make religion sad, and sour, and snubbish,

But saints zoological must cant their stuff,

As vessels cant their ballast—rattling rubbish!

Once let the sect, triumphant to their text,

Shut Nero up from Saturday till Monday,

And sure as fate they will deny us next

To see the dandelions on a Sunday—

But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 12.

Edw. Mead, $3; E. J. Leonard, $1; D. Crowley, 75 cents; F. H. Dodge, 75 cents; F. H. Proctor, $1.60; C. D. B. Mills, 20 cents; F. Edson, $4.50; M. F. Howill, 50 cents; B. P. Elliott, $3.20; A. W. Kelsey, $4.40; Cash, $2.20; I. B. Harrison, 25 cents; W. L. Garrison, Jr., $3.20; L. A. Foster, $3; H. M. Simmons, $2.25; Chas. E. Gager, 80 cents; Chas. H. Goddard, $3; Ella A. Fisher, $1; D. C. Levy, 50 cents; Ohlson, Mendlik & Co., 75 cents; David Ferguson, $1; S. H. Richardson, $3.90; B. R. Tucker, 35 cents.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

The Index.

BOSTON, AUGUST 17, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 33 Monroe Street; J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Con-
tributors.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

CASH RECEIPTS.

Acknowledged August 10,	$1094.58
Emerson Bentley, Morgan City, La.,	1.00
A. R. B., Providence, R. I.,	1.00
L. E. B., "	1.00
J. Z. Hoffer, Indianapolis, Ind.,	1.00
Samuel Evans, "	1.00
Mrs. D. Hanauer, "	1.00
Jacob H. Hershey, "	1.25
A. G. Masser, "	1.00
John Peat, "	1.00
H. E. Wolfe, "	1.00
A. Hershey, "	1.00
Joe. N. Watts, "	1.00
Samuel Wislar, "	1.00
Samuel Carter, "	1.00
John B. Wislar, "	1.00
Jacob M. Grider, "	1.00
S. S. Claire, "	1.00
	$1111.83

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.,
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.
PHILADELPHIA, July 31.

F. R. A. ANNUAL REPORT.

The report of the annual meeting of the Free Religious Association for 1876 is published in pamphlet form.

It contains a full abstract of the discussion at the business meeting; the annual report of the executive committee; address by the president, O. B. Frothingham; essay, by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; also essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it, by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Harford, and John Wales.

Price, single copy, 40 cents; package of three, $1; postage paid. Address Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

W. J. POTTER, Secretary.

TEN DOLLARS for the Hofferichter fund have been received through Miss Emily J. Leonard, of Meriden, Connecticut, contributed by "a friend who does not wish his name given."

OUR THANKS are due to the Boston Investigator, the New York Jewish Times, and the numerous other journals which have given "aid and comfort" to the National Liberal League.

THE Pacific Liberal, edited by Mr. A. J. Boyer at San Francisco, has vigorously and enthusiastically taken up the work of the National Liberal League, and is devoting itself with energy to the organization of Liberalism on the Pacific coast.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, of Lincoln, Nebraska, edits a monthly sheet under the name of Radical Leagues, which is doing good service in behalf of the Liberal League. Mr. Copeland sees the great need of the hour, and is nobly doing his part to meet it.

HARRIET MARTINEAU'S autobiography and life will be read with great avidity, when published. Women may well be proud of the intellectual ability of three such representatives as Harriet Martineau, George Sand, and George Eliot.

MISS MARTINEAU, in 1848, wrote a letter on national education, which has just been published by the Birmingham Post. In it she said: "For years I have seen our national ruin looming in the distance, from the brutal ignorance of a large proportion of our people; and for years all that I have been able to ascertain of the character of the education professed to be given, of the nature of the efforts made under the voluntary principle, and of the tendency of the proceedings of the Privy Council Committee, has only deepened my sense of despair. No one is more sensible, I believe, than I am of the improvements wrought in society by time and by a long peace; but not the less for this do I feel that we cannot go on as we are; that society cannot continue to exist much longer while maintaining such a mass of ignorance and misery as we are trifling with,—trifling with for the indulgence of our sectarian prejudices. Unless we give our people enlightenment which shall bring all into mutual sympathy, we have that to go through as a nation which has never been paralleled in our history."

THE FRENCH are learning to separate Church and State in a way which would startle Americans: "The case of Count de Mun, which was alluded to in an article on 'The Irrepressible Conflict in France,' in the Tribune of April 27, has at last been decided. Count de Mun was elected to the Chamber of Deputies from the District of Pontivy, in Brittany, and it was charged that his election was directly due to the illegal interference of the clergy. The proposition to investigate the matter provoked a great excitement; the Ultramontane journals pronounced it 'blasphemy.' Nevertheless, the proposition was carried in the Chamber of Deputies, a committee was appointed, and the investigation proceeded. On the 14th ult., a report having been made adverse to the Count's right to a seat, he was allowed to plead his cause before the Chamber. He made a calm, temperate speech, which was heard in profound silence, and then the vote was taken. The Chamber decided, by a vote of 308 to 187, that the election was invalidated. Priestly interference in politics has thus been emphatically condemned in France."

GEORGE ELIOT, in her new story of Daniel Deronda, prefixes this striking paragraph to her twenty-first chapter: "It is a common sentence that 'knowledge is power'; but who hath duly considered or set forth the power of ignorance? Knowledge slowly builds up what ignorance in an hour pulls down. Knowledge, through patient and frugal centuries, enlarges discovery and makes record of it; ignorance, wanting its day's dinner, lights a fire with the record, and gives a flavor to its one roast with the burnt souls of many generations. Knowledge, instructing the senses, refining and multiplying needs, transforms itself into skill, and makes life various with a new six days' work; comes ignorance on the seventh, drunk, with a skin of oil and a match, and an easy 'let these not be,' and the many-colored creation is shrivelled up in blackness. Of a truth, knowledge is power; but it is a power refined by scruple, having a conscience of what must be and what may be; whereas ignorance is a blind giant who, let him but wax unbound, would make it a sport to seize the pillars that hold up the long-wrought fabric of human good, and turn all the palaces of joy dark as a buried Babylon."

THIS is the account of a curious religious squabble, as told by the New York Tribune: "A very pretty and seasonable article might be written about fans; there is already a neat poem by Gay upon that subject. Fans which are intended to cool the constitution ought not to arouse the angry passions, especially in church, where if anywhere they should be quiescent. It was in Cambridge, Mass., and it was a very warm Sunday. It was in St. Mary's Church (R. C.) that the clergy issued an edict forbidding the use of fans during divine service. The ladies of an Alderman, in spite of the order, fluttered the obnoxious article, and the Alderman, Reardon by name, sustained them in it. The pastor, approaching the Aldermanic pew, ordered the Reardon family, fans and all, to leave the church. Reardon, as the representative of his wife and daughters, refused, and an officer was called to put him out. This functionary rather doubted his authority to expel the Alderman without a warrant, but offered to undertake the business if some one would help him. Nobody else offering, the pastor came to the aid of the officer; Reardon was pulled into the aisle and knocked down. Some came to the rescue of Reardon, some to the aid of the pastor; and being much bruised, the Alderman will bring his action against the priest and all who assisted him. A poorer way of getting cool on a hot day than this we cannot well imagine. That fans were irregular and irreverent in church we have never before suspected; and we fear that a general adoption of the principle would render midsummer church-going even a little more unpopular than it is already."

AN EDITORIAL ARTICLE already in type on the "School Amendment" in Congress must be held over till next week; the accounts of the proceedings in the Senate, given in the Boston dailies as we go to press, are too confused to make its final action intelligible, and the subject is too important not to be treated with exact knowledge of the facts.

THE CLOSING OF THE CENTENNIAL EXHIBITION ON SUNDAY.

The late debate on this subject by the commissioners indicates one of the worst evils growing out of the superstitious sabbatical observance of Sunday, in its bewilderment and debasement of the conscience.

Gen. Hawley was driven to acknowledge his own inconsistency; but we doubt very much if his past life has been regulated, or his future will be, by the strict sabbatical observance enjoined by what he professes to believe to be the "Word of God." We have heard a preacher tell his people that every secular act—the writing of a letter, the settling an account, or a visit to a friend—was a mortal sin on Sunday; and before leaving the church we have seen him actually engaged in distributing letters and papers, collecting subscriptions, and settling accounts!

It is time that the protest of liberal thinkers against the sabbatarian superstition took an affirmative instead of a negative form. There is no authority, either in Scripture or reason, for this forced excessive worship of a special time.

But (and the liberal Christians now base their observance of Sunday largely on this ground) there is ample justification for observance of the day on the rational ground of its usefulness. That the State should reserve one day in the week as a general holiday of rest is perfectly within its province as guardian of the social welfare, and the Church may turn this holiday to its own account by using the opportunity thus given for public worship and religious instruction. But if the Church throws obstacles in the way of its use for other purposes equally beneficial, it is right to protest against its dictates.

Under the present system Sunday is to many a day of wearisome routine, or enforced idleness, or idle dissipation, ruinous to body and mind. Our aim should be to redeem the day from its misuse, and give it a real, humanitarian value.

Many years ago an "Anti-Sabbath Convention" was called in Boston. The name gave immediate offence, and deterred many from joining it who would have sympathized with the principles of the signers. Theodore Parker, who incurred much odium by taking part in it, said he would have headed the call, "A Convention to Promote the more Christian Observance of the Sunday." Substituting the word "humane" or "religious" for Christian, we wish the Free Religious Association would devote a convention to the discussion of this important theme, that the day may be redeemed from superstition, and given to human improvement, and that the words of Jesus may be made the text of our discourse—"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." E. D. C.

INCIDENTS AT AN ENGLISH CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR:—

I am sitting in St. James's Hall, London, listening to Father Hyacinthe delivering an oration on "The Progress of Christendom and Fusion of Opinion." The day is warm enough to admit of a fusion of the human race. The famous father speaks with pleasant ease, and that apparent reservation of power which gives the impression of abounding force. Mr. Gladstone has just come in, and every one cheers the great commentator on the Pope. The Duke of Argyll, who wrote the Reign of Law, is in the chair, so we have the Reign of Law, the Reign of Progress, and the Reign of Criticism, all before us.

So far as I can calculate, I will select such topics as shall not conflict with or coincide with those upon which other English writers may address you. If I make an exception, it shall be with reference to a freethought conference which has been held in Leeds since I wrote you last. Yet I cannot pass over, without a word of acknowledgment, the gracefully expressed reference Mrs. Besant makes to me and the generous note you append to her remarks. It is not possible to merit an estimate so high. Every one who reflects upon himself becomes conscious, with dismay and humility, how much he falls short of his own ideal of life and work. Yet those confer both pleasure and encouragement who discern ever so remote fulfilment of personal endeavor, and one thinks much of the friendly inaccuracy which makes the measurement too great. I hope I am not vainer than the statute permits; still I own to being gratified by words like your own, from one whom I have never seen, said too in Boston, in the hearing of so many whom I honor and whom I one day hope to meet.

We have had a freethought conference in England. Do not think that you alone have centennial conferences of Liberals. True, we have not yet fixed upon our centennial point, but we may. We have a considerable choice between to-day and the building of the Tower of Babel. That, I believe, is the first time when free discussion was known to be in full force. It must have been in full play to occasion that famous confusion of tongues. I have oft thought that the stars must have some coöperative understanding among them, since they do not run against each other, as our men of business do. But it never occurred to me that there could be freethought and secular conferences of any note in England. We have had social conferences and political conferences, but the wider and more important conferences on behalf of Individuality of Ideas have been far less frequent and much less known. Heretofore, long years ago, I was chairman of one or two. The one at Leeds, in session in June last, was one of several held annually by the National Secular Society. Mrs. Besant was present and took, as is her wont, an animated part in the proceedings; Mr. Charles Watts and Mrs. Harriet Law also were speakers. Mr. C. Bradlaugh was president. Voracious for business, we had three days' work ready to be crowded into one. As a consequence, the president and his hammer were continually going. As you say in America, the business was "put through"; if it had not been, it would never have got itself through. The president had to make a hundred decisions during the day. I do not believe he decided wrongly in half a dozen instances, but the decisions were given with such celerity that many persons did not know whether they were right or wrong. The Scotch delegates, who belong to a nation which sees a long way ahead, were not quick enough to discern the fitness of some awards.

As a whole, the conference was the most encouraging I have seen of the kind in this country. It was numerous beyond precedent, and everybody was in earnest about something. In fact, there was enthusiasm enough to have differences of opinion and entertain them with vigor. The constitution of the society is to be revised; that was one thing decided upon; and a personal question disagreeably enlivened the day.

There needs a special doctrine for the determination of personal differences among freethinkers. If notice be taken of them, the time of the society is taken up by them. If no notice is taken of them, any person may be offensive with impunity, and then quietly-disposed persons will keep away from a body that has no power to put down calumniators. There ought to be a committee of differences, to whom all personal questions of conduct or character should be referred, and every member pledged to accept their decision. On the conference day in question, Whimples was called to account for having published something to the purport that "the president had better not make objections to something Whimples had put forward, or a very unpleasant rejoinder would be made." Of course Whimples was properly and promptly asked, in a private letter, to say his dreadful say. He refused, as "he should choose his own time to do that." This was mere vulgarity of menace, and unfairness besides. When one makes an accusation against another, he puts himself at the mercy or will of him assailed, and is bound in honor to state the accusation, substantiate it, or withdraw it: else any one may suffer from a charge which is never proved, and which may be suspended and never substantiated. If the accuser keeps silence when speech is demanded of him by him whom he accuses, he is treated as a calumniator in every society of gentlemen. In the House of Commons such a man could not hold up his head. There is no reason why the code of honor should be lower among freethinkers than among gentlemen. Whimples told me more than once that "the president would never dare to quarrel with him, as he (Whimples) knew too much." Of course I was shocked. I thought the president had shot his grandmother, and did not like to mention it. Perhaps he had caused the death of the late Sultan Abdul Aziz; or he might be at the bottom of the "Bulham Mystery" (a poisoning case which troubles the town just now). No one could imagine what he had done, that he should be dumb in the presence of the dreadful Whimples. The president is certainly not a timid person, and he demanded openly and publicly before every one at the conference that Whimples should open wide his mysterious mouth. Had this demand not been made, there had been silly persons who would have said, "You see the president is dumb. He is afraid to speak. There is some horrid disclosure to be made. Whimples is right. Who would have thought it?" It came to pass that Whimples was compelled to bring his accusation, and a more limp, flabby, boneless, confused, or (as I thought) impertinent story was never told by a pretentious accuser. When the bag of accusation was opened, there came out, not a cat, nor a rat, nor even a mouse, but a midge, and it flew away straight into the everlasting shade. But the tiresome insect cost a national conference two hours of precious time to embag it. My belief is that a committee of differences had got at the little creature in twenty minutes.

Next Whimples permitted himself to be put forward as a vice-president of the society. The good sense of the assembly soon decided against it. Nobody had any personal objection to Whimples, had he owned his error and apologized for it, or handsomely withdrawn his decrepid charges. As he did neither, how could he be asked to take office under a president whom he accused? I once knew a popular society which elected an annual executive of seven persons, not one of whom was on speaking terms with each other. They never met, and the year was lost. The persons who gave their foolish votes to this end deserved three weeks on the nearest treadmill. There can be no organization except in a united party, and there can be no united party except under a united executive; and you cannot have that, if one is trying to stab, and his colleagues must kick him to keep the peace. It would not be worth writing on these occurrences, were it not to suggest that in freethought societies, where so much liberty is conceded, it must be bounded by honor and order, and regulated by good feeling and good sense.

But I must bring what I have to say to an end, or I shall find myself locked in St. James's Hall. The tones of the eloquent père have long since died in the air; Mr. Gladstone has long since departed, and is now doubtless explaining to the House of Commons some abstruse question of high politics (like Cleopatra, his infinite variety never stales). A lady is sitting by my side, to whom I have not spoken for an hour; and lest she should go home and make (not to my credit) a note in her diary (to be read a century hence) on "The Radical Incivility of Literary Pursuits," I at once subscribe myself

Yours ever faithfully, and as modestly as I can,

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

22 ESSEX ST., TEMPLE BAR, LONDON.

P. S.—By the next mail I will send you No. 1 of the Secular Review, which is already prepared for the press. More interest has been taken in this journal than any one I have heretofore issued. I have received from the Secular Chronicle, edited by Mrs. Harriet Law, and especially from the National Reformer, edited by Mr. C. Bradlaugh, the friendliest coöperation. It will be published by Mr. Edward Truelove, 256, High Holborn, London,—a well-known freethought bookseller. I have met Americans at his shop who occasionally pay him international visits. Holborn is wider than the Strand, and in some seasons probably a million persons a week pass by the house, and all can read the far-extending sign—"Secular Review." If all of them stop and buy it, I will mention it!

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

The event of the week, so far as the purposes of THE INDEX are concerned, is the adoption by the Senate of a proposed amendment to the Constitution. The House amendment, to which we referred last week as passing that body almost unanimously, was sent up to the Senate, but was not regarded as sufficiently explicit, and various substitutes being proposed by Frelinghuysen, Sargent, and Christianity, the whole matter was referred to the Judiciary Committee, which reported a substitute which the Senate adopted by a vote of 36 to 10. The first section forbids any State to make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and forbids the requirement of any religious test as a qualification for office. It also forbids the appropriation of any public money for the support of any sectarian school, or religious denomination of any description; forbids the reading or teaching of any particular creed or tenets in any school supported in whole or in part by public money; and forbids, finally, the appropriation of public money to promote the interests or tenets of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination. The second section gives Congress power to enforce the above provisions by appropriate legislation. We do not see but that the above amendment covers the entire ground of the "Religious Freedom Amendment," proposed as a substitute for the first amendment to the United States Constitution, which has stood for some time past in the columns of THE INDEX. As we write, the House has not voted upon it, but will probably do so before adjournment. Its ultimate adoption by the States, besides securing public schools from sectarian control, would do away with the Massachusetts requirement that the Governor shall be of the Christian religion, with the New Hampshire statute forbidding Catholics to hold office, and with analogous provisions in the constitutions or laws of other States.

The adjournment of Congress is likely to be announced before this reaches our readers, the two Houses having agreed at last, or, as we write, being upon the point of agreement, with regard to the remaining Appropriation Bills. The House recedes from its former position with reference to the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Bill, and omits its proposed new legislation. With reference to the Indian Bill, also, the House recedes, so that the Indian Bureau will not be transferred to the War Department. Agreement upon the Consular and Diplomatic Bill was brought about by mutual concessions. Among the unexpected measures of the last week may be mentioned the restoration of the Franking Privilege, which passed the Senate by a vote of 29 to 16; and Mr. Scott Lord's resolution with regard to the Fifteenth Amendment and the protection of negroes, an electioneering resolution, of course, but one which is well calculated to take considerable wind out of certain Republican sails.

Butler comes to the front again. In a long letter, he accepts the invitation given him by the Mayor and twenty-one hundred and forty-five other voters of Lowell, to become a candidate for Congress in the seventh district of Massachusetts. He still believes in his convertible-bond magic, but is afraid that the country has not sufficient virtue to enjoy it at present, and he will endeavor therefore to endure with equanimity the coming resumption of specie payments. He refers to the tariff which he is sure will be modified at the next session of Congress, and declares that with reference to this matter he would make an excellent representative of Lowell, his interests being identical with those of that city. The full cogency of this reference will hardly be understood by those who do not know that Butler is probably the largest manufacturer of bunting in the United States, and that the cost of every American flag is nearly doubled by Butler's persistency in keeping up the tariff upon this article.

It will be remembered by most of our readers that the self-respecting Republicans of the sixth district of Massachusetts united with the Democrats of the last election, and voted for Mr. Charles R. Thompson for Congress, thus defeating Butler, who had managed to secure the regular Republican nomination. Mr. Thompson has been an able and excellent Representative, and his voting, upon all important questions, has been thoroughly unpartisan in character. His reelection to Congress by a union of Republicans and Democrats would furnish a manifold stronger evidence of belief in genuine political reform than anything contained in platform resolutions or stump professions. His renomination by the Democrats is already assured; would it be possible for a Republican convention to renominate him also?

Professor Huxley, whose name is familiar to everybody as that of one who has done so much to advance the science of physiology, and who never fails to oppose all forms of cant and humbug, is now on a visit to this country, spending the present week at New Haven in an examination of the fossils collected by Professor Marsh. He is expected to visit our principal cities, and some of our best educational institutions, and will lecture for the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington, some time during the coming autumn. The immediate purpose of his visit, however, is to deliver an address at the opening of the John Hopkins University, at Baltimore, an institution which is organized upon an original plan, and is intended to supplement the work of the regular colleges of the country.

Whenever we are tempted to sympathize with workingmen in their positive hardships or fancied wrongs, some of their number are sure to be guilty of some act so inexpressibly absurd or wicked that any expression of sympathy is inevitably checked. The Independent Workingmen of New York, for instance, have just nominated Mr. James Gordon Bennett for mayor of that city. Mr. Bennett—who is nominally editor of the Herald, but who as matter of fact does nothing whatever in connection with that paper, aside from spending the profits of its publication—is chiefly famous as the son of his father, although he has gained some reputation as an amateur pedestrian and yachtsman, as a player of the game of polo, and as a general patron of the sports of the average fast young man. His fitness for mayor would be well expressed by the familiar figure of "a bull in a china shop," or anything else equally incongruous.—Butler as member of Congress, for instance, or Seelye as professor of moral philosophy, or a poker-player as minister to England, or Boss Shepherd as secretary of the Treasury. His nomination was brought about, possibly, because of some fancied belief that the Herald favored "the cause" of the workingman. We could not possibly wish the Independent Workingmen, or the forty thousand men who are said to be out of employment at present in New York, any worse misfortune than the fulfillment of their wishes and the election of Bennett.

A very curious and in some respects suggestive strike, that of newsboys against a newspaper, has just taken place in St. Louis. Every newsboy in the city is said to have joined in a strike against the Evening Dispatch of that city, and for several days, it is reported, the boys actually managed to prevent the sale of that paper upon the street. Future talk about the power and influence of the press will have to be modified somewhat. Imagine the boys of New York in combination against the Tribune or World! They could, for a short time, at least, effectually squelch those "mighty engines of thought."

Stanley, the "discoverer" of Livingstone and the well-known correspondent of the London Telegraph and the New York Herald, has sent a letter from Africa to Philadelphia. The letter is dated in the month of May, but Stanley forgot to insert the number of the year, and Mr. Edward King, the gentleman to whom the letter was sent, is unable to decide whether the blank should be filled by 1876 or 1875. It seems hardly possible to believe, in this age of railroads and telegraphs, that any portion of the world could contain a mass of savagery so dense that we cannot decide whether a letter has taken three months or fifteen months in penetrating it. Stanley, evidently, has not had an easy life in Africa, but he appears to be prosecuting his work with the same invincible energy which led to the finding of Livingstone after the latter had been given up by the English expedition sent expressly to discover him. Stanley's fame as a geographer is already established, and he bids fair to add to it immensely by his successful additions to the work of Speke, Burton, Livingstone, and other African travellers.

The long expected performance of Wagner's great musical composition is about to take place, or is now in progress, at Bayreuth, in Bavaria. The theatre, begun, we believe, in 1874, and built in conformity with Wagner's own plan, is now finished. The orchestra, composed of leading musicians from all parts of Germany, is completed, and the rehearsals, which have taken an entire year, have been brought to a successful close. Bayreuth is filled with distinguished visitors. The performance will occupy twelve days, and, however varied may be opinions concerning Wagner and the "music of the future," it is certain that the history of music has never before chronicled an event in any way comparable with that now taking place.

Servia is certainly faring badly in her warfare against Turkey, and without the intervention of some foreign power or unless the Montenegrins can render more assistance than now seems probable, her dream of independence is surely destroyed. The defeat of the Servians last week at Gurgusonatz was much more severe than at first reported, and was followed by the abandonment of Satschar and the advance of the Turks into Servia. The Servians, however, declare that they will not sue for peace until the Turks are under the walls of Belgrade; and the Turks declare that they will listen to no terms for mediation until after the capture of that city. The Turkish atrocities in Bulgaria increase in horribleness as the real facts are brought to light, and although Lord Derby, through the English minister at Constantinople, has warned the Porte that the invasion of Servia must be conducted more humanely, the Turks do not appear to have paid any attention to the warning, but are carrying on their warfare with all the barbarism of the Middle Ages. If the butchery of defenceless Christians be continued, it is probable that Russia and Austria may soon interfere. Prince Milan has returned to Belgrade, and, it is rumored, has announced to England his willingness to accept mediation.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, July 28, 1876.

Most of our bishops and revered archdeacons in their late charges and visitations have been lamenting over the rapid spread of infidelity, and the growing influence and increased circulation of infidel literature. Only one comfort can be drawn by them from these melancholy facts, and that is, that it was prophesied by holy men of old that "there should come in the last days scoffers." From this the Bishop of Ripon lately drew the conclusion that the spread of scepticism was one of the signs of the coming of the Son of Man; and he exclaimed, with pious fervor, that already in the distance he could hear his approaching chariot-wheels. Scared by this threatening spectre of unbelief, the Church some years ago proved its title to be rightly that of "militant," and established the Christian Evidence Society, with archbishops, bishops, earls, and marquises to support it, with paid lecturers to travel the country lecturing against infidelity, with a journal to give its own views to the world, uncensored by unsympathetic editorship. The journal, a few months since, gave up the ghost, like Lazarus, and no "come forth" has yet broken the rest of the tomb wherein it lies, nor has called it to a renewed lease of life on earth. The lecturers still maintain a precarious existence, and the Society is always begging earnestly for funds. We may conclude that this Society may now be generally—and not only by infidels—reckoned as a failure, since on Monday last a meeting was held at Lambeth Palace (the London fisherman's hut of that successor of the apostles known to the vulgar as the wealthy Archbishop of Canterbury), and there assembled, to confer on the alleged progress of irreligious thought, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London, Winchester, Norwich, Gloucester, Bristol, Peterborough, Bath, and Wells. So much for the Establishment. To meet them came the representatives of non-Conformity, the well-known ministers of dissenting persuasions, the Revs. Dr. Allan, Dr. Angus, Dr. Aveling, Dr. C. Dykes, Dr. Donald Fraser, Newman Hall, Dr. Punshon (the ablest Christian controversialist in England), Dr. Raleigh, Dr. Stoughton, Dr. Cumming, together with others less known to fame.

The activity of the assailants of Christianity was acknowledged (only very meagre reports have reached the press), and many urged that Christianity also showed real growth, and that there was much that was hopeful in the prospect. It would be very interesting to read a full account of the speeches of the various dignitaries, so as to be able to judge from which sections of the Christian Church come the most favorable accounts of the state of religion. We are inclined to fancy that the Establishment would speak in the saddest tone, for the vast majority of the upper-middle and upper classes nominally belong to her, for respectability's and fashion's sake, and freethought is very widely spread among them. The Primitive Methodist branch of the Wesleyans would also know much of the growing scepticism, since they are very strong in the mining population, and amongst these Secularism is rapidly becoming powerful. The town Wesleyans and the Baptists would be happier, for their congregations are drawn from the small shopkeepers, and the smug and oily respectability of these is almost impervious to thought and untrainable by culture. The Congregationalists would probably be tolerably at ease, for their creed has in it so much that is manly and independent that freethought is undermining it rapidly in every direction, aided by its own valuable qualities, and unconsciously they are drifting very far away from the old landmarks. Perhaps, however, we may yet hear something more of this conference, and if anything is published concerning it I will duly report. The Newcastle Daily Chronicle, the most influential north-country journal we have, in a leading article on this conference, thinks that the precedent is a most valuable one, and rejoices to see Churchmen and Dissenters thus meeting on friendly ground, thinking that "the main vantage-ground of popular infidelity is furnished by the irreconcilable variance of Christian sects," but it goes on to say: "If, however, it be asked why such conferences should have been impracticable in the past, or why they should not become more frequent and proportionately influential in the future, truth compels the explanation that the principles which separate Conformists and non-Conformists are nearly as vital as those which divide believers from infidels. Many religious doctrines and a few religious practices are held in common by the Churchman and the Dissenter, but the former regards the latter as a schismatic, while the latter holds the former to be a sort of Judas who has sold his Master for pelf."

A meeting was held yesterday at Willis' Rooms under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury, to protest against any moral and material assistance being given to Turkey by the government, in her conflict with the insurgent populations now endeavoring to throw off the Moslem rule. A few days since two deputations were received by Lord Derby, the foreign secretary, which urged the same prayer. One of these was weighty, from the large number of towns represented upon it, and for its good sense in concerning itself only with the political situation; the other lost its dignity completely, from Mr. Jenkins' (Gin's Baby, late Agent-General for Canada) foolish behavior in talking about fellow-feeling for Christians as against Moslems: against this Mr. Auberon Herbert felt it his duty to protest, and endeavored to replace the matter on its proper footing of sympathy with the oppressed as against the oppressor. One wonders when Christians will become sensible enough to deal with politics as politicians, and not as theologians. At this Willis' Rooms meeting Lord Shaftesbury spoke very sensibly, urging against Turkey her lâche in respect of civilization instead of in respect of Christianity. He finished up by a statement that created some sensation: "I, for one, would rather, in view of the interests of the whole commonwealth of mankind, see the Russians on the Bosphorus than the Turks in Europe." It is hard to see the rationale of the English mania regarding the presence of the Russians in Constantinople. Some vague idea that the Russians could thus close our road to India seems to be at the root of this dread, but as a dry matter of fact, even supposing that the Suez Canal would be—as it never will—our high road to India in time of war, Russia could close the canal from the Black Sea as easily as from Constantinople, and could strike against us as effectively without the Bosphorus as with it. There is a much more useful weapon against Russia in our hands than Turkey can ever prove. Russia is very poor, and is really, although not apparently, bankrupt. Stopping the money supplies she borrows from us would cripple her far more than shutting her out of Constantinople. Far better to detach her from her alliance with Germany than to throw her into Bismarck's arms by maintaining Turkey against her. Germany will soon be a more formidable rival to us on the sea than any other power, and if England wants to be jealous of any power, she had better turn her jealousy that way. Our true policy would be to make all Europe understand that Great Britain no longer supported Turkey, and would not interfere on her behalf under any circumstances, and I should be inclined to say—though I believe that on this point my opinion is in conflict with many of those with whom I work—that we might well go a step further, and say that the atrocities of Bulgaria shall not be repeated, and that Turkey shall never again rule in the provinces she has deluged with the blood of women and children. I think that free nations have a duty to sympathize with and aid nations struggling for freedom, and that we should support morally, and if necessary materially, a population endeavoring to break the despot yoke of a Sultan.

Communications.

OUR NATIONAL EDUCATION.

MY DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

Although there may be once in a while something in THE INDEX I do not like (rarely, however, anything you write), yet I think it decidedly the best paper, and deserving a much better support than it finds. It never comes to me without bringing one or more articles of especial excellence, the perusal of which gives me much pleasure. One of this sort was that of Professor Max Müller on "National Education as a National Duty," in THE INDEX of June 29. The article is certainly a most excellent one, but for me it had, as everything bearing on that important subject, more than an ordinary interest, and I read it with the greatest delight. No doubt my early life has something to do with this; for, when young, I was educated as a teacher, followed that business about a dozen years in Germany, and to-day I can say with Niebuhr, as quoted by Professor Müller: "How I wished I had been allowed to follow it (for ever)!" If at any time of my life I had had the choice of selecting my occupation, I should have chosen teaching a school such as I wanted. And though the fates decreed it otherwise for me, they never could deprive me of the deepest interest in all matters of education. Hence my great delight in Professor Müller's article.

But this article must, I believe, have been of no common interest to any intelligent reader,—must have been the more so, as it would read just as well, and would be in most cases just as true, if we should read "America" and "American people," for "England" and "English people." But what he says of his atavus, Basedow, will, I apprehend, be hardly as well understood by any native American as by me, or any German teacher; for there is no German teacher worthy of that name who is not familiar with Basedow and his merits in relation to education. Well were it for America, if as much could also be said of American teachers! That it cannot is one (and not the smallest, either) of the reasons why American schools, at least the large majority of them, are in general inferior to German schools. But do not, sir, misunderstand me in this. I do not mean to say that American schools, or rather American teachers, are inferior to German ones because German teachers are more familiar with Basedow than American are. Of course not; but I mean by it that German teachers are educated for the business of teaching, and American are not; that German teachers generally are, because they must be, well qualified for teaching, and American are not. I will not, however, absolutely say that all German teachers are thus qualified, and that no American ones are. But while the disqualified ones are the exception there, the qualified ones are the exception here. As a rule, the majority of teachers here are young men or women too young for teaching, who have, and even that not in all cases, just got education enough to be prepared to become, by further study of a few years, educated and qualified for teaching. The consequence of this is a lamentable insufficiency of the teachers and superficiality of their instructions. They often hardly understand their text-books, are utterly lost without them, and very frequently not able to solve the examples, and thus, of course, not able to answer questions of scholars, or to aid them in their difficulties. They teach, but they do not educate, and are scarcely conscious of the vast difference between teaching and educating. Most of them are, as I said, too young and inexperienced for that. In this city of about eight thousand inhabitants, for instance, we have, as they say, "very good schools"; yet we have but a rather able superintendent and one or two tolerable teachers; the rest (more than half) are young misses, pupils of the High School of this city, where they were graduates this last or the preceding term, with more or less credit. Are such young misses, even if brilliant scholars at the High School, fit to become teachers forthwith, without any further special preparation for it? I hardly think they are. To my notion, teaching, as it ought to be, requires more training than these young misses, or young gentlemen either, of fifteen to seventeen years, receive at the High School, and considerable theoretical and practical education for teaching which they do not get at all. In Germany, those young men (of sixteen to eighteen years of age) who intend to become teachers (which business they, as a rule, are then to follow for life), before they are allowed to teach, have first to enter the "Teachers' Seminary," and prepare themselves by a regular three years' course of study. But even before they can enter the seminary, they are subject to an examen in which is required of them about as much knowledge as is required of the graduates of our High Schools. If they are found lacking in it, they are rejected; if they stand the examination, they may enter the seminary, the expenses of which are defrayed by the State,—professors, teachers, etc., being salaried by it, the pupils being only required to pay for their board, books, etc., and the greater number receiving even "stipends" from the State. The education they receive at the seminary consists not merely in higher instruction in religion (as a consequence of the union of Church and State there, unhappily a universal part of instruction in almost all schools below the university), grammar, mathematics, natural and general history, geology, geography, etc., but also, and especially, instruction in the physical and mental nature and faculties of the child, with a steady view to their judicious development and how to conform instruction and education to them; further, a history of schools and education in Germany, and of the various and best modes and methods of instruction in general, and of each branch of instruction in particular. For these theoretical lessons, thus taught, there are also offered practical exercises, by sending daily squads of pupils of the highest class to the public schools of the city, where they instruct the scholars under supervision of their teachers. In that way teachers are educated theoretically, and as far as possible practically, and made qualified to teach before they are allowed to begin.

Now, however well it might be, and however much I should like, to see these and other improvements introduced into America, yet I am ready to say with Professor Müller, that I am the last man to ask that the German system of national education should be transplanted into America or England. The German character is different from the American, as the German people is different from the American people. Not all that works well there would for that reason work also as well here. Although the German governments know and appreciate the value and importance of schools, and know that it requires well trained and good teachers to make the schools what they ought to be, yet the system there has its grave drawbacks. In Germany, the schools not only are entirely in the hands of the government, but the teachers as well; and both, besides, as entirely in the hands of the Church. We certainly could not wish it to be thus in this country. Not a city or village that has any voice in the selection of its teacher. The government nominates the teacher, sends him, and all the city or village has got to do is to pay him his salary. The teacher, in most cases, is at the same time also the organist and sexton, and not only as such, but also as teacher, subordinate to the clergyman of the place, who is ex officio the local superintendent of the school. All this is certainly most un-American, and we should not wish to imitate it.

But there is also compulsory education (from six to fourteen years) in Germany, which assuredly would be as much for the benefit of America, if we could have it here, as it certainly is for the benefit of Germany. I know, too many in this country are for various reasons opposed to compulsory education; but it is Germany that can furnish us the best lessons and strongest arguments on this point. When, however, I speak of Germany in this article, I mean in particular Prussia and Württemberg, which may be considered as the two model States in this respect. In Catholic Bavaria, for instance (where compulsory education also exists, though not as thoroughly, or rather not as generally, carried out as in the two former States), but more especially in German Austria, the state of culture is vastly inferior to what it is in the other two States named. What is the exact percentage of the whole population to those who can either not write or read, or neither, in Bavaria or Austria, I cannot say. But at any rate it is much larger in Bavaria, and proportionately larger in Austria, than either in Prussia or Württemberg. The difference between Catholicism and Protestantism, and the influence of their respective clergy, are here unmistakable. In my little native kingdom of Württemberg, among its two millions of inhabitants, there can hardly be found one in a thousand who cannot read or write; and of its present generation, say of persons from fifty years of age down to six, not one in ten thousand,—in fact, I believe scarcely any but idiots or persons otherwise incapacitated for instruction. A similar proportion prevails in Prussia. And there were even not wanting those who (and not without good reason, either) ascribed the superiority and the success of the Germans, over the French, in the last Franco-German war, to the superior education of the German soldiers.

Now, sir, what is the proportion of inhabitants of this country (leaving out the foreigners) who cannot read and write? Would not a compulsory law similar to the one in Germany work equally well and be as necessary here? We, in America, are, and oftenest where we ought not to be, too jealous of our liberties, and again too indifferent where we ought to be most jealous. We are opposed to a compulsory school-law, on the plea that the State has no right to impose on the liberty and prerogatives of parents, or to tax all citizens for the education of the children of but a part of them (to say nothing of the Catholic Church plea); but we are indifferent to the daily violations of conscience and the invasions by the State or the Church, or by both, of the freedom of conscience and of religious belief of the citizens. Yet the exercise of the unquestionable right of the State in respect to education would result in the benefit of the people; while even the smallest encroachment upon the others is a dangerous usurpation and a crime. We should think it an unbearable innovation, if Congress should pass a law prohibiting parents to rob their children of education by keeping them from school; but we acquiesce very demurely when the Bible is imposed in schools upon the children of those who do not believe in it, and when these children are compelled to sing hymns and partake in religious (sectarian) exercises they do not believe in. We would not tolerate it, if Congress were to prescribe for the people what to eat, or what to drink, or how to dress, or when to go to bed and when to rise; but we quietly conform when it decrees Sunday a holy day for all citizens, believers in the sanctity of Sunday or unbelievers, and legislates what shall be lawful for them to do or not to do on that day. We willingly pay our taxes for the Centennial International Exhibition; but allow sanctimonious Commissioners to shut its gates against the people on Sunday. We boast of our liberties, our liberal Constitution, and the equal rights of all citizens; but we tamely acquiesce when Congress, Legislatures, Presidents, Governors, etc., disregard these liberties, violate the Constitution and its equality of citizens, by exempting churches from taxation, and thus indirectly do what the Constitution directly prohibits: taxing citizens for the support of churches they do not believe in. And thus I might go on ad infinitum, showing a contradiction of character, a contrast between profession and practice, and, withal, such a national hypocrisy as is found in no other country or nation.

Is there no remedy for these evils, sir? I profoundly believe there is: it lies in a better, more rational, education. Let, then, good schools be established all throughout the land, in every city, village, and hamlet, and let every child be educated in them by competent teachers, judiciously educated and sufficiently qualified for teaching; let us make the schools entirely secular, instructing the scholars in all that is necessary for practical life,—in all the knowledge they may need to become intelligent, useful, and good citizens, knowing their rights and duties, and willing and able to maintain the one and to do the other. Only children thus educated will, when men and women, be intelligent and good citizens, useful to themselves, an honor and valuable to the State. But to make schools thus efficient, they must be made secular, must be institutions of the State, like the State itself thoroughly separated from the Church. One thing is the function of the State, and another thing the function of the Church; each can best fulfil its own function when entirely separated from and untrammelled by the other. The only aim, the only connection of the two, must be to promote the morality and happiness of the citizens. This end will best be gained by making the schools entirely secular, teaching the scholars that knowledge and those sciences indispensable for them in practical life, and strengthening and rightly developing their sense by a judicious education. It needs, then, moral merely to assign to the State the function and rights due to it, and to the Church the functions and rights due to her, and require of both the most prudent and just performance of their functions.

"It may take," I will say with Professor Müller, "some years before all this is realized; but the higher your ideal of national education, the better. Many and various are yet the enemies and obstacles to the realization of this ideal, but an honest and rational government and rightly educated citizens may realize it."

MORRIS EINHSTEIN.

TTUSVILLE, Pa., July 28, 1876.

WHERE THE CHURCH SHOE PINCHES.

"Resolved (1), That there is an imperative necessity that the Constitution of the United States should contain an acknowledgment of God as the author of civil government, of the Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of nations, of the Divine origin of the Christian religion, and of the Scriptures as of supreme authority in civil affairs."

[Resolutions of the Convention at Xenia, O., Dec. 1, 1875.]

Dr. Spruill, of Alleghany, said at one of these Conventions: "We do not wish an amendment to come as a kind of patchwork,—a piece of new cloth on an old garment. We want the whole made new; the government to be put squarely under Christ, and none but his friends suffered to meddle with its administration. The clauses in question should be expunged, and a declaration inserted in its place that civil office be restricted to God-fearing or religious men."

And yet these men will insist that they do not wish to unite Church and State. Perhaps when none but "Christ's friends" or "God-fearing men" have the rule there will be no State,—only the Church. But why this "imperative necessity" that the Constitution of the United States should contain an acknowledgment of God? What has happened to bring about this imperative necessity? The framers of the Constitution were wise, patriotic, and good men, but they deemed it best to leave all religious questions out of the Constitution. What has occurred in the history of our country that shows they were mistaken? Is it the ship of State that is in danger, or is it some other craft that feels the "imperative necessity"? The danger which so many Christians apprehend is the decay of their religion. The Church has no controlling authority over free thought. It cannot stay the wheels of progress. It cannot wipe out the doubts and scepticism which fasten upon the minds of its membership. It cannot meet science in the fair field of free discussion, and hence it blindly and madly seeks to wall up the field of free discussion, and to exterminate science by securing political power. If one should not accept this statement, I can only refer him to the past history of the Church as an evidence of what it will do when possessed of power. The Christian Church is in a state of rapid transformation and decay, and the consciousness of the fact makes her partisanship put forth desperate efforts.

It is not freedom which these men seek by their proposed amendments, for they make provision for the freedom of none but themselves. Protestants are to have freedom, and all others are to be robbed of what freedom they now possess. And this is the Protestant amendment! Nor do these people seek the truth, as an end, but seek power, that they may propagate sectarian creeds.

This is an inquisitive age. It is seeking all forms of truth. The old, story-telling spirit of the past, of big fish, big floods, and wonderful miracles, has lost its power over the common mind. The press is the power to-day; and the pulpit, before abdicating, threatens us with battle. But there is too much general intelligence in the country to fear that a project so wicked and unjust could ever be carried into practical effect. There is nevertheless an imperative necessity laid upon every liberal man and woman to show up the spirit and purpose of the Protestant amendment party. They are determined to get into power if they can, and, once in power, to use it as far as they can in overthrowing all religions but their own. This they will accomplish by persecution. They are beginning to try their hand at the wheel now.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass.

W. S. BELL.

Sanctuary of Superstition.

THE INFLUENCE OF ST. JOSEPH.—All the saints have experienced the loving and watchful care which St. Joseph exercises over those who have recourse to him; many of them have, like St. Teresa, borne testimony that they never asked a favor of God through St. Joseph that was not granted. Shall not we, who have fallen on such evil times, pray daily and hourly, especially during this his month, for ourselves, for the Holy Church whose chosen patron he is, and for all faithful peoples who in so many lands are this hour suffering persecution for the faith of Christ?—Catholic Tablet.

THE JUDGMENT.—But who can speak of such a scene as that, when Jehovah Christ, before whom hell shall stagger with dismay, and every knee in heaven and earth shall bow, when with his own authority he shall throw open the gates of despair, grating judgment-summons through the caverns of woe! The chains of darkness, link after link, give way! The eternal bolts drive back by decree of God, and hell opens, upheaving its ruined souls, gnashing of teeth, hissing fire, as they crowd the yawning passage—bloated with blasphemies against God and the Lamb,—whose eyes drip with night, and despair sits on their brows forever!—"Shocks from the Battery": a volume of Sermons by Rev. B. Pomeroy, of the Troy M. E. Conference, published in 1869.

NO NONSENSE ABOUT IT.—I am going to tell you the simple, naked truth. I am not going to talk nonsense, as some do, about the dignity and goodness of human nature. I will not pay compliments to human nature which it does not deserve. Life is too short and uncertain for such flattery. Let us go to the Bible and to facts. Now what is man? There is one broad, sweeping answer, which takes in the whole human race: man is a sinful being. . . . Sin is too much part of ourselves to allow us to see it as it is. We do not feel our own moral deformity. We are like those animals in creation which are vile and loathsome to our senses, but are not so to themselves, nor yet to one another. Their loathsomeness is their nature, and they do not perceive it. Our corruption is part and parcel of ourselves, and at best we have but a feeble comprehension of its intensity.—"What is Man?" By Rev. J. C. Ryle: published by Amer. Tract Society.

THE "SKOPTZI".—The Russian government has been unsuccessful, hitherto, in its attempts to stamp out a religious sect known as the Skoptzi, or "white doves," the chief tenet of whose faith is the duty of celibacy. It is not very long since a large number of these people, including their chief, Koudrine, were put upon their trial, which exceeded in length, if not in interest, that of the "unhappy nobleman" to whom reference is occasionally made in the House of Commons; and now a fresh association of Skoptzi has been discovered in Southern Russia, and three hundred of their number are about to be tried at Simpheropol. The strength of this sect is to be found in the wealth of several of its most zealous adherents, and in the mingled ignorance and superstition of the people among whom converts are sought. To illustrate this combination of two not very attractive qualities, the St. Petersburg Journal mentions a case recently tried at the Moscow assizes. A peasant, accused of murdering an old woman who was upon a pilgrimage, was asked by the judge why he had committed the crime, and replied that he was driven to it by hunger. The judge pointed out that the provisions which the victim had in her basket were not touched, upon which the prisoner exclaimed, in quite an indignant tone: "Do you take me for a heathen? It was a Friday, and you surely don't suppose I should eat meat on that day!" It is upon imaginations such as these that the Skoptzi work, and the number of conversions which they effect is so great that the government is getting alarmed as to their progress. Each section has its prophet, who presides at the religious meetings, which are not held upon any fixed day or at any particular place, in order the more effectually to elude discovery. The service takes place at night, and commences by the singing of hymns composed by the prophet, and committed to heart by his congregation. Men and women take it in turns to sing, after which they dance until they are exhausted. The Greek Church they consider to be the receptacle of every sort of sin, and is termed by them the "Church of Babylon." But some of the Russian emperors, including Paul I. and Alexander I., and also the Empress Elizabeth, are claimed as members of their sect, and raised to the rank of saints. They reject the Sacraments, and express their opinions of priests by the saying that ample sleeves—the Russian priests wear them very large—hide a deceitful mind. Neophytes are only admitted after the celebration of elaborate rites, chief among which are invocations to their saints, and especially to Akoulina Fyranovna, their Holy Virgin. After this singing and dancing take place, as at the ordinary religious meetings, the prophet puts on white stockings, and, with a Bible in his hand, prays for strength to work miracles. He then tells different members of the congregation what fate is in store for them. These doctrines may seem more ludicrous than baneful; but they are said to be accompanied by other practices of the grossest immorality.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 "	"	8	"
" 26 " 51 "	"	6	"
" 52 "	"	5	"

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON.

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

Including

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—God in the Constitution, by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—The Sabbath, by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—Compulsory Education, by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

WHAT IS PROPERTY?

OR,

AN INQUIRY INTO THE PRINCIPLE OF RIGHT AND OF GOVERNMENT.

By P. J. PROUDHON.

Prefaced by a sketch of Proudhon's Life and Works, by J. A. Langlois, and containing as a Frontispiece a fine Steel Engraving of the Author. Translated from the French by BENJ. R. TUCKER.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P. J. PROUDHON; HIS LIFE AND HIS WORKS.
PREFACE.

FIRST MEMOIR.

CHAPTER I.
METHOD PURSUED IN THIS WORK.—THE IDEA OF A REVOLUTION.

CHAPTER II.
PROPERTY CONSIDERED AS A NATURAL RIGHT.—OCCUPATION AND CIVIL LAW AS EFFICIENT BASES OF PROPERTY.—DEFINITIONS.

1. Property as a Natural Right.
2. Occupation as the Title to Property.
3. Civil Law as the Foundation and Sanction of Property.

CHAPTER III.
LABOR AS THE EFFICIENT CAUSE OF THE DOMAIN OF PROPERTY.

1. The Land cannot be appropriated.
2. Universal Consent no Justification of Property.
3. Prescription gives no Title to Property.
4. Labor.—That Labor has no Inherent Power to appropriate Natural Wealth.
5. That Labor leads to Equality of Property.
6. That in Society all Wages are Equal.
7. That Inequality of Powers is the Necessary Condition of Equality of Fortunes.
8. That, from the stand-point of Justice, Labor destroys Property.

CHAPTER IV.
THAT PROPERTY IS IMPOSSIBLE.

Demonstration. Axiom.
Property is the Right of Increase claimed by the Proprietor over anything which he has stamped as his own.

First Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it demands something for nothing.

Second Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, wherever it exists, Production costs more than it is worth.

Third Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, with a

given Capital, Production is proportional to Labor, not to Property.

Fourth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is Homocidal.

Fifth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because, if it exists, Society devours itself.

Sixth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Mother of Tyranny.

Seventh Proposition.
Property is impossible, because in consuming its Receipts, it loses them; in hoarding them, it nullifies them; and in using them as Capital, it turns them against Production.

Eighth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because its Power of Accumulation is infinite, and is exercised only over Finite Quantities.

Ninth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is powerless against Property.

Tenth Proposition.
Property is impossible, because it is the Negation of Equality.

CHAPTER V.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPOSITION OF THE IDEA OF JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE, AND A DETERMINATION OF THE PRINCIPLE OF GOVERNMENT AND OF RIGHT.

Part I.
§ 1. Of the Moral Sense in Man and the Animals.

§ 2. Of the First and Second Degrees of Sociability.

§ 3. Of the Third Degree of Sociability.

Part II.
§ 1. Of the Causes of our Mistakes. The Origin of Property.

§ 2. Characteristics of Communism and of Property.

§ 3. Determination of the Third Form of Society. Conclusion.

SECOND MEMOIR.

LETTER TO M. BLANQUI ON PROPERTY.

This—the first volume of Proudhon's Complete Works—is a large octavo of 500 pages, handsomely printed in large, new type, on heavy-toned paper. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Remittances may be made by P. O. Money Order, payable at Worcester, Mass., by Draft on New York, or by Registered Letter.

Price in Cloth, bevelled edges.....$3.50
Price in Full Calf, blue, gilt edge..... 6.50

All orders should be addressed to the publisher,

BENJ. R. TUCKER,
PRINCETON, MASS.

THREE ESSAYS ON RELIGION.

By JOHN STUART MILL, is now for sale at this office. Price—Two dollars and fifty cts. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

DR. EDWARD E. DENNIS-
TON'S

HOME FOR INVALIDS,

—AT—

BRINSTEIN, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

NUMBER LIMITED TO THIRTY.

T H E

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.).....$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION..... 1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER 1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS..... 1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND
OTHER DISCOURSES..... 1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER..... 3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM
IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp.,
with steel portrait of the author) ... 2.50
Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by
THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

T H E I N D E X

IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)

RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address

NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT BETWEEN

Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.

Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,

and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

757 Washington St., Boston.

T H E

PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEIDESDOFF ST., San Francisco.

THE FIRST WEEK IN AUGUST.

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

A JOURNAL OF DAILY LIFE.

Edited by GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

The Secular Review is a new Journal of new subjects; and of familiar subjects treated in a fresh way. It will seek to recast old forms of propaganda which now exhaust earnestness without producing the fruit of advancement. In Education, it will show that Secular principle implies separateness of instruction, and not conflict with religious conviction. In Cooperation, that new force of industry which attains competency without mendacity, and effaces inequality by equalizing fortunes (which has now no organ in London), The Secular Review will advocate the re-institution of Labor Exchanges—killed by their success forty years ago, and more than ever useful now to thousands to whom other forms of Cooperation are unknown, irksome, or inapplicable. In Politics, The Secular Review will contend for Radical ascendancy on the open plain of principle, and not dodge for progress by capricious or spite-born alliances with its enemies. In Religion, Secularism substitutes the piety of usefulness for the barren doctrine of the usefulness of piety—maintaining always that there is not, and never was, any real antagonism between the sincerity of Free Thought and the only permanent form of religion—the Religion of Duty. The auxiliary, not the rival, of any similar Journal, The Secular Review will be a fighting paper, attacking error, without assailing personally those who hold it, not discerning it to be such. It will regard the adversary, not as an enemy, but as a friend, aiding in the search after truth. Afraid of no topic, The Secular Review will see in the boldest speculation but the hand of Intellect, adventurously feeling for Reality in the dark. This Journal will mainly represent Constructive Free Thought, helping to convert the fifty-two Sundays of the year into the Wise Days, instead of as now, the Dead Days, of the working people; and in all things give primary attention to the material improvement of This Life. For readers, The Secular Review will look among those men and women who know how to be daring without being irreverent, fearless without being careless, and unconventional without being foolish. Weekly, one penny; Yearly, 6s. 6d. Address, E. TRUELOVE, 256 High Holborn, London W.C., England.

O R G A N I Z E !

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.

Before next summer, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President
R. H. BANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1876.

WHOLE No. 348.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practicing the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim to justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT.

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

MRS. VAN COTT claims to have converted twenty thousand sinners.

EX-CHANCELLOR WINCHELL, of Syracuse, N. Y., in a letter recently published by the Tribune, presents this terse and true statement of the relation of the State to education: "The State needs universal primary education to make voters; it needs secondary education to make teachers of voters; it demands university education to qualify the instructors of the teachers of the voters, and to develop the ideas at the basis of social progress."

THE NEW YORK Sun says: "The shooting of Hanford by Sullivan in Chicago was the sad sequel to a sectarian quarrel over appointments in the school department. Hanford was a Methodist, Sullivan a Roman Catholic. Some of the local papers have failed to withstand the strong temptation to prejudge the case from sectarian stand-points. We hope that the sober second thoughts of these newspapers will lead them to see that they have taken a course hardly less deplorable than the tragedy itself."

PROFESSOR NEWMAN, who has recently lost his wife, addressed this touching note to his friends: "At quarter to three, Sunday morning, July 16, 1876, a blessed saint breathed her last, Maria, the loved and loving life companion for more than forty years of F. W. Newman, who, though sensible of deep loneliness, yet, in the fixed and sure conviction that death in its due season, equally with life, is a gift to man from the Most High, resigns the wife of his bosom, gratefully and trustingly, to the bosom of her God."

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD is lecturing with marked success at the West. The local papers report at length his debates with Orthodox opponents, usually with manifest fairness and consideration. The indirect effect of such work is most salutary, educating the public as it does to require argument from both sides of religious questions and not to be satisfied with the old-fashioned vituperation of one side by the other. Mr. Underwood's latest encounter has been at Jacksonville, Ill., where he held a religious discussion with Rev. Mr. Braden.

THE BOSTON Herald of August 6 says: "The burial of little Walter Whitman, an infant, year-old nephew of the poet, which occurred a few days ago at Camden, N. J., was very simple, without sermon or ceremony. In the middle of the room, in its white coffin, lay the dead babe, strewed with a profusion of fresh geranium leaves and some tuberose. All the young ones of the neighborhood, by groups, or couples, or singly, kept coming noiselessly in, surrounding the coffin. Near the corpse, in a great chair, sat Walt Whitman, enveloped by children, holding one encircled by either arm, and a beautiful little girl on his lap. The little one looked curiously at the spectacle of death, and then inquiringly in the old man's face. 'You don't know what it is, do you, my dear?' said he, adding, 'We don't either.' Many of the children surrounding the coffin were mere babes, and had to be lifted up to take a look."

MR. CONWAY writes as follows to the Cincinnati Commercial respecting Miss Martineau: "I have recently heard from a friend who visited Harriet Martineau in her last days, that the venerable authoress was quite resolute in her philosophical opinions to the end. She had just been shown a letter asking if she believed in 'immortality,' and she replied: 'I have no reason to believe in another world. I have had enough of life in one, and can see no good reason why Harriet Martineau should be perpetuated.' She had never the slightest belief in spiritualism, but was a believer in magnetism and psychic force, and she continued her correspondence with Mr. Atkinson. This gentleman has sent the more important of his letters from her to Mrs. Chapman, of Boston (United States), who will write a biography of Miss Martineau. The old lady had not gone out beyond her garden for seventeen years when she died. She was always cheerful, read the magazines and newspapers diligently, and talked much of her old friends."

REV. DR. BELLOWS reaffirms the absolute finality of the Christian religion, not perceiving that every Protestant answer to the "previous question,"—what is the Christian religion?—rests only on mere private opinion and cannot be final at all. A keen Catholic would smile at the simplicity which can affirm the finality of a religion, but cannot affirm the finality of any particular interpretation of it,—which can declare unerringly that Christianity is true, but cannot declare unerringly what Christianity is! Dr. Bellows' language, of which we italicize a part, is as follows: "The ground alike of Trinitarian and Unitarian Christianity is, that the religion of Jesus has an authority peculiar to itself; established and vindicated historically, that it is a permanent religion, destined to universal sway; that it cannot be improved, and that essential changes in it are fallings away from the truth. Nothing making a less claim than this can be called a revealed religion, or an absolute religion, or be at anything less than a disadvantage as compared even with natural religion."

LET NOBODY ever say again that the International Exhibition was "closed on Sundays"! That is not true. The Centennial Commissioners have closed it to the sixty-nine thousand working people who petitioned to have it opened, and they pretend to have thus obeyed the "law of God"; but this pretence is wickedly hypocritical. They have made it one of their ordinary regulations to admit on Sundays all who have received "free or complimentary passes." The "law of God" does not apply to the Commissioners' hangers-on, forsooth! Remember this fact! Make the nation remember it! Make the Commissioners remember it to their dying day! Let the people whose rights have been trampled contemptuously under foot by these over-righteous Sabbatarians never forget the falsity and hypocrisy of their boast of having "closed the Exhibition on Sunday." The Sunday School Times is authority for the statement that the Exhibition itself is opened to all who have "free or complimentary passes." We could have respected the Commissioners, if they had been consistent and sincere; but they should be so lashed by an indignant people for their hypocrisy that they will carry the marks of the flagellation to their graves.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT..... Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HOW. E. P. HUBBARD..... Albany, N. Y.
 HOW. SAMUEL E. SEWALL..... Boston, Mass.
 HOW. NATHANIEL HOLMES..... St. Louis, Mo.
 HOW. HENRY BOOTH..... Chicago, Illinois.
 HOW. GEORGE W. JULIAN..... Irvington, Ind.
 HOW. ELIZUR WRIGHT..... Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. H. FROTHINGHAM..... New York.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER..... New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLOWELL..... Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON..... Newburyport, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUBERT..... San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. ABRAHAM PAYNE..... Providence, R. I.
 MR. M. J. SAVAGE..... Boston, Mass.
 MR. B. F. FELSETHAL..... Chicago, Ill.
 MR. W. H. SPENCER..... Springfield, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL..... Florence, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LIOU..... San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. R. W. MEDDAUGH..... Detroit, Mich.
 MR. ROBERT D. OWEN..... New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL HEINZEN..... Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SEAYER..... Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
 MR. ISAAC W. WISE..... Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. D. M. BENNETT..... Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER..... Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD..... Thorndike, Mass.
 MR. ROBERT COLLYER..... Chicago, Ill.

Secretary.

R. H. RANNEY..... Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

Miss JANE P. TITCOMB..... 142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX..... Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 R. H. RANNEY.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman..... Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS..... Monticello, Arkansas.
 J. L. HATCH..... San Francisco, California.
 E. H. HAZZEN..... New Haven, Connecticut.
 S. S. WALLER..... South Water, Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAY..... Betherville, Iowa.
 HERMAN LIEBER..... Indianapolis, Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL..... Peoria, Illinois.
 J. E. WALLACE..... New Orleans, Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD..... Portland, Maine.
 A. WARREN KELLEY..... St. Louis, Missouri.
 FRANK J. MEAD..... Minneapolis, Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE..... Manchester, New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY..... Lincoln, Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORNE..... Warren, North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS..... Providence, Rhode Island.
 E. PETERSON..... Paris, Texas.
 SAMUEL WATSON..... Memphis, Tennessee.
 J. O. BARRETT..... Janesville, Wisconsin.
 (The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.)

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman..... 24 Temple Place, Boston.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS..... 10 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE..... 231 Washington St., Boston.
 N. S.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, 83 above.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

An Agnostic's Apology.

FROM THE LONDON "FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW" OF JUNE 1, 1876.

BY LESLIE STEPHEN.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

The ancient difficulty which has perplexed men since the days of Job is this: Why are happiness and misery arbitrarily distributed? Why do the good so often suffer and the evil so often flourish? The difficulty, says the determinist, arises entirely from applying the conception of justice where it is manifestly out of place. The advocate of free-will refuses this escape, and is perplexed by a further difficulty. Why are virtue and vice arbitrarily distributed? Of all the puzzles of this dark world, or of all forms of the one great puzzle, the most appalling is that which meets us at the corner of every street. Look at the children growing up amidst moral poison; see the brothel and the public house turning out harlots and drunkards by the thousand; at the brutalized elders preaching cruelty and shamelessness by example; and deny, if you can, that lust and brutality are generated as certainly as scrofula and typhus. Nobody dares to deny it. All philanthropists admit it; and every hope of improvement is based on the assumption that the moral character is determined by its surroundings. What does the theological advocate of free-will say to reconcile such a spectacle with our moral conceptions? Will God damn all these wretches for faults due to causes as much beyond their power as the shape of their limbs or as the orbits of the planets? Or will he make some allowance, and decline to ask for grapes from thistles, and exact purity of life from beings born in corruption, breathing corruption, and trained in corruption? Let us try each alternative.

To Job's difficulty it has been replied that, though virtue is not always rewarded and vice punished, yet virtue as such is rewarded, and vice as such is punished. If that be true, God, on the free-will hypothesis, must be unjust. Virtue and vice, as the facts irresistibly prove, are caused by fate or by God's will, as well as by free-will, that is, our own will. To punish a man brought up in a London slum, by the rule applicable to a man brought up at the feet of Christ is manifestly the height of justice. Nay, for anything we can tell, for we know nothing of the circumstances of their birth and education, the effort which Judas Iscariot exerted in restoring the price of blood may have required a greater force of free-will than would have saved Peter from denying his master. Moll Flanders may put forth more power to keep out of the lowest depths of vice than a girl brought up in a convent to kill herself by ascetic ansterities. If, in short, reward is proportioned to virtue, it cannot be proportioned to merit; for merit, by the hypothesis, is proportioned to the free-will, which is only one of the factors of virtue. The apparent injustice may, of course, be remedied by some unknowable compensation; but for all that appears, it is the height of injustice to reward equally equal attainments under entirely different conditions. In other words, the theologian has raised a difficulty from which he can only escape by the help of Agnosticism. Justice is not to be found in the visible arrangements of the universe.

Let us, then, take the other alternative. Assume that rewards are proportioned not to virtue but to merit. God will judge us by what we have done for ourselves, not by the tendencies which he has impressed upon us. The difficulty is disguised, for it is not diminished, and morality is degraded. A man should be valued, say all the deepest moralists, by his nature, not by his external acts; by what he is, not by how he came to be what he is. Virtue is heaven, and vice is hell. Divine rewards and punishments are not arbitrarily annexed, but represent the natural state of a being brought into harmony with the supreme law, or in hopeless conflict with it. We need a change of nature, not a series of acts unconnected with our nature. Virtue is a reality precisely in so far as it is a part of nature, not of accident; of our fate, not of our free-will. The assertion, in some shape, of these truths has been at the bottom of all great moral and religious reforms. The attempt to patch up some compromise between this and the opposite theory has generated those endless controversies about grace and free-will on which no Christian church has ever been able to make up its mind, and which warn us that we are once more plunging into Agnosticism. In order to make the Creator the judge, you assume that part of man's actions are his own. Only on that showing can he have merit as against his Maker. Admitting this, and only if we admit this, we get a footing for the debtor and creditor theories of morality,—for the doctrine that man runs up a score with heaven in respect of that part of his conduct which is uncaused. Thus we have a ground for the various theories of merit by which priests have thriven and churches been corrupted; but it is at the cost of splitting human nature in two, and making happiness depend upon those acts which are not really part of our true selves.

It is not, however, my purpose to show the immorality or the unreasonableness of the doctrine. I shall only remark that it is essentially agnostic. Only in so far as phenomena embody fixed "laws" can we have any ground for inference in this world, and, à fortiori, from this world to the next. If happiness is the natural consequence of virtue, we may plausibly argue that the virtuous will be happy hereafter. If heaven be a bonus arbitrarily bestowed upon the exercise of an inscrutable power, all analogies break down. The merit of an action as between men depends upon the motives. The actions for which God rewards and punishes are the actions or those parts of actions which are independent of motive. Punishment amongst men is regulated by some considerations of its utility to the criminal or his fellows. No conceivable measure of Divine punishment can even be suggested when once we distinguish between divine and natural; and the very essence of the theory is that such a distinction exists. For whatever may be true of the next world, we begin by assuming that new principles are to be called into play hereafter. The new world is summoned into being to redress the balance of the old. The fate which here too often makes the good miserable and the bad happy, which, still more strangely, fetters our wills, and forces the strong will into wickedness and strengthens the weak will to goodness, will then be suspended. The motive which induces us to believe in the good arrangement hereafter is precisely the badness of this. Such a motive to belief cannot itself be a reason for belief. We believe because it is unreasonable. This world, once more, is a chaos, in which the most conspicuous fact is the absence of the Creator. Nay, it is so chaotic that, according to theologians, infinite rewards and penalties are required to square the account and redress the injustice here accumulated. What is this, so far as the natural reason is concerned, but the very superlative of Agnosticism? The appeal to experience can lead to nothing, for our very object is to contradict experience. We appeal to facts to show that facts are illusory. The appeal to a priori reason is not more hopeful, for you begin by showing that reason on these matters is self-contradictory, and you insist that human nature is radically irregular, and therefore beyond the sphere of reason. If you could succeed in deducing any theory by reason, reason would, on your showing, be at hopeless issue with experience.

There are two questions, in short, about the universe which must be answered to escape from Agnosticism. The great fact which puzzles the mind is the vast amount of evil. It may be answered that evil is an illusion, because God is benevolent; or it may be answered that evil is deserved, because God is just. In one case the doubt is removed by denying the existence of the difficulty. In the other it is made tolerable by satisfying our consciences. We have seen what natural reason can do towards justifying these answers. To escape from Agnosticism we become Pantheists; then the divine reality must be the counterpart of phenomenal nature, and all the difficulties recur. We escape from Pantheism by the illogical device of free-will. Then God is indeed good and wise, but God is no longer omnipotent. By his side we erect a fetid call free-will, which is potent enough to defeat all God's good purposes, and to make his absence from his own universe the most conspicuous fact given by observation; and which, at the same time, is by its own nature intrinsically arbitrary in its action. Your Gnosticism tells us that an almighty benevolence is watching over everything, and bringing good out of all evil. Whence, then, comes the evil? By free-will; that is, by chance! It is an exception, an exception which covers, say, half the phenomena, and includes all that puzzle us. Say boldly at once no explanation can be given, and then proceed to denounce Agnosticism. If, again, we take the moral problem, the Pantheist view shows desert as before God to be a contradiction in terms. We are what he has made us; nay, we are but manifestations of himself—how can he complain? Escape from the dilemma by making us independent of God, and God, so far as the observed universe can tell us, becomes systematically unjust. He rewards the good and the bad, and gives equal reward to the free agent and the slave of fate. Where are we to turn for a solution?

Let us turn to revelation; that is the most obvious reply. By all means, though this is to admit that natural reason cannot help us; or, in other words, directly produces more Agnosticism, though indirectly it makes an opening for revelation. There is, indeed, a difficulty here. Pure theism, as we have observed, is in reality as vitally opposed to historical revelation as simple scepticism. The word God is used by the metaphysician and the savage. It may mean anything from "pure Being" down to the most degraded fetish. The "universal consent" is a consent to use the same phrase for antagonistic conceptions, for order and chaos, for absolute unity or utter heterogeneity, for a universe governed by a human will or by a will of which man cannot form the slightest conception. This is of course a difficulty which runs off the Orthodox disputant like water from a duck's back. He appeals to his conscience, and his conscience tells him just what he wants. It reveals a Being just at that point in the scale between the two extremes which is convenient for his purposes. I open, for example, a harmless little treatise by a divine who need not be named. He knows intuitively, so he says, that there is a God who is benevolent and wise, and endowed with personality; that is to say, conceived anthropomorphically enough to be capable of acting upon the universe, and yet so far different from man as to be able to throw a decent veil of mystery over his more questionable actions. Well, I reply, my intuition tells me of no such being. Then, says the divine, I can't prove my statements, but you would recognize their truth if your heart or your intellect were not corrupted; that is, you must be a knave or a fool. This is a kind of argument to which one is perfectly accustomed in theology. I am right, and you are wrong; and I am right because I am good and wise. By all means; and now let us see what your wisdom and goodness can tell us.

The Christian revelation makes statements which, if true, are undoubtedly of the very highest importance. God is angry with man. Unless we believe and repent we shall all be damned. It is impossible, indeed, for its advocates even to say this without instantly contradicting themselves. Their doctrine frightens them. They explain in various ways that a great many people will be saved without believing, and that eternal damnation is not eternal nor damnation. It is only the vulgar who hold such views, and who, of course, must not be disturbed in them; but they are not for the intelligent. God grants "uncovered mercies"; that is, he sometimes lets a sinner off, though he has not made a legal bargain about it,—an explanation calculated to exalt our conceptions of the Deity! But let us pass over these endless shufflings from the horrible to the meaningless. Christianity tells us in various ways how the wrath of the Creator may be appeased, and his good-will insured. The doctrine is manifestly important to believers; but does it give us a clearer or happier view of the universe? That is what is required for the confusion of Agnostics; and if the mystery were in part solved, or the clouds thinned in the slightest degree, Christianity would triumph by its inherent merits. Let us, then, ask once more, Does Christianity exhibit the Ruler of their universe as benevolent or as just?

If I were to assert that of every ten beings born into this world nine would be damned, that all who refused to believe what they did not hold to be proved, and all who sinned from overwhelming temptation, and all who had not had the good fortune to be the subjects of a miraculous conversion or the recipients of a grace conveyed by a magical charm, would be tortured to all eternity, what would an Orthodox theologian reply? He could not say, "That is false"; I might appeal to the highest authorities for my justification, nor, in fact, could he on his own showing deny the possibility. Hell, he says, exists; he does not know who will be damned, though he does know that all men are by nature corrupt and liable to be damned if not saved by supernatural grace. He might, and probably would, now say, "That is rash. You have no authority for saying how many will be lost and how many saved; you cannot even say what is meant by hell or heaven; you cannot tell how far God may be better than his word, though you may be sure that he won't be worse than his word." And what is all this but to say, We know nothing about it? In other words, to fall back on Agnosticism? The difficulty, as theologians truly say, is not so much that evil is eternal as that evil exists. That is, in substance, a frank admission that, as nobody can explain evil, nobody can explain anything. Your revelation, which was to prove the benevolence of God, has proved only that God's benevolence may be consistent with the eternal and infinite misery of most of his creatures; you escape only by saying that it is also consistent with their not being eternally and infinitely miserable. That is, the revelation reveals nothing.

But the revelation shows God to be just. Now, if the free-will hypothesis be rejected—and it is rejected not only by infidels but by the most consistent theologians,—this question cannot really arise at all. Jonathan Edwards will prove that there cannot be a question of justice as between man and God. The creature has no rights against his Creator. The question of justice merges in the question of benevolence; and Edwards will go on to say that most men are damned, and that the blessed will thank God for their tortures. That is logical, but not consoling. Passing this over, can revelation prove that God is just, assuming that justice is a word applicable to dealings between the potter and the pot?

And here we are sent to the "great argument of Butler." Like some other theological arguments already noticed, that great argument is to many minds—that of James Mill, for example—a direct assault upon Theism, or, in other words, an argument for Agnosticism. Briefly stated, it comes to this: the God of revelation cannot be the God of Nature, said the Deists, because the God of revelation is unjust. The God of revelation, replied Butler, may be the God of Nature, for the God of Nature is unjust. Stripped of its various involutions, that is the sum and substance of this celebrated piece of reasoning. Butler, I must say in passing, deserves high credit for two things: the first is, that he is the only theologian who has ever had the courage to admit that any difficulty existed, when he was struggling most desperately to meet the difficulty; though even Butler could not admit that such a difficulty should affect a man's conduct. Secondly, Butler's argument really rests upon a moral theory, mistaken indeed, in some senses, but possessing a stoical grandeur. To admit, however, that Butler was a noble and a comparatively candid thinker is not to admit that he ever faced the real difficulty. It need not be asked here by what means he evaded it. His position is in any case plain. Christianity tells us, as he thinks, that God damns men for being bad, whether they could help it or not, and that he lets them off, or lets some of them off, for the sufferings of others. He damns the helpless and punishes the innocent. Horrible! exclaims the infidel. Possibly, replies Butler, but Nature is just as bad. All suffering is punishment. It strikes the good as well as the wicked. The father sins and the son suffers. I drink too much and my son has the gout. In another world, we may suppose that the same system will be carried out more thoroughly. God will pardon some sinners because he punished Christ, and he will damn others everlastingly. That is his way. A certain degree of wrong-doing here leads to irremediable suffering, or rather to suffering remediable by death alone. In the next world there is no death; therefore the suffering won't be remediable at all. The world is a scene of probation, destined to fit us for a better life. As a matter of fact, most men make it a discipline of vice instead of a discipline of virtue; and most men, therefore, will presumably be damned. We see the same thing in the waste of seeds and animal life, and may suppose, therefore, that it is part of the general scheme of Providence.

This is the Christian revelation according to Butler. Does it make the world better? Does it not rather add indefinitely to the terror produced by the sight of all its miseries, and justify James Mill for feeling that rather than such a God he would have no God? What escape can be suggested? The obvious one: it is all a mystery; and what is mystery but the theological phrase for Agnosticism? God has spoken and endorsed all our most hideous doubts. He has said, Let there be light, and there is no light,—no light but rather darkness visible, serving only to discover sights of woe.

The believers who desire to soften away the old dogmas—in other words, to take refuge from the unpleasant results of their doctrine with the Agnostics, and to retain the pleasant results with the Gnostics—have a different mode of escape. They know that God is good and just; that evil will somehow disappear, and apparent injustice be somehow redressed. The practical objection to this amiable creed suggests a sad comment upon the whole controversy. We fly to religion to escape from our dark forebodings. But a religion which stifles those forebodings always fails to satisfy us. We long to hear that they are groundless. Directly we are told that they are groundless, we distrust our authority. No poetry lives which reflects only the cheerful emotions. Our sweetest songs are those which tell of saddest thought. We can bring harmony out of melancholy; we cannot banish melancholy from the world. And the religious utterances, which are the highest form of poetry, are bound by the same law. There is a deep sadness in the world. Turn and twist the thought as you may, there is no escape. Optimism would be soothing if it were possible; in fact, it is impossible, and therefore a constant mockery; and of all dogmas that ever were invented, that which has least vitality is the dogma that whatever is, is right.

Let us, however, consider for a moment what is the net result of this pleasant creed. Its philosophical basis may be sought in pure reason or in experience; but, as a rule, its adherents are ready to admit that the pure reason requires the support of the emotions before such a doctrine can be established, and are therefore marked by a certain tinge of mysticism. They feel rather than know. The awe with which they regard the universe, the tender glow of reverence and love with which the bare sight of Nature affects them, is to them the ultimate guarantee of their beliefs. Happy those who feel such emotions! Only when they try to extract definite statements of fact from these impalpable sentiments they should beware how far such statements are apt to come into terrible collision with reality. And, meanwhile, those who have been disabused with Candide, who have felt the weariness and pain of all "this unintelligible world," and have not been able to escape into any mystic rapture, have as much to say for their own version of the facts. Is happiness a dream? or misery? or is it all a dream? Does not our answer vary with our health and with our condition? When, rapt in the security of a happy life, we cannot even conceive that our happiness will fail, we are practical optimists. When some random blow out of the dark crushes the pillars round which our life has been entwined as recklessly as a boy sweeps away a cobweb, when at a single step we plunge through the flimsy crust of happiness into the deep gulfs beneath, we are tempted to turn to pessimism. Who shall decide, and how? Of all questions that can be asked, the most important is surely this: Is the tangled web of this world composed chiefly of happiness or of misery? and of all questions that can be asked, it is surely the most unanswerable. For in no other problem is the difficulty of discarding the illusions arising from our own experience, of eliminating "the personal error" and gaining an outside standing-point, so hopeless.

In any case, the real appeal must be to experience. Ontologists may manufacture libraries of jargon without touching the point. They have never made or suggested the barest possibility of making a bridge from the world of pure reason to the contingent world in which we live. To the thinker who tries to construct the universe out of pure reason, the actual existence of error in our minds and disorder in the outside world presents a difficulty as hopeless as that which the existence of vice and misery presents to the optimist who tries to construct the universe out of pure goodness. To say that misery does not exist is to contradict the primary testimony of consciousness; to argue on a priori grounds that misery or happiness predominates is as hopeless a task as to deduce from the principle of the excluded middle the distance from St. Paul's to Westminster Abbey. Questions of fact can only be solved by examining facts. Perhaps such evidence would show, and if a guess were worth anything, I should add that I guess that it would show, that happiness predominates over misery in the composition of the known world. I am, therefore, not prejudiced against the Gnostic's conclusion; but I add that the evidence is just as open to me as to him. The whole world in which we live may be an illusion—a veil to be withdrawn in some higher state of being. But be it what it may, it supplies all the evidence upon which we can rely. If evil predominates here, we have no reason to suppose that good predominates elsewhere. All the ingenuity of theologians can never shake our conviction that facts are what we feel them to be, nor invert the plain inference from facts; and facts are just as open to one school of thought as to another.

What, then, is the net result? One insoluble doubt has haunted men's minds since thought began in the world. No answer has ever been suggested. One school of philosophers hands it to the next. It is denied in one form only to reappear in another. The question is not which system excludes the doubt, but how it expresses the doubt. Admit or deny the competence of reason in theory, we all agree that it fails in practice. Theologians revile reason as much as Agnostics; they then appeal to it and it decides against them. They amend their plea by excluding certain questions from its jurisdiction, and those questions include the whole difficulty. They go to revelation, and revelation replies by calling doubt mystery. They declare that their consciousness declares just what they want it to declare. Ours declares something else. Who is to decide? The only appeal is to experience, and to appeal to experience is to admit the fundamental dogma of Agnosticism.

Is it not, then, the very height of audacity, in face of a difficulty which meets us at every turn, which has perplexed all the ablest thinkers in proportion to their ability, which vanishes in one shape only to show itself in another, to declare roundly, not only that the difficulty can be solved, but that it does not exist? Why, when no honest man will deny in private that every ultimate problem is wrapped in the profoundest mystery, do honest men proclaim in pulpits that unhesitating certainty is the duty of the most foolish and ignorant? Is it not a spectacle to make the angels laugh? We are a company of ignorant beings, feeling our way through mists and darkness, learning only by incessantly repeated blunders, obtaining a glimmering of truth by falling into every conceivable error, dimly discerning light enough for our daily needs, but hopelessly differing whenever we attempt to describe the ultimate origin or end of our paths; and yet, when one of us ventures to declare that we don't know the map of the universe as well as the map of our infinitesimal parish, he is hooted, reviled, and perhaps told that he will be damned to all eternity for his faithlessness. Amidst all the endless and hopeless controversies which have left nothing but bare husks of meaningless words, we have been able to discover certain reliable truths. They don't take us very far, and the condition of discovering them has been distrust of a priori guesses, and the systematic interrogation of experience. Let us, say some of us, follow at least this clue. Here we shall find sufficient guidance for the needs of life, though we renounce forever the attempt to get behind the veil which no one has succeeded in raising,—if, indeed, there be anything behind. You miserable Agnostics! is the retort; throw aside such rubbish, and cling to the old husks. Stick to the words which profess to explain everything; call your doubts mysteries, and they won't disturb you any longer; and believe in those necessary truths of which no two philosophers have ever succeeded in giving the same version.

Gentlemen, we can only reply, Wait till you have some show of agreement amongst yourselves. Wait till you can give some answer, not palpably a verbal answer, to some one of the doubts which oppress us as they oppress you. Wait till you can point to some single truth, however trifling, which has been discovered by your method, and will stand the test of discussion and verification. Wait till you can appeal to reason without in the same breath vilifying reason. Wait till your divine revelations have something more to reveal than the hope that the hideous doubts which they suggest may possibly be without foundation. Till then, we shall be content to admit openly what you whisper under your breath or hide in technical jargon, that the ancient secret is a secret still; that man knows nothing of the Infinite and Absolute; and that, knowing nothing, he had better not be dogmatic about his ignorance. And, meanwhile, we will endeavor to be as charitable as possible, and whilst you trumpet forth officially your contempt for our scepticism, we will at least try to believe that you are imposed upon by your own bluster.

SOLUTION OF A PARADOX.

BY CHARLES K. WHIPPLE.

When examination had assured me that certain assumptions of the "Orthodox" faith which I had received from childhood as true were untrue—and when, on further examination, I found that the treatises confidently quoted as proving the doctrines in question failed to give such proof, and even seemed to give it only by the use of unsound premises or unauthorized conclusions,—I naturally presented those facts to my more intimate brethren of that faith, expecting of course that they would either fairly refute me or agree with me. To my astonishment, they did neither; to my further and greater astonishment, not one of them seemed surprised or disturbed at the proof I presented of the unsoundness of any one of their cherished doctrines, even when the Bible, the rule to which they appealed as inspired and infallible, testified for me and against them. To my utter amazement, continued and repeated trials showed me that these pious people were determined to hold by the Church, with its customs and traditions, even when these were in conflict with the Bible. As one specimen of the many cases under this head, I will mention their doctrine that the Bible requires, and that Christianity includes, the observance of Sunday as a Sabbath.

So clear to my own mind was the proof of the matters thus ignored and set at naught by my pious friends, that I seemed forced to the conclusion that they were indifferent to truth, and willing to disregard and oppose it in maintenance of the doctrines and customs of their sect, or of that group of sects for which they claim the name "evangelical." It was not until long afterwards that I saw my way to a more charitable conclusion, vindicating the hearts of my friends, though inevitably at the expense of their heads.

The key to this more charitable conclusion is to be sons ill who reason with a bad reasoner." Or, as it found in Bacon's Essays, where it is said—"He has been more clearly stated by a later writer—"Argument avails nothing against the persuasions which belong to a man's mental condition."

When you present to a Buddhist, or a Mussulman, or a Roman Catholic of average intelligence, your really good and sound reasons for not accepting the dogmas of his faith, you make not the slightest impression upon him. Will you assume this to be owing to his ignorance? Then consider these further facts:

Among Buddhists, Mussulmans and Roman Catholics are persons of the highest mental culture, quick in the perception of truth, skilled in reasoning, mighty and keen in argument. Archbishop Manning and John H. Newman in England represent the very highest intellectual training. Read Bishop Blougram's Apology, as Browning gives it, and see how very much is to be said upon the other side. You may suppose of the fictitious person last named, and of some real persons of that class, that they are selfish and not honest; bent only upon getting what they can and keeping what they get; but it will not do at all to charge the whole class with dishonesty. And yet, if you give to any one of this class your good and sound reasons for dissenting from his theological position, the result will be the same; you will make not the slightest impression on him. Must we necessarily think, then, that he is indifferent to truth, or regardless of it? No! there is a juster and better explanation.

The well-educated Roman Catholic is quite competent to appreciate the force of reasoning, and also to decide by the preponderance of reason, in any department in which he understands reason to be appropriately a judge, and so to have the right of decision. But his religion is not in that category. His religion, from the beginning, was accepted, not on grounds of reason, but of authority. He must believe (or, at the very least, accept without question) whatever "the Church" decides for him in that department, on penalty of losing his soul; of sacrificing, hopelessly, his eternal welfare. To raise the question how the latter of these depends upon the former—to inquire, with earnestness however serious, how perdition can be divinely appointed as the necessary consequence of disbelief in dogmas having neither reason nor evidence to back them,—this, "the Church" assures him, is one of the greatest of sins. He must believe, or must perish. When "the Church" which thus teaches represents a preponderance of the weight, influence, power, wealth and respectability of the community, very few will be found to stand out against her. The unquestioning acceptance which she requires will be given by a great majority of the population; and to that majority the name "heretic" will come to signify something worse than thief or drunkard, while the demand of reason or evidence for any of the Church's dogmas will be set down as decided proof of heresy.

The habit thus formed under the guidance of "the Church," of accepting religion as something out of the sphere of reason, something quite apart from reason and independent of it, shows me how Roman Catholics can honestly hold a faith utterly destitute of reason and evidence. But do not the great majority of Protestants hold their faith on precisely the same footing? I mean the same in kind, authority instead of reason or evidence.

When a young man, living under the teaching called "evangelical," becomes "pious" (either in or out of the excitement of a "revival"), he is told, and believes, that it is his duty to join the Church. He accordingly joins that one of the four or five sects self-styled "evangelical" to which his associations or connections most naturally tend, and thenceforward he looks to the leaders and teachers of that sect for spiritual guidance. To his mind they represent wisdom in spiritual things, as well as piety and goodness; and so, unless he has an exceptional amount of youthful presumption, he at once accepts their customs and usages as settling whatever to his inexperience seems doubtful or questionable. If, however, he is disposed to question and argue, and maintain an opinion of his own, the right is freely accorded him. He is even encouraged to refer any doubtful matter to the decision of Scripture, and to judge for himself what the words of Scripture mean; so that, contrasting his position with that of the Roman Catholic layman, he feels a comfortable sense of spiritual freedom. The barriers which surround him are so elastic that he seems to himself able to move freely in any direction. It is only after repeated and persistent trial that he finds these barriers as effective as if they were unyielding. If, in any one of many existing cases, the young convert has ventured to point out that the custom and usage of the Church violates that Scripture rule which she herself declares to be inspired, infallible, and obligatory, he finds his dissent met by a steady and cumulative opposition. The pastor thinks differently respecting the matter in question, and courteously refers the doubter (still allowing him entire freedom of opinion) to the approved commentators belonging to the sect. If to the doubter these commentators seem to explain away or to pervert the scriptural meaning, and if he ventures (a rarely exceptional case) to express his dissent in a church-meeting, he finds the deacons, the prominent brethren, and "the weight of the meeting" against him; and finds moreover that such scrutiny of the accepted usages of the sect is looked upon as dangerous and suspicious, as well as concealed, by the great majority of his new associates. The pressure is strong upon him to fall back upon this position: after all, he is young, fallible, inexperienced in spiritual things; modesty and humility are certainly among his duties; the people who differ with him in this matter are certainly good and wise, and are certainly representatives not only of the Church of Christ, but of the purest form of the Christian faith; ought he to stand out against the united judgment of elder, wiser, and better men than himself? and would not the introduction of discord into the Church be a worse evil than that which he had originally undertaken to combat?

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, thoughts and feelings like these suffice to restrain a new member from controversy with the fathers and brethren of his Church; and after a short period of acquiescence in its customs and usages (that is to say, its traditions), these will practically control and regulate his conduct not less than tradition, openly claimed as authoritative, in the Roman Catholic Church rules the lives of its members. Habit misleads and perverts as often in churchliness as in worldliness.

But if the weight of church-tradition has this power to keep down dissent among the brethren, still more effective is it in the conservative direction, when doubt or criticism is suggested by one of "them that are without." Against such an one the church-member, young or old, is always on his guard. How (he thinks) is an unregenerate person competent to explain or to criticize the Bible? Spiritual things must be spiritually discerned; how should a "worldly" man undertake to discuss them? The converted is, by his position, spiritual; the unconverted is, as a matter of course, carnal. The appeal to reason, where faith is in question, shows that the speaker does not understand religion, and is incompetent to talk about it. The worldly man may have worldly knowledge and skill enough to silence the regenerate person, but he does not convince him.

The influence here described leads the Orthodox church-member to ignore and disregard fact not less than reason. He reads the Bible after a mechanical and formal fashion, because, a supposed duty requiring him to read it daily, he takes it up when the customary hour has come, instead of at the times when he feels like reading it, or when he seeks some definite information from it. An approved "commentary" is of course suggested to him by his pastor or some pious friend; and in this he finds a vindication, more or less plausible, but bearing an aspect of authority, through the presumed wisdom and piety of its author, of each of the many cases where the Church has chosen to disregard the teachings of its "Lord and Master," and to pervert or explain away the statements of that book which it accepts as inspired and infallible, the authoritative and sufficient rule of life.

The ignorance of pious people generally respecting the contents and purport of this so much venerated book seems amazing to the intelligent student of it, until he looks at the causes of this ignorance and the mode of its perpetuation. Let me first give some specifications of the ignorance in question.

Among the "Demands of Liberalism," generally considered by Orthodox Christians as an attempt to graft "infidelity" upon our national government, are the three following, namely:—

Discontinuance of the employment of chaplains in Congress and State Legislatures:

Discontinuance of the judicial oath in the courts and all other departments of the government, and the establishment, in its stead, of simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury:

Repeal of all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath.

These three points are demands of Christianity not less than of Liberalism, if the precepts of Jesus and his apostles are Christianity, or a constituent part of it. Chaplains in Congress and the Legislatures are appointed for the express purpose of making public prayers, a practice opposed both by the precept and example of Jesus. No language could be more distinct or emphatic than that in which Jesus and the apostle James forbid the taking of oaths. And the claim of sabbatical observance as a part of Christianity was resisted in the strongest terms by Paul in his epistles, following the lead of Jesus, whose language and conduct caused him to be stigmatized by pious Jews as a Sabbath-breaker.

Nevertheless, not one Orthodox church-member in a hundred knows that his New Testament contains these three things, or that these are constituent parts of the doctrine taught by Jesus. They know not that they are opposing, as infidel ideas, the reforms specially insisted on by him whom they call Master and Lord.

When pious people insist on the inspiration and infallible correctness of the Old Testament, and call the Hebrew decalogue "the moral law," as if it were permanent and universal in obligation, they are blissfully ignorant that Jesus took a stand independent of that whole system, criticizing its contents and its authors, pointing out some of its precepts as insufficient and others as erroneous.

When they read and sing Dr. Watts' "Psalms of David," filled with allusions to Christ, to Jesus, to the cross, to the Christian Church, and to various other incidents and phrases of New Testament history, not one in a hundred of them recognizes the fact that all this is utter misrepresentation, both of the language and meaning of David, and that not one of these matters is ever alluded to in his book of Psalms.

When they talk triumphantly of a fulfillment of "the Messianic prophecies" in Jesus of Nazareth, they show themselves ignorant, not only that Jesus did not fulfil those prophecies—not only that there is no reason to suppose that any one of them was ever spoken of Jesus—not only that they have never been fulfilled at all,—but that, if they had been fulfilled, what is now called Christianity would have had no existence; since those prophecies assumed a permanent continuance of Judaism in its native land, with its king sitting on the throne of David and ruling by the sword, as David did, with a permanent continuance of its Temple, and its priestly, levitical, and sacrificial system. The Messianic prophecies assumed not only the continuance of Judaism, but its predominance, the subjugation of all nations to its king, the extinguishment of all other religions before its faith, which included the daily sacrifice in the Temple on Mount Zion, and an observance among all nations of the day of the new moon and of the Saturday-Sabbath.

These are a few specimens among many of the ignorance of Orthodox church-members of the contents and purport of that very Bible whose infallibility, both in doctrine and fact, is one of their most cherished assumptions. Familiar with much of its language, they are ludicrously unconscious of the meaning of its most important portions. They quote the fourth commandment of the code they eulogize as "the moral law," without the slightest suspicion that it proves them to be Sabbath-breakers. They quote the saying of Jesus, "The Sabbath was made for man," without suspecting for a moment that it is a confutation of sabbatarians of their own sort, and a protest against the kind of sabbatism which their church enjoins as a duty. They read that other saying of Jesus, "My Father worketh hitherto," without understanding that it flatly contradicts the notions of the writer of Genesis that God "rested," and of the writer of Exodus that he "rested and was refreshed." They point to the genealogies in Matthew and Luke as proving Jesus a son of David, quite unaware that they prove no such thing unless he was also the son of Joseph.

The explanation of this blindness is not difficult. Just as everything looks green to him who wears green spectacles, just so the man of average mind will of course adopt the views in religion or philosophy taught him from childhood by really respected and venerated teachers. Temptation will no doubt swerve him more or less from the practice they enjoin, but their theory still holds dominion over him, not only by possession and habit, but because he has never undertaken independent examination of the matter. Thus he will, more or less, think his own thoughts and do his own pleasure on the church's Sunday-Sabbath; but it never enters his mind to question that Sunday is scripturally and rightfully the Sabbath. He would find it a bore to read the elaborate disproof of this notion, on scriptural grounds, in the Essays of Archbishop Whateley, or the Bampton Lectures of Rev. Dr. Hessey; yet, although individually he takes whatever risk there may be in riding, rowing, swimming, or sailing on Sunday, he will sign the petition for closing the Centennial buildings and grounds on that day; and will refuse to sign the counter petition for opening them. The superstition which was fastened upon his unconscionable childhood, and which he has ever since heard assumed as certainly true, in the pulpit and by all the pious people of his acquaintance, still sticks in his mind, and influences more or less of his life; and, though his practice contradicts his theory in some particulars, he is really more honest in the latter than in the former. His mind has become habituated, through assiduous early training, to receive superstition as religious truth, and to look at evidence (when he looks at it at all) through the spectacles of superstition.

In the epistle to the Ephesians, that church is enjoined to put on the whole armor of God, but "above all" to take the shield of faith. No doubt it is by using this "shield of faith" that the new convert, now as well as in ancient times, is able to shelter himself from all questionings, all reasonings, all reasons, and all facts. By holding up the shield firmly between himself and such truth or justice as there may be on the other side, he remains insensible to the force of the latter, and does not even know when he is conquered. To himself, his pastor, and his church-brethren it will even appear that he has gained the victory, and they will thence infer the efficacy of faith, and the soundness of the scriptural direction.

But, unfortunately, the faith here exercised is trust not in God, but in the Church; not even in the book claimed by the Church as "God's word," but in that version of, or variation from, it which the Church's traditions and usages have authorized. The "faith" thus held up as a shield against reason by the young Protestant is precisely the same, both in kind and degree, with that exercised by the Roman Catholic, the Moslem, and the Buddhist. Each of these shields himself against reason by dogged persistence in looking at and holding to that which he has been taught, irrespective of reason. Ignorantly assuming and ignorantly believing that truth is, of course, with their sect, and so against its opponents, they really and sincerely think those opponents defeated when they have kept their own eyes and ears thoroughly closed against all presentation of fact and reason. It was trust in this method of operation which caused an ingenious revivalist to counsel the "Young Men's Christian Associations," in one of their annual conventions—"Talk kindly [to doubters and opponents], but avoid argument."

No doubt, in the avoidance of argument lies their only safety; but my point here is, that with the majority, not merely of such people as Moody and his employers draw into their net, but of the members, old and young, of the churches calling themselves "evangelical," the stupidity above described is honest stupidity. They don't know any better. Assuming the usages of their church to be their safest rule of life, they satisfy themselves, as the Roman Catholics do, with the ease and comfort of living under such guardianship. It certainly is easier and more comfortable to agree with the established respectabilities around you than to maintain, in free discussion, an indefensible position. To "take up the cross and follow Jesus" was a hard thing, no doubt, to the first disciples of the despised and rejected teacher; but, when church usage has decided that the stand in question may now be taken by rising in an assembly of pious or "inquiring" people to say—"I am not ashamed of Jesus," getting thereby, moreover, fraternal greeting and approval from the best portion of the community, young and old, the cross is, perhaps, not quite so heavy, especially when this position enables you to dispense with argument, and to patronize an antagonist with "kind" talk instead of replying to him.

However we may deplore the abnegation, by so large and so worthy a portion of our population, of the divinely appointed guide, reason, there seems no immediate remedy for this evil. Only the slow process of general enlightenment will help those who dread new knowledge, and prefer to keep their eyes closed. But (praise the Lord!) this process of general enlightenment is going on far more rapidly than ever before. Not only does the earth move; its people, even its common people, are moving.

DEFEAT OF THE SCHOOL AMENDMENT IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Aug. 10.

The Senate Judiciary Committee have agreed upon and reported the following as a substitute for the House joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution concerning religion and common schools:—

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, shall be valid as a part of the said Constitution, namely:

ARTICLE XVI.

SEC. 1. No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and no religious test shall be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under any State. No public property, and no public revenue of, nor any loan of credit by or under the authority of, the United States, or any State, Territory, district, or municipal corporation, shall be appropriated to, or made or used for, the support of any school, educational or other institution under the control of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or wherein the particular creed or tenets shall be read or taught in any school or institution supported in whole, or in part, by such revenue or loan of credit, and no such appropriation or loan of credit shall be made to any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or to promote its interests or tenets. This article shall not be construed to prohibit the reading of the Bible in any school or institution, and it shall not have the effect to impair the rights of property already vested.

SEC. 2. Congress shall have power by appropriate legislation to provide for the prevention and punishment of violations of this article.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Aug. 11.

Mr. Edmunds called for the regular order of business, and the Senate resumed the consideration of the proposed constitutional amendment in regard to a division of the school fund. The amendment, as passed by the House of Representatives, provided that no State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no money raised by taxation in any State, for the support of public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, nor any public lands devoted thereto, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect or denomination. Nor shall any money so raised, or lands so devoted, be divided between religious sects or denominations. This article shall not vest, enlarge or diminish legislative power in Congress.

The Senate Committee on the Judiciary reported an amendment to strike out the House proposition, and insert in lieu thereof as follows:—

[See above.]

Mr. Randolph (Dem., N. J.) favored the adoption of the amendment as it came from the House of Representatives, and argued that it had been indorsed by the press and the people everywhere, and, if adopted, would silence forever a dangerous question. The amendment proposed by the Judiciary Committee opened grave questions; and it seemed to him, instead of disposing of the vexed question, it would only arouse a new and unnecessary element of discord. He had no doubt as to the righteousness of the amendment proposed by the House, and would support that. There had grown to be zeal without judgment in regard to popular education, which challenged the attention of Congress, and he thought it time to stop and inquire what valuable lessons are taught by example. What would be said in the future of the Congress which passed such an amendment as this, and the same year defaulted in the payment of the public indebtedness? As a Protestant he desired to enter his protest against this amendment, which was a flat contradiction of itself, as it provided that no particular creed or tenets should be taught in any school, and then declared that it should not be construed to prevent the reading of the Bible in any school or institution. Had the Bible become a non-religious book?

The question being on the amendment of the Judiciary Committee, it was agreed to—yeas 27, nays 15 as follows—[Republicans in Roman, Democrats in Italics, Independents in small capitals]:—

YEAS.
Albee,	Conkling,	Howe,	Paddock,
Anthony,	Cragin,	Inglis,	Patterson,
Booth,	Edmunds,	Logan,	Sargent,
Boutwell,	Ferry,	McMillan,	Spencer,
Burnside,	Frelinghuysen,	Mitchell,	Wadleigh,
Cameron (Wis.),	Harvey,	Morrill,	West—27.
Christianscy,	Hitchcock,	Oglesby,
NAYS.
Bogy,	Eaton,	Key,	Randolph,
Cockrell,	Gordon,	McCreery,	Ransom,
Cooper,	Kelly,	Macey,	Steensons—15.
Davis,	Kernan,	Norwood,

Messrs. Clayton, Wright, Morton, Robertson, Cameron, of Pennsylvania, Sherman, and Windom, who would have voted in the affirmative, were paired with Messrs. Merrimon, Dennis, McDonald, Wallace, Saulsbury, Thurman, and Bayard, who would have voted in the negative. The question then being on ordering the joint resolution, as amended, to a third reading, it was agreed to by a vote of 27 yeas to 15 nays.

Mr. Edmunds then moved that the third reading of the joint resolution take place to-morrow at one o'clock, and said he was frank to say that he made the motion on account of the Senate not being full, and he feared to-night it might be lost on account of not having the necessary two-thirds vote. After a long discussion it was ordered that the joint resolution be read a third time at one o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. Conkling announced that he might not be able to be in the Senate at that hour to-morrow, and, to make the pair even, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Boutwell) had joined him in pairing with the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. McCreery) on the joint resolution; that Senator would vote against the resolution, while Mr. Boutwell and himself would vote for it.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Aug. 12.

At one o'clock the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting appropriations for sectarian schools, was read a third time, in accordance with the order of the Senate of last evening. The presiding officer then announced that it would take its place on the calendar, the order of the Senate directing its third reading having been executed.

The question now is, Shall the joint resolution pass? A two-thirds vote will be necessary to pass it.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Aug. 14.

Mr. Edmunds moved to take up the proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting the appropriation of money for the support of sectarian schools. Agreed to—yeas 25, nays 13.

The question being on the passage of the proposed amendment, Mr. Frelinghuysen (Rep., N. J.) reviewed the provisions thereof, and argued that it was manifest that the people of this country called for an amendment to the Constitution covering the principles involved in this. There was no room for two opinions on the questions that religion and conscience should be free, and the people should not be taxed for the support of sectarian schools. These fundamental rights should be secured by the Constitution. Unfortunately, the amendment passed by the House was defective, and there were omissions in it. Should it be passed by the Senate in that shape, it would be null and void. He thought the House of Representatives should be gratified that the defects had been discovered, and should be willing to concur in the amendment proposed by the Senate at once. He denied that the proposed amendment would prevent religious instruction in prisons and reformatory institutions, and, referring to the reading of the Bible in public schools, said the Constitution of the United States should never treat that book with disrespect. He denied that anybody wanted the Bible excluded from the schools. It was said there were different translations of the Bible. That was true; but the excellence of this amendment was that it did not prohibit the reading of any of them. There was nothing in it which provided that the Douay or King James Bibles should be excluded.

Evening Session.

Mr. Edmunds moved to take up the House joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the appropriation of money for the support of sectarian schools.

Mr. Kernan, of New York, said the proposed amendment, which passed the House of Representatives after having been introduced by a gentleman of prominence (Mr. Blaine), met the approval of the people of the country, and in his opinion it was the proper measure to pass. To that he had no objection, but with his views of what was right, either for the Federal government or for the people of the respective States, he could not vote for the substitute proposed by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. Congress had the power only over those matters where there was a general interest, and where the people of the States could not act for themselves. This was a violation of that very principle.

Mr. Morton asked if the amendment as passed by the House did not violate that principle?

Mr. Kernan said that it did to a certain extent. He believed that the mode of educating children might wisely be left to the people of each State. It was a home right. In his judgment this substitute proposed by the Judiciary Committee instead of allaying strife and dissension would aggravate it and transfer it to the political arena. While the American Congress could vote away any amount of public lands to corporations for railroad jobs, it could not under this amendment give Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, who had done so much to civilize the Indians, a little piece of land to build his church or school-house upon. He argued that the substitute of the Judiciary Committee, if adopted, would prevent any religious teachings in prisons or hospitals. In his own city there were two large orphan asylums which had been going on side by side in harmony for years. One was under the control of Protestant ladies, and the other under the Sisters of Charity. There was no jealousy between them. Under this proposed amendment the country could not make provision for the care of any pauper orphans there, although, all admitted, it was much better to put them into one of those institutions than to let them grow up in vice and finally go to prison. This amendment was not wise. It was not in accordance with the spirit of Christian charity which should exist in every creed.

Mr. Whyte, of Maryland, said, Protestant as he was, and having sprung from ancestors who belonged to the strictest sect of Irish Presbyterians, with all their teachings, he failed not to remember that he was born in a State settled by the Roman Catholics, and on whose soil the banner of religious liberty was first planted on the American continent by them. The Catholics of Maryland, pledged by Carroll of Carrollton, risked their lives, their liberty, and their property in the struggle for American liberty. Should he vote for this amendment, he would be faithless to his State. It seems to me, to use plain words, merely an accusation against a large body of our fellow-citizens of not being as loyal to republican liberty as we proclaim ourselves to be.

Mr. Edmunds said there was no present danger of that kind, but he would like to know if the Senator

(Mr. Whyte) had read the syllabus promulgated by the Holy Pontiff in 1864 on this very subject of schools.

Mr. Whyte said 1864 was not 1876 by a good deal. A good many people said and did things in 1864 which they would not do now.

Mr. Edmunds asked if the Senator meant to say the syllabus had been changed.

Mr. Whyte replied in the affirmative, and asked if the Senator from Vermont had read the recent letter of Archbishop Purcell on the subject.

Mr. Edmunds—Archbishop Purcell is not the Pope.

Mr. Whyte—Archbishop Purcell would not speak in opposition to the will of the Pope, any more than some gentlemen would speak in opposition to the will of the Republican Party.

Mr. Christianscy, of Michigan, spoke of the House amendment, and argued that it was defective. He favored the substitute reported by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, and said he could see no reason why it should not be supported in preference to the House proposition.

Mr. Morton, of Indiana, also spoke of the proposition of the House of Representatives as being defective, though he presumed it was imperfect by inadvertence. If agreed upon it would amount to very little. It simply protects a State from diverting a part of the fund set apart for public schools to the support of sectarian schools. But it did not prevent the State from levying a special tax for that purpose. If it was proper to prevent the State from diverting the fund raised for public schools, was it not proper to prevent the State from levying special taxes for the support of sectarian schools? He then referred to the argument of Mr. Kernan, and asked if there had not been abuses in that State. Had not large amounts of money been given to sectarian schools out of the public Treasury of the State?

Mr. Kernan replied that money had been given to hospitals and orphan asylums, but in his judgment there had never been any abuses.

Mr. Morton (resuming) argued that if a State should be allowed to establish denominational schools the perpetuity of the nation would be endangered. For a State to support Catholic schools would be the same as the State supporting the Catholic Church, or the support of Protestant schools would be the same as supporting the Protestant Church. There could not be perfect equality and perfect liberty except upon the principle that religion should not be maintained at the public expense. In reply to the argument of Mr. Whyte, he said that the Catholics of Maryland would not be interfered with by the passage of this amendment. They would be left as free as the Protestants, and the spirit of religious toleration would not be violated there. This matter had been in the minds of the people of this country for years, but in the last fifteen years circumstances showing that there was danger had transpired, and the people now demanded that it be made a part of the fundamental law of the land.

Mr. Eaton said the Senator [Mr. Morton] spoke of a circumstance having transpired which showed danger. Would he be kind enough to mention in what that danger consisted?

Mr. Morton said the Senator could not deny that there was a large body of people in this country who believed the public schools were infidel and wicked. Those people were not in favor of any schools where their religion was not taught.

Mr. Edmunds reviewed the House proposition, and argued that the logic of it was that only special money raised for a special purpose should not be diverted from the purpose for which it was raised.

Mr. Stevenson, of Kentucky, said, as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, he did not concur in this proposed Constitutional amendment.

The Senate at one o'clock voted on the proposed constitutional amendment, and it was rejected—yeas 28, nays 16, not two-thirds voting in the affirmative. It was defeated by a strict party vote.

AT A RECENT prayer-meeting in Louisiana the following unique explanation was given by the colored preacher as to the origin of the white race: "When Cain killed his brudder Abel, the Lord, missing him, axed Cain: 'Whar's your brudder Abel?' Cain answered: 'I don't know, massa. I didn't seed him.' Then the Lord hunted around the corn-field, and by and by he come back and looked ober de fence, and again axed him: 'Whar's your brudder Abel, you grand-rascal nigger, you?' Then Cain he git skeered, and if it hadn't been for that nigger turning so white we nebber would have been troubled with this sassy set of white trash."—Independent.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 19.

E. Schler, $3.20; C. Wellington, $3.20; L. Prang, $3.20; F. Clement, 35 cents; Kirk Himrod, $1; P. S. Crowell, $3.20; C. H. Preston, $5; C. W. Fillmore, $3.20; C. M. Denison, $3.50; Mrs. E. J. Harker, $5; David Branson, $6; H. T. Marshall, $3.20; G. F. Lapham, $5; W. C. Fuller, $3.20; D. M. Dickinson, $3.20; John Scott, $3.20; N. M. Mann, $5; A. Aborne, $4.50; Chas. S. Hamilton, $9; H. H. Hatch, $3.20; O. N. Bancroft, 80 cents; F. N. Williams, 75 cents; E. F. Robeson, $3.20; H. H. Everts, $1.50; Geo. Allen, $2; H. S. Glover, $3; G. D. Henck, 80 cents; C. A. Gurley, $3.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

N. B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, AUGUST 24, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

THE DEFEATED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, on December 19, 1871, introduced a resolution in the United States Senate containing the following language:—

Neither the United States nor any State, Territory, county, or municipal corporation shall aid in the support of any school wherein the peculiar tenets of any religious denomination are taught.

Hon. J. G. Blaine, of Maine, on December 13, 1875, proposed in the House of Representatives an amendment to the Constitution couched in these terms:—

No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no money raised by taxation in any State for the support of public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, nor any public lands devoted thereto, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect; and no money so raised or lands so devoted shall be divided among religious sects or denominations.

The Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, to whom Mr. Blaine's amendment had been referred, after voting on June 2 not to report at this session, reported the following on August 6, being Mr. Blaine's proposition with an amendment:—

No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no money raised by taxation in any State for the support of public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, nor any public lands devoted thereto, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect or denomination; nor shall any money so raised or lands so devoted be divided between religious sects or denominations. This article shall not vest, enlarge, or diminish legislative power in the Congress.

This amendment passed the House by a vote of 166 to 5,—the concluding clause being evidently intended to deprive it of all practical effect and convert it into a meaningless piece of buncombe.

The Senate, however, took up the matter more in earnest.

The full text of the three substitutes there offered is given as follows in a general press dispatch dated Washington, August 7:—

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The substitute offered by Mr. Sargent to-day for the non-sectarian school amendment to the Constitution is as follows:—

SECTION 1. There shall be maintained in each State and Territory a system of free common schools, but neither the United States nor any State or Territory, county or municipal corporation, shall aid in support of any school wherein the peculiar tenets of any religious denomination are taught.

SECTION 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Senator Frelinghuysen's substitute is in the following terms:—

No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. No public property and no money raised by taxation in any State, Territory, or district, or derived from public lands or other public source, shall be appropriated to any school, educational or other institution, that is under the control of any religious sect or denomination; and no such appropriation shall be made to any religious sect or denomination, or to promote its interests; nor shall any public money, land, or property be divided between religious sects or denominations.

SECTION 2. Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article.

The substitute proposed by Senator Christianity is as follows:—

No State shall make any law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; nor shall Congress nor any State raise by taxation, donate, or appropriate any money or property for the support of any church or religious society, nor for the support or in aid of any theological school or seminary, or of any school or seminary teaching the peculiar religious doctrines, or subject in any respect to the control or influence, of any church, religious society, sect, or denomination; and no special or denominational system of religion or religious belief shall, in any State or Territory, or in the District of Columbia, constitute any part of the course of study or instruction in any school or institution of learning supported wholly or in part by taxation, or by donation of any money or property by any State or by the United States.

All these substitutes, together with the House resolution, were referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, which on August 10 reported back the following form of amendment to the Constitution as a substitute for them all:—

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), that the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, shall be valid as a part of the said Constitution, namely:—

Article 16. No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and no religious test shall be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under any State. No public property and no public revenue, nor any loan of credit by or under the authority of the United States, or any State, Territory, district, or municipal corporation, shall be appropriated to or made or used for the support of any school, educational or other institution, under the control of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or wherein the particular creeds or tenets shall be read or taught, in any school or institution supported in whole or in part by such revenue or loan of credit, and no such appropriation or loan of credit shall be made to any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or to promote its interests or tenets. This article shall not be construed to prohibit the reading of the Bible in any school or institution, and it shall not have the effect to impair the rights of property already vested.

SECTION 2. Congress shall have power by appropriate legislation to provide for the prevention and punishment of violations of this article.

At the evening session of the Senate on August 11, the above report of the Judiciary Committee was accepted as an amendment to the House resolution by a vote of 27 to 15—the Republicans all voting yea, and the Democrats all voting nay. The resolution thus amended was then ordered to a third reading at one o'clock on the next day by the same vote of 27 to 15—a vote which was published in some of the daily papers as the "adoption" of the amendment itself, and which was thus made the cause of misapprehension in last week's "Current Events." At the appointed hour, August 12, the amendment was read for the third time, and placed on the calendar to take its turn. It was reached on Monday, August 14, when Senator Edmunds moved to take it up. After an animated debate, the final vote was taken very late at the evening session of that day, and the amendment was rejected by a vote of 28 to 16, a two-thirds vote being necessary on its final passage. It was defeated by a "strict party vote."

Such a record of this debate in the Senate as we have been able to glean from the meagre accounts of it in the New York Times, Tribune, and Sun, will be found elsewhere in this issue; and we commend to the specially careful attention of our readers the remarks of Senators Randolph, Frelinghuysen, Kernan, and Morton.

Mr. Randolph, who (as we are privately informed) is a stiff Presbyterian, was keen enough to discern the "flat contradiction" between the first and last parts of the amendment; he saw clearly that the Bible is a "sectarian" book, and evidently supposed that sectarianism is an essential and proper constituent of "religion." Hence he protested against the amendment because the prohibition of sectarianism in the schools is really a prohibition of Bible-reading there, and because he wants neither to be prohibited. In this he is far more clear-sighted than those liberals who fancy that the State can prohibit sectarianism in the schools without also prohibiting Bible-reading in them; and we hope that no liberal will be above learning a useful lesson from an intelligent Orthodox opponent.

Mr. Frelinghuysen was actually so ignorant of public opinion as to be able to "deny that anybody wanted the Bible excluded from the schools"! There is something humiliating in the mere possibility of such a statement in the United States Senate. Thousands and thousands of our best citizens hold the opinion of which the enlightened Senator from New Jersey had never heard. What have they been about?

Mr. Kernan, a Catholic, was greatly grieved because this amendment would prevent Congress from giving to Protestant Bishop Whipple "a little piece of land to build his church or school-house upon." And this is the Catholic gentleman who has been lauded as a staunch friend to State Secularization!

Mr. Whyte, a Presbyterian and a Democrat, thought it very unjust to insinuate that the Pope still stands by his own Syllabus, or that Archbishop Purcell can possibly have a mind of his own! He evidently believes that the Catholic Church is the grandmother of religious liberty in the United States.

Mr. Morton made an excellent statement of the secular principle: "For a State to support Catholic schools would be the same as the State supporting the Catholic Church, or the support of Protestant schools would be the same as supporting the Protestant Church. There could not be perfect equality and perfect liberty except upon the principle that religion should not be maintained at the public expense." Yet he could not perceive that the Constitutional amendment for which he voted would have the inevitable tendency to keep all the public schools of the country "Protestant" schools to the end of time.

Look now at the amendment itself. It contains, as Senator Randolph declared, a "flat contradiction." Its first section prohibits the support of sectarianism at the public expense, and then proceeds to prohibit this very prohibition! Bible-reading in the public schools is itself sectarianism supported at the public expense; yet this shall not be prohibited! What must be thought of the intelligence of the United States Senate, when almost two-thirds of its members can vote for such a self-contradictory measure as this?

The first part of the first section is very good, so far as it goes—though it does not by any means go far enough to secure the total separation of Church and State. But the last portion of it is contrived with a Machiavellian ingenuity to introduce into the United States Constitution, unsuspected, the very essence, pith, and fundamental principle of the Christian Amendment—an ingenuity so extraordinary that nobody as yet seems to comprehend the real meaning or bearing of the measure we have so narrowly escaped. The origin of that concluding clause of the first section—its evil purpose being cloaked with such preternatural cunning and plausibility—could not have been in the Judiciary Committee: the toad at Eve's ear in Paradise was no more Satan in disguise than was the Christian Amendment emissary who evidently suggested to some member of that Committee the insertion of this seemingly harmless clause. The moment we saw in the papers the Senate's substitute for the House resolution, there flashed across our mind what several persons had told us at the Centennial Congress of Liberals in Philadelphia,—namely, that at the convention of the National Reform Association, then just concluded, they had heard one of the speakers declare in substance: "We dare not tell you publicly what we are doing, but it is of vast consequence to our cause." The defeated Senate amendment would at least perfectly explain that declaration.

Supposing that this amendment had not been defeated, what would have been its practical effect?

1. To make it impossible henceforth either to secularize the public schools or to tax church property in any degree; it would practically prevent the total separation of Church and State.

2. To introduce into the Constitution of the United States a direct mention and reverential recognition of the Bible, and, by implication, a reverential recognition of the Christian God and Christ of whom the Bible treats; and thus to destroy that absolutely secular character of the Constitution which has been its chief glory and the great bulwark of all our religious liberty. This great victory once gained, the Christianizers of the Constitution would have stormed the citadel of religious freedom, and would not be slow to carry all its outworks.

3. To class the present practice of exempting church property from all taxation among the "rights of property already vested" (for this discreetly artful phrase was intended to include all church property and would be construed by the courts to include it in this connection); and thus to saddle the nation forever with a burden that is becoming more onerous every year.

4. To recognize, by natural and necessary implication, an inherent right in the Bible to be read in the public schools, rendering it sacred from exclusion even by public authority, and thereby treating it utterly unlike all other books—an inherent right which can only be conceded to the Bible on the admission of its supernatural origin—an inherent right which could not exist or be conceded at all except as the DIVINE AUTHORITY OF THE WORD OF GOD. This right of the Bible to be read in the public schools is implicitly but unmistakably recognized by the Senate amendment, just as much as the "rights of property already vested" in the coordinate clause: the two are treated by it as preëxisting rights, superior to the Constitution itself. In other words, this amendment, recognizing covertly and by indirection, yet really and efficiently, the DIVINE AUTHORITY OF THE BIBLE, carries in itself the very worst virus of the Christian Amendment, and, if it had been adopted, would have ended by poisoning the entire national life. No words of ours could paint the magnitude of the disaster which the nation has so narrowly escaped, and which it could only have discovered when remedy had become well-nigh impossible. Never did we experience a greater sense of relief than when the first announcement that this misbegotten amendment was "adopted" was changed to the announcement that it was "rejected."

Escaped, did we say? Alas, let us not be too sure of that! Here was the Christian Amendment itself, in all its essential injustice and malignity, however artfully veiled; and it commanded the votes of nearly two-thirds of the United States Senate! Will any man after this be so idiotic as to despise the Christian Amendment movement or underrate its craftily hidden power? It has proved its power; it has almost succeeded; it will renew its accursed attempt. Next winter a religious Constitutional amendment of some sort will inevitably be sent out by Congress to the State Legislatures; shall it be the Christian Amendment, or the Religious Freedom Amendment? Liberty has a respite only; if you, liberals, slumber on in sluggishness this summer and autumn, you will find a worse yoke than that just escaped fastened hopelessly on the nation's neck,—aye, and on yours! There are a few months now before us in which we can make an effort to teach this half-instructed people wherein the safeguard of religious liberty consists, and how to protect it from its cunning and murderous foes; shall we hesitate? Unless we can forthwith make plain to our countrymen the real nature, force, justice, benevolence, and beauty of the secular principle, as set forth on the first page of THE INDEX, we shall see living Liberty slaughtered next winter under the very dome of the Capitol where her effigy stands mockingly in stone.

Is there no way to make it plain?

HOW TO DO IT.

In anticipation of some such action by Congress as is above recounted, we have prepared in season a campaign document which is admirably adapted for immediate use at this critical time. It is a cheap pamphlet or tract, of twenty-four pages, without covers, designed for gratuitous distribution by the brave and earnest friends of State Secularization. The title-page reads thus: "Patriotic Address to the People of the United States, adopted at Philadelphia on the Fourth of July, 1876, by the National Liberal League. Together with the Chief Resolutions of the League, its Constitution and List of Officers, and its Protest against the Shutting of the International Exhibition on Sundays. Boston, Mass.: Published by the National Liberal League, 1876." It also contains the "extracts from letters by distinguished citizens," as published in THE INDEX of July 13. Ten thousand copies are already printed, and, as the tract is stereotyped, as many more can be struck off at any time as can be used.

This is not the full Report of the Centennial Congress of Liberals, which has been delayed somewhat on account of it, and will be published in due time. But it is exactly what is wanted to circulate everywhere, in order to make the public understand the great principle of secular government whose fate in this country is now trembling in the balance. A Constitutional amendment involving our religious rights and liberties will certainly be passed at the next session of Congress; the country has only escaped as by a miracle from the passage of a most disastrous one; the Christian Amendment party, at once disappointed by their failure, yet flushed and stimulated to fresh exertions by their proved influence in Congress, will strive to make the impending measure still more stringent in its terms; and the people must be educated up to an intelligent comprehension of the situation in six months, or it will be too late. This is the naked truth. Are there no Minute-Men of 1876 ready for duty?

Liberals! We appealed to you for a thousand dollars last spring, to hold a Centennial Congress of Liberals and organize a National Liberal League at Philadelphia in July. With a generosity over which we have unspeakably rejoiced and exulted, you gave us more than two thousand. This tract, so timely, so precious now, has been printed with your money and for your use. We now appeal to you once more to scatter this seed broadcast over the land, that our country may reap the golden harvest of your wise and noble action. The influence you may exert by means of this tract, which (if you choose) you can circulate by the hundred thousand, will be simply incalculable; for it only utters articulately the ruling spirit and purpose of American institutions, and will be recognized as doing this by every intelligent citizen who can be got to read it. For the sake of your own liberties, your own rights, your own self-respect,—for the sake of the liberties, rights, and self-respect of your own posterity and of all mankind—we entreat you now to perfect your own magnificent work, and prove yourselves worthy of this great opportunity. You will not fail your country at such an hour,—no, you will not, you cannot! Do not deceive yourselves now, or suffer yourselves to be deceived by the foolish-wise: you must act, and act promptly, or you will soon find yourselves under the iron heels of triumphant fanaticism. And this is the way to act.

1. Order as many of these tracts as you can afford, and put them into the hands of all who will read them. They will be mailed as promptly as possible on receipt of just enough money to defray the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, as explained in the advertisement on our last page. This work of distribution can be done by individuals, and at once.

2. Get your local paper, or any paper whose editor is a personal friend, to bring this tract to the notice of his readers, and, whether he approves it or not, to make its general arguments and tenor fairly known. If you succeed, please send us a marked copy of the paper.

3. Organize local Liberal Leagues temporarily, apply to the National League for charters to create a mutual bond of "cordial fellowship and cooperation" with all your brother liberals, and meanwhile hold public meetings to agitate for the Religious Freedom Amendment. You cannot make the secular principle respected by politicians unless you are thoroughly and widely organized; and you must make this principle respected by politicians, or your crafty opponents, who have great and powerful organizations at their back, will carry the day. There is no time to lose; take our word for granted this once, and if it does not turn out at last to be the wisest word of all, never trust us again.

4. Send to us without delay the name of every bold, thorough, active liberal, whose character commands the respect of your own community, and who possesses marked executive ability. These are the men and women for the hour, and these are the men and women with whom the Directors of the National Liberal League seek to be in communication. Nobody will get paid for this work, and nobody who is looking for pay is wanted; but every man and woman who is willing to labor for liberty out of sheer love for it can help in this great enterprise, and should come to the front. The bigots who would fain tyrannize over the consciences and intellects of freemen, and who seek to cram the "creed of Christendom" into the United States Constitution and down all our throats, will pay us well in abuse and malediction; but the knowledge that we are laboring for the good of all, including our would-be tyrants, is payment sure to be ours, and not to be stolen from us. Send on your lists of such names—on separate sheets that can be easily filed away together.

5. Make yourself either an Annual Member or a Life Member of the National Liberal League, as explained on our last page.

6. Give what you can to the treasury of the National Liberal League, to defray the heavy expenses involved in doing the all-essential work. The "Patriotic Address" should be mailed at once to every one of the six or seven thousand journals of the country; to every one of the eighty thousand office-holders of the country; to every one of the fifty or sixty thousand ministers of the country; in short, to every voter of the country, if possible. Every penny will be wisely used and duly accounted for. The Directors will give time, labor, strength; they would pay all the bills if they could; but they are dependent on the generosity and patriotism of the liberals for the necessary means to work with. And it is enough, we are sure, to quote here the resolution passed at the Centennial Congress of Liberals:—

"Resolved, That we hereby appeal to the country for funds to carry on the vitally important work for which we have organized; that we believe there is abundant wealth and abundant enthusiasm ready to aid us, just as soon as our objects are thoroughly understood and widely known; and that we rely confidently on the generosity of the patriotic public not to permit this great cause to languish for want of the all-essential means."

SELF-REFORMATION.

It is not uncommon for a person of high moral aspirations, who has advanced, through fidelity to his convictions and much sacrifice, it may be, to broader intellectual principles, to experience a sense of disappointment when brought into actual contact and intercourse with their representatives. It had been an unquestioned assurance that to renounce error, and move forward in the direction of ideas, of correcter and clearer mental perceptions, must necessarily be attended with a visible correspondent progress of character. This is doubtless the general tendency always, the ultimate result; but it does not follow in each instance, nor at once.

A valuable Western correspondent of THE INDEX (Mr. Neville, of Missouri), whose brief occasional notes in its columns indicate that his heart is in the right place, deplains in a late number the corruption of the times, and intimates that even radicals are no better than they ought to be. Indeed, he prescribes, as the great specific for existing evils, that they should suspend, for the present at least, all efforts to reform others, and concentrate their entire energies upon the reformation of themselves. The advice, with a certain degree of qualification, is seldom amiss at any time. It might be also extended, with equal application, to those whose pretensions to righteousness are greater than those of the class referred to. It has long been the habit of religious people to estimate the moral worth of radicalism at a very low figure,—to say very disparaging things of it. It was Mr. Murray, we believe, who affirmed a few years since that Free Religion goes to pieces in Ann Street, which was simply another way of saying that its prevailing tendency is toward the lowest moral degradation. It was but a reckless reiteration of the stale and unscrupulous vilification of honest intellectual dissent, to which the Church has ever been addicted; and Mr. Murray ought to have been ashamed of it, inasmuch as he knew better; and, unless he is a worse person than we are willing to think, no doubt he has been ere this.

There is no one, we presume, who will maintain that radicals have reached a point beyond which there is no improvement,—that they have attained perfection. It is a characteristic of human progress that, in passing from one state of development to another, one religious system or set of ideas to another, as Lecky has very clearly shown is the case in the sphere of morals, there is always some loss as well as gain. With the majority, in such transitions, negation precedes the affirmation of positive truth. With the renunciation of the old errors, or even its attendant somewhat clearer perceptions of truth, the incentives and restraints of the discarded faith are lost, and it requires some time before the real good which has been surrendered, under new influences and from other and superior motives, can be recovered.

It is thus that there is always a seeming, probably an actual, letting down of morals, an interim of more or less demoralization, in passing from one religious era or stage of civilization to another. It was witnessed in the scepticism which accompanied the extinction of the Greek and Roman faiths. We have seen it displayed in political changes in modern time, and in our own land in the immediate results consequent, to a large extent, in the life of a people in their passage from bondage to freedom. But these considerations offer no well-grounded or genuine argument against the value of the principle of progress, or the superior claim of the later evolution of truth. The consequences of the great intellectual changes in society that we have indicated correspond to the condition in which a large number of the American people, and of the foremost civilizations, are at the present time. Belief in the old religious ideas has very largely, and in many instances altogether, disappeared from the mind. Vast numbers of people, for one reason or another, are simply wearing the outward seeming of faith, conforming to perpetuated usages and dogmas secretly recognized as false and absurd, because of the want of the necessary courage and sincerity to cast them aside. There are also among radicals a great many who have not yet passed beyond, or far beyond, the stage of mere negation. They are ready and eager to demolish the temples of worship which they have outgrown, but have not acquired the art or apprehended the need of fairer and better. There are others belonging to the same general class, who, in their yearning for a substitute for the faith and devotion they have relinquished, through the influence of wayward and undisciplined tendencies of character or out of crude and visionary imaginations, have elaborated speculative theories which have so little basis in the demonstrable facts of life, and are so poorly adapted to promote its higher culture, that it is difficult to conceive of them as destined, without essential modifications, to more than a transient existence. But with a due recognition of these factors in solving the problem of the moral worth of radicalism, we feel assured that its average effect upon the individual will lose nothing, but rather appear to the decided advantage of the old religious systems upon a comparison with them. There has been very conclusive evidence of this of late. It is a notorious fact that the larger proportion of the cases of distinguished rascality—various species of fraud, forgery, breaches of trust, violations of the principle of honor and honesty in public and private life, social scandals and instances of conspicuous individual demoralization in the so-called better classes of society, to which public attention has recently been directed—has been either in the Church or among those who sustain a nominal relation to it. And if we may credit the many reports of the result of inquiry in respect to the religious conceptions of those who belong to what is called the criminal class, or inmates of our various penal institutions, seven-tenths of these, so far as they have any thought upon this subject, entertain beliefs which are distinctive of Orthodox theology.

If among the ranks of radicalism, or those numbered in them, there are those who fall behind the standard of life which high moral aspiration demands, it is not because of its lack of a sufficiently exalted ideal, or the impossibility of its practical realization in conduct and character. It is a remarkable fact that the larger number of the most eminent philanthropists, reformers, original thinkers, and those whose services to mankind have been most valuable in modern time, have been confessedly infidel, or affected more or less with unsoundness of faith. This is the case with respect to the majority of most distinguished scientists, philosophers, and a considerable number of those who occupy the most honored places in other lines of literature. It is still further worthy of remembrance that, whatever may have been the charges preferred against the famous sceptics of the past, it is seldom they could justly be accused of an inappreciation of the worth of virtue, or of advocating a low ideal of morals. There are few whose names have been rendered more odious by the Church than Thomas Paine; yet he unhesitatingly declared, "I believe in the equality of man, and that religious duties consist in doing justice, loving mercy, and endeavoring to make our fellow-creatures happy." Said Theodore Parker in a letter to a friend, "You and I have been called infidels. We are so, tried by the common test. Our Christianity is not the common form; our form of religion is another gospel; our God is not the jealous God who subjects the soul of man to a law of sin and death, but makes it free by the great law of his spirit. Yet though we have been charged with this infidelity, while we are thus different from other sects, I believe we have not been charged with doubting the infinity of God, never with a disbelief in the power of truth, justice, love, holiness, to regenerate your heart and mine, and bless the world." "The religion of the day," says Mr. Frothingham, "prescribes a form of cultus; our religion prescribes a law of culture." "Religion," according to Mr. Abbot "is the effort of man, to perfect himself."

Thus if radicalism does not, in each instance, bring forth such fruit as might be desired or expected, it cannot be ascribed to any want of virtue in the tree itself, but rather to its immature condition, or circumstances that have not yet favored its best development. The great distinction of radicalism is the pursuit of truth, belief in its power to promote the growth of virtue, and ultimately redeem and save the world. But, supposing this faith in its inevitable results is erroneous, can we abandon its pursuit, if so moved, for an imagined more commanding object, even though it be virtue itself? Is not our first allegiance due to truth? Is it not the supreme authority? Nor, if such a transfer of interest and aim were legitimate and readily effected, would such a course be most likely to lead to the end in view,—the reformation or perfection of our characters? Seeking to be good, direct concentration of the mind upon the effort of moral attainment is not likely to prove the surest or most effectual means towards such realization. The kingdom of noble manhood and womanhood comes not by observation. By all means should radicals keep before them a high ideal of character. By all means should they seek to save the cause with which they are identified from dishonor, to exemplify in their lives its clearer and better perceptions of moral excellence. But these things are to be accomplished, not so much through the direct seeking of them as that fidelity to, and appreciation of, the great aims and principles of radicalism through which all these at length are added.

D. H. C.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

Before adjournment, the Senate, on motion of Mr. Edmunds, reconsidered its action with reference to the proposed amendment to the Constitution; and on the taking of a second vote, the resolution failed to pass, two-thirds not voting for it, although it received 28 votes in the affirmative to 16 in the negative. The franking privilege was not voted upon in the House, but the Hawaiian treaty, which puts the products of the Sandwich Islands upon the free list, managed to get through the Senate. In signing the River and Harbor Bill, Grant sent a message to the House stating that he should not allow any of the money which it appropriated to be used unless convinced that the particular works specified would be of national benefit—a good enough message, in itself, but one which he should have learned how to write several years ago, when the Republicans were in a majority and were making appropriations of the same kind. He sent another message, also, with reference to the Consular and Diplomatic Bill, questioning the right of the House to abolish any foreign ministry, but admitting the right—which, practically, of course, amounts to the same thing—of refusal to appropriate money to pay a minister's salary.

The death of Speaker Kerr, which took place so soon after the adjournment of Congress, must occasion deep regret for several different reasons. Although not a brilliant presiding officer, he was, nevertheless, far preferable in this capacity to any of those who have occupied his place during his illness, and his presence in the House would have helped to check the wild legislation which there is too much reason to fear will be indulged in during the next session of Congress. But the chief reason for regret at the present time is to be found in the fact that Mr. Kerr was an uncompromising hard-money man, and that his party and his State, as well as his country, are just now in especial need of such men. That he was a man of integrity should be mentioned, also, in these days when even common honesty is not an unfailing characteristic of all leading members of Congress.

Had Mr. Kerr occupied his chair last week, we should have had, on the "gold and silver" commission, very different appointments at least so far as the House is concerned, from those with which we are now afflicted. The Commission is to consist of Messrs Jones, of Nevada (a gentleman who, on account of his pecuniary interest in the result, should not have been appointed, whatever his supposed qualifications for the position), Boutwell, of Massachusetts, and Bogy, of Missouri, on the part of the Senate, and, on the part of the House, Messrs Gibson, of Louisiana, Bland, of Indiana, and Willard, of Michigan. We are certainly within bounds in asserting that it would be an extremely difficult matter to make up a more wretched commission than the one thus constituted to gather information and concoct legislation upon the most important subject with which, as a nation, we have now to deal. Had its members been selected by lot or by "the wager of battle" or by some method of divination, we should have had a better commission than the one appointed by Saylor and Ferry. With the exception of Gibson, of whom we know nothing, and Boutwell, of whom we know too much, the men are all inflationists or "silver" men; and not one of the number, we are sure, is fully qualified for his important and delicate work. If, now, the Commission should select as the three experts whom it is authorized to choose, Butler and Bill Allen and Peter Cooper, we should have a body fitly completed; one, moreover, the report of which would be likely to astonish the natives of more than one country, and would present, to say the least, a very striking contrast to that which Mr. Goschen has just submitted to the English Parliament.

Grant appears to be indulging in a sort of rude and unseemly boy's play which, like all play of the kind, is likely to end in mischief if it be carried too far. He has taken advantage of the passage of Mr. Scott Lord's resolution, to which we referred last week, to order General Sherman to hold himself in readiness to send troops into the South in order to protect the negro, and to prevent fraud and intimidation at elections. If this be intended only as a joke at the expense of the Democrats, to offset the effect of Lord's resolution, it displays a sad lack of dignity in the President; but if it be intended as a threat against the Southerners, it must be deplored as not only uncalled for, but as calculated to stir up the very strife which every Northern man should be anxious to allay.

If anything more could have been required to convince the most incredulous person that our method of dealing with the Indians is an outrage against common sense, it may be found in the fact, recently ascertained, that, since the outbreak of the present war, government has actually permitted them to be supplied with arms and ammunition by the Indian traders. On one occasion, an army officer, who had stopped a wagon laden with ammunition on its way to an Indian camp, telegraphed to Washington for instructions with regard to it, and was at once directed to allow the wagon to proceed. The above is only one instance among many which equal it in wickedness and stupidity. Sitting Bull, notwithstanding his known hostility to the whites, has been allowed to purchase supplies unchecked, and vessels on Western rivers, carrying soldiers to fight the Indians, have been allowed to carry to the Indians arms and ammunition with which to kill the soldiers.

Mr. Gamaliel Bradford contributes to the July number of the North American Review an article on the government of great cities, which reaches the conclusion already indicated by others who have given attention to the same subject, and is to be commended as a timely contribution to the study of a pressing and important topic. It has been evident for years that our large cities cannot be saved from the clutches of the scalawags who make up the lowest order of professional politicians, so long as there are so many officers to be chosen, such a division of responsibility among bureaus, boards, departments, and chiefs, and so little unity of system in the whole concern. The control of the caucuses, which in reality fill nearly all city offices, demands an amount of application and time and dirty work which business men cannot and should not afford. Facility in determining responsibility is absolutely essential to good city government, and this can be obtained only by greatly increasing the power of the mayor, giving to him the appointment of all inferior officers, and holding him strictly responsible for the correct fulfillment of all executive functions. City politics in this case would not need the study of a lifetime, and if a city were not well governed its voters and tax-payers would have only themselves to blame. There will be a big fight, of course, with the present generation of wire-pullers before this "one-man power" can be established, but established it will surely be, eventually, in every large city.

We mentioned, a few weeks ago, the fact that the American Philological Society appeared to be seriously interested in the subject of reforming the spelling of the English language, and that a committee appointed to consider the matter had reported a series of favorable resolutions which were well received by many of those in attendance at the annual meeting. A convention in furtherance of the same project has now been held at Philadelphia, and although a full account of the proceedings has not been received at the time of writing, it is evident that the scheme is seriously entertained by many leading educators—Mr. Northrop, and Professors, Haldeman, Beard, and March, for instance—and that its success is desired by many persons and for various reasons. Professor March asserts that children who inherit the English tongue lose an enormous amount of time in learning to spell. Mr. Gladstone, of England, is quoted as asserting that if he were a foreigner and had to learn English pronunciation from present orthography, he believes the task would drive him mad. Bishop Thirlwall, Mr. Hepworth Dixon, and others in England, are said to favor the proposed reform, and a phonetic system was advocated by a colored delegate from Virginia as an important aid in facilitating the education of colored children.

The Russian system of mechanical instruction has been adopted by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and we are likely soon to have an opportunity of determining the practical value of the system so enthusiastically advocated by Professor Runkle. A full course of instruction will be begun the coming autumn, and the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic's Association has already appropriated $4,000 for the support of two scholarships in the course. The system, if successful, will have an important bearing upon matters connected with apprenticeship, trades-unions, labor-reform, and other vexed social questions, and this experiment, therefore, may well be watched with deep interest.

The performance of the first series of Wagner's works at Bayreuth has been received with unbounded enthusiasm, and Wagner, it must be admitted, has apparently succeeded in his desires to a degree never before achieved by a living composer. Of Wagner's writings—of which we admit we know but little—we have received a very unfavorable impression, and we do not feel competent to pronounce judgment upon his musical theories; but real genius only would merit his present unsurpassed success, and if he has indeed "broken with the modern theatre," and can manage to supplant with something better the "musical monster" known as modern opera, he will surely have accomplished enough to make him forever famous, whatever the character of his writings, or the fancifulness of his theories.

A queen who has been dethroned should certainly be satisfied, in these days, when a successful revolution restores her to her own land, and puts her son upon his country's throne; but Queen Isabella of Spain seems not to be satisfied with her portion of triumph, and is reported to be getting up considerable dissatisfaction by her imperiousness and meddlesomeness. Don Carlos, who is now quietly bathing at Newport, may yet have a chance to live in Madrid.—China is just now in considerable trouble, having upon her hands an unsettled quarrel with England, and a rebellion conducted by the Emperor's brother, while a terrible famine is desolating some of her Northern provinces.—The English Parliament has been prorogued, and Disraeli, hereafter, will relinquish its leadership, retiring from active life, in fact, and being raised to the peerage as Viscount Beaconsfield and Baron Disraeli. His career has been a brilliant and remarkable one, and whether he is liked or disliked his retirement will be attended by the regret which is inevitable at beholding the decay of the active powers of a really great man.

Servia is looking her reverses steadily in the face, and appears determined to continue the conflict, although she would probably be glad to accept peace, if permitted by Turkey to resume her condition prior to the war. The Turks have not yet succeeded in penetrating far within Serbian territory, and upon several attempts to advance have been repulsed with considerable loss. The Montenegrins have again defeated a portion of the Turkish force in Herzegovina, are investing Trebinje, or Trebigne, and, it is reported, intend to invade Albania. Russia continues to manifest sympathy for Serbia, Russian officers and nurses being plentiful in Belgrade, a Serbian loan having been readily taken up by the Russian people, and the Czar promising to stand as godfather by proxy to the newly-born son of Prince Milan.

Communications.

SIDING WITH THE OPPRESSOR.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:

My Dear Sir,—At this late day, I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of THE INDEX circular, entitled "Centennial Congress of Liberals," and to thank you in behalf of many friends for your untiring efforts in the cause.

The movement for a meeting of Liberals at the Centennial is a good one, and one that the needs of the time demand, and should receive the cooperation of all liberal-minded people.

THE INDEX is doing a glorious work that will last throughout all time. Long may it live, and continue to break down the barriers to progression that are reared by bigotry and superstition, whose blighting effects are seen and felt on every hand!

The meeting of Liberals in Philadelphia will no doubt result in great good. It will tend to organize and consolidate the liberal sentiment of the country, and the friends of freedom will better understand their real strength. There is certainly need of organization, or something whereby the Liberals may know their power. At present, they are like a great, disorganized army, scattered all over the country, from which there could scarcely be gathered a corporal's guard. We all know that the liberal sentiment is powerful, and embraces the finest intellects of the age; yet for lack of organization it does not wield the influence it might. For instance, no liberal journal, however ably it is edited, receives the support it deserves, simply for the reason that there is no system of organization among those who are anxious for the advancement of progressive ideas. The success of the evangelical church is owing to its thorough organization. Surely the Liberals can organize without becoming sectarianized! When they make an earnest move in this direction, their organs will not succumb for want of means, and a Paine monument can be raised with but little effort, or an edifice can be reared in the interest of freethought quite as readily as an Orthodox church can be built now. Whenever the Liberal movement becomes systematized, there will be a more rapid growth of liberal sentiment, for the very reason that it will become more popular and influential.

My dear sir, laying the question of organization aside for the present, upon which there has been so much controversy, there is another question to which I wish to call your attention before I close,—the question of finance, the great question of the day, that is attracting more attention than any other that is now before the American people. Many readers of THE INDEX are astonished at the position it seems to occupy on this question. On this great issue, you seem to have taken sides with the oppressors against the oppressed, which is certainly a very strange position for Francis E. Abbot to occupy, in the estimation of those who have regarded him as a champion of justice and right. I have read letters in THE INDEX from some of its patrons, in which their views in reference to this matter were set forth; but if all who regret your course have written, you must think your regretful friends are numerous.

We all know that the question of finance in any form was a subject entirely outside of your former line of thought and duty, and consequently we can make great allowance for your seeming indifference to this question that has assumed such gigantic proportions. We are glad to think that, so far as you have committed yourself, you have been unconsciously governed by the money power that rules the great Eastern dailies and Wall Street organs with an iron will, giving tone and color to public opinion, irrespective of the views of the people. We cannot believe that you have spoken from earnest convictions, formed by thorough investigation into the present atrocious system of finance, that has reduced thousands of honest, industrious people to the very verge of starvation, and driven hundreds of others to the insane asylum or a suicide's grave.

On one side of this great financial issue are to be found the masses, the wronged and suffering people; while on the other side are the monopolists and ring-brokers, whose corruptions and rascality have disgraced our national capital, and so demoralized the Republican party that it is no longer fit to rule the land.

Yours for justice and progression,

S. M. CARROLL.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, July 3.

[We do not understand the exact nature of the wrong so vigorously yet so kindly charged upon us; the indictment is not clear as to its meaning. But it is proper to state that we always express our own views alone, and speak only for what we believe to be just, honest, and true. If we make mistakes sometimes, that is the common lot of man; and we are always ready to give the fairest hearing to those who oppose anything we have said. When it is made plain that we have unconsciously sided with oppression, we shall not be slow to change our position.—Ed.]

SILVER AS LEGAL TENDER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

In THE INDEX of August 3d is the following: "Some recent votes seem to prove that a majority of the House of Representatives are willing to vote in favor of making silver, as valued in 1861, a legal tender for all purposes, and in any amount. It has been discovered that some, at least, of the bonds of the United States declare that they are payable in coin; gold of course was understood, but is not specified; and some persons, it is said, who were shocked at the suggestion of paying them in greenbacks, are actually in favor of taking advantage of this omission, and paying them in a currency of less value than the greenback. The dishonor as well as the dishonesty of this proceeding must be apparent to all simple-minded people whose moral principles remain undisturbed by recent Congressional speeches or the teachings of Professor Seelye; and in addition to dishonor, the commercial difficulties that would ensue, when our gold had fled the country, and we had been swamped with the surplus silver of the world, present a horrible prospect for a sane man who knows anything of the facts of history."

When our public debt was created, the legal tender money of this country, as everybody knew, consisted of two metals, at the rate of 371.25 grains of one (pure metal) and 23.22 grains of the other, to the dollar.

In 1873, without the knowledge of the people, and, it is safe to say, without the knowledge of very many of the members of either House of Congress, through the adoption of the Revised Statutes, one of these metals was dropped out of use as money.

Now the value of money is determined by its quantity as compared with commodities, and the transactions performed by its use.

If one metal, therefore, is taken away—the other not being increased in quantity,—its value will necessarily be enhanced. Take the public debts of the world, which are not much less than twenty thousand millions, and then throughout the world demonetize silver, that is, take away the most abundant of the two metals in use as money, and the entire indebtedness of the world would be more than doubled by the elevation of the standard that measures them.

Suppose, instead of being payable in silver at the rate of 371½ grains, or gold at the rate of 23.22 grains to the dollar, our debt had been made payable in cotton at ten cents a pound or wool at fifty cents, and it was found that we could produce cotton at ten cents per pound more easily than wool at fifty cents, and should propose to pay more of the debt in cotton than in wool, could the creditor come in and claim that because wool was the more valuable, we should pay in wool alone,—should, indeed, give up the cotton and induce other people also to give it up, and use wool only, so that the commodity he received should be vastly increased in value? Would THE INDEX join the clamor of the creditor, and say of those who should insist upon payment according to the contract that—"The dishonor as well as the dishonesty of this proceeding must be apparent to all simple-minded people"?

Those people must be very simple-minded indeed to whom such a proceeding would appear dishonest.

The tone of the religious press of the country in upholding the policy of changing the value of money, by appreciating it, to the great wrong of all debtors, is inexplicable, and if not done so blindly might justly be characterized as shameful. It reminds one of the tone of the same press generally, twenty-five years ago, on the slavery question.

The terrible consequences that are to follow when "gold has fled the country," and we are "swamped" with silver, is good imagination, but not so good political economy.

A. J. W.

MARIETTA, O., Aug. 5, 1876.

"TENDERNESS OF HARD THEOLOGY."

This is the title of an article written by Professor George N. Boardman, and printed in the Independent a year or two since. The following quotation from an advocate of the dogma of limited atonement, written a hundred years ago, is adduced in evidence of the "tenderness" which Professor Boardman claims for what he very justly denominates "hard theology": "Why are Calvin's notions gloomy? Is it gloomy to believe that the greater part of the human race are made for endless happiness? There can, I think, be no reasonable doubt of the salvation of very young persons. If, as some who have versed themselves in this sort of speculations affirm, about one half of mankind die in infancy; and if, as indubitable evidence proves, a very considerable portion of the remaining half die in childhood; and if, as there is the strongest reason to think, many millions of those who live to maturer years in every successive generation have their names written in the Book of Life,—what a small portion, comparatively, of the human species falls under the decree of preterition or non-redemption."

What "tenderness" is here indeed! The author, having proved to his own satisfaction that the greater part of the human family are to enjoy "eternal happiness," thinks that there is nothing "gloomy" in the fact that the large portion of the human family not embraced in his "many millions in each successive generation" are to endure eternal misery. This is as though, having five brothers, four of whom had escaped from a burning building, he should illustrate his tenderness by shouting hallelujahs over the four who were saved, and feeling no throbs of pity at the agonizing cries of the fifth perishing in the flames. What a sublime conception of the personal God whom he worships does this writer display! How the noble soul is moved to bow in adoring reverence before the Almighty Being whose best plan for saving his sentient creatures is to kill them off in infancy! Past human conception is the "ineffable glory" of that "plan of salvation" which involves all the sorrow of this great fact of death in infancy for half the human race! Away with such gross irreverence! Let us know that premature death is unnatural, not natural, the consequence of violating Nature's laws, not the result of a Divine decree.

That a man of thought and erudition should quote with approval such a passage as this, or that he should fail to detect the wretched want of "tenderness" in all systems of "hard theology," is another illustration of how those who are bound in the vale of superstition by the chains of creed, and shrouded in the mist and fog of an "infallible authority," can only see as "through a glass, darkly." O Religion, Religion, how many crimes against reason are committed in thy name!

B. F. HUGHES.

PHILADELPHIA.

CHRISTIAN MORALITY.

EDITOR INDEX:—

The subject of which I wish to treat has sufficient magnitude for volumes, but I intend extreme brevity. I have always been on the liberal side or in opposition to Orthodox Christianity, and have been badly worsted in argument by the assumption that Christianity is the parent of all civilization, including arts, sciences, manufactures, and especially education for the common people and Christian morality; which all well-informed persons know is not true, but which, so far as my knowledge extends, is generally believed by the uncultured. A neighbor of mine remarked to me that he did not wish to unite himself with a church, but he wished to practise Christian morality. I asked him for his definition of Christian morality. He replied, "To live a sober, industrious, orderly life, and do as I would be done by."

This is the popular idea that gives the Orthodox Church more power than all other causes combined. The belief that there is no morality excepting what Jesus invented, and that the Bible is the only original exponent of morals, monopolizes the whole field, and leaves all liberals or infidels with the vile, supposed to be as immoral as they.

But the opposite is the fact. Christians as such have no more morality than have Free Masons, or Odd Fellows. Each class has its own code; so have Buddhists, Pagans, Mohammedans, and every other sect. The world has already suffered intensely from the effect of arbitrary codes of morality, much of which is superstition, though it may be called Christian. We seldom find the word morality used by the religious press without the prefix "Christian": a fact which all liberals should note and rebuke on all suitable occasions. True morality is living or acting in harmony with Nature's laws, of whatever description they may be. Christians have condemned astronomy, geology, and almost every other revelation of Nature's laws since the Christian Era. This cry of "Christian Morality" is raised for effect, and the wonder with me is that the liberal press says not a word in rebuke.

Yours truly,
MONTPELIER, Ind.

WILLIAM ALLEN.

THE FATE IN STORE.

"Our patriot fathers were Christian men. They were followers of the meek and lowly Jesus," said the chaplain of Auburn Prison, at our village celebration. A man in the crowd remarked to those near him that he had never heard before that Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, and Paine were so remarkably pious. What a comfort it is to reflect that men like F. E. Abbot or B. F. Underwood, should they render the country service, will be consigned to the affectionate remembrance of posterity as eminent Christians of the most approved pattern!

E. M.

SOME NEGROES were listening to one of their color, as he read to them the proceedings of the Legislature from the Constitution yesterday. When he got down to the bill "to protect and preserve unimpaired the right of trial by jury," old Si spoke up and said:—

"What's dat mean? Who's agwine to hurt de jury?"

"Dat means a heap, I'm a tallin' yer! Dat's a good thing!" replied Pete.

"Splane it, den! Whar's de neessaryness fur it?" urged Si.

"W'y, dis way," said Pete. "Dar's a gemman down dar at de depo' what was on de jury de odder day, an' I hear him tellin' how dat he didn't want ter 'gree wid de rest ob 'em, when a big feller came up and tole him ef he didn't 'gree in 'bout two secons' dat he bust him wide open! what you tink ob dat?"

The bill then received unanimous approval.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

A HATER OF TOBACCO asked an old negro woman, the fumes of whose pipe were annoying to him, if she thought she was a Christian. "Yes, brudder, I spects I is." "Do you believe in the Bible?" "Yes, brudder." "Do you know that there is a passage in the Scriptures which says that nothing unclean shall enter the kingdom of heaven?" "Yes, I've heard of it." "Well, Chloe, you smoke, and you cannot enter the kingdom of heaven, because there is nothing so unclean as the breath of a smoker. What do you say to that?" "Why, I spects to leave my breff behind when I go dar."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " " 5 " "
 " 52 " " " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory results—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers. Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEPHENS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1871, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, O. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. O. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keeshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. O. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISE M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	2.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	3.00
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Legend of the Blue Bird.....	2.25
The World-Friend.....	2.25
The Tail Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	1.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLIE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 5 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Letter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 3 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.50
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	2.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (JEANUS POWELL). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.50
Historical Pictures Etched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I. "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	1.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	1.50
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 1 vol., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUNING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 3 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising— Adam Bede.....	1.00
Romola.....	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.....	1.00
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	1.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.00
Essays. Second Series.....	2.00
Miscellaneous.....	2.00
Representative Men.....	2.00
English Traits.....	2.00
Conduct of Life.....	2.00
Poems. With Portrait.....	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.....	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Prose Works. 3 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	2.00
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Albanese Oquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gottfried Eppstein. Learning. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARBER'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	1.50
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	5.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	5.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 3 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Eleventh Edition.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	2.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Entomias of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	1.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	1.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	1.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	1.50
The Marble Faun.....	1.50
The English Note-Books.....	1.50
The American Note-Books.....	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Madison: An Old Port Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeelings.....	1.75
Studies for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopse the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection" and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Amusement, or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with Dissections on Aeronautes. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.50
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Begius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Verses, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LEOKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustine to Charlemagne. 3 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.50
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 3 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 4 vols.....	1.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	2.00
LEWES (S. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. E.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. G.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Conditions of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.50
Pre-historic Times.....	8.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Elements of Geology.....	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MAHN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	2.50
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1868.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 1 vol. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversation of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 1 vol., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIM). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	2.50
On the Science of Language. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.). Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Eskoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organisation of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	1.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic American—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Kidnapping of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Tragic Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hogged in.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.50
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.50

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours; the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	1.50
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., F.G.S., F.G.S., F.G.S.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral and Physical.....	1.50
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.00
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Ethics. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	1.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	6.00
STOWE (HARRIET BECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.50
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Class-Room Taines. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Taine.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.15
TRACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.50
Vanity Fair.....	1.50
The Newcomes.....	1.50
Adventures of Philip Fendennis.....	1.50
The Virginians.....	1.50
Remond, and Lovel the Widower. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Deeds Dural, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unpublished Pieces.....	1.50
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	1.50
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.50
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.50
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	1.50
Light and Electricity.....	2.50
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.50
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.50
On Sound.....	2.50
Radiant Heat.....	2.50
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TITLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	2.50
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.50
Shantings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	2.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldsworthy's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Fairs.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 3 vols.....	6.00
Child Life.....	2.50

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
 2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
 3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
 4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
 5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
- This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of religious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,.....	15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,.....	40
FIFTY ".....	78
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.58
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THREE ESSAYS ON RELIGION.
By JOHN STUART MILL, is now for sale at this office. Price—Two dollars and fifty cts. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

THE

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)....	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....	5.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author) ...	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ARBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

- TRAOTS.
- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
 - II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
 - III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
 - IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
Nos. II, III, IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.
 - V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
 - REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)
 - RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
 - PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. E. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; four for $1.00.
 - FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. E. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 106 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

HISTORY OF THE CONFLICT

Religion and Science,

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER. For sale at this office. Price—One dollar and seventy-five cents. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.

Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES, and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,
787 Washington St., Boston.

PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEWISSTOWN ST., San Francisco.

THE FIRST WEEK IN AUGUST.

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

A JOURNAL OF DAILY LIFE.

Edited by GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

The Secular Review is a new Journal of new subjects; and of familiar subjects treated in a fresh way. It will seek to recast old forms of propaganda which now exhaust earnestness without producing the fruit of advancement. In Education, it will show that secular principle implies separation of instruction, and not conflict with religious conviction. In Cooperation, that new force of industry which attains competency without mendacity, and effaces inequality by equalizing fortunes (which has now no organ in London), The Secular Review will advocate the re-institution of Labor Exchanges—killed by their success forty years ago, and more than ever useful now to thousands to whom other forms of Cooperation are unknown, irksome, or inapplicable. In Politics, The Secular Review will contend for Radical ascendancy on the open plain of principle, and not dodge for progress by capricious or spite-born alliances with its enemies. In Religion, Secularism substitutes the piety of usefulness for the barren doctrine of the usefulness of piety—maintaining always that there is not, and never was, any real antagonism between the sincerity of Free Thought and the only permanent form of religion—the Religion of Duty. The auxiliary, not the rival, of any similar Journal, The Secular Review will be a fighting paper, attacking error, without assailing personally those who hold it, not discerning it to be such. It will regard the adversary, not as an enemy, but as a friend, aiding in the search after truth. Afraid of no topic, The Secular Review will see in the boldest speculation but the hand of Intellect, adventurously feeling for Reality in the dark. This Journal will mainly represent Constructive Free Thought, helping to convert the fifty-two Sundays of the year into the Wise Days, instead of as now, the Dead Days, of the working people; and in all things give primary attention to the material improvement of This Life. For readers, The Secular Review will look among those men and women who know how to be daring without being irreverent, fearless without being careless, and unconventional without being foolish. Weekly, one penny; Yearly, 6s. 6d. Address, E. TRUELOVE, 256 High Holborn, London W.C., England.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE; to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared. Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President
R. H. BANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 31, 1876.

WHOLE No. 349.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

LAST SUNDAY, the thirty-eighth anniversary of the liberation of Abner Kneeland from the Boston jail, where he had been confined sixty days for "blasphemy," was celebrated at Investigator Hall, in the Paine Memorial Building. Mr. Seaver delivered the opening address.

FOR THE INSTRUCTION of those shallow observers of the time who think the school question is merely got up as a "good political cry," we reprint this week three late extracts from the Tribune on the educational question in England, France, and this country. The school is to be the great battle-field for the decision of a controversy infinitely more important, with respect to the permanence and magnitude of the interests involved, than whether Hayes or Tilden is to be the next President of the United States. We are by no means indifferent to the issues involved in this latter question; but the issue involved in the former is whether American institutions are to be healthfully developed or to fall into gradual decay and death.

MR. WILLIAM LITTLE, of Manchester, New Hampshire, who represents that State on the Executive Committee of the National Liberal League, is a member of the Manchester School Board, and has more than once made a spirited attempt to secure the discontinuance of Bible-reading in the public schools. The Mirror and American of August 19, reports a meeting of the Board at which a disgraceful attempt was made to cut off free discussion on this subject. Mr. Hall declared that "he did not wish to discuss the question, and that the people did not wish it discussed." The result was an adjournment of the Board. We hope the matter will not be allowed to rest. Mr. Little commands our admiration by his pluck and persistency, and we hope yet to record the triumph of his just cause.

THE RIVALRIES among the great Evangelical sects are yielding to the demands of self-interest, and consolidation is the order of the day. The Tribune of August 24 publishes the joint announcement of the two Boards of Commissioners, appointed by the "Methodist Episcopal Church" (North) and the "Methodist Episcopal Church South" that the breach between these two immense organizations is healed, and that they will henceforth be one. This the Orthodox Tribune styles "the crowning religious event of the Centennial year." What does it portend for the liberals? Exactly what the junction between Gen. Crook and Gen. Terry portends for Sitting Bull. The Church Militant knows enough to learn the art of scientific warfare—concentration and victory; the liberals still practise the method of savages—isolation and defeat. In this the Church shows the superior brains; and brains win in this world.

HERE IS AN amusing case of litigation: "Judge and jury have been worrying over a dog-case in Memphis, Tenn. Nothing could have been simpler than the issue of fact. A negro stole a Newfoundland dog; but the law in regard to property in dogs always has been past finding out. The prisoner's counsel argued that, under the common law, dog-stealing was not a crime or an indictable offence, and that no statute exists in Tennessee making dog-stealing a punishable offence, such as larceny. Judge Adams held that the stealing of a dog was not a larceny or an indictable offence, and that the demurrer of the defendant to the indictment on this ground was good. The Attorney-General then raised the point that the collar on the dog was personal property, and the defendant could be held to answer for theft; but the adroit attorney on the other side retorted that the negro took the dog, and that it was the dog, and not the negro, that was responsible for the collar. The prisoner was finally discharged. Now, the old question comes up, If a dog is not property, is the dog-tax constitutional?" Why did not the Attorney-General concede at once to the "adroit attorney on the other side" that the dog was indeed responsible for the collar; that the dog and this responsibility were absolutely inseparable; that, when the negro took the dog, he also "took the responsibility" which was inseparable from the dog; and that therefore the negro was "responsible for the collar"? Why don't they appoint a more quick-witted Attorney-General in Memphis?

THE NEW YORK STATE Republican Convention adopted a platform at Saratoga, on August 23, which declared that "the Democratic party is false on the question of the safety of the schools, for the solid Democratic vote in the United States Senate defeated an adequate amendment to protect the school system from sectarian attack." Is the Republican party about to take up that Protestant Evangelical amendment, Bible clause and all, as a party measure? If so, we can promise the Republican party the loss of every liberal voter who comprehends the perilous situation. The Democrats in the Senate doubtless voted as they did to conciliate the Catholics; and the Republicans, doubtless, to conciliate the Protestants. Neither party regards the Liberals, because they are unorganized. But the Democrats voted right on that amendment, saving the country from inconceivable disaster at least for a while; and the Republicans voted wrong. Our advice to every man who prizes his religious liberty, and knows that it depends on completing the separation of Church and State, is to watch the two great parties keenly as to the attitude they take towards that Bible-worshipping amendment, and to vote against any party which favors it. We know the great importance of the issues confusedly involved in the Presidential election of this autumn; but we cast no vote for any party which strikes a deadly blow at the very heart of the Constitution. Put the above declaration of the New York Republicans side by side with the passage we quote in this week's editorial from the Christian Statesman: note their sympathetic joy in this "adequate amendment." Is THE INDEX alone to raise an indignant voice against the half-cunning, half-stupid assassination of the Constitution? Is nobody else astute enough to see that this "adequate amendment" is nothing but the Christian Amendment behind a mask? Then may the great god Luck save the liberties of the American people; for it has not wit enough to save its own!

The Index.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 7, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Con-
tributors.

F. E. A. ANNUAL REPORT.

The report of the annual meeting of the Free Religious Association for 1876 is published in pamphlet form.

It contains a full abstract of the discussion at the business meeting; the annual report of the executive committee; address by the president, O. B. Frothingham; essay, by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; also essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches;" with the addresses that followed it, by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss.

Price, single copy, 40 cents; package of three, $1; postage paid. Address Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

W. J. POTTER, Secretary.

SAYS THE New York Sun, referring to former statements it had made on the school question: "The little cloud, at that time not bigger than a man's hand, now begins to cast its dark and threatening shadow over the land." THE INDEX pointed out this cloud when it was not so big as a man's finger, and is still supposed by some to have invented the cloud altogether. They think there is "not going to be much of a shower."

THE FINANCIAL LOSS in which the bigoted Sabbatarianism of the United States Centennial Commission has involved the country ought to be well understood. It costs something to be fanatical in this case; the gross receipts have been diminished one-seventh at least, probably one fourth, by shutting the Exhibition to the common people on Sundays. Says the New York Sun: "The Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia is half over, and the total receipts so far fail to reach one million dollars. The capital invested in the enterprise is $8,500,000. The running expenses for the one hundred and fifty-nine days are estimated by competent judges to be about $1,500,000. Therefore, to pay for itself and return the money advanced by the Government and by private subscribers to the stock, the gross receipts must be $10,000,000. In other words, the daily attendance during the remaining half of the Exhibition must be nine times as great as it was during the first half. We do not know how to express our admiration for the hopeful cheerfulness with which our Philadelphia friends continue to speak of the enterprise as a financial success."

THE FOLLOWING paragraph from the Sun respecting Mr. Kerr, the late Speaker of the House of Representatives, may be of interest: "In religious matters Mr. Kerr was a liberal thinker. He might be said to have been a rationalist, accepting nothing which did not bear the impress of probability. Without admitting the divinity of Jesus Christ, he was an advocate of his code of morals. To be honest and true and just was in his belief to be a good Christian. A short time before his death he was visited by Rev. Mr. Harris, president of the female seminary at Staunton, who, with a view to sounding him as to his religious views, asked, 'I hope you are prepared for a better life hereafter, Mr. Kerr?' The reply was a prompt inclination of the head in the affirmative. Again the minister asked, 'I trust you have a firm faith in the merits of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ?' After a moment's hesitation in which he seemed to be carefully weighing the question, Mr. Kerr shook his head slowly. Finding that Speaker Kerr could not carry on a conversation, Mr. Harris promised to pray for him, to which Mr. Kerr whispered, 'I thank you.' To Mr. Cox's inquiry whether he was content to die, he nodded a tranquil assent."

NOTICE.

On receipt of $3.20, THE INDEX will be sent to any name not already on its mail-list, from the present time until January 1, 1878. This is an excellent opportunity for friends of the paper to increase its circulation among their acquaintances; and it is hoped that they will not neglect to render in this way some greatly-needed assistance to the important cause it represents.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

It is high time to look sharply at the record of the Republican party with reference to the school question, to the end that their probable action next winter, in case they carry the November election, may be comprehended by the really liberal voters of the United States. We wish to be distinctly understood: by "really liberal voters" we mean those who will vote, under any and all circumstances, for secular schools in a secular State—for the prohibition of all Bible-reading and religious worship by song or prayer in schools sustained by general taxation. All other voters are illiberal and sectarian, since they would give to Evangelical Protestants or to Catholics an unjust superiority in civil affairs over Jews, free-thinkers, and all non-Christians, whose equal rights they would thus unhesitatingly trample under foot.

This school issue is of supreme importance in the eyes of every long-headed citizen who can discern the ultimate results of such a vicious public policy, and will determine the November votes of thousands. An intelligent physician in Maine writes to us thus under date of August 30:—

"The liberals should organize in such a manner as to constitute a corps de reserve, and determine to cast their votes only for the candidates of either party that will promise to advocate impartial justice to all classes, and to vote for no man that is in favor of special privileges to any class, sect, or opinion. The liberals are supposed to be too weak to cause their rights to be respected; but let them show that a few votes in a town throughout the whole country may decide an election, and we shall see a change. The Democrats in the Senate voted in favor of the Catholic interest because the Papists are their constituents. I never carried a Democratic vote in my life, but will hereafter vote for no Republican that will not advocate a secular amendment or leave the Constitution as it is."

That subscriber has a clear head and a brave heart, and gives advice which we commend to the most serious consideration of our readers. Another wrote to us thus from Connecticut on the very same day:—

"I have stolen the thunder from your editorial on 'The Defeated Amendment,' and written an article to be published in our village paper. The editor has promised to print it next week, as I desired."

Let every liberal who is in earnest in this momentous cause do something as practical and wise on its behalf!

Now we have always voted the Republican ticket, though we have freely "scratched" it as we pleased. On the financial, the civil service, and the Southern questions, we still sympathize with the Republican party in the main; but we mean to scrutinize its position most keenly on the school issue, and shall refuse to vote for Hayes and Wheeler, unless convinced that the Republican party will prove sound on that. And the signs so far are not favorable to an expectation of such soundness.

1. The seventh plank of the platform adopted by the National Republican Convention at Cincinnati, on June 15, was as follows:—

"The public school system of the several States is the bulwark of the American Republic; and with a view to its security and permanence we recommend an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, forbidding the application of any public funds or property for the benefit of any school or institution under sectarian control. [Great cheering, continuing several minutes.]"

For "sectarian" read "Catholic," and you probably have the full meaning of that ambiguous seventh plank, which is so worded as to catch (if possible) the Evangelical and the Liberal votes at the same time. We do not propose to take a ride on any elephant whose trunk cannot be distinguished from its tail. We intend to know in which direction the animal is to move, before we take our seat on its back.

2. The New York State Republican Convention declared at Saratoga, on August 23, that "the Democratic party is false on the question of the safety of the schools, for the solid Democratic vote in the United States Senate defeated an adequate amendment to protect the school system from sectarian attack."

Mark that word adequate—do not forget it! An "adequate amendment," forsooth, which covertly recognizes the DIVINE AUTHORITY OF THE BIBLE, and thus overthrows the grand secularism of the United States Constitution, by which alone your religious liberty is guaranteed and protected, in order to give to the Orthodox Protestant party supreme and permanent control of the whole public school system!

3. In the Ohio campaign of 1875, Governor Hayes, now the candidate of the Republican party for President of the United States, made this emphatic declaration in a public speech:—

"The State must support or 'encourage schools,' and schools are manifestly a means to promote a more important end. That end is 'religion, morality, and knowledge' (as declared in the great fundamental law for the North-Western Territory, enacted by Congress in 1787), the equivalent of 'good government.' Now the proposition to banish the Bible from the schools is a blow at this end—really discards the end, so far as 'religion and morality' are concerned, while the means—the schools—are maintained. It is idle to urge that there will be 'religion and morality' without the Bible. That was not the intention of the original parties to the compact. They understood too well the true foundation of the State. They were skilled workmen, and fresh from similar tasks. They intended that personal and property rights should be secured and made forever safe by the great triangular basis laid down in the Ordinance.

"As a citizen, I have a right to insist that that basis and pledge shall be respected and preserved. All that is asked is that the Bible may be read in the schools. It can and will explain its own precepts. Comment is not needed to make it the standard and umpire of the popular conscience. To drive it out of the school-house is a stigma and an insult.

"What is the witness-stand, the jury-room, or the judicial bench worth without the sanction of the Bible operating on the public conscience? Degrade the book as unfit for our children to read in school, and its AUTHORITY over the conscience is gone. This destroys the very foundations so carefully laid—the ORGANIC LAW. A single generation thus trained will be enough to accomplish that result. As a citizen, I demand a faithful observance and respect for the organic principles which gave the State of Ohio her birth. If these principles don't suit other people, let them remain East of the Ohio River, or 'go West.' They knew what our organic law was before they came here—or might have known it upon proper inquiry. I don't propose to have them undermine the foundations and pull the house down around our ears without at least a protest."

To those liberals who see no danger at all in permitting the defeated Constitutional amendment of the Senate to be revived and adopted next winter, we put this one pertinent question: if Governor Hayes could conjure all this Orthodox and anti-republican doctrine out of the vague and abstract word "religion," as used in the Ordinance of 1787, how much more of the same sort, and worse, would not his party conjure out of the definite and concrete word "Bible," if used in the Constitution of the United States? You perceive that, if you give the inch, Governor Hayes is swift to seize the ell. And he is the elected representative of the Republican party! Are we so "childlike and bland" as to let the word "Bible" into the Constitution, and then trust our religious liberties and rights to such interpreters as these? If the bare word "religion" can be puffed out into an explicit and solemn ordinance that "good government" is impossible without Bible-reading in the public schools—that the "authority" of the Bible is the "very foundation" of the "organic law"—that "morality" is destroyed, if the Bible is not legally made the "standard and umpire of the popular conscience,"—can you not see that the word "Bible," if once permitted to be smuggled into the Constitution, will be construed to ordain the entire creed of Evangelical Protestantism? Do you not see that the Senate amendment, with its artful and sinister Bible-clause, was the Christian Amendment itself in a cunning disguise? And yet here is Governor Hayes all ready to help make it an irrevocable part of the Constitution! For in the light of the above extract must we read this passage in his letter of acceptance:—

"The resolution with respect to the public school system [i. e., the seventh plank of the Cincinnati platform] is one which should receive the hearty support of the American people. Agitation upon this subject is to be apprehended until by Constitutional amendment the schools are placed at bay [sic], and all danger of sectarian control or interference is passed. The Republican party is pledged to secure such an amendment."

That is, pledged to a Bible amendment!

4. The Hon. William A. Wheeler, candidate of the Republican party for Vice-President of the United States, delivered a public speech at St. Albans, Ver-ment, on August 25, in which he made the following startling avowal:—

"Republicans of St. Albans, you honor the cause of which I am just now a prominent representative. I was placed in nomination as the Republican nominee for Vice-President, in the National Convention, by the action of the States of Vermont and Massachusetts. It is the greatest honor of my life that the Republicans of these States deem me sufficiently grounded in the New England faith to be one of the representatives of their ideas in the pending canvass. [Applause.] In the matter of my faith they have made no mistake. [Applause.] I believe in New England, I believe in Plymouth Rock, for they are convertible terms. One of the most gifted of New England women has said that Plymouth Rock is no quartz; it is a perfect stone cut out of the mountain without hands, and hands cannot prevent it from becoming a great mountain, filling the whole earth. Every church, every school-house, every town-house, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, has Plymouth Rock for its foundation stone. Wherever freedom aims a musket, or raises a standard, or sings a song, or makes a protest, there is Plymouth Rock. Freedom, the Church, the school house, the town-house—these, my friends, form the very cardinal principles of the Republican party."

The "Church," then, is one of the "very cardinal principles of the Republican party"! And it is this party's candidate for the Vice-Presidency who deliberately avows it, in a careful electioneering speech!

Ponder all these things long and well, you who perceive the multiplying and ominous signs that the Republican party is identifying itself with ORTHODOX CHRISTIANITY IN POLITICS, and who know that "the end of these things is death" to all religious liberty. Do not rashly rush to the Democratic party; that would be leaping out of the frying-pan into the fire. Distrust both parties, and make it known in every way that, come what may, you will cast your votes for no candidate for any office who is wavering or treacherous in his support of the secular principle of EQUAL RIGHTS IN RELIGION FOR ALL. Politicians may say what they please: this principle, now incarnated in the Constitution, soon to be assailed and perhaps murdered in the house of its pretended friends, is in the utmost peril at this very moment, and must be saved from the politicians first of all. If lost by your apathy, or your timidity, or your selfishness, how can you complain when you find yourselves the first to suffer, to be despised, to be insolently trampled under foot? If there is any manhood in the liberal element of this country, any pride or courage or heroism or self-respect, it must speedily assert itself; it must speedily organize itself all over the land.

For one, we are resolved to cast a "conscience vote" next November; for the crisis is not "coming"—IT IS HERE!

A LETTER FROM MR. UNDERWOOD.

The subjoined letter is commended to the attention of all who have watched the signs of the times closely enough to perceive the imminent danger of such Congressional legislation next winter as will destroy the religious neutrality of the United States Constitution, and practically betray the government into Evangelical propaganda. The advice of Mr. Underwood is given by one who has travelled extensively over the whole country, has achieved a most remarkable success as a lecturer on behalf of liberal principles, and is qualified to understand the present crisis better, probably, than any other in the field. We wish him abundant success in his great work of arousing the freedom-lovers of the United States to a thorough comprehension of this crisis and to the combined action which it requires; and we invite special attention to his announcement on our last page.

THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EDITOR INDEX:—

I hope your earnest appeals to the liberals of the country in behalf of the National Liberal League will not be allowed to pass unheeded. Its principles are reasonable and just; the work it aims to accomplish is thoroughly practical; its influence is greatly needed to resist ecclesiastical encroachments and to make complete the separation of Church and State by putting our whole political system on a purely secular basis. There is nothing narrow or sectarian about it. The movement has not been inaugurated for the dissemination of any religious doctrine or philosophical speculations, but rather for the protection of all—Christians and non-Christians, spiritualists and materialists, theists and atheists—in the enjoyment and advocacy of their respective beliefs, without favoritism or persecution in any form whatever from the State. No person, in joining the League, is expected to give up the advocacy of his religious views, whatever they are; he is required simply to use his influence for the removal of all disabilities on account of opinions, the abrogation of all laws that discriminate in favor of or against any particular religious beliefs, and for the encouragement of such measures as are needed to secure to all their equal rights and impartial religious liberty. He who says this is a narrow movement, if he be sincere, must be an ignoramus whose influence on neither one side nor the other can amount to much.

A certain class of liberals there is whose hearty sympathy and vigorous aid, owing to an inefficient temperament and negative character, can hardly be expected. There is also another class which we shall have to excuse on the ground that it lives almost wholly in the world of speculation and abstraction, and has a constitutional inaptitude to project itself out upon the field of active effort. But to those liberals who delight to act as well as to think, whose positive nature and strong sympathy with humanity inspire them with confidence that by their efforts they can make the world better than they found it, who recognize among the reforms of the day the importance of the one the National Liberal League has been organized to advance, and have the disinterestedness to render aid to a noble movement without the expectation of pay in dollars and cents,—to such liberals we must look for encouragement and coöperation in the accomplishment of this work. Let liberals contribute to the movement by pen and voice and by money. Let them organize Liberal Leagues in every city and town where it is possible. There ought to be five hundred Liberal Leagues represented at the next Congress of the National Liberal League.

In a few weeks I shall start out on a lecturing tour through the West, during which I hope, with the assistance of liberal friends, to organize Leagues in all the places I visit. I hope other lecturers will be impressed with the importance of this work.

To you, Mr. Abbot, the movement is largely indebted for the strength and importance it has already acquired, and I am but one of many who feel thankful to you for the great ability and unyielding persistency with which, in spite of apathy and fault-finding from one side, and the cry of "bigot" and "fanatic" from the other, you have presented the "Demands of Liberalism" and urged them upon the attention of the liberal public.

Respectfully, B. F. UNDERWOOD.
THORNDIKE, Mass., Aug. 27, 1876.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

Mr. Wendell Phillips made the first campaign speech of his life last Saturday evening, at Lowell, advocating the election of General Butler as member of Congress and of Hayes for the Presidency. Mr. Phillips waved "the bloody shirt" with considerable vigor, and although he could not help putting in a favorable word for "the rag baby," went so far as to declare that he did not care whether we had a specie basis or a rag baby, "until we find out whether we have our flag assured us forever as an emblem of liberty and freedom." He believes that most of the talk about civil-service reform "is ignorance or knavery"; declares that the national government is as honest as the average of merchants; and would have as few officers as possible who are not elected by the people. Every postmaster, for instance, "should be elected by the men who take their letters from the post-office." "People go for General Butler," he asserts, "because they want honesty, capacity, and courage in public officials." Mr. Phillips' speech might be simply amusing were it not for the fact that it was delivered before the Hayes and Wheeler Club of Lowell, at a meeting presided over by the chairman of the Republican City Committee, in view of which fact we are sure that not a few simple-minded people who have been inclined to vote for Hayes and Wheeler will begin to ask the question, How can a party be trusted to give us honesty in administration, reform in the civil-service, and an early resumption of specie payments, when its authorized representatives countenance and applaud the political tomfooleries of Phillips and Butler? The latter worthy, by the way, made a speech at the same meeting, in which he advised his hearers not to believe anything said against the character of candidates sixty days before election. This piece of advice, coming from the meek and innocent Butler, is enough to make the devil writhe with mortification, for he could never expect to equal it.

Strict Republicans, in some of the Massachusetts districts, are likely to have a hard time this autumn in settling the question of duty, when they vote for members of Congress. In one district, for instance, they are almost sure to be compelled to choose between Butler, a nominal Republican and party candidate, and Tarbox, an able lawyer, a firm Unionist, a rigid hard-money man, and an honest Democrat. In another district, in all probability, the choice will lie between the rhetorical and "silvery" Banks or Mr. Roland G. Usher, a Butler manager, on the one hand, and on the other, that thorough gentleman, scholar, historian, and life-long Democrat, Mr. Richard Frothingham. Plain people who seldom attend caucuses, and party men who believe in the inalienable right to bolt, will have little difficulty in deciding with regard to either of the above cases.

As we are numbered with those who are obliged to read carefully the political news of each day, and will continue to do so until after the next election, we wish the Republican managers would have the kindness to change somewhat their method of conducting the campaign. From Morton, in Indiana, to Wheeler, in Vermont, or to Blaine and Ingersoll, in Maine, we hear nothing but the old story of Democratic wickedness and the other old story of the record of Republican virtues, while between the two stories, or after them, comes a fearful shaking of the bloody shirt. To endure this sort of thing for two months longer seems wellnigh impossible. We beg leave to suggest, therefore, a few new topics,—that Mr. Blaine, for instance, should tell us from what source he finally got the money with which to pay his campaign expenses, when he was so extremely "short" a few years ago; that Mr. Morton should tell us on which side of the financial fence he expects to stand on the 1st of January, 1879; that Professor Seelye should expound the moral principles which allow a trustee to pay over money to those for whom he never held it in trust; that Mr. Banks should tell us in what manner we can best "salute the august majesty of the people," when the people do not happen to want us for a Representative; and that Republican stump speakers in general should tell us the precise meaning of civil-service reform, and the exact relation between a party's platform and the actions of its officials or the opinions of its voters.

The Democrats, as we write, are acting in an amazingly stupid manner with regard to the nomination of a candidate for Governor of New York. The State Convention met, nominated Mr. Horatio Seymour, took a recess of one day in order to allow Mr. Seymour to consider the nomination, and then adjourned with the understanding that he consented to be their candidate. And it now appears that Mr. Seymour not only refused to allow his name to go before the Convention, but that he sent a telegram declining the nomination—which telegram the managers of the Convention suppressed,—and that he will not now accept the nomination, being, in fact, from serious physical illness, prohibited from doing so. It is now generally accepted as a foregone conclusion that the presidential election will be determined by the vote of the State of New York, the electoral votes of all other States being about equally divided between the two candidates. Under the circumstances, the action of the Republicans in refusing to nominate Mr. Evarts was stupid in the extreme; and now the Democrats, by their persistency in sticking to Seymour, as though he were the only straw in reach of a drowning crowd, are putting themselves in a ridiculous attitude, which may effect the loss of all the chances which the Republicans have so freely given them.

Over two hundred clerks have already been discharged from the Departments at Washington, and about five hundred more are to follow them by the 10th of October next. These discharges are said to be made necessary by the reduction in appropriations ordered by the last Congress, and we have no doubt but that the business of the Departments can be carried on as well without as with the former excessive number of clerks. We do not object to the discharge, therefore, but to the manner in which it is made. No allowance is made for age or ability or period of service. Men who are seventy years of age and who have been in continuous service for fifty years are discharged, while young and comparatively inexperienced men who happen to have good political influence behind them are retained. Seven hundred clerks could not be discharged without the infliction of suffering in special cases, but the Republican leaders seem determined to inflict all the hardship possible upon those turned out of office, in order to create, if possible, some political capital for themselves.

Cheering indications of a revival of business appear in the newspapers from day to day, and there is everywhere prevalent a disposition to believe that we have passed over the hardest part of the hard times. Some of our Eastern manufacturers, for instance, appear to have initiated an important and rapidly-growing foreign trade in cotton goods, which they claim to be able to manufacture profitably at a lower price than the same goods can be made for in England or France. Cotton prints have already been sent to South America, to China, and even to England. The mills at Fall River are all or nearly all in brisk operation, and some of them have contracts on hand which cannot be completed before the first of January. The immense Sprague mills in Rhode Island are again in operation. So favorable is the immediate prospect for this especial branch of business that in some places the regular "striker" has already made his appearance and begun operations.

The credit of the United States Government remains remarkably good, notwithstanding the corruption of officials and the efforts of inflationists and "silver" men. The new 4½ per cent. bonds are offered by the Rothschilds in London, at 103½, and are already quoted at a premium, 103½ to 104.

A considerable fall in the price of coal, the probability of which we intimated last week, has already taken place throughout the Eastern States. The several great coal companies have issued a new schedule of prices, and the retail dealers of the large cities have made corresponding reductions. An anticipated strike of the miners did not take place, and it seems probable that low rates for coal will be the rule throughout the coming winter. Everybody (with the exception at present of those who have suffered loss by shrinkage in the price of mining and railroad stock) must rejoice that the natural law of supply and demand will have greater opportunity hereafter to regulate the price of a necessary commodity which has been so long controlled by a combination of capitalists.

The case of Pomeroy—the boy-murderer of Massachusetts, who, without provocation, tortured to death several small children—has been decided by the Governor, who, by advice of his Council (the vote being 5 to 3), commutes his punishment to imprisonment for life. The boy is undoubtedly a psychological curiosity. He murdered his victims from a pure love of cruelty so abnormal as to suggest insanity, and yet, aside from this horrible and apparently ineradicable taste, he exhibits not the least symptom of insanity. Since his confinement he has made no less than four ingenious efforts to escape, two of which, at least, if successful, would have involved the death of a keeper. His keepers, in fact, are said to have been so afraid of him that they had resolved, in case of a new attempt at escape, to shoot him at sight if he offered the least resistance. He will now be removed to the State Prison and placed in solitary confinement.

Mr. Beecher's lawyers, in the case of Moulton against Beecher, have moved for a change of venue, asserting the impossibility of selecting an impartial jury of intelligent men in the city of Brooklyn, and desiring, therefore, to have the case removed to one of the northern counties of the State, Franklin County being preferred. Mr. Moulton's lawyers, in reply, are willing, we believe, to have the case removed from Brooklyn, but do not desire to have it carried farther than the neighboring city of New York. The decision has not yet been announced.

The Turks, having got their hands in, now depose Sultans with all the facility with which our politicians "bounce" department clerks and revenue collectors. The weak and sickly Murad, not dying as soon as was expected, has been deposed, and Hamid II. now reigns in his stead. The disposition of the new Sultan, as regards the war with Serbia, does not seem to be known to the correspondents of the European newspapers, and the prospects of peace which last week were brightening somewhat are again clouded. The reports of Serbian successes in the battles about Alexinatz, which we stated should be taken with considerable allowance, appear to have been pure fabrications, and one result of the war will not be to increase confidence in Serbian truthfulness. Serbian claims to bravery, moreover, heretofore regarded as good, are likely to be disputed hereafter. Some of the soldiers are said to wound themselves in order not to be obliged to fight against the Turks, and others are actually driven into battle by their officers. The Turks, as we write, are reported to have attacked Alexinatz with great fury, to have set fire to the town, and to have pushed back the Serbians at many points. Russian officers are doing excellent service in reorganizing and holding together the Serbian army; but the correspondent of the London Times distinctly asserts that the Serbian soldiers are actually killing these Russian officers, because forced by them to face the Turks.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, Aug. 12, 1876.

I think that some time ago I mentioned the fact that Moncure D. Conway, on his return from America, removed himself and his evening congregation from St. Paul's Road, Camden Town, to the Athenæum in the same district. The baby, whose iron cradle was sufficient for it during its infancy, has so flourished on freethought food that it has grown too large for its early resting-place, and has now hired a larger bed. The Rev. R. Glover, vicar of West Holloway, in whose parish the Athenæum is situated, much objected to the irruption of heresy in his midst, and preached some furious sermons against the invader. Mr. Conway replied, and the controversy ran high; a crowded audience listened to the "Apology of the Rationalists," named "Our Cause and its Accusers," and Mr. Glover, irritated beyond endurance, rushed into print in the local paper. Mr. Glover had previously spoken of some passage in Mr. Conway's Earthward Pilgrimage referring to Christ as "irreverent," and Mr. Conway had replied that he had always spoken of Christ with "reverence." Here the same word is used by the antagonists in two different senses; to Mr. Glover, Christ is God, and any criticism is irreverence; to Mr. Conway, Christ is man, and not a perfect man, and by reverence he would only mean simple human respect, frankly paid to one whom he considers as a great man. Mr. Glover writes:—

"This kissing of Christ while betraying him is one of the very worst and most dangerous features of modern rationalism. It is calculated, indeed, to deceive the simple. But is it ingenious? Is it honest? Is this the pure morality that is vaunted as so superior to ours? Mr. Conway, for instance, reviles the God of the Old Testament in the very lecture delivered against me. And yet Christ believed in that God, called Him His Father, and taught His disciples to revere His character and His word. If so, is Christ worthy of any reverence? And is Mr. Conway dealing fairly with his own disciples when he speaks of reverencing one who was so deceived and deceiving?"

Then he expands into a criticism of Tennyson's creed, which is scarcely worth reproducing; Mr.

Conway follows him in this controversy, and then says that Mr. Glover had previously "misrepresented my statements, and borne false witness against his neighbor." Reappears Mr. Glover, kissing Mr. Conway before he betrays him:—

"Let me begin, then, by assuring Mr. Conway that I do not doubt that he is perfectly honest in holding the views he does, and in seeking to extend them. But a man may be very honest and sincere in his motives, and yet as wrong in his views, and as much opposing God in his courses, as Saul of Tarsus was before his enlightenment and conversion—Saul, be it remembered, who could avow, 'Men and brethren, I have walked in all good conscience before God until this day.' Our Savior speaks of men whose consciences are so perverted by error that 'when they kill you they will think that they are doing God service.' So with Mr. Conway; I verily believe that he thinks he is doing God (the God of his conception) service. But I am also as convinced that he is as truly trying to kill truth and souls that are very dear to God (I mean the God of the Bible, or in my judgment the true God), though, like those that affixed Jesus to the Cross, he 'knows not what he does.' Had he known it, I am sure 'he would not have crucified,' or be engaged in crucifying, Truth and Him who is 'The Truth.'"

Mr. Conway's phrase regarding Jesus as a "dead Jew" has horrified Mr. Glover, and he speaks bitterly and strongly about it; also he raves as to Mr. Conway's views of the Bible:—

"This is the Bible of which Mr. Conway has written these truly awful words: 'What does the workingman derive from the Bible? Are not earls, dukes, members of Parliament, declaring that for the children of an empire an essential shall be that they are taught to regard as the Word of God a book which contains stories so gross, so—but I will not further transcribe such words. Let any reader who wishes refer to p. 138 of the Earthward Pilgrimage.'"

The passage concludes: "sensual and cruel that, if they were contained in any other book, the police would make a raid upon the book-shop where it was sold." The remark is too palpably true to be palatable to Mr. Glover; would any other book be permitted public sale which contained some of the terribly foul stories contained in the Bible? At this stage the fray becomes complicated. Mr. Conway gave a lecture in the hall of a South London Secular Society, and Mr. Bradlaugh was in the chair. A "liberal Christian" writes:—

"I felt somewhat shocked at learning that within the last fortnight Mr. Conway has been assisting in the formation of a branch of Mr. Bradlaugh's Secularist Society in Walworth. My authority is Mr. Bradlaugh's own statement in the National Reformer of Saturday last. At Mr. Conway's lecture therein referred to, Mr. Bradlaugh himself occupied the chair."

And further:—

"Can Mr. Conway realize to himself the amount of moral mischief likely to ensue from his addressing the class of persons he had before him at Walworth, in such mocking phrases as that given above?"

The "mocking phrase" was a sentence from F. D. Maurice, who had said that there "was always a strong tendency in the spiritual man to be a thief and a liar." Mr. Conway replied to the "liberal Christian" that—

"A number of persons, having recently formed themselves into an association of freethinkers at Walworth, requested me to give them a lecture. Those making the request no doubt knew perfectly well my differences from some of Mr. Bradlaugh's opinions, as well as my respect for the bravery with which he and his friends are trying to deliver this nation from superstition. They did not request me to give them their own opinions, but mine. I cannot allow any 'class of persons' to use your correspondent's phrase, to be more liberal to me than I am to them. Although under much pressure of work, I was glad to give to the new association of free (not enslaved) thinkers what contribution I could; that is, a lecture somewhat enlarged from one of my regular discourses."

After this Mr. Conway returns to the charge against Mr. Glover, urging that Mr. Glover's Christ is a "dead Jew, with no living, human reality of life":—

"He believes that Christ could have sinned, and that he was really tempted to sin. What, God sin! Does Mr. Glover believe that Christ is 'very God,'—that God whom St. James tells us 'cannot be tempted with evil'? And does he at the same time believe that this same God while on earth was tempted 'in all points like as we are,' like men, an important point in whose temptations is their ignorance of the right, and of the full consequences of evil?"

He also speaks sharply as to Mr. Glover's connotation of heresy and sensualism, remarking: "We have not often been called sensual; indeed, we have often been declared 'mere moralists.'" Mr. Glover now loses his temper; Orthodox dissenters he can put up with, but this man!

"He was an avowed anti-Christian, and was let into my parish with the avowed object of destroying all faith in all that Orthodox Christians profess to hold most sacred and most dear. Liberty must have some limits. It has, as a matter of fact, even with Mr. Conway. Is he not attacking Orthodox belief, for instance, in every discourse he utters at the Athenæum?"

But behold! he is in—

"His true colors now; listen to his avowal of 'respect for the bravery with which Mr. Bradlaugh and his friends are trying to deliver this nation from superstition.' Does not that one sentence show that all I have said of the nature and tendency of Mr. Conway's views is true? And will not that open the eyes of Holloway? It knows, of course, that Mr. Bradlaugh is an avowed Atheist or Secularist, that what he calls (and Mr. Conway supra) 'superstition' is all faith in a God and all religion, that his creed is, 'Live for this world,' that is, live as you like, as your own reason and passions dictate, for there is no God to whom you are responsible, and no hereafter either to fear or hope for! Let the families of Holloway bear in mind that Mr. Conway has avowed in your columns his 'respect' for all that!"

Poor Mr. Bradlaugh! Marvellous are the creeds put upon his broad shoulders! "All that!" Thus the ball of slander gathers size. Mr. Conway makes "deadly insinuations," "shaking of faith in the doctrines of our holy religion," "misstatements," "fallacies," "terrible work," etc., etc. "You will become, first a sceptic, and then an infidel, and then a scoffer, and then, at last, the openly immoral sensualist." The rationalists in the Church are Judases, and the Church hates them. Mr. Conway answers:—

"With regard to the rationalists of his Church generally, Mr. Glover at last gives me an answer. He says they are black sheep in the fold, Judases. They are men that the Church grieves over and protests against. Is this true? The Church has sustained the Essays and Reviews by a legal decision, on a suit instituted against one of its authors for heresies. It has made another of its authors Bishop of Exeter; and yet another of them has since been made master of Balliol College, Oxford. The persistent efforts to depose Bishop Colenso have failed. The Rev. Flavel Cook, of Bristol, has been nonsuited in an attempt to maintain the existence of Satan as a necessary article of faith, though that existence is asserted by Christ. The Church has now among its revisers of the Bible translation at Westminster one of the most radical Unitarians in England, Dr. G. Vane Smith, and when the Orthodox tried to exclude him, the late Bishop of St. David's and Dean Stanley declined to serve if he were excluded. This is the way the Church grieves over its rationalists! The Church of England is, for the purposes of my argument, a big Athenæum; from it is going forth Essays and Reviews, Natal Sermons, and other things that supply my ammunition; and this big Athenæum Mr. Glover is supporting. He is party to letting out a building which Bishop Colenso utilizes to attack the Pentateuch, deny miracles, and preach Darwinism. Mr. Glover, technically speaking, doesn't come into court with clean hands."

Mr. Glover wants to close the Athenæum against Mr. Conway:—

"Mr. Glover has given his reasons: he believes we are ruining souls. Now, in strict logic, he ought to go further; he ought to insist upon our being killed. For murder of souls is far worse than murder of body, and ought to be more severely punished."

Mr. Glover pleads that "the tendency of" heresy is towards sensualism:—

"I am satisfied, too, to know that what Mr. Glover said about 'sensualism' in connection with Rationalism is based upon his readings of certain epistles in the Bible, and his theory of what liberals ought to be if they only did what his theology expects. I wonder our censor does not see that it is a part of our wicked hostility to his faith that we don't carry out the programme, and illustrate the tendency of our opinions by filling the prisons."

So stands the quarrel, and "a very pretty one" it is; Mr. Glover refuses to answer any further, and Mr. Conway has gone to Paris for his summer holiday. The dry bones of Holloway have received such a shaking as will probably cause the resurrection of some from the death of faith to the life of reason. Mr. Glover could have done rationalism no greater service than to act as he has done, for controversy is the life-atmosphere of truth, and it is only for truth that we struggle. "Light, light, more light," is the battle cry of our army:—

"Only disperse the cloud, they cry,
And, if our fate be death, give light, and let us die."

REWARD OF HEROISM IN ENGLAND.—Three pounds seventeen! That is the price of a hero in these latter days, the amount subscribed for the widow and children of John Chiddy, who sacrificed his life the other day to prevent the accident to the "Flying Dutchman." Is heroism, then, so cheap? Is the supply so much greater than the demand? Or is it that we cannot recognize heroism in a muddy venture of fustian and in connection with anything so prosaic as a railway? John Chiddy was a quarryman on the Bristol & Exeter Railway. He saw a large block of stone on the line just before the train was due at a speed of fifty miles an hour. He removed it in time to save the train, but was himself caught in the act and killed on the spot. An appeal to the public in behalf of the family was answered by £3 17s. The railway company, who had profited to the extent of thousands by Chiddy's bravery, have done nothing for him. Lord Elcho appealed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, but there are no funds available for such purposes. On the same day, we paid £29,101 in commutation of a pension granted two centuries ago to a Dutch soldier of fortune, who had come to England to be killed. The nation has paid half a million in recognition of the Duke of Schomberg's services in being killed at the battle of the Boyne, and John Chiddy's family is put off with £3 17s. It is not even in accordance with the dictates of an enlightened selfishness; and it is to be hoped that this is not the ultimate and final measure of our admiration for heroism in humble life.—London Examiner.

SHE ASKED him if her new dress wasn't as sweet as a spring rose, and the brute said it was, even to the minor attraction of still having a little due on it.

Communications.

A NOTE FROM COLONEL GREENE.

PRINCETON, Mass., Aug. 30, 1876.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Inasmuch as the writer of the following letter has been quoted by both Mr. Andrews and myself in our discussion of Proudhon, I send the letter to you, that your readers may know Col. Greene's opinion upon the matter at issue. After reading my article in THE INDEX of July 13, he wrote me, expressing his thorough approval of my treatment of Mr. Andrews. Upon the appearance of Mr. Andrews' reply, I received the letter which I send herewith.

BENJ. R. TUCKER.

BOSTON, August 18, 1876.

MY DEAR MR. TUCKER:—

Mr. Andrews has hung the matter now on the right peg. Let him explain to us, in THE INDEX, what that higher doctrine (which he says he possesses) is. I think you and I would be, both of us, more capable of comprehending a concise statement than a popular one. Perhaps we shall not be able to understand him at all, or, if we understand him, to agree with him. But, if he can convince us that he possesses a doctrine such as he has described, and claims to possess, it is our duty to follow his lead—provided, however, that he first makes good the claims which he puts forth in his second article.

Yours truly,

WM. B. GREENE.

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1, 1876.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Esq.:—

Dear Sir,—Allow me, as a subscriber, to find fault with the editor in charge of your column of "Current Events." My complaint is based upon the assumption (if you please) that the tone of that department has a Democratic tendency. My objections to this part of your paper are as follows:—

I.

THE INDEX should be kept within its platform, namely, secular government as set forth in its "Demands."

II.

It should not favor the Democratic party, its natural enemy:—

a.—The Roman Catholic Church is one of its controlling elements.

b.—No Romanist can have mental freedom, and his loyalty is at the mercy of another.

c.—It is opposed to the common school, with or without the Bible.

d.—It wants to live by subsidies from the public treasury, as in the State of New York, etc., etc.

III.

No Democrat could ever have offered the Blaine amendment or made the Grant speech at Des Moines:—

a.—Of course the Blaine amendment did not go far enough, but it was a step in the right direction.

b.—Although Grant seems to be in favor of the reading of the Bible in the schools, still his speech had many points in it which are desirable.

IV.

The theory of the secularists is that the Constitution, being the fundamental law of the land, should be so amended that there may be no question as to its character, and that the States should be obliged to conform their legislation to it on the subject of secular government:—

a.—The theory of the Democrat is that the different State governments should control the question of church, schools, and education.

b.—If the Democrat be right, then the secularist must transfer his labors to the State Legislature.

c.—The secularists need never look to the Democrats for support of their proposed amendment.

V.

The Southern portion of the Democratic party is against the education of the negro and education generally.

In order that, by not elevating him, he may be brought within the Roman Church and its party.

VI.

The Democratic party is opposed to the civil service reform, and on account of its discordant elements is incapable of instituting reform of any character in this government.

These are my views, rather hastily written.

Respectfully yours,

H. O. LOCKWOOD.

P. S.—Since writing the enclosed letter, I have read the remarks of THE INDEX of the 31st ult., first page. I here notice the same tendency to flatter the Democratic party. I have not time to answer the paragraph; but it seems to me perfectly ridiculous to say that, because the Democrats in the Senate voted against the proposed amendment, as proposed to be amended by the Senate (that is, if I remember correctly, that nothing in the amendment should exclude the Bible from the schools), therefore the Democrats were right. Does not THE INDEX look at the motive? Why, this party simply voted against the proposed law for the reason that it would have forced the Bible into the schools, and the St. James Bible, at that. Of course they would be against such a law. It is very true that their course may have saved the country from the recognition of Christ in the Constitution; but the party wants the recognition of Romanism, and nothing short of that will satisfy them. The National Reform Association want simply an acknowledgment of Christianity; but the Democrats never would consent to the Bible going in, as the Protestants understand it. The Democrats simply voted as they were obliged to. They are in favor of the Christian Amendment, for the reason that one of these days they hope to define what that means. How could they vote for an amendment which made it unlawful to exclude the Bible? That is what they want to do. Respectfully,

H. C. L.

[Mr. Lockwood mistakes criticism of both parties for "flattery" of one. We pointed out the "motive" in each case; and one is as bad as the other. The battle for political power between Catholics and Protestant Evangelicals has begun; we favor neither side, and hope (rather against hope) that the liberals will so assert themselves as to compel the contestants to take the higher ground of equal rights in religion.—ED.]

OPEN LETTER TO A "LABOR-REFORMER."

DEAR SIR:—

If a school-boy should produce, among his ex-temporalia, sentences like this: "I herewith resolve that a horse is a horse, and a garden is a garden," or, "I resolve that twice two make four, and twice three make six,"—you would laugh at his simplicity. And yet I find among the resolutions of the seventh annual convention of the Boston Eight-Hour League the following:—

"Resolved, That the existence of a laboring class and a capitalist class, in the United States, is the great fact that most endangers our republic!"

Now, I ask, what does this resolution mean? Is it resolved to make the existence of this danger a fact? Certainly not. Well, if it is simply the statement of a fact, what on earth is the use of the resolution? Further:—

"Resolved, That the laborer is nothing but a laborer, if he can sell nothing but his labor."

This would sound about as logical as: "Resolved (and we shall apply all our energy to carry this resolution into effect), That a brick house built of brick is nothing but a brick house!"

Reading further, I come across the sagacious and wise resolution that—"machinery is discharging labor faster" than human fingers; I herewith solemnly resolve—and mean to dedicate my whole energy to make it effective—that a horse runs faster than a man.

After having thus furnished to the editor of the Pioneer ample material for his department "Something to Laugh At," the league adjourned. And now you world-saviors cannot understand why the movement of the so-called Labor-Reform is not advancing. With plenty of meetings, handbills of whereases, pocketfuls of resolutions, you do not get ahead. A very strange phenomenon indeed! Strange as it may seem, however, I will take the liberty to try to explain it to you. Though you advocate a cause the justice of which is regarded by every liberal mind as established, you nevertheless use means to reach your purpose which no liberal mind can agree with. It is easy to blind the masses by the cry, "Down with property! Property is robbery!" And so you make a gross distinction between a laborer and a capitalist. In your enthusiasm for the emancipation of the imagined labor-slaves from capital, you exclaim, "Every laborer must be a capitalist, or the world must be destroyed." Please pause, sir. Be not too hot. Allow me a question. Will you take the trouble to examine what is capital? You have a beautiful pair of eyes; would you like to part with them for the price of $10,000? No, you say; this is by far too small a price for my eyes. Consequently, my dear sir, though you are proud of bearing the name of a laborer, you are nevertheless not ashamed to possess property (property is robbery!) for which you will not accept $10,000. But, you say, this is my natural property; this is a gift of kind Nature. But there is a class of blind men who are not favored by Nature with such valuable "property." They come to you, as a representative of the platform "equalization of property," and say: "Eyesight is robbery; you possess it; we do not; down with eyesight! Equality to all!" What have you to say?

To demand equality of property is as absurd as to demand that men shall be created equal. Goddess Fortuna is blind. One is gifted with extraordinary powers, the other not; one had the fortune to be born "rich," the other not. As long, however, as she offers to every individual a sound mind in a sound body, no matter how naked she sends them into the world, men have no right to complain. The fact that some "classes" of humanity abuse the others should induce reformers to stop these abuses, but not to deny the natural rights to your fellow-men. You see in the "eight hours" a remedy for the abuses which capital allows itself toward labor. Some time after, you may think that even this working-time is too long, and you will demand the reduction to six hours. A while later, we may chance to read among your wise resolutions the following:—

"Resolved, That by allowing capitalists to come to our houses and invite us to work for them, we bestow a great favor upon them; and that, as property is robbery, every capitalist must pay to us the sum of $10 for being permitted to come and engage us—muscle-arristocrats—to work."

The wrongs of capital against labor are no doubt great. But they will not be relieved by demanding eight hours; they will not be relieved by stamping every one who has not muscles enough to chop wood a "bourgeois"; they will not be relieved by crying: "Down with capital!" But they will be relieved by endeavoring to obtain a JUST compensation for your services.

Yours, etc.,

IVAN PANIN.

BOSTON.

"TRIFLES THANKFULLY RECEIVED."

DEAR INDEX:—

To give you a notion of the mental food offered its readers by the best religious newspaper in a city of half a million bodies (souls I do not say), I enclose a letter to the Chicago Alliance, edited by the large-hearted, large-brained David Swing, apropos of an article by the whilom principal of a college for the higher education of women. Of the outcome of such teaching we unhappily know more than enough.

Yours,

KATE N. DOGGETT.

BOSTON, June 25.

DEAR ALLIANCE:—

In your issue of June 10, I find a letter from Ohio upon the Temperance Crusade, in which the writer seems gravely to approve, if not to advise, such methods of getting direction for self-guidance and the guidance of others as savor of medieval times, or Salem-witchcraft days, rather than what suits the light of the Centennial year of our national life.

According to this writer, less than three years ago "a woman of the best thought and opportunity," wishing to do something to arrest the progress of a great social evil, "goes to her chamber, falls upon her knees, and opens the Bible," with which she ought to have been familiar enough to select a text for a sermon, but "the daughter" must furnish it.

She arrives "with tear-bedewed cheeks" to inform her mother "she had consulted her Bible to see what God would give her for her mother, and had opened at the one hundred and forty-sixth Psalm," which "she thought was His message."

So "the mother read for the first time a psalm which had never especially attracted her attention before." "The first time," yet she was sixty years old, and had been "one of the foremost workers in a church of which she became an earnest member when only eleven years old."

What was this remarkable message? "Praise ye the Lord!" "And her heart took courage. That was like the clarion peal over a victory won."

Prodigious, truly! That one should open the Bible at the Psalms, and the eye fall upon these words which occur a hundred times, more or less (as the land-sellers say). The four psalms succeeding this, "which had never attracted attention before," begin and end with the cabalistic words.

In one of them not only men and angels are called upon to praise the Lord, but "dragons and all cattle, creeping things and flying fowl."

And "all this," says the writer, "emphasizes the supernatural as nothing else has done in this materialistic age."

In a little town in Vermont, where I lived in the long ago, was a young man who thought it a duty to "tell what the Lord had done for his soul" at each recurring evening meeting, always prefacing his remarks with, "I don't suppose I can say anything to the edifice of the people."

It was a standing marvel to me why he did not keep silent till he thought he could.

If this abracadabra sort of thing is the best showing one has for the supernatural, it seems to me it does not tend to any "building" likely to be either comely or profitable. It certainly does not deserve a place in the same sheet with one of the exquisite sermons of Prof. Swing.

Yours,

K. N. DOGGETT.

MAJORITY-RULE IN RELIGION.

EDITOR INDEX:—

In your remarks in reply to mine upon the motto "In God we trust," I think you prove too much to be consistent with the true principles which are the foundation not only of justice, but also of all republican governments, to wit: "The greatest good to the greatest number," or the majority rule. In fact, it seems to me that, carried to its logical conclusions, you would permit or make liberty to be only license. In Virginia, the law makes it a fine of one dollar to use profane language, and I think nine-tenths of the people would vote to retain the law. Now suppose the majority should pass a law to put the motto, "In God we trust," upon all the public buildings of the State, and that I am an atheist. I am not compelled to trust in nor believe in a God; and how can the motto injure me? If I lived in a land where nearly all did not believe in a God, and they inscribed it on all things, but did not compel me to adopt their belief, I could not be wronged, while I might have sorrow and pity for them in their folly and ignorance.

Now this land was settled by those who believed in a God, and that the Bible was his word, and those who believe in a God to-day are the vast majority of the people. You have no right to ignore their rights, to do, as the majority,—that which they deem for the public good. It is true that majorities often err; yet they are safer than kings, as they will sooner see and correct their errors; nothing but death corrects tyrants.

It is human to err; but 'tis wisdom to see and correct our errors.

It is true, as you say, that the atheist's rights are as good as mine; but will you tell me how he can be injured or wronged in any way by the recognition of a God by the majority of the people of these United States? Please print particulars. Orthodoxy gives us enough of "glittering generalities." W. M. E.

AMHERST, Va., Aug. 20, 1876.

"THIS IS MY LAST CALL," remarked a flippant young gentleman to a young lady who was soon to be married, on a recent occasion. "I never call on married women or unmarried ladies after they have reached twenty-five." "You do well, sir," gravely remarked an elder lady present. "At that age, and after marriage, they begin to know the value of time, and do not like to waste it."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 BOSTON.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keahub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "the Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,
 AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is especially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	1.50
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps.	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
New Poems.	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights.	1.50
Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.	2.00
Edelweiss.	1.00
German Tales.	1.00
BACON'S Essays.	1.25
SAGEHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physic and Politics.	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition.	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	2.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems.	2.00
The Rising Faith.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls.	2.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.) Translations. The Layman's Breviary.	1.25
His World-Poet.	1.25
The Tall Student.75
BUCHNER'S Forces and Matter.	2.25
SUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.	8.00
CARLTON'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 1 vol.; Cromwell, 1 vol.; Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; East and West, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 21 vols. London, 1871-2. Per vol.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	2.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verses.	3.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, and for use with Patience.	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	2.00
Common-Sense in Religion.	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
COORDINATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies"	1.50

The Life of Dr. Maria Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor"	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	4.00
Journal of Researches.	3.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	8.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Poets. A Study.	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 3 vols., each.	1.00
Comprising— Adam Bede.
Romola.
The Mill on the Floss.
Felix Holt.
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life.
The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.	2.00
Essays. Second Series.	2.00
Miscellanies.	2.00
Representative Men.	2.00
English Traits.	2.00
Conduct of Life.	2.00
Poems. With Portrait.	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold.	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.	5.00
Society and Solitude.	2.00
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 1 vol.	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker.	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	6.00
Elective Affinities.	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 3 vols.	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Orest of Christendom.	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.00
The Unknown River.	6.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	6.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.	1.00
Child World. Part First.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	1.25
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	1.25
2. Logical Lectures.	1.25
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.
Mosses from an Old Manse.
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.
The Marble Faun.
The English Note-Books.
The American Note-Books.
The French and Italian Note-Books.
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton.
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.	1.50
Malbous. An Out-door Romance.	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.	1.50
Atlantic Essays.	2.00
Out-door Days.	2.00
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.	2.00
Sabbath Sketches.	2.00
Venetian Life.	2.00
Italian Journeys.	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.	1.25
Bits of Travel.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
INSELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.	2.25
The Mouldings of the Unseen.	1.50
Songs of Seven.	2.50
INSELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. On the Skel- lings.	1.75
Stories for Stories.	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.	1.25
Moses the Fairy: A Story.	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Joseph F. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Astronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints. Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.00
KERB (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 1 vol.	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 4 vols.	1.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.	3.00
LEWIS (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL D'C). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 3 vols.	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	1.50
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	8.00
Elements of Geology.	3.25
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Year's Daughter.	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1830 to 1848.	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.25
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 8 vols., each.	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	1.50
Autobiography.	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.	1.50
Three Essays on Religion.	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras. Songs of the Sun Lands.	1.50
MIVAT (ST. SEAN). On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.	2.40
Rousseau. 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	2.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings. Historic Americana—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.80
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.	1.50
The Tropic Book.	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.	1.50
Hedged In.	1.50
The Silent Partner.	1.50
What to Wear?	1.50
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.	2.50
Light Reflected for Ladies. Part I. Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Large Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.	5.00
The Expense of Heaven.	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.	1.50
SCHILLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., &c.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.	1.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.	1.25
First Principles.	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.	5.00
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.	2.00
Sociology.	2.00
Life, Correspondence and Replies.	2.00
STOWE (HARRIET BECHER). Pink and White Tyranny.	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.50
The Classic-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.	3.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair.
The Newcomes.
Adventures of Philip.
Pendennis.
The Virginians.
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.	2.50
This edition includes all the matter in the best English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.
3. Sketches, Sketches, Deeds Duval, &c.
4. Four Georges, Humors, &c.
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.	5.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.	1.50
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.	2.50
The Maine Woods.	2.00
Cape Cod.	2.00
A Week in Canada.	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD H.) The Early History of Mankind.	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.	1.50
Light and Electricity.	1.25
Science of Electricity in the Alps.	3.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.	2.50
On Sound.	2.50
Radiant Heat.	2.00
Forms of Water.	1.50
Lectures on Light.	1.00
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.50
TITLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.	2.00
Vols. III, IV, and VI., each.	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.	1.00
Santitas.	1.50
Back-Log Stanzas.	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.	1.50
Essays and Reviews.	2.00
Character and Characteristic Men.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
Success and its Conditions.	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.	1.50
Real Folks.	1.50
The Other Girls.	2.00
Fancies. A volume of Poems.	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
Child Life.	2.00

ADDRESS:

CIRCULATE IT

EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
 2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
 3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
 4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
 5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
- This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of religious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES.....	.15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES.....	.40
FIFTY ".....	.75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.50
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
1 Tremont Place, Boston,

$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Samples FREE. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

THREE ESSAYS ON RELIGION, By JOHN STUART MILL, is now for sale at this office. Price—Two dollars and fifty cts. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

THE NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3 50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.).....	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....	3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author)....	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

- TRACTS.
- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
 - II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
 - III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
 - IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
- Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
 - REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)
 - RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
 - PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 85 cts. each; for 1876 40 cts.; four for $1.00.
 - FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved (32) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, And Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUR & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. BOWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 18 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 50 CENTS. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.
Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING, WINDOW SHADES, and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Reducing a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,
757 Washington St., Boston.

THE PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEIDENBOSS ST., San Francisco.

RADICAL LECTURES

BY

B. F. UNDERWOOD.

The following is a list of the subjects on which I shall lecture the coming season:—

Positive and Constructive.

1. THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM, and the Duties of Liberals in the American Republic.
2. THE TRIUMPHS OF LIBERALISM.
3. WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS as a Substitute for the Christian Theology.
4. A TRUE MAN better than a true Christian.
5. JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
6. ORIGIN AND HISTORY of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
7. BUDDHA AND BUDDHISM.
8. ANCIENT EGYPT: Her Laws, her Morality, and her Religion.
9. THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.
10. DARWINISM: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
11. NATURAL SELECTION versus Design in Nature.
12. THE PHILOSOPHY of Herbert Spencer.
13. MODERN SCIENTIFIC MATERIALISM.
14. INSTINCT AND INTUITION: organized experiences of the Race.
15. WOMAN: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
16. PAIN: The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
17. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical and Destructive.

18. THE GENERAL INFLUENCE of Christianity.
 19. CHRISTIANITY AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.
 20. THE FOUR GOSPELS Unhistorical and Unreliable.
 21. THE EVIDENCES for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
 22. POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS regarding the Bible and Christianity.
 23. POPULAR OBJECTIONS to "Infidelity" answered.
 24. THE CRIMES AND CRUELITIES of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
 25. BIBLE PROPHECIES FALSIFIED by the Facts of History.
 26. THE PROOFS of a Personal, Intelligent Deity examined.
 27. THE PROB AND CONS of a Future State.
- For terms, &c.,

Address B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—... All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to vote, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared. Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

For order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President
R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1876.

WHOLE No. 351.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

THE following additional names, by consent of the gentlemen concerned, have been added to the list of the Executive Committee of the National Liberal League, in accordance with Article VI. of the Constitution: Mr. William H. Sayward, Dorchester, Massachusetts; Mr. John L. Cutler, Quitman, Georgia; Mr. George M. Wood, Washington, D. C.

THE SUNDAY anecdote in our last has called out this equally interesting one from another friend: "A lady who spent July and August of this year at a quiet sea-shore boarding-house was knitting one Sunday afternoon. Her little boy went out and saw on the piazza a lady with whom his mother was acquainted. Coming up to the wearied, reclining, Sabbath-keeping Christian, he said, 'Why don't you knit?' To this she replied, 'It is Sunday, and it is not right to work.' 'Oh,' said the boy, 'my mother knits, and says it doesn't matter here in the country!'"

MR. KARL HEINZEN, editor of the Boston Pioneer, informs us that "the German Radicals of Boston have united in an association called the 'Radical Democratic Club,' as a part of the 'Union of Radicals' accomplished in Philadelphia, and that they are ready to act in common with the Liberal Leagues of this State so far as the Church question is concerned." The coöperation of the German liberals all over the country is desired and will be gladly welcomed in a cause which concerns them just as much as it concerns liberals of American birth; and Mr. Heinzen has our thanks for his kind offices towards this end.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE movement was discussed last Sunday at Paine Hall, which was well filled with an attentive and evidently deeply interested audience. Excellent addresses were delivered by Mr. Seaver and Mr. Underwood, and remarks were also made by Messrs. Bacon, Witherell, Mendum, Bradford, Ranney, and Abbot. A special invitation was extended by Mr. Seaver, who presided, to those who had objections or criticisms to offer; but no objectors or critics appeared, and the discussion proved to be all on one side. This is to be regretted. The same subject will be continued next Sunday, and, if it has two sides, both ought to be presented. Frank opposition on the spot is more honorable than misrepresentation out of reach of reply.

THERE is too much frivolity in the venerable Christian Register to please the truly sedate mind. Witness the following in its list of "Brevities": "Among the things on exhibition at the Centennial are said to be the original hatchet with which George Washington cut down his father's cherry-tree, and the chair in which the Father of his Country would have sat if he had accepted Judge Jones' invitation to dinner; the birch which the grandfather of his country cut with which to 'wallop' the father of the same if he had not owned up; the lie that Washington couldn't tell about the cherry-tree; the entire garden which contained the cherry-tree, showing the stump of the tree; section of the Delaware river where it was crossed by Washington; hole from which Israel Putnam pulled the wolf at Pomfret; demijohn containing some of the spirit of '76; horse which Paul Revere rode from Boston to Lexington; chest of tea which was not thrown overboard in Boston Bay; the cob which was left after the shelling of Cornwallis."

REV. LYMAN ABBOTT, formerly editor of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, has become associated with the Christian Union as one of its editors. The prospectus says: "The name of this paper indicates the spirit and purpose with which it was founded. Belonging to no denomination, but to the church universal, acknowledging but the one Master, Jesus Christ, anticipating the time when we shall have grown up in all things into Him who is the head; it will seek that unity in Christ which fuses all Protestant denominations in one truly catholic Church, and will embody those great truths which are the common heritage of all Evangelical denominations, and apply them to the problems of individual experience and of social and national life." This avowal is very significant of the times, especially the words we have italicized. One great Protestant Church, if formed, is to mould the "national life"; and that, in the light of certain recent remarks of the Christian Union, points to the Christian Amendment. Here is the purpose which is destroying all inter-sectarian barriers in the interest of one great Protestant sect; and it is a purpose which is rapidly consolidating all Evangelicals in a union of vast power and of equally vast menace to liberty. You cannot reflect on this purpose too much.

LAST WEEK, referring to our editorial article on "The Republican Party and the School Question," we said: "We have expressed political views this week; our readers can do so too, whether they approve or disapprove what we have said." One of our New York city subscribers expressed his own in this way: "Political articles do not accord with my views. Please to discontinue sending the paper to my address." That, we suppose, is the only argument he could make; but it shows that our circulation is not (or was not) confined to "liberals." Another New York city subscriber responded as follows: "THE INDEX just at hand strikes the key-note regarding the duty of liberals at this time in your words: 'Distrust both parties, and make it known in every way that, come what may, you will cast your votes for no candidate for any office who is wavering or treacherous in his support of the secular principle of equal rights in religion for all. . . . A short time ago, exercising my right as a voting citizen, I addressed a few lines to each of three candidates, Mr. Hayes, Mr. Tilden, Mr. Cooper,—in general terms referring to the 'Patriotic Address' of the National Liberal League (a copy of which I sent them), and asking their views about the subject matter of the address, that I might be enabled to cast an intelligent vote. . . . Should none of the three candidates prove sound on the great question of equal religious rights, I can at least stand up with you and cast a 'conscience vote' next November."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL BOLLES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
 HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. W. PROTHINGHAM,.....New York, N. Y.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HALLLOW,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUBENEMANN,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. NAVAGE,.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSENTHAL,.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Flammar, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LICK,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Detroit, Mich.
 HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,.....New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SEEVER,.....Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER,.....Chicago, Ill.

Secretary.

E. H. BARNET,.....Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX,.....5 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 E. H. BARNET.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,.....Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS,.....Monticello, Arkansas.
 J. L. HATTON,.....San Francisco, California.
 E. B. HAZZEL,.....New Haven, Connecticut.
 S. S. WALLIHAN,.....South Water, Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAY,.....Batherville, Iowa.
 HERMANN LIEBER,.....Indianapolis, Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Peoria, Illinois.
 J. M. WALLACE,.....New Orleans, Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD,.....Portland, Maine.
 A. WARREN KILGORE,.....St. Louis, Missouri.
 FRANK J. KEAD,.....Minneapolis, Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE,.....Manchester, New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,.....Lincoln, Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORNE,.....Warren, North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS,.....Providence, Rhode Island.
 S. PETERSON,.....Paris, Texas.
 SAMUEL WATSON,.....Memphis, Tennessee.
 J. O. BARRETT,.....Janesville, Wisconsin.
 WILLIAM E. RAYWARD,.....Dorchester, Mass.
 JOHN L. OUTLER,.....Quitman, Ga.
 GEORGE M. WOOD,.....Washington, D. C.
 (The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.)

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman,.....34 Temple Place, Boston.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS,.....70 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 MABEL P. HYDE,.....21 Washington St., Boston.

N.B.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, as above.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

Sabbatarian Hypocrisy.

BY "NEMESIS."

Sincerity is so rare and so excellent a trait of the human character that it almost sanctifies every opinion it holds, and every act it commits. I myself, although not to weeping given, have been moved to tears in a Catholic church, when I noticed a servant-girl beside me casting her streaming eyes from her beads to the image of the crucified Jesus, which hung over the altar. Henry Martyn, when he went to the East as a missionary, was profoundly impressed with the fact, which never seemed to have occurred to his mind in England, that the Moslems were just as sincere and self-sacrificing in their attachment to Mohammed and the Koran as he was in his attachment to Christ and the New Testament.

But when either the Roman or the Christian augurs, in perpetuating their terrible power over the people by imposing upon them burdensome ceremonies and a superstitious creed, tip the wink to each other as they meet, and mutually admit it to be all a grand system of profitable imposture, we lose our patience and denounce them as hypocrites,—men who on the stage of life perform an assumed, and not a real, part. We respect and even tremble before sincerity, because it is honest, earnest, thorough-going, and consistent; but we despise hypocrisy, because it is hollow, impudent, and unprincipled.

Now I charge upon the Sabbatarians of this country that they are hypocrites. I know this is a terrible accusation to make against any class of men, especially against those who regard themselves as having a larger share than common of piety and moral worth. But I deliberately make it, and will proceed to prove it.

The Sabbatarians in general, and those of Philadelphia in particular, have closed the doors of the International Exhibition on Sunday, and would close those of the Art Galleries, the Zoological Gardens, and all other places of worldly amusement and instruction, because, as they allege, Almighty God, in the Sabbath law which he enacted on Mount Sinai, declared the day to be holy, and required it to be observed as such by all mankind to the end of time. As the pulpits of the churches are practically expurgated editions, I republish from the "legal records" themselves so much of the Divine law as contains the points of discussion. It is found in Exodus, the twentieth chapter, and is as follows: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates."

1. Now here it is distinctly ordained, first, that the seventh day of the week is the Sabbath. But all the world knows that the Sabbatarians do not keep this day holy at all, but profane it constantly by labor and amusement. Their plea is that they have transferred their allegiance from the seventh to the first day of the week. It is a well understood principle in legislation, however, that, when a legislature, say the United States Congress or the British Parliament, goes through the solemn forms of enacting a law, and it receives the signature of the President, or the Queen, it remains in full, binding force until it is just as solemnly, authoritatively, and formally repealed. If, then, the Sabbath law, as recorded in the statutes of Exodus just quoted, has ever been repealed in whole or in part, if a change has been made of the day to be observed as holy, surely the act of repeal can be pointed out in chapter and verse somewhere among the sacred writings which contain the records of the Divine government. Otherwise the government of God is more bunglingly managed than the government of man. Now let the Sabbatarians, instead of going on any longer in their slipshod method of taking things for granted, put their finger upon the passage in the New Testament where the Sabbath law is either annulled or amended, in whole or in part. They cannot do it, and they know they cannot. They tell their credulous people that the resurrection of Christ occurring on the first day of the week changed the law, and made the first day of the week to be henceforth the Sabbath. But THE APOSTLES NEVER SAID SO; and even if they had, the LAW-GIVER HIMSELF NEVER SAID SO, but still persists in declaring that "the seventh day is the Sabbath."

2. In the second place, the law in Exodus, as the reader will see, forbids all manner of work to be performed on the Sabbath, whether by son, daughter, hireling, or beast. It is recorded, in the fifteenth chapter of the book of Numbers, that, when the law was in force among the Hebrews, a violation of it was deemed a capital offence, and the passage cited gives an account of a man who was judicially stoned to death for gathering sticks on the Sabbath. I suppose to cook his victuals. I knew a man, an elder of a Presbyterian church, who had his own son "seasoned" for gathering splinters off the fence on a fast-day to boil his pot of coffee, when he returned home from church, wearied nearly to death by a whole day's infliction of dull sermons after the old, seceder style of preaching. Had the offence been committed on the "holy Sabbath," although his son was the head of a family, the old man could have seen him put to death, according to the Sabbath law, for his crime. But that was thirty years ago, in the days of faith, before hypocrisy had cankered the soul of Presbyterianism, and when men were in earnest in their religion. Nowadays all the Sabbatarian clergy, except their poor brethren in the country who cannot afford it, sup their hot coffee, and enjoy their hot rolls and mutton-chops for breakfast on the "holy Sabbath," when they know that the Divine law forbids it. They say that such cookery on Sunday morning is "a work of necessity and mercy." But does the Law-giver say so? He alone has the right to make a proviso in the law, exempting a subject from part of its operation; but has he done so? He says not only that the seventh day is the Sabbath, but that in it thou shalt do no manner of work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle. In defiance of this un-repealed law, as they declare it to be, the Sabbatarian clergy ride in the street-cars in the city, or drive their horses to church in the country, light fires, and cook their victuals, all on the holy Sabbath! Is not this hypocrisy?

But what gives their hypocrisy its most hateful color is the fact that, while in the very act of violating, in every one of its provisions, the law which they deem holy and obligatory, and which they have sworn to obey, they have the hardihood to stand up in their pulpits without blushing, and denounce the wrath of God officially against others who conscientiously believe, with Jesus and Paul, that the Sabbath law, being only a part of the Hebrew code, is not binding on Christians. With an effrontery that would consign them to the fate of Nadab and Abihu, were the law really in force, they repeat it to suit themselves, their stomachs, and their own convenience; but, like their predecessors, the Pharisees, load down the law in all its heavy severity upon the back of the poor working-man, who, after toiling all the week, feels that, as a Christian, he has the right, and wishes to enjoy it, of taking a little innocent recreation on Sunday in the public fields and gardens.

The Sabbatarians know, moreover, that to ask men to give, in the way either of faith or duty, more than God demands, or what he does not demand, is a superstition,—an insult to the wisdom of God, and a crime against the human conscience, practised for selfish purposes by unscrupulous priests who have the stupendous impudence to feed their love of pelf and power by doing it all in the name of the Lord. Is not this hypocrisy?

It is known to the whole country that General Hawley, President of the Centennial Commission, making his unenlightened conscience a guide and standard for other people, goes for shutting the doors of the Exhibition at Philadelphia on Sunday, because, he says, to open them would be a violation of the Sabbath law of Exodus, and a sin against God. Yet on a certain Sabbath in June he opened the doors to Dom Pedro and a large number of attendants. Now Dom Pedro must be either more than a man, and above the requirements of the law, or less than a man, and not accountable to the law, or General Hawley and his Sabbatarian confederates in the Commission are a set of brazen-faced hypocrites. If Dom Pedro, devout Christian as he is, could feel that he commits no sin in visiting the Exhibition on Sunday, might not some American citizens have as much conscience as he? General Hawley, by his act, declares that an Emperor of Brazil may trample down the law of God's Holy Sabbath under his feet, but in the exercise of his papal powers he gives no general dispensation to his fellow-citizens of the United States to do the same thing.

3. Again, every casuist knows that respect for one law of God is accompanied by equal respect for every other law of God, because the enacting authority is the same. To be zealous in the observance of one law, while openly violating another, proves the person who does it to be a hypocrite. This is the case with the Sabbatarians. General Hawley makes it a sin in the people of the United States, and the rest of mankind, to look at the Exhibition on Sunday; for this is all a visitor does, simply to look at, study, and admire the handiwork of the mechanic and the artist. But where in the Sabbath law is this prohibited? Would it have been a sin in a Hebrew to lie upon his back during the intervals of tabernacle or temple worship on the Sabbath, and look at and admire the ever-changing and fantastic forms of the clouds above him? No. The law did not condemn looking at an object, but only forbade work to be done on the Sabbath. Yet General Hawley and his superstitious backers condemn and forbid what the law does not condemn and forbid; namely, looking at the things to be seen in the Exhibition; but they allow what the law forbids under penalty of death, work to be done inside the gates of the Exhibition on the holy Sabbath! They cannot consent that the Centennial stockholders should draw a revenue from Sabbath desecration in looking at the show and paying for the privilege; but they have no objection to a revenue from selling whiskey!

Was it not as much of a sin in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to do work in constructing their bridge across the Schuylkill Sabbath after Sabbath last spring, as it would be to allow the people to look at the Exhibition on Sunday? Yet Mr. Stevenson, the editor of the Christian Statesman, who lives in Philadelphia, and who saw this desecration of the Divine law and this violation of the statute of Pennsylvania going on before his eyes Sabbath after Sabbath, never did anything to stop the "crime," as he called it, although he had the whole constabulary force of the Commonwealth on his side, and could easily have done it. His zeal for the Lord of hosts and his Divine law seemed to exhaust itself in a little editorial fulmination.

At Altoona, Penn., a zealous Sabbatarian brother made information against more than one hundred employes engaged in the machine-shops of that place, for violating the holy Sabbath by working on that day. Yet he himself stands charged with the forgery of the District Attorney's name to a paper by which he compromised a Sunday liquor-selling suit, and obtained thereby twenty-five dollars. This gnawing and camel-swallowing gentleman, like his

[FOR THE INDEX.]

THE NEW FAITH.

If you and I, good reader, had been born in Rome during the latter part of the third century, when Christianity, although not yet the established religion, had gained a multitude of adherents, and was destined to replace the rapidly declining religion of Greece and Rome; if our parents and friends had chanced to be devoted worshippers of Jupiter and Apollo, Minerva and Ceres, and had therefore entertained an intense antipathy to the new faith which threatened to destroy the old cultus which was so dear to them; and if (to add one more to these suppositions) you and I had become persuaded of the mythical character of all the old legends of our pagan religion, and had embraced the purer faith of Jesus as modified by the liberal Paul and the philosophy of Greece, I fancy we should have been subjected to very much the same sort of remark, expostulation, and entreaty with which we are so well acquainted to-day. There would have been the same outcry made against destroying a long-established faith which had been handed down the ages from revered ancestors; distinguished, gray-headed believers in the old religion would have been pointed out, and we should have been asked if we dared to set up our inexperienced minds in opposition to their wisdom; the same arguments would have been adduced in favor of the genuineness of the old myths; the same expostulations would have been addressed to us to spare the peace of mind of all who were reposing in the old faith.

Finally, when all this had failed to convince us that we were in error, some deeper thinker would have taken us aside, and said significantly: "You are right. These priests are half of them feigning to believe what they do not, and the rest are bigoted and deceived. You are right. The old legendary stories of the gods are untenable. I agree with you. The new faith is more rational, is purer, and may, at some future time, prevail. But be sensible. Here is our old faith still held by millions who love it devotedly and who believe in it fully. All over the civilized world are the beautiful temples reared for the worship of our gods. The whole wealth of our unrivalled art is dedicated to the production in life-like marble of the ideal forms of the deities of our fathers. Now if you Christians succeed, you will overthrow a vast system of worship; you will make our gorgeous temples with their splendid rituals worthless; you will take the significance out of our beautiful sculptures and paintings; you will rob the groves, the rivers, and the fields of their presiding divinities; and you will thus distress the minds of thousands who cling tenderly to the old faith." And then some shrewd business man would have taken us aside, and said with a cunning smile: "Will it pay now for you to speak out boldly against the errors of our old religion? Will it prove any advantage to you to urge the adoption of this new faith? Look at your business, which will be wholly ruined if you come out openly as a Christian! Your old friends will desert you. Just be content to hold your peace. Entertain what views you will in secret, but for policy's sake keep silent!"

Now these words, which might have been with perfect propriety addressed to the convert to Christianity in the third century, are precisely similar to those which the majority of radicals, in the nineteenth century, hear daily from their friends in the old faith. At the present day, Christianity, as a religious system, is on the wane just as surely as the pagan religion was sixteen hundred years ago. Its many positive excellences, its moral purity, its teachings of brotherhood, charity, and forgiveness, remain, and will ever remain, as permanent blessings to mankind. But its deification of Jesus, its claim to be the prophesied faith of faiths, its supernatural stories, its more-recently manufactured creeds with their revolting dogmas and inconsistencies, and its worship of an infallible church by the Catholic wing, and its worship of an infallible Bible by the Protestant wing,—all these are surely and steadily crumbling away. The two great weapons, Scientific Discovery and Historical Criticism, are rapidly dispersing the clouds of error and superstition, as certainly as the sun scatters the mists of the morning. In fact, the amount which has already been accomplished in this respect, during the last fifty years, is simply amazing. The real change which, unperceived by the Orthodox, has actually taken place in their own ranks, is also most surprising. We stand, then, in very much the same attitude as the world did during the gradual breaking up of the errors of the old pagan religion.

Now, as then, the question comes home to every man who sees that he cannot honestly hold the old faith: "What shall be my course of action? Shall it be open, or shall I hold my opinions in silence?" The temptation is great to adopt the latter course. The "New Faith" is not yet sufficiently pronounced, nor so generally received, as to make the open adoption of it and the rejection of the old an easy matter to most liberals. It is true, they are not exposed to the terrible persecutions to which early Christians were subjected, and which the Christians themselves repaid with interest on coming into power; the age has gone by for that. Still, in England and in this country, the radical labors under great disadvantages. There are being enacted every day scenes of heroic adherence to truth, which are none the less noble for being little known. Let me cite two examples out of many for whose authenticity I can vouch:—

A young man, who had lately worked his way painfully through college and seminary, with the hope of preaching the gospel, who had made repeated and severe sacrifices for this purpose, and who had actually entered successfully upon his work in an Orthodox church, saw, after some years of closest study and agonizing doubt, that he could not conscientiously illustrious confrères in the Centennial Commission, saw no impropriety in firing a hard-working mechanic who, conscientiously and in these hard times, felt at liberty to labor on Sunday to make an honest living for his family. Neither did he see any impropriety in his own act of making twenty-five dollars by forgery and counterfeiting.

Brother Stevenson, like the stage-manager in a theatre, causes his sheet-iron thunder to roll against Colonel Scott and his workmen, for building his bridge over the river on Sunday; but he hears no thunder and sees no lightning himself when, before going to church to preach a sermon against Sabbath desecration, he orders Bridget to prepare him a good square meal for dinner by the time he gets back. When cornered afterwards by some Jew, or Seventh-Day Baptist, for his gross violation of the Divine law, ten chances to one that he does not, like his illustrious predecessor in the Garden of Eden, put the blame upon his wife, and say, The woman which thou gavest to be with me, she ordered Bridget to prepare me the forbidden dinner, and I did eat.

4. The case, then, on the score of dishonesty and insincerity, otherwise called hypocrisy, is fully made out against the Sabbatarians. These gentlemen know, for they can read the sixteenth century literature on the subject, that the law of the Sabbath was a positive, and not a moral, law, which expired with its own limitations; that it was local and special, binding upon the Hebrews alone, who occupied a country of small territorial extent—Palestine, "the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee"; that, on a round planet whose revolution on its axis causes uneven times on its surface, it is utterly impossible for its inhabitants to observe the same holy day, as the Jews were required to do; that a universal religion, like the Christian, consisting of but two simple but comprehensive duties, love to God and love to man, could not, in the nature of the case, burden itself with an institution foreign altogether to its genius, like that of a specific Sabbath, but must conform its observances to the universality of its character; that to predicate holiness of one day in the week, or month, over all the rest is, in itself, absurd and puerile; that Christ, the apostles, and all the reformers of the sixteenth century, observed no Sabbath at all, but by speech and action denounced the Sabbath idea as preposterous and anti-Christian. Yet, with all this knowledge, the Sabbatarians persist in their assumptions that the first day of the week is a holy day, and that he is a criminal who violates it either by labor or amusement. And this measure of condemnation they mete out to conscientious people without stint, who make no distinction of days, but regard all time as equally holy, while they themselves violate every iota of the Sabbath law, from beginning to end, every week of their lives! Verily, Hypocrisy, thy name is Sabbatarian!

5. If any one is disposed to inquire for the why and the wherefore of this supercilious zeal for the Sabbath, when it is so plainly condemned by the obvious teachings of the New Testament, the answer is found in the candid admission of a distinguished doctor of divinity, who did not seem, however, to have understood the import of the admission, that unless the church is barricaded round with this modern doctrine of the sanctity of the Sabbath, and the requirements of the civil law, it would be impossible for the clergy to hold their congregations together for any length of time. The sermons generally are so full of repetitions and so dull, and the prayers are so jejune, that nothing but the attractive power of good music, and this idea of the holiness of the Sabbath, would prevent their flocks from scattering, on a Sunday morning, like hungry sheep when let into a fresh, green pasture-field. The poverty of the pulpit must be coming to a low pass indeed, when the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, the successor of Albert Barnes, is arraigned before his presbytery on the charge of preaching other men's sermons, and frankly confesses the shameful fact; and when a respectable Methodist clergyman in Indiana preaches the sermons of the Rev. Dr. Swing, of Chicago, whose main distinction is that he is an intelligent heretic, whose young and healthy mind outgrew his Presbyterian creed. Men of first-rate talent and education, who could command the attention of the people, no longer seek the ministry as a vocation in the Protestant Church. And the education societies, as was charged by the president of a college who had good opportunity for knowing the facts, in their zeal to supply the numerous and increasing "vacancies," like Jeroboam the son of Nebat, make priests for the churches of the lowest of the people. The press as a popular instructor has pushed the pulpit to one side. Science, in her glorious march, treads down superstitions and grovelling conceptions of God at every step. The people, even in the Catholic Church, have lost their reverence for the clergy as a class, and each clergyman stands upon his own personal merit as a man. The simplifying and popularizing of knowledge in all its departments, and the immense strides the people are making in their own enlightenment, have made them in countless instances superior to their religious teachers, whose iron-bound creeds keep them in a constant state of bondage. All these causes, working by the slow but sure process of evolution, are undermining the foundations of the Church, and the Sabbatarian clergy, whose interests lie closely along-side the fleeces of their flocks, seeing this to be the case, are making herculean efforts to stave off the inevitable by reviving the old Scotch glamour of the "holy Sabbath."

6. But perhaps it is well for society, after all, that the process of change from the degrading bondage of superstition into the glorious liberty of the sons of God is so slow. The men and women of the Church, by the sentimental mummeries to which they have been so long addicted, have been reduced to such a condition of childish weakness that were they suddenly elevated to the sublime heights of a rational religion, where they could feed on heavenly manna, they would soon "loathe this light bread," although baked in heaven every day, as the Hebrews did in the wilderness, and long for the coarser diet of leeks, onions, and garlic which they enjoyed in Egypt. Their bigotry and bondage are diseases of the soul, and must be cured by broken doses of medicine in the mixed way the press administers it.

7. The Constitutional party in the United States, which finds an appropriate month-piece in THE INDEX, aims to secularize the government so as to forever put it out of the power of any man, or set of men, legally to discriminate for or against any religion or worship. The conscientiousness of this aim must commend itself to all men, and so must its wisdom; for it goes upon the principle, which history proves to be sound, that there is upon the earth no man, nor set of men, who can be safely entrusted with absolute authority over their fellow-men, to teach them what they shall believe and do in matters of religion. This party in its policy proposes, not only to protect by law themselves against others, but other people against themselves, by placing all on a perfect equality in point of religious rights, as required by the Constitution. We talk about miracles; but the nearest approximation to a miracle on record in the annals of mankind is the superhuman wisdom of the founders of this republic, who, in the face of all history, and in defiance of the prevailing sentiment and practice of the whole world, framed out of their own minds and consciences a civil Constitution in which they ignored the Church and all her dogmas, and made the government a purely secular institution. This they did, not because they were irreligious men, or opposed to the Church, but because they believed that a political government should have no more to do with the religious faith and practice of the people than a railroad company, but should confine its functions to the affairs of this world exclusively. This puts all religions into the same position of political disability, and prevents them, or any of them, as such, from taking on the form and authority of law, and becoming a persecuting power, as has been the case in Europe from time immemorial. The Church needs this protection which the Constitutional party would give her, as much as her opponents do, and before the close of this century will need it more. For, as already remarked, the astonishing revelations of science bearing upon the fundamental questions of religion are spreading the dry-rot of doubt through her pulpits and pews, and threaten her very foundations; so that, before many decades, instead of dictating laws and policy to the State, as she now does, she will be asking quarter at the hands of those she has misled by her false teachings.

It is generally supposed, from reading the history of religious opinions, that those who were most antagonistic to the Orthodox faith have been remarkable for their respect for the rights of human nature, and have generally been friends of free government. This is indeed true. But we must remember that those men were in a minority, and had no political power. Give them the power, and they would probably enforce uniformity of belief as remorselessly as ever the Church did. Among the materialists of this country there is a class whose intolerance towards their antipodes, the Spiritualists, is so great that I would no sooner trust them with power than I would the Ultramontane party in the Catholic Church, or the Scotch Cameronians of the Solemn League and Covenant. They are as unscrupulous bigots as any to be found in the Church, and would silence the Spiritualists if they could, and not allow a whisper in behalf of the doctrine of immortality. The Spiritualists need protection against these men, and they need protection against the Orthodox. In short, all these religionists need protection against each other, and the Constitution gives this protection by proclaiming, as it does in the treaty with Tripoli, that the government of the United States "is in no sense founded on the Christian religion," or any other; by ordaining that there shall be no religious tests for holding office; by ignoring all churches, all judicial oaths, and all the various and conflicting conceptions of God, and guaranteeing to each individual citizen the enjoyment of his natural right to hold or reject, as he pleases, all religious opinions and practices.

The Christian Statesman of Philadelphia, the organ of the Religious Amendment Party, having long felt and admitted the force of this authoritative announcement in the treaty with Tripoli, and seeing the effective use we make of it in the controversy, has recently tried to wriggle out of the difficulty by saying that a new treaty was subsequently made with that power, in which no such statement as this is repeated. But a dozen additional treaties regulating commercial relations never can affect the moral announcement made in the first, that "in no sense is the government of the United States founded on the Christian religion"; the declaration is a part of Constitutional law, and stands for all time, unless changed by a change of the Constitution.

At the dictation of the Church, encroachments have been made upon the spirit and the letter of the Constitution, by State and local laws, so that in many States citizens are denied their rights. But the Constitutional party is now organized as a National Liberal League to make war upon such injustice, and its members will never disband until the supreme law of the Constitution shall be recognized as such by all the States of the Union.

August 20, 1876.

A CHINAMAN in California, whose life was insured for a large amount, was seriously hurt by falling from a wagon. There was some doubt of his ever getting better, and at length one of his friends wrote to the insurance company: "Charlie half dead, likee half money."

tiously continue in the old faith, preaching the Orthodox dogmas. It was a terrible trial for him. Relatives were dependent upon him for support. He had just reached that for which he had given the best years and all the enthusiasm of his life. But he saw that, if he would be honest, he must relinquish it. What could he do to earn his livelihood? He had now no knowledge of commercial pursuits. He had admirably and laboriously fitted himself for a profession which he found he could not conscientiously occupy. Some pursuit was found by him in which he could, with strict economy, maintain himself. Accordingly, he resigned his pastorate, gave up his handsome salary, and went quietly to the humble place which he had chosen, a true disciple of honesty and truth.

Another example: A young man recently occupied a very prominent and responsible position in a business house. He had long cherished the desire to be a preacher, and to address to men from the pulpits words which should incite them to a purer life. So soon as he had gained a sufficient sum of money to support for some time those dependent upon him, he left the flattering prospects which a continuance in business offered him, and began his theological studies. It is the old story. He found it impossible for him, as he ascertained the truth, to subscribe to Orthodox tenets, and with noble honesty, despite the agony which came from the rude awakening from life-long, cherished dreams, he gave up the profession for which he had sacrificed so much.

A score of similar cases might be cited, and such acts are doubtless repeated in one way or another constantly. There are heroes and heroines in every walk of life, who are making sacrifices daily, because they are faithful to the truth which is in them. They are unwilling to adopt the too prevalent custom of repeating words in which they have no belief, and, moreover, they are earnestly desirous of helping onward the day of freedom from the narrow, bigoted dogmas which enslave so many minds. The question with them is not, Will it pay me in dollars and cents, or in social position and popularity, to be thus true to my convictions? That question must, for the present, certainly be answered in the negative. But there is a higher motive, that of devotion and loyalty to the truth, and hatred of error and superstition, which impels them, not only to reject dogmas no longer tenable, but to aid in ascertaining and disseminating truth and light.

There is, however, one very weighty reason which deters many radicals from proclaiming openly their views. It is that these views are so largely negative. It is that they dislike to pull down, without putting anything in the place of, the destroyed faith. It is their want of a positive system of truth to promulgate. But, in considering this objection to outspoken radicalism, let us remember that the farther we go in philosophy or religion, the less dogmatic and positive we can be. If we see but one point, one side of truth, we are apt to assert most vehemently that we are right and we alone. But if our vision is extended, if we see more than one side, we grow less positive. Our belief is less narrow and intolerant. In one sense it is undoubtedly true that the more light we have, the more we doubt. We see this exemplified everywhere. The quack, acquainted with but one set of symptoms and with no knowledge of all the complicated influences which may affect the disease of his patient, is the most positive of men. The broad, cultured physician is much less certain. Now the "New Faith," being the result of the deepest thinking and the most critical study of the past half-century, and arising from a necessary elimination of old dogmas and effects superstitions incorporated in the Old Faith, must naturally seem, when compared with Christianity, to be negative rather than positive. So great always is the mental distress consequent upon the loss of intense and positive beliefs, however narrow they may be, that the mind thus bereft of them is at first much more keenly alive to its loss than to its gain. To the believer in the highly poetical polytheism of the Greeks, the rude dispelling of his illusions must have been attended with great mental pain. So also to one who held the crude conceptions of the universe which prevailed before Copernicus, the great change effected by telescopic discovery must have brought with it a kind of terror. The sudden expansion of his notions of the distance and nature of the celestial bodies, and the consequent insignificance of this earth, thus shown to be one of the smallest objects in the stellar universe, must have at first produced despondency and sorrow. Lecky cites a touching story of an old monk who considered God as altogether human, and whom he was wont to address in most familiar language. When he was convinced by a brother monk that he was wrong in holding such anthropomorphic views of the Deity, he clasped his hands in agony and said, while the tears streamed down his cheeks, "You have taken away my God! You have taken away my God!"

It is true that the "New Faith" seems largely negative, as compared with Christianity, for the very reason that, while taking much from that religious system which is good, it also rejects much with which it can have nothing in common, and this is so distressing to the holder of the Old Faith that at first it seems to him as if everything good in his religion were denied by us. Let us look first at the most prominent features of the old system which have been discarded by the "New Faith."

With the discovery of the immense age of our earth, and the enormous length of time (compared with our historical accounts) during which man has been an inhabitant of the globe, and with the knowledge that man's origin is almost without doubt to be derived from a lower order of the animal kingdom, and certainly from very primitive and savage ancestors, the old account of the first pair, the fall, the curse of the race, the "scheme of salvation" as indicated in the prophesied "seed of the woman" that should "bruise the serpent's head,"—all this, upon which is built up the lofty structure of "justification by faith" and "redemption through the blood of the Lamb," crumbles away, and the vast system falls to the ground. By careful investigation into the origin of the biblical canon, and by the results of historical criticism, the Bible is shown to be a book of human composition, and, with all its many excellences, not a divinely inspired and infallible authority. By a careful comparison of religions—by the clear light of science, and by the Zeit-Geist, which does not favor anything miraculous,—we are led to disbelieve the legendary stories in the Old Testament, and the miracles and myths of the New. By similar studies the deified Jesus becomes a pure teacher, of exalted moral character, born of Joseph and Mary, around whom, when dead, the magnified stories inseparable from such an age and people gradually clustered,—gathered credence by repetition, and strength by transmission from one generation to another. By the study of the rise and development of many church doctrines, as affected by the influence of the pagan religion and the prevailing philosophy, we are convinced of their decidedly human origin, as well as of their unsoundness. We are compelled, likewise, to modify greatly the anthropomorphic conceptions of the Deity which are inherent in Christianity, since Jesus, being in reality the God of the Christians, gives to them as an object of worship little more than a magnified man, to whom they address petitions for rain, success in business, victory in war, and the like.

Finally, in view of the origin and present low condition of the majority of the human family, and the insignificant part which an individual life plays in this boundless universe, the "New Faith" cannot pronounce certainly and dogmatically upon a future existence, but leaves it in solemn hope.

Thus far is the "New Faith" surely negative; but it does not stop there. Although it cannot affirm on the ground of ignorant traditions and ill-supported authority many things which the Christian creed so unhesitatingly proclaims as truth, yet it is not wanting in positive faith.

The spirit of love to our fellow-men and kindness even to our enemies, which it has been the peculiar glory of the religion of Jesus to inculcate (however imperfectly its adherents may have carried it out), is the key-note of the anthem of the "New Faith." Emphatically it calls itself the "Religion of Humanity." The place which the spirit of asceticism occupied in the early centuries, and which the enthusiasm of the Crusades claimed in the Middle Ages, is in our day held by the wide-spread spirit of philanthropy and universal benevolence, of which we may say:—

"Nor bounds, nor clime, nor creed thou knowest; Wide as our need thy favors fall!"

The "New Faith" holds that man is progressing steadily and surely towards that perfection of society unto which it is our aim to attain. From low beginnings the race has thus painfully worked itself upward on its way; not grovelling downwards from a primitive state of purity and excellence, to be rescued only by a partial system of salvation, but steadily advancing, learning by bitter experience, throwing up about its way safeguards of law and morality, and ever progressing in civilization, enlightenment, and general culture. No good word was ever uttered by ancient bard or prophet, no noble maxim was ever enunciated by sage or priest, no moral precept was ever spoken by the lips of Jesus, that is not cherished as part of the inheritance of the "New Faith," which thus draws to itself the treasures of the ages. The "New Faith" entertains, it is true, no limited and anthropomorphic ideas of the Deity, but for that very reason it inculcates greater awe and reverence for that unknown and unknowable Power in whose all-quickenng presence we have our being.

Above all, it upholds and teaches the necessity of RIGHT LIVING! To the soul weakly resting in effeminate security on the merits of a victim who once paid the penalty of his sins, and who will forgive him as often as he does wrong and cries, "I repent," the "New Faith" says: "Live a true, pure, noble life! Lurk behind no covering of other men's virtues. Show yourself what you are! Be pure, be unselfish, be upright! Do not be content to be reckoned so on the heavenly register by virtue of the blood of a man crucified nineteen hundred years ago!" To the man basely acting from expectation of reward in a future life, the "New Faith" exclaims: "Scorn to act from such low motives! Cease meanly to balance your visionary heavenly gains by your earthly losses, and to chuckle over a credit-mark on the recording angel's book, when you have performed a good action here! Act rightly, because it is noble to act so; because it benefits your fellow-men and purifies and strengthens your own soul! The 'New Faith' pleads also for the prompt and efficient administration of justice here on this earth,—knowing nothing of a 'judgment to come.' By this means and not by threatenings of unknown tortures would it restrain those men from crime, who are insensible to higher appeals to right action. This, then, is the aim of the 'New Faith': to promote the welfare and to aid the progress of the race; to inculcate purity and honesty of life; to diffuse everywhere the spirit of charity and love; to stimulate in every way, by music, sculpture, painting, literature, and poetry, the growing culture of the race; to place before men constantly higher models of excellence; and to cheer and comfort drooping, saddened hearts. For the time when these blessings shall be widely diffused must all disciples of the "New Faith" toil. The time has come to emerge from politic concealment and to declare our views. Already the air is full of the tremor of a hastening change. The mists are lifting. The ugly forms of once potent superstitions are growing fainter and fainter, and are fading steadily from view. The promise of a brighter day is dawning on the race. We may not see its glory. But we can help its advance. In the noble words of the poet—

"Hail to the coming singers!
Hail to the brave light-bringers!
Forward I reach, and share
All that they do and dare!"

"What matter, I or they,
Mine or another's day,
So the right word be said
And life the sweeter made?"

"I feel the light move sunward,
I join the great march onward,
And take by faith, while living,
My freehold of thanksgiving!"

J. L. S.

BOSTON.

[For THE INDEX.]

"LA LIBERTE ECLAIRANT LE MONDE."

BY BISHOP FERRETTE.

During the last three years I have often felt—others no doubt have felt, and among them, perhaps, notwithstanding their indulgence, the editor and readers of THE INDEX—that I have more suggestions to make for the reform, improvement, and government of this country, than is consistent with the degree of modesty that is to be required of an adopted citizen. If in this I abuse the privileges of granted citizenship, as I probably do, others must forgive me for the same reason for which I forgive myself: I am only actuated by an officious zeal for the public good, and not by any motive of selfish interest. I must, therefore, be permitted to go on in this way, as I perhaps cannot help doing. If, however, there are many and too many subjects on which my zeal is impatient and importunate beyond measure, there are a few, at least, I am happy to think, on which I am willing to be instructed, and to learn, from the effect of what I say upon older Americans, whether what I say has the genuine American spirit or not. It is in this experimental manner that I will give expression to the thoughts and feelings which the proposed centennial gift of France to America, in the shape of a colossal bronze statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World," to be placed on an islet of New York Harbor, has produced in me.

With the artistic conception, whether of the statue or of its pedestal and location, I find no fault at all, and should show very bad taste if I did. The whole is—as any one, no doubt, is convinced who has seen the sketch in the illustrated papers—as grandiose and faultless as anything in ancient or modern art. The exceptions that I take are merely on national and international grounds, and on these grounds, I confess, there are many considerations favorable to the project. It is certain that France has borne a part in the foundation of American liberty, a record which this Centennial celebration is a fit occasion to celebrate and perpetuate. The question is whether the proposed monument, as a gift of France and of France alone to us, is the most accurate conceivable expression of the nature of the incontestable tie existing between France and America.

I say it is not, for the statue is not that of American Liberty Enlightening France, nor of French Liberty Enlightening America; but that of "Liberty," that is, French and American Liberty, "Enlightening the World," that is, England, Spain, Italy, Austria, Russia, but, most especially and intended, Germany. In other words, a committee of French gentlemen, representing, no doubt, the general French feeling, thinking that their nation has been, of late, ill-used by Germany, and that the rest of Europe showed, in the circumstance, an undue indifference to her existence and interests, think it would be proper to administer a coup de patte to Germany and a lecture to Europe in the form of a gift to us. We accept the gift, thus making ourselves, artistically and poetically, a part in a quarrel with which we have nothing to do. If the gift were that of a good dinner or of a million of bottles of champagne, it might have a present good effect without being an encumbrance on the future. But the proposed monument will be a permanent thing, and moreover one of the grandest and most beautiful things in the world, and, with our Capitol at Washington, the grandest and most beautiful thing on this continent.

I never wantonly destroy a flower, nor a bird, nor any beautiful thing, and would not, for all the world, destroy an object of art nor say a word that might contribute to condemn an artist's conception to die unborn. Were I otherwise minded, it would now be too late for me to speak, for the statue is now almost ready, and to decline it at this stage of the proceedings would be an undeserved insult to France, infinitely more regrettable than the other alternative of our being made to act as janitor at the lecture which she intends to administer to the nation, her neighbors. America is in for it; and as the share allotted to her is that she will, by subscription, erect at her cost the immense pedestal, she must execute herself as gracefully as possible. Is that all? Is there no modification of the scheme that would preserve all its valuable and unavoidable features, and remove the objections?

1. The statue, as I have said, is nearly made, but the funds to pay for it, and to be raised by a subscription in France, are, it would appear, more than slowly forthcoming. The Committee may find itself placed in the face of serious financial embarrassments, which may delay the shipment of the statue at the intended time. How would it do for America to come to the relief of the French Committee by raising in this country the funds to pay for the statue, and make it, instead of a gift of France to America, a gift of America to France, to be erected, say, where stood the Tuilleries? That would be less aggressive, with regard to other nations, than to erect it at Beaugue, facing England, or in New York harbor, facing Europe, or on the Franco-German frontier, facing Germany. But as a compensation there might be the semblance of a lecture given by America to France as to the use of liberty, and therefore I discard the project.

2. The statue, and the present project as to its location, would have nothing objectionable as a national American monument, erected on national soil, by American, not foreign, subscriptions. As Americans we have a perfect right to believe that we are a free nation; and the additional belief that the light of liberty will radiate from our country to the whole world, is an article of our national creed which we have a perfect right to symbolize, on our own soil, by any monuments we choose, without other nations having a right to deem themselves insulted. Every nation worthy of the name has humanitarian aspirations of the same sort, even if not so well justified. The exclusive Jews themselves expected a messiah who would make their religious influence world-wide felt; and they got him. The objection to this proposal is that a part of the funds are already subscribed in France. All that America could do would be to subscribe the rest, and this would not remove the principal defect of the scheme, its being a lecture given by us, with one nation in preference to others, to the rest of the world.

3. At the point at which things are, the only modification in which is both possible and without objection in making the gift that, not of France alone, but of all Europe, to the American nation. To do this it will be sufficient to extend the appeal for subscriptions from France alone to the whole of Europe, not excluding any nation. This would probably expedite the completion of the sum necessary to pay for the statue. If this sum is nearly completed by France alone when this article will appear, then other European nations should have an opportunity of presenting us with the pedestal: France contributing the statue out of her artistic genius, which no one cares to contest; and other nations contributing the pedestal out of their feeling of cordiality, thus uniting with France and with us in one thought.

I humbly submit that this third suggestion would infinitely better harmonize with the artistic thought of the statue, with the real feeling of the American people, and with the feelings of European nations and of their sovereigns toward America, than the erection on our soil, on a part of our territory fronting Europe, by one particular nation recently at war and still embittered, of a monument of this magnitude, beauty, and universal significance.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES IN VERMONT.

CATHOLICS VOTING THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 2.

The Republican majority in Vermont, next Tuesday, will undoubtedly be about twenty-five thousand in a total vote of upward of sixty thousand. A canvass made by the Republican State Committee, but only partially completed, indicates a more favorable result even than this; but as the counties yet to be heard from contain some of the larger towns of the State, in which the Democrats expect to make gains, it is hardly safe to predict a larger majority than that given Governor Converse in the State election four years ago. If this was not a Presidential year, there would be nothing to arouse interest in the contest here. Both parties have made excellent nominations, and all the interests of the State would be safe in the hands either of Mr. Fairbanks or of Mr. Bingham as Governor. Indeed, Vermont is one of those fortunate States that need but little government. Its Legislature meets only biennially, and completes its labors in six weeks or two months. When the Legislature adjourns, the Governor goes home and attends to his private business like any other good citizen, and the only State officers who reside at the capital are the Auditor and Treasurer. The people of many another State in the Union would think the political millennium had surely come, if the problem of self-government could be simplified in a similar degree among them.

But while either of the two candidates would make a good Governor of Vermont, there are some questions beside those of national politics which the people of this State are discussing in the present campaign, and which may have a slight influence on the Republican majority next week. One of the most important of these has been raised by the action of Congress on the proposed public school amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The foreign population of this State, which is also to some degree a floating population, dependent largely upon the prosperity of certain large manufacturing industries, is composed of Irish and French Canadian immigrants. Both classes are generally Roman Catholics, but the jealousy which has always existed between them, growing out of national prejudices, has generally prevented them from acting in concert politically. A majority of the Irish have voted with the Democrats, while the Republicans have secured a considerable portion of the French Canadians. The agitation of the school question by President Grant, the position assumed in regard to it by the Republican party at Cincinnati, and, more than all, the discussion of it in the United States Senate just before the adjournment of Congress, seem to have alarmed the Catholics of this State, and to have carried them as a body, without regard to nationality, into the Democratic party. Of course, the Democrats have done everything in their power to encourage this movement, and have circulated very freely, among the Catholics of the State, extracts from one of Senator Edmunds' speeches on the Blaine amendment, the tone of which was not such as to conciliate this element of the population.

How great a loss the Republicans will suffer from this cause, it is impossible to say. It is likely to be proportionately greater here in Montpelier than anywhere else in the State, because the increase of French Canadian voters has been relatively greater here than in any other city, and their desertion of the Republican party here has been almost unanimous. In other places, the Republicans hope to hold a part of their Catholic vote. It would not be strange if the Republican majority in the whole State should be reduced at least one thousand, by this cause, from what it would otherwise be.—N. Y. Tribune, Sept. 4.

THE SABBATH vs. THE "LORD'S DAY."

A correspondent of the Echo, in referring to the subject of Sunday recreation, makes the following remarks on the distinction between the Sabbath of the decalogue and the Sunday of modern Christians: "We are not Jews, but Christians. We are, therefore, not bound by the Sabbath, but by the Lord's day. The Sabbath was a touching institution, given under Moses for the higher culture of a nation of slaves suddenly set free. When Christ came he showed that even the Sabbath, or Seventh day, was made for man; and what we have to remember is that while the old Jewish Sabbath was abolished, the law of the Sabbath has never been transferred authoritatively to the First day, or Sunday. St. Paul blamed the Galatians for still observing Jewish days and months, and he released the Colossians from all such obligations. St. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, 345 A. D., forbids his converts to observe the Sabbath day: 'Henceforth reject all observances of Sabbath.' St. Jerome, 390 A. D., relates without stricture that the early Christians, after divine service on Sunday, went about their ordinary work. Luther, rather than observe Sunday sabbatically, ordered his converts 'to ride, to work, to dance, to feast—to do anything that shall reprove this encroachment on the Christian spirit and liberty.' John Knox, visiting Calvin, found that holy men playing at bowls on Sunday afternoon. Where, then, shall we find the root of our modern well-meant, but mistaken, Sabbatarianism? At the Reformation. The medieval Church had a vast number of holy days. Most of these reformers swept away, but feeling the common importance of a recurring period of rest for the body, and for the cultivation of the spiritual life, they laid extra stress on the observance of the Lord's day, and, in an evil moment—backing a good cause with a bad argument—they placed the Jewish decalogue, with its Sabbath commandment, in the front of the Christian service, and so attempted to rivet its obligations on the Lord's day."

SATURDAY THE SABBATH.

The infidels of this country are not to be deceived by false reasonings, nor frightened by denunciations, for they know that the Bible nowhere commands the keeping of the first day of the week. The Boston Investigator, of August 9, says if the fourth commandment is binding under the Christian dispensation, the Christian "must cease to sanctify the first day of the week, and reinstate the Saturday in its legitimate dignity. He must go to church when the Jew goes to his synagogue."

The truth is, the community is largely becoming informed on this subject, and the idea that it is sinful to work on the first day of the week is fast passing away. Christians are alarmed at the rapid advance of the no-Sabbath sentiment, and mourn over it, and in this we sympathize with them; but they have themselves to condemn for it, because it is the result of their own false teachings. We warn them that the only way to heal this breach is for them to go back to the Bible, whence they profess to draw their Sabbath doctrines, and correct both their creed and practice by it.

When they break the Sabbath of the fourth commandment, week by week, and then charge men with sin who work on a day given by God to that service, the contradiction is so naked that a child can see it. Until Christians shall return to the Bible, and conform their lives to its teachings on this subject, the dark wave of no-Sabbathism will continue to roll on until the whole land is inundated with it.—The Sabbath Recorder.

PROGRESS IN JAPAN.—A letter from Yokohama in the Börsenzeitung says that the Mikado has been received with great enthusiasm during his tour in the northern provinces of the empire, which, until recently, had been under the despotic rule of the daimios. During the Mikado's absence the Prime Minister, Santcho, acted as regent—a circumstance unprecedented in Japanese history. Shortly before the Mikado's departure, it was resolved at a Cabinet Council to rebuild the temple of Mondaki, the headquarters of Buddhism, which was burned down four years ago. This, says the correspondent, shows that the government has given up its intention to suppress the Buddhist services and make the Sinto creed the exclusive religion of the State, especially as it has paid subsidies to the Buddha temples and their priests, has granted land and building materials for the village schools of Christian missionaries, and has sanctioned the universal observance of the Christian Sunday. This change of policy has given great satisfaction to the Christian settlers in Japan. The removal of Japanese from the island of Saghalien, and of Russians from the Kurile Islands, in consequence of the exchange of territory effected between Russia and Japan, has now been completed. The number of new subjects that have been acquired by Japan through this exchange is much greater than that obtained by Russia, as nearly all the Russian fishermen in the Kurile Islands have decided to remain there, while only about forty Japanese families have remained in Saghalien. The hostile feeling shown by the Chinese toward all Europeans, and especially to those of the Anglo-Saxon race, has had a very prejudicial effect on the commercial interests of Yokohama, as several trading firms have come over from Shanghai and Tientsin, causing a further increase in the prices of exports and a fall in cotton and Manchester goods, of which an immense supply has accumulated in Yokohama. The bankers, too, are in great difficulties, owing to the change in the price of the dollar, and are having recourse to all kinds of speculation, with the object of improving their business. They are now negotiating with a Chinese agent with regard to a loan of 15,000,000 lan for the enlistment and equipment of a new army to be sent against the Dunganians and Kashgarians. The loan is to be repaid out of the customs receipts of the harbors at the mouth of the Blue River; but these receipts are yearly diminishing. The exports of the above harbors are mostly consumed by the Chinese settlers in the United States, and the number of these is now much smaller than formerly, owing to the persecution to which they are subjected by the native workmen, who find their gains considerably reduced by the competition of the Chinese. The steamer "Oceanic," which is exclusively employed in the conveyance of Chinese emigrants to San Francisco, had, during its last journey, barely a twentieth of its usual number of passengers.

RELIGIOUS EXCITEMENT IN GERMANY.—An assassination from motives of religious fanaticism was recently attempted by a peasant of the Silesian village of Kuhnau against a Catholic priest, who had been elected by the more free-minded section of the inhabitants, in accordance with the much-talked-of May laws, or Falk laws. The Romanist press had frequently stigmatized the elected priest as "a curse to the community." Among the peasants, whose feelings were thus worked up, a prize of fifty thalers was offered for any one who would do the necessary deed. During the trial before the jury, it was averred that the incriminated peasant had been visited, with others, by a young Ultramontane priest, who had arrived from Prague on the same day that the attempt took place. The would-be murderer had posted himself in the evening behind a great crucifix, which was surrounded and shaded by lime-trees; from thence he fired a pistol at the priest, who he knew would pass. The court, considering that the accused had been instigated to the act, condemned him to four years' imprisonment, with hard labor and the loss of his civic rights for a similar term. In the Ultramontane press of Germany violent instigations of the nature alluded to are now of frequent occurrence.

Poetry.

[For THE INDEX.]

ISOLATION.

Sadder than death, to souls that once could find
A perfect bond of sympathy in thought,
Is that cold isolation of the mind
By differing creeds and changed opinions wrought.

O friends with whom we counselled in the past!
Ye clasp our hands, ye greet us as before;
Yet some dark shadow on our love is cast,—
The old, sweet charm of friendship is no more.

Though ye are pleased to passively receive
Your fathers' creeds without a questioning thought,
Yet chide us not if we cannot believe
Those gloomy dogmas down the ages brought.

Ye in whose minds the early faiths have lain
Undoubted and untroubled through long years,
Know little how their loss has cost us pain,—
See not our pillows wet with bitter tears!

Our faith is not dependent on our will;
We follow only as we see the light;
Yet, though our creeds so widely differ, still
Our aims of life, like yours, may all be right.

O sacred Truth! In fealty to thee
We hold our minds obedient to thy call:
From error strive we ever to be free,
Though we should thereby lose the love of all.

Yet in the struggles of our changeable time
We are at one with all who, joyful, see
The glorious dawning of the day sublime
Which ushers in the faith that is to be!

J. L. S.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 9.

E. S. Curtis, $3.20; R. J. Rogers, $3.75; A. Skinner, $5.35; N. B. Davenport, 10 cents; A. M. Lee, 10 cents; F. A. Angell, 25 cents; C. B. Lynn, 50 cents; C. Vail, 25 cents; E. E. P. Clark, $3.20; H. A. Ballou, $3.30; B. F. Underwood, $15.40; E. M. Schenckberg, $4.04; C. L. Carr, $7; W. L. Boyer, $3.20; W. Dewey, $3; M. E. Munroe, $5; C. H. Doolittle, $3; Kirk Himrod, $2; J. H. Buffum, $3.20; O. Martin, $3.20; M. Pierce, 10 cents; M. E. Zakrzewski, $3.20; A. G. Wheelock, $3.20; C. W. Storey, $3.20; H. S. Ward, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

The Index.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 14, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office, No. 38 Monroe Street: J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

F. R. A. ANNUAL REPORT.

The report of the annual meeting of the Free Religious Association for 1876 is published in pamphlet form.

It contains a full abstract of the discussion at the business meeting; the annual report of the executive committee; address by the president, O. B. Frothingham; essay, by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; also essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it, by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss.

Price, single copy, 40 cents; package of three, $1; postage paid. Address Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

W. J. POTTER, Secretary.

SAID THE HON. GEORGE F. HOAR, at Worcester, September 4, at a great Republican mass-meeting: "The free vote and the free school—these are the institutions to whose rescue the Republican party ask you to come in this Presidential contest." There is no free school but the secular school; but Mr. Hoar does not mean that. The secular principle, on which the permanence of the public school system depends, is shoved aside by the politicians of both parties. Will the people be no wiser?

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE dolefully declares, referring to the Buffalo meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science: "It must be admitted that, if the Creationists have not given up the contest, they have at least abandoned the field of strife with the Evolutionists which these meetings annually afforded." But the Creationists have not "given up the contest." Not at all! Being beaten on the field of argument, they are resorting to force in the shape of a disguised Christian Amendment to the Constitution; and the Evolutionists do not know enough about Evolution to understand the vast power of this new element in the controversy. But they will discover it too late, unless they wake up from their slumbers.

THE COBBITE fanatics of Missouri are showing what bloody deeds are possible even in the nineteenth century in the name of religion: "St. Louis, Sept. 3.—Later advices from White County, Ark., say that in the coroner's inquest held on the body of Humphreys, who was killed by religious fanatics, the jury returned a verdict that L. B. and J. M. Dover, Thomas Gainely, and John and Elizabeth Nelson were guilty as principals of the murder of Humphreys, and John and Lee Dover and Clementine Dover guilty as accessories. L. B. Dover and Thomas Gainely were the two men killed by the posse that made the arrests. Cobb escaped to the woods, and at last accounts was not captured. It appears that Cobb came from Michigan, where he taught his atrocious doctrines until driven out. He first settled in south-eastern Missouri, where he made new converts, and, it is said, offered up infants as sacrifices. He was driven away from there, and with his fanatical followers went to White County, Ark., and induced a few more ignorant people to join them. The accounts received do not give any adequate reason or cause for the attack upon Humphreys and Blake and the murder of the former, but the Cobbites seem to have been wrought up to a high degree of religious excitement or frenzy, and were urged on by the old man Cobb, who had taught his followers that he was not only Christ in person, but that he uttered decrees of God himself, and that anything they did was devoid of sin."

NOTICE.

On receipt of $3.20, THE INDEX will be sent to any name not already on its mail-list, from the present time until January 1, 1878. This is an excellent opportunity for friends of the paper to increase its circulation among their acquaintances; and it is hoped that they will not neglect to render in this way some greatly-needed assistance to the important cause it represents.

THE POWERS BEHIND THE THRONES.

With all our soul we wish that there were to-day no political issue before the people involving the people's equal religious rights. It is against every natural predisposition and every acquired taste that we have been forced, by the sheer stress of the times, into thinking so much and writing so much about politico-religious matters. If Christianity could only be so metamorphosed as to reverence the equal rights of every individual,—if the Church could only be so regenerated as voluntarily to relinquish its hold upon the throat of the State,—how gladly would we lay the Liberal League in its last resting-place with a Pax vobiscum, and turn to more congenial tasks! But all the more because so many of our liberal contemporaries turn a blind eye and a deaf ear to their country, though she never had more need of all her sons, would it be recreancy to think of taste when duty stands knocking at the door. And so week after week our pen refuses the themes that rise so invitingly to thought, and is drawn irresistibly to the topics which the unwelcome fact of growing ecclesiastical ambition and encroachment pushes forward into their place.

"But your subscribers do not want politics."

Do they want religious liberty? Do they want those equal rights without which there is no religious liberty, and without which nothing but humiliating submission to spiritual tyranny remains?

"Of course!"

Very well: then they do want politics. For without politics these things are impossible.

It is not THE INDEX which ordains the law that a nation too supine or too unintelligent to defend the conditions of its freedom shall lose that freedom. That law we did not decree, and cannot repeal: we can only see it, point it out, and with such powers as we possess strive to make it perceptible by all. The conditions of permanent religious freedom in this country are absolutely secular government and absolutely secular public education; and these depend on an absolutely secular National Constitution.

You may think your secular Constitution safe. You may think that a rat gnawing at the strands of the rope which suspends an enormous weight over your head has surely not strength enough to move that weight, and that it is preposterous to pay any attention to those sharp little teeth. Do you not see that the rat need not be able to move the weight by his own strength to ensure its fall,—that, if his teeth only cut the strands of the sustaining rope, gravitation will do the rest? Your secular Constitution is the rope that sustains an enormous weight of Christian superstition, ambition, tyranny, above your unconscious head; it alone is your protector; the Christian Amendment rat is at work upon it, and has already made such unheeded progress with his teeth that not much more is needed; and, when he gets through, gravitation will do the rest. All the strength of the nineteenth century cannot lift that weight, once fallen; all its skill cannot splice that rope, once broken or cut. And, with all your fancied security, you will be under the weight, if it falls.

Two vast powers have been growing up in this country during the hundred years just elapsed. One is the Catholic Power, in 1776 a mustard seed, in 1876 a tree overspreading the land. The other is the Evangelical Power, in 1776 a host of small and jealous sects, in 1876 a few rapidly consolidating denominations of immense wealth, numbers, and influence. These two are the ancient rivals whose wrappings have been like earthquakes to Europe; and, but for the Constitution of the United States, they would have been earthquakes here. While the simple-minded populace rejoice at the fusion of the small sects into the great ones, and fancy that this process is the disappearance of sectarianism, the triumph of Christian love, the final advent of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, the intelligent few comprehend that the Protestant Prince of Peace and the Catholic Prince of Peace are only preparing for the most sanguinary duel which they have ever yet fought together. Each aspires, openly and avowedly aspires, to absolute religious dominion in America; and neither can succeed, so long as the secularity of the Constitution is undestroyed. Each has a dangerous foothold in usage, precedent, statute, State Constitution; but neither can seize the crown of empire while the shield of the secular National Constitution protects the republic. These two tremendous Powers are just as certain to come to blows as are two contiguous nations which go on creating huge standing armies; each overstrains its own resources till war is the spasmodic escape from gradually swelling expenditures that are ruining both. In the growing rivalry, each side clutches more and more eagerly at the public treasure and the public sceptre; these prizes are too tempting, too luscious, too legitimate a prey for Christianity, which is utterly unrepentant in either form, to let alone. It was eighteenth-century "infidelity" that made the Constitution secular: will "Lord and King" Christianity of either type respect its secularity? Not in the least! Both Powers, the Protestant as quickly as the Catholic, would trample it into the mire, as a vexatious obstacle to the victory over its antagonist at which each aims.

In their deepening, yet hitherto almost invisible struggle, each of these two Powers is now secretly, perhaps half-consciously, seeking to find a political ally in the contest for political domination; each is striving to acquire a supreme influence in one of the two great political parties of the day, yet neither dares openly to confess this clandestine alliance. Much less do the parties dare to confess it openly, so large is the secular vote to be imperilled by any such confession. But nevertheless, dimly shrouded behind the disclaiming politicians, Rome looms up behind the Democratic party, and Geneva behind the Republican party. The party leaders know this; nothing could be more evident. Yet the great bulk of the rank and file do not know it, and are used as pawns in a deeper game than they comprehend. "More is meant than meets the eye." But the defeat of the gamesters lies alone in the tearing off of these disguises. If this cannot be done, the game is lost for freedom, and the United States are now entering upon a career in which the Catholic Power and the Protestant Evangelical Power are to be eternally battling for possession of a de-secularized and perverted government.

Now there is just one possible preventive, and we believe only one, of this long, disastrous warfare between two great powers, both sectarian: namely, to force the issue directly between sectarianism itself and secularism. In each party, Republican and Democratic, we believe that a very large proportion, perhaps a majority, are prepared fully to go for absolute secularity in school and State. If the issue can be made directly and cleanly, these great portions of the two existing parties, together with the outlying, independent voters, will form a third party, perhaps a preponderating majority of the whole people. The rank and file do not yet comprehend the religious issue which lurks out of sight deep below the confused surface-issues of the present Presidential campaign; but it will sooner or later rise to the top and displace them all. This is self-evident in the light of very recent events. The day cannot be very far distant when the Protestant Power, moving darkly behind the Republican party, will impel it to overt acts even more unmistakable in character than its defeated Senatorial amendment to the Constitution. The Catholic Power is likely to be more circumspect and wily, despite its superior insolence in some respects; for it knows its present numerical inferiority. But just as soon as the people at large come to perceive the (to some) now evident fact, that Romanism and Calvinism are the "powers behind the thrones" in the two great political parties of the day, just as soon will a very large portion of the people, and we hope the larger portion, rise in defence of the old, once-honored principle of the "separation of Church and State," and be quite willing to follow it out to its legitimate results in the "Religious Freedom Amendment." This will surely be the outcome, unless a worse amendment is suddenly sprung upon the people unawares. That is the danger,—precipitation of a Christian Amendment in a disguised shape, like that just escaped.

To avert this imminent and no longer hidden danger, there is need of the utmost activity without delay. The victory of the Protestant Evangelical Power over the Catholic Power in the next session of Congress, which would be accomplished by the passage of the temporarily defeated amendment, would inflame religious animosities all over the land, and call forth "curses, not loud, but deep," in every Catholic heart. If this measure had been brought forward before the Centennial Congress of Liberals, we should have advised the nomination of Presidential candidates then and there,—not expecting them, of course, to be elected, but to serve as a significant warning that there are votes to be lost by attempting to smuggle Evangelicalism into the United States Constitution. It will not be many years, we suspect, before the National Liberal League will prove to be the germ of one of three great parties dividing the nation on a deeper issue than any now consciously before it. We give the politicians, who would trade off the people's equal rights for a mess of pottage, fair warning not to despise the Liberal League too long. Its principles will yet create a new Power for Freedom, mightier than either or both of the "Powers behind the Thrones."

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

The most interesting political event of the week, without any doubt, was the action of the Massachusetts Democratic State Convention. In nominating Mr. Charles Francis Adams for Governor, the Democrats have done, as Lincoln might have said, "a big thing." The Republican papers of course are laboring to prove that the nomination was a political "trick," and made for the purpose of catching votes in other States; but granting this to be true, the trick was one of a kind which every well-wisher of his country would like to have repeated by both parties in every State in the Union. When political parties learn that the very best trick they can play their opponents is to nominate for office the very best men upon whom they can lay hands, we shall all be a long step nearer the millennium than we are supposed to be to-day. The nomination shows that the Democrats, who, as a body, have acted for years with amazing stupidity, are at last learning to profit by Republican blunders.

The Massachusetts Republicans, according to party custom, renominated Mr. A. H. Rice for Governor. Mr. Rice is an excellent man, and has made a very good Governor. There would be little doubt of his reelection were it not that politics in Massachusetts are somewhat "mixed" at the present time. The rabid prohibitionists have made independent nominations for State officers, and claim for their ticket at least 20,000 votes. The uncompromising woman-suffragists, also, will vote for the prohibitionists' candidates, although the number who will do so is an unknown quantity. It must not be forgotten, moreover, that very many Republicans labored hard to bring about the nomination of Adams for Governor in place of Rice a year ago, and many of these are likely to embrace the opportunity to vote for Adams at the coming election. Altogether, therefore, the uncertain elements are enough to make the contest an unusually interesting and exciting one.

Mr. Adams will certainly receive not a few votes from self-respecting Republicans who are justly disgusted with the present management of the party machine. After the late Convention had declared in favor of hard money, specie resumption, civil service reform, and the pacification of the South, it listened to speeches in which the bloody shirt was waved, and the most notorious opponents of civil service reform in the country were warmly eulogized. It then chose a State Central Committee, two of the members of which are "Collector" Simmons—who illustrates civil service reform, à la Grant, by making sure that all custom-house employees "vote right" as well as pay their political assessments—and Mr. B. F. Butler, whose record as regards the sentiments affirmed by the party resolutions is too well known to need repetition in this place. During the proceedings of the Convention, moreover, a casual reference to Butler was received with "loud and prolonged applause"—a fact which indicates something of the feeling of the Republican "machine" politicians with regard to this embodiment of everything to be avoided in American politics. In view of such outrageous inconsistency as that displayed by Massachusetts Republicans, who need wonder if Democratic prospects of success continue to brighten?

According to Mr. H. B. Blackwell, the Republican party of Massachusetts has formally approved of woman-suffrage upon two different occasions, and has twice recommended it for "respectful consideration." According to some other members of the party, however, these approvals and recommendations were really smuggled into the party platforms, and were passed during the confusion of conventions, and contrary to the desire of a majority of those who apparently voted for them. However this may be, the Convention, this year, gave Mr. Blackwell an opportunity to present and urge the adoption of a resolution inviting women of legal age and other qualifications to attend primary meetings (caucuses) and to speak and vote in them upon the same terms with men. The resolution was rejected. Thereupon, Mr. Crocker, of Boston, called the attention of the Convention to one of those meaningless paragraphs, which party-managers delight to get into platforms, and pointed out therein a passage which might be construed to mean that the party approved of woman-suffrage. In order to obtain a decisive vote upon the question of woman-suffrage, he then moved that the passage referred to be stricken out, which motion was immediately rejected. We have a right to infer, therefore, that Massachusetts Republicans believe in woman-suffrage, provided the belief will help them to votes, but that they are opposed to woman-suffrage as a practical expedient; that they take, in fact, very much the same attitude as the man who fully believed in a prohibitory liquor-law, but was firmly opposed to its practical enforcement.

The President, we are glad to state, intends apparently to stick to his previously-expressed resolution with regard to the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill; that is, he declines to allow the money which it appropriates to be expended upon any work which cannot be shown to be of national importance, or, as he himself puts it, he will not spend public money to improve the navigation of creeks in West Virginia. The execution of river and harbor improvements has been confided to General Humphreys, Chief of Engineers, and if present orders are carried out without change, the country will be saved about $3,000,000, and the passage of appropriations for bits of jobbery, like those which this bill usually calls for, may become more difficult in future.

A decidedly silly attempt has been made to offset the very serious charge of the New York Times against Tilden—that he swore falsely with regard to his income in 1862—by bringing a charge against Hayes of undervaluation of personal property in making returns to his town or county assessors. The charge involved the valuation of an old horse and buggy, a watch or two, etc.; but although very ridiculous in its details, it has been promptly met and refuted by a detailed explanation furnished by Hayes. The charge against Tilden remains as yet unexplained, although an explanation has been promised, and, we trust, will soon appear.

It is reported that the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty, passed at the last session of Congress, is likely to cause us considerable trouble. By that treaty, various products of the Sandwich Islands are admitted to this country free of duty. But we have already, by treaty with other countries—France, Germany, and Russia, for instance,—agreed to extend to them all the privileges granted to the most favored nation. These countries, therefore, it is intimated, may now claim the privilege of having admitted to our ports, free of duty, such of their products as may happen to be the same in kind as those mentioned in the Hawaiian Treaty. We should not be at all sorry if a considerable amount of trouble should arise from this source. The Hawaiian Treaty was an uncalled-for bit of special legislation, got up in the interests of a few jobbers on the Pacific Coast and in the Sandwich Islands. If it will force our Congressmen into giving a really careful consideration to our tariff laws, it will do more good than we thought possible when it passed.

Since the death of Custer, the campaign against the Indians has met with no success whatever, and we can hardly escape a conviction that its management does not add greatly to the reputation of those having charge of it. While the Indians were encamped and ready for battle, it seemed impossible for Terry and Crooke to unite their forces and attack the camp; and when, after long delay, a junction was at last effected, an immediate separation became necessary, in order to pursue the retreating Indians who had broken into two distinct bands. And now we learn that all pursuit is abandoned, the Indians having dispersed or escaped, or are returning by roundabout ways to the various agencies, to be fed and clothed by government during winter. It seems to be true, also, that our troops were insufficiently provided with food, clothing, shelter, and medicine, that they have endured great hardships and contracted disease by exposure to storms while clad only in summer clothing, and that when last heard from they had a very long march before them, and were upon half rations and without tents. And simultaneously with this last news comes the report of a new and solemn treaty with the Indians, conducted by United States Commissioners, with all proper dignity, at the Red Cloud Agency. And thus our Indian "system" is made to present alternately the phases of a farce and a tragedy.

For the coming two months we may expect to read about outrages, riots, political emutes, etc., in addition to the "charges" and reports of rallies, monster meetings, and stump speeches which are now so plentiful in the newspapers. And after all the noisy talking and florid writing have ended, we shall probably discover that some essay quietly read last week at the meeting of the Social Science Association contains more genuine thinking, and will really do more to settle some question by which society is now disturbed, than all the rant and declamation of the presidential campaign. We present this suggestion as one which may enable some of us to endure with greater equanimity the nerve-disturbing events which are sure to take place between the present time and next November.

As details of the Bulgarian atrocities are brought to light, public feeling with regard to them, especially in England, becomes intensified. Without doubt, the Turks appear to have massacred, with every attendant of horrible cruelty, from 12,000 to 15,000 defenceless people. Mr. Gladstone addressed an immense gathering of his constituents, last Saturday, with reference to these atrocities, throwing the responsibility for them directly upon the Turkish government. The Porte has ordered an investigation to be made, and the investigator has returned a whitewashing report, which is likely to receive but little credit, as it by no means agrees with the results of the inquiries conducted by our Mr. Schuyler. Fighting still continues, to the disadvantage of the Servians, in the vicinity of Alexinatz; and a battle is reported as having taken place between the Turks and Montenegrins, the battle being successful. Very earnest efforts are undoubtedly making by the European powers to put an end to the war, but the Turks will not consent to an armistice, although, as reported, they are willing to listen to proposals for peace.

ENGLISH SKETCHES.

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, Aug. 10, 1876.

You will have heard, long before this reaches you, that our Prime Minister, Benjamin Disraeli, has crowned himself with the coronet of an earl, and has gone up on high. In the serene atmosphere of the House of Lords he will be free from the magnificent attacks of Mr. Gladstone, and from the terrible onslaughts of Robert Lowe. His failing health appears to have driven him into this retreat from the field of battle, and there are those who say that, after for a short space contemplating the struggles of his lieutenants, and guiding the first campaign of his melancholy hosts below, he will recline in the blue heaven of rest beside Lord Russell, on the thrones of the gods who have passed into Olympus from the struggles of earth. There is but little doubt that in these days of the triumphing democracy the Prime Minister must sit in the People's House. He is the real President of England, our true ruler; and the sovereignty of a man who is not elected by the people will be impatiently borne. So long as Buckingham sent him to the House, he held his seat at the will of the electors; but now that he sits, whether or no the people please, his position will be much altered in the public mind. The strong Democratic feeling will rebel against him; and the First Minister, no longer in contact with the representatives of the people, no longer so palpably responsible to them, no longer to be directly questioned, praised, censured, by them, will soon find his influence and authority dwindle away, while the jealousies his presence suppressed will break out in the party he has led for so many years. Benjamin Disraeli was a power in the State; the Earl of Beaconsfield will soon be a nonentity. The Jewish World has been lately publishing some articles on him very bitter in their tone. It speaks of him, and speaks of him justly, as "beginning life with one thought and aim, and it has pervaded everything he has put his hand to; the ambitious self-seeker, the scheming politician, the manufacturer of personal and parliamentary epigrams, has never risen into the atmosphere of the artist. All has been subordinated to the dominant idea of getting on, advancing himself, and conciliating and deluding his party, or confounding, ridiculing, and retaliating upon his opponents." The criticism is severe, but who can say that it is not just?

The most extraordinary effusions come pouring down upon us as we wander sceptically along this vale of tears. Just take, as a specimen, a sheet of paper, round the edges of which are printed questions: "Are you on the road to heaven, or on the road to hell?" "He that believeth not shall be damned." "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners—are you saved?" "Ye must be born again." Inside this frame are three columns, the centre one being occupied by a hymn of which the sense and the poetry are equally horrible. The left-hand column is headed: "Satan says"; and then follow various remarks, such as, "You are born a child of God. . . . Do the best you can and you will get to heaven," and so on. The right-hand side is headed: "God says"; and the remarks are very discourteous: "You are born in sin, and a child of wrath. Man's righteousness is filthy rags." Neither Satan nor God seems to want to be related to man: Satan says, "God is your Father"; God says, "Ye are of your father, the devil." Turning to the other side, it is still viler. "All are guilty. Satan's chains."

"Trifler, how flies time with thee? How lives thy soul? What peace hast thou within thee? Is it the peace of God, the peace of a blood-washed soul, or the dull peace of a sin-stricken soul, and heart, hardened with repeated guilt, the shadow of hell falling upon thee? Thou art dying now, yes, every day brings thee closer to thine endless home. Hark! I how solemn sounds that awful bell of eternity as it tolls for thee! how it shakes thy sleeping soul! how it starts thee from thy wilful slumbers! again it sounds—again, and again, till it is forgotten mid the hellish pleasures of this doomed world."

Then the "trifler" is told that his "breath mingles with the chained souls of the world." How this is managed we are not told, for we walk by faith. Again:—

"Dost thou not hear the awful preparations for the Great White Throne? Hark to the sounds, quivering soul! Doth not thy blood curdle at the thought? And yet thou art still unsaved, resting amongst the crowd of the condemned, hanging on to the loose earth and grass about the precipice. How it crumbles away! And now grasping, now clinging, the stones slipping from beneath thy feet, thou wilt soon be hurled to the bottomless pit with the mocking smile on thy lips."

What, in the name of common-sense, are the "awful preparations" that "triflers" hear and curdle at? Angelic masons and carpenters setting up the Great White Throne with celestial hammers and trowels? Surely Dr. Talmage must have a son or a brother on this side the Atlantic who furnishes tracts for distribution among the unsaved. One must presume that these hysterical people are all among the saved. It therefore becomes a serious question whether it would not be advisable to take measures to insure being lost, for an eternity with these tracts would be worse than any lake of fire. A Mr. Warrington is great at this kind of work, and we remark, as a noteworthy fact, that it generally seems to go hand-in-hand with densest ignorance. "Merabaud says, it is likewise in Nature that is formed intelligent, feeling, thinking beings." Merabaud appears further on as Meribaud, and we are not very clear who is intended. Then we are told that "body and soul will be resurrected after this life"; we hear of Robespierre, and it seems that he was an atheist. One lady, replying to a secular lecture, begins by asserting that "I have not studied," and then goes on to speak of what, by her own confession, she knows nothing about. Spurgeon was wise when he rebuked those zealous and ignorant Christians who make themselves so ridiculous, by telling them that nowadays the Holy Ghost did not teach men tongues, and he would advise them to buy a grammar before they began to preach.

While the assistance of culture is thus ignored by so many Christians in their efforts to reach "the masses," this very aid is diligently sought by their antagonists. Witness the remarks of the Bishop of Peterborough at the annual meeting of the Leicester-shire Church Extension Association. He said:—

"Let them remember that they had to encounter a growing danger nowadays; a danger not of insincerity, but of hostility—not of hostility alone to the Church, but increasing hostility to the faith. The growth of secularism and of practical infidelity was a real danger, not merely to the life of the Church of England, but to the life of Christianity in England. The masses who were unevangelized and alienated would not remain in the dull, unintelligent torpor in which they remained last century; bad influences were at work leaving them in the direction of secular unbelief and antagonism against Christianity. He had seen lately publications cheaply got up, cleverly written, and largely circulated amongst the working-classes of this country, which for virulence of abuse and rancor of hate against not merely the doctrines of Christianity, but the very person of its blessed founder; which for foulness of denunciation were unparalleled in literature, and which were not to be exceeded by the foulest and most horrible utterances of the last century, even amid the horrors of the French Revolution. When these things were circulated by the working-class around them, surely it was no question whether they should hesitate or pause for a moment in carrying on church extension."

We do not quite know where, in secularist literature, Bishop Magee finds the "foulness" to which he alludes; perhaps he only uses the word in a "spiritual sense," and would call any attack upon Christianity foul without reference to its manner. As to the largeness of the circulation, of that there is, fortunately, no doubt possible, and the sale is a rapidly increasing one. To take but a single illustration: booksellers always expect to sell less in the summer than in the winter, and the sale of books and papers is always very slack during August. This year, we are weekly selling a larger number of National Reformers than we have sold during even last winter, and we are printing more each week. Judging from previous experience, the sale next winter ought to be enormously increased. In addition to the National Reformer, the secular party supports the Secular Chronicle, and Mr. G. J. Holyoake's new paper, the Secular Review, has made a very good start. Leaving aside the journals of the movement, and glancing at the general literature, we find the sale unprecedentedly large: the first number of the Free Thinker's Textbook, published in April, is already in a sixth edition and is still selling rapidly, while—a curious proof of how widely secularist literature spreads—the National Secular Society's tracts are being translated into both Spanish and Italian. Side by side with this the numbers of enrolled secularists are rapidly increasing, and wherever we look signs of progress may be seen.

Statue-erecting seems popular just now. Every one knows of that which is to be erected to Bruno, and we have just heard from Holland that a statue of Spinoza is being prepared, and it is to be erected at the Hague. It will be unveiled next year in February, on the two hundredth anniversary of Spinoza's birth, and will, indeed, be a worthy companion to that of the great Italian martyr. Spinoza, also, suffered a long martyrdom, although he died a natural death; excommunicated by his co-religionists, an outcast from his people, the noble, great mind bore the lot that ever falls to the grandest of the race. He was despised, scoffed at, hated, slandered, and the day of his triumph has only lately dawned; but his name shines clear forever in the heaven of fame, one of those sun-names of thought that arise only at long intervals in the history of the world.

A book has lately been issued by the Christian Evidence Society, written by the Rev. Dr. Sanday, on The Gospels in the Second Century, which is worth noting, as showing the advance of rationalistic thought among Christian apologists. The reverend author candidly gives up point after point, once defended; he complains that the author of Supernatural Religion takes a narrow and old-fashioned view of revelation, and deals generally with the subject from an extremely liberal point of view. We find him acknowledging that Justin Martyr probably used some gospel now lost; that the gospel of Mark alluded to by Papias cannot be the one now known under that name; that the gospels were composed from older documents; and making many other admissions of the same kind. In fact, the whole range of thought is rapidly advancing, and the Orthodox of the last century would have looked with horrified dismay at the "Christianity" of the present day. It would be instructive to draw the picture of Christianity in its various phases of development, and see how often changed its form and doctrines have been during the nineteen centuries which it claims as the period of its existence.

Communications.

THE MAIN QUESTION: IS THE BIBLE INSPIRED?

EDITOR INDEX:—

I have often thought that if Liberals were more careful and persistent in presenting the facts as to the authenticity of the Bible, their views on its claims to be regarded as the inspired word of God, and other kindred topics, and would not allow themselves to be diverted from the main question into the discussion of side issues of little or no importance, their cause would find many more adherents than it does now. We must prepare the minds of the people for the reception of Liberalism by first breaking up their faith in dogmatic Christianity, for the doctrine that belief is a fit subject for rewards and punishments, upon which Christianity is based, stops further investigation, and tends to make all those who subscribe to it more or less hypocritical, if they pretend to reason at all. I would therefore try to impress upon my Christian friends that the Bible is not the inspired word of God, for the following reasons:—

Firstly: Belief is not volitional, but is the result of observed facts and conclusions drawn therefrom, as each one sees and reasons from his own standpoint. Belief is therefore not a fit subject for rewards or punishments. It follows that the promise of rewards and punishments for what we believe or disbelieve, as found in the Bible, is inconsistent with justice, because it would be unjust to punish one for what he could not help.

Secondly: The unquestioning belief demanded of all Christians, in the incarnation, death, resurrection, and intercession of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, as the foundation upon which they base their hopes of salvation, is inconsistent with the exercise of our reasoning faculties. Such a belief shuts the door of doubt, which is but another name for reason, and effectually prevents any further investigation as to the truthfulness or falsity of Christianity; while, in order to obstruct still further the pathway to a knowledge of the truth, those who dare to entertain a doubt as to the truthfulness of the above fundamental doctrine of Christianity are threatened with the pains and penalties of the damned. "He that believeth shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned"—is the fiat by which we all must stand or fall, if the Bible be true. The best illustration of this unquestioning belief is found in the life of a true child of the Roman Catholic Church, who accepts the teachings of his church and the mandate of his spiritual adviser as the voice of God. This very belief which is savagely condemned by Protestants as the means by which the Church of Rome has so skilfully enthralled the intellect and conscience of her votaries as to make them her eternal slaves,—this very belief, I say, is also exercised by and demanded of all Protestants, only not in regard to the same doctrine.

Thirdly: There is nothing in the Scriptures, in regard to scientific knowledge or the civilization of the age in which they were written, that is in advance of the knowledge or civilization possessed by the people of that time. From this we may infer that, while God may have written the Bible by the pen of inspiration, it was possible for man to have done it without his aid. But even this inference is shaken by the fact that many scientific discoveries, made since the Bible was written, show that much of the so-called knowledge possessed by man at the time the Bible was written must have been erroneous. In other words, wherever there has been any conflict between science and the Bible teachings, the Bible goes to the wall. The inevitable conclusion follows that an omniscient God could not have inspired any one to have written the Bible, because, if he had, every new scientific discovery would have been in accordance with, and confirmatory of, its teachings, instead of being directly opposed to it.

Fourthly: The Bible cannot be the inspired word of God, because it contains many imperfections and inconsistencies, many ambiguous and vague expressions, many incomprehensible and irreconcilable passages. Even the most learned cannot agree as to what is the will of God, or his intentions toward the children of men. How inconsistent with justice to suppose that an omnipotent, omniscient, truthful God could have revealed his will to man in such ambiguous and obscure language that no two can understand it alike, and then hold him accountable for not understanding and doing it, when it was in his power to have so revealed himself to us that there could not have been the least possibility of a difference of opinion as to what his revealed will is! God could not have permitted any alteration or mistranslation of his message to mankind, and then hold them responsible for disobeying it, when this disobedience arose not from any lack of a desire to do his will, but because they did not understand it on account of his message having been falsely translated or intentionally altered. God must not only have miraculously revealed his will to man, but he must also have exercised a miraculous supervision over it at all times since, so that no alteration or mistranslation by any one could have been made. The fact that alterations and mistranslations have been made is an evidence that he does not exercise such supervision, and therefore that he did not inspire any one to write it. To illustrate this point more forcibly, let us suppose a case: take, for instance, an agent of a railway company, who acts under instructions of the superintendent at head-quarters. If that superintendent fails to transmit to the agent his will, concerning the transaction of any business by the agent, in plain, unambiguous language, which it is in his power to do, he (the superintendent) is responsible for the misunderstanding, and not the agent. This would be made still more obvious, if it could be shown that the agent had acted in accordance with his (the agent's) understanding of the message, and that he was desirous to obey orders, and that, on the other hand, the superintendent was fully competent to have written and transmitted the message in such terms and manner that there could have been no possibility of misunderstanding it, but that it was through his (the superintendent's) carelessness or negligence that the misunderstanding occurred. If, under such circumstances, the superintendent would discharge the agent, or in any other way punish him for the part he took in the transaction, is it not plain to any right-thinking mind that it would be a gross injustice to the agent? This, to my mind, is a parallel case to the one we are at present considering; namely, God's message to the children of men, and who is responsible for the misunderstanding.—God, who had it in his power to prevent the misunderstanding, or the people, who acted in good faith. In accordance with the above illustration, it is plain that God is responsible for any misunderstanding arising from a study of his recorded will; but, since God cannot be unjust, the logical conclusion forces itself upon the candid mind that God had nothing to do with the writing of the Bible, and did not inspire it.

Fifthly: The Bible could not be the inspired word of God, because, if it is, the Ecumenical Council which assembled at Carthage in the year A. D. 397, and proclaimed the infallibility of the author of every book which they then decided to include in the Bible, and Pope Innocent the First, who confirmed their decision, must have been inspired, or infallibly directed as to what books should be retained, and what ones excluded.

If the Pope and his council were then infallible, what reason have we for denying that they are now infallible? Protestants practically acknowledge that the Ecumenical Council of Carthage was infallible, as well as the Pope, by receiving the books which they (the council and Pope) have pronounced canonical, as the inspired word of God. The Protestants are either forced to the alternative of acknowledging the Pope and his council as infallible, or, by rejecting this dogma, of declaring that there is no certainty as to whether any of the books pronounced canonical by this Council are inspired. In other words, if the Pope and his council were infallible, the books they pronounced canonical must have been inspired, and they now, as then, are infallible, as they claim. If, on the other hand, they were not inspired, then we have no authority for the inspiration of the Bible, and they are not infallible. Protestants, by accepting this decision of the Pope and his council, practically admit their infallibility, and should cease to protest.

MONS.

EXON VALLEY, PA., Aug. 1, 1876.

WESTERN WHISPERS.

DEAR INDEX:—

Would you not like to hear some occasional whispers from this so-called Western Athens?

We have just been enjoying some intellectual ambrosia in the shape of a discussion between Mr. B. F. Underwood and Rev. Clarke Braden. The discussion continued for two weeks, and covered a broad field of thought. Intense interest was manifested by the people. The results of the debate, direct and indirect, are of the most healthful kind, and most gratifying to all liberals, including a presentation of issues, a diffusion of liberal ideas, and an incitement to thought which could have been effected by no other means. Eight propositions were debated. Those affirmed by Rev. Braden are too verbose to be given in this article. Those affirmed by Mr. Underwood are as follows:—

1. The universe is eternal and self-existent; and all the phenomena observed by us are the result of causes purely natural and independent of an "absolute First Cause," or "a God who created, governs, and sustains all things, and who is infinite in his perfections and attributes."
2. Religion had its origin in the ignorance and misconception of the undeveloped mind, and it is a hindrance to human improvement, except in proportion as it is changed, with the increase of intelligence and culture, into reverence for the true, the good, and the beautiful in Nature and art; while, on the other hand, the enlightened human reason is the highest standard and rule that man possesses, and science is the greatest civilizer of the race.
3. The Hebrew and Christian Sacred Scriptures of Old and New Testaments are of human origin.
4. These Scriptures, when accepted as of divine origin and authority, are injurious in their influence on man.

Mr. Underwood's words were half battles—yes, whole battles—for the truth. Under the first proposition—according to my way of thinking—he taught cosmic theism in contradistinction to anthropomorphic theism; under the second proposition, he taught free religion in contradistinction to all religion of bondage. Under the last affirmation, he seemed to speak, almost all the while, from the very topmost heights of inspiration.

Mr. Underwood also delivered two lectures while with us. Both were masterly productions, indicative of profound and comprehensive thought. The one on "Woman, her Past and Present, her Rights and Wrongs" seemed of especial merit to your correspondent, as a bold and wise handling of the subject. Mr. Underwood proved himself a true master of the situation in the domain of thought, and the liberality of this place are under an immeasurable debt to him for the splendid work which he wrought out.

One word about ourselves. As is the case in nearly every Western city, the great mass of liberals here are indifferent and asleep. But a small number of wide-awake, sincere, and earnest souls formed an organization, last December, which is known by the name of the "Independent Religious Society." Its basis is, to all intents and purposes, the same as that of the Free Religious Association, and it is, in fact, a miniature Free Religious Association. Every Sunday morning, at eleven, we hold a free conversation, at which an article on some religious or scientific subject is read and commented upon. At three in the afternoon, the society listen to a lecture from the writer of this article. On last Sunday, week, the topic of my address was "Confucianism: a Religion without any Devil and without any Hell—a Religion of Love and Worldly Virtue." On last Sunday the topic was as follows: "Free Religion and Christianity: an Answer to the Question, What have you to put in the place of Christianity?" On next Sunday I intend to speak on the "Defeated Constitutional Amendment." Perhaps you can obtain from these topics some inkling of the sort of mental pabulum with which the liberals of Jacksonville are furnished.

And now the Church-and-State question. Should not the developments of the last month remove from all honest and intelligent minds all objections to the Liberal League movement? Liberals must now accomplish the education of the people, else freedom will be but a name, and justice a synonyme for oppression. The people are perishing for the want of wisdom. In words written by the editor of THE INDEX five years ago: "Never before did I feel such an overwhelming conviction of our common duty to educate the people betimes." Never before have I so felt the responsibilities resting upon all liberals—yes, the responsibilities which weigh down upon our own shoulders. Heretofore there have lingered in my mind some doubts concerning the wisdom and need of the Liberal League movement. But those doubts are now all dispelled, as morning clouds are swept away by the rising sunlight. Perhaps my contribution toward the up-building of the structure of Freedom and Equal Rights in America may not be of more weight than that of a single pebble toward the up-building of a continent in the sea; but to the extent of my power and influence, in the lecture-field and in all other fields, you may count me one earnest worker for the Liberal League and the "TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE." This is no conclusion formed in haste, but the deep and settled conviction of my whole soul. In the conflict against the Christian slave-power, there may be no pleasure, according to the common measure of that word; but there must at least flow through the soul the rivulet of peace which springs from the fount of duty.

Very truly yours,
S. W. SAMPLE.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., August 30.

LIBERAL CATHOLIC INFLUENCE.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

I am glad to see THE INDEX waking up to the fact that the great danger to religious freedom lies rather in the alliance of the Republican party with the bigoted Orthodox Protestants of the country, than in the alliance of the Democracy with the Catholics. You have, at least, caught a "glimpse" of the true situation, in your issue of August 31. You say: "The Democrats in the Senate doubtless voted as they did (on the school amendment) to conciliate the Catholics; and the Republicans, doubtless, to conciliate the Protestants. . . . But the Democrats voted right on that amendment, saving the country from inconceivable disaster, at least for a while; and the Republicans voted wrong." Thank you for the admission that the Democrats may not only vote right when the Republicans vote wrong, but that they may do so "to conciliate the Catholics."

It is an oft-recurring phenomenon in religious development, that under the ecclesiastical garb of those church organizations which are most given to form, and ritual, and rigid verbal statement of creed, there is evolved a liberality of sentiment in some directions exceeding that which is to be found in other churches which are less given to form and ritual. Thus, in the Church of England, we find many to-day who are ready to welcome all advances in science and government; who are thoroughly imbued with liberal ideas; and who, on most practical questions, involving a recognition of the principles of religious freedom, would take position by the side of the most liberal thinkers.

So it will be found, when these questions are forced to an issue, that the second and third generations of Catholics in this country have become so imbued with Republican ideas that patriotism, and justice, and fairness will control their influence and their votes, against all attempts of their priests to the contrary, should such be made. On the question of Sabatarian reform, the Bible in the public schools, and others of like nature, the liberal Catholics are our natural allies, in opposition to the rigid Puritanical notions of some Orthodox Protestant sects.

Is it not better to view these questions more philosophically, recognizing fully the difficulty of the work before us, in completing the secularization of our government, and welcoming all allies cordially, instead of adopting a narrow, partisan view, and denouncing unjustly all Democrats and all Catholics? The Democratic party, so far as it has taken issue upon these questions, has more nearly accepted our ideas than the Republican party. May not its very relation with the Catholics urge it forward toward higher ground on these subjects, while the overwhelming public sentiment against Catholic aggression will prevent it from yielding too much to that influence? Without any great confidence in the high moral principle of any political party, such, it seems to me, may be the logic of events.

Yours faithfully,
LEWIS G. JANES.

[Mr. Janes is too much enamored of that unreal phantasm, Liberal Catholicism, to read even his

INDEX aright, which he insinuates has been "denouncing unjustly all Democrats and all Catholics." Such warped and mistaken judgments as this show how blindly he is following the spectre of his delusive dream. There is no such thing as Liberal Catholicism. There are liberals at heart (more or less) who still stay nominally in the Church; but they are not Catholics, and have no influence whatever in the course pursued by the Church. Mr. Janes fondly imagines that Liberal Catholic influence will persuade the Democrats to take "higher ground," and thus lean on a broken reed which will pierce his own side. But we are glad to see that he has at last waked up to perceive the "very relation with the Catholics" which he formerly denied was sustained by the Democrats, but now inadvertently admits.—ED.]

A FORSAKEN WORD.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—You rejected the title of Christian because the name had become intimately associated with so much that was inimical to liberty and the highest education of man.

I now call upon you to abandon and reject the word reform, and the title reformer, for a similar reason. You and I were born and bred New England reformers. We have sat at the feet of Garrison, Smith, Parker, Weld, Whittier, Child, Douglass, and others of the noblest band of men and women that ever honored the human race. We have been inspired by Emerson, Carlyle, Thoreau, Channing, and other authors of the cream of a noble literature. In the light of such teaching we have learned to reverence solid human character, and natural, genuine, unpretentious human worth. Per contra, we have also learned to distrust noise, pretence, and bluster; to abhor shams and shoddy; to detest mere sentimental speculations. Have we also learned to distinguish between the false and the true, the humbug and the genuine, the shoddy and the pure "all wool"?

If we have (considering the wisdom of the teachings above-mentioned), what should be our attitude toward the popular reformers of this Centennial year?

The preachers say that the devil is fond of disguising himself as an "angel of light." It is evident that he has improved the opportunity, and exercised said fondness to a remarkable degree during the past four years! Never before has reform made so much noise; never has it made less substantial progress.

Why, sir, how can you any longer be a reformer, when you see who the reformers of 1876 are? For my part, I reject the title with derision and disgust! Hereafter a rose by any other name will smell sweeter to me than by that. It is bad enough to be called a Christian; but to be called a reformer! Ugh! No man who wears that label can have my vote; neither will I knowingly support any person or paper that wears it. I am not to be overcome by such miserable imposition. After having sworn allegiance to the genuine, the good, the pure, and the true, am I expected to follow and support—good God! Just think of it! There is Tilden and the Democratic party; there is the unanimous Roman Catholic Church; the Christian Amendment party; the whiskey ring; the Tammany ring; the soft money ring; Jay Gould; "the world, the flesh, and the devil." Never! Never! My list is imperfect. Others should be included, not forgetting those sentimental blunderheads who, with wonderful uprightness and perfect rectitude, are sure to bolt from something or other precisely when their enemies desire they should.

But I can say no more. My heart is filled with grief to think that a word once so sacred, once so deeply revered for its beloved associations, should be captured by the evil one and put to the degrading service of aiding all the hosts whose advance is a menace to the future prosperity of the American Union.

Truly your friend,
EX-REFORMER.

MATERIALITY AND IMMATERIALITY.

Consciousness, which I define as the sense of realization, announces the incontestable fact of our personal existence, and the same unimpeachable witness declares that we are endowed with sensation; and these together affirm that we are environed by an external universe.

Reason as we may, we cannot dispossess ourselves of these perceptions, although, when we attempt to analyze sensible things, they so constantly evade our efforts that some are led to doubt or seem to doubt their existence, and persuade themselves to believe that they live in a world of immateriality; of "sensations and impressions" merely.

The great controversy of the present day seems to be upon the question of a monistic or dualistic universe: a world of matter on the one hand, and on the other a world of matter and something else that is not matter; whether matter exists in and of itself while all else is naught, or whether something that is not matter exists independently of and superior to matter, or inhering in matter and coexistent with it; and this something else is defined as mind, soul, spirit, power, force, God.

The theological mind and the unscientific mind will always prefer to assume the existence of creative power, or mind, as the easiest method of disposing of the difficulty; while the materialist is driven to prove his position demonstratively. The teleologist assumes, if he cannot prove, a final cause, and takes refuge in the unknowable; but the materialist has no such refuge.

Let the materialist, if he can, conceive the existence of a universe of inert matter, destitute of gravitation, cohesion, and motion, cold, dark, and dead, existing in illimitable space, at absolute rest during a past eternity of ages. It comprises all the matter in the universe—nothing else. How is it to be set in motion? It cannot move itself. It must be moved by something that is not matter. What is that something? Not matter, but power. That power must be preëxistent to it or coexistent with it; either external to it or inherent in it, but immaterial.

The first effect of power must be motion. Matter once in motion must continue to move eternally, unless arrested by a counteracting power. An atom once in motion must cause motion in another atom, until the whole mass is moved. The first effect of motion is to beget heat; heat begets more motion and that motion more heat. Now what is this power begetting motion? We assume it to be electricity. How came it to begin to act? Here we are at the end of our tether. Science cannot answer. We know the fact that it does act, and, motion once obtained, we have all we need wherewith to build a universe. Electricity begetting attraction, attraction motion, motion heat, heat light, and all these combined developing life, consciousness, sensation, instinct, intelligence; all these are not matter, but modes and degrees of power made manifest through the varieties of organization. The facts of to-day inform us that matter and power, potential or actual, are always found together, and from these facts our data must be taken.

The stereotyped Aristotelian doctrine of the universe of matter and mind has had its day. We are not bound by assumptions a priori, and the testimony of Nature does not assure us that all her manifestations of power are intelligent and conscious.

What is it that causes iron and steel to draw toward the magnet, and similar magnetic poles to repel each other? Is it mind? What causes the sap to rise in vegetation, and water to run down an inclined plane? Is it mind? What causes a compound of sulphur, nitre, and carbon to explode when brought into contact with a spark? Mind? By what agency does stone or iron sink in water, wood float, and gas rise to the surface and escape into the atmosphere? By mind? So far as evidence goes, power does not in these cases manifest understanding or will. We have a universe of matter and power, materiality and immateriality, mind being evidently the higher or highest manifestation of power.

D. S. GRANDIN, M. D.

UPPER GLOUCESTER, Me.

THE AMHERST RADICAL CLUB.

DE RUYTER, N. Y., Aug. 30, 1876.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—As a member of the Amherst College Radical Club, I wish to thank you for the kindly notice of us which appeared some months ago in your columns. Very likely more has been said about this organization than its importance has warranted. The statements, however, which have been published in several papers, including the Springfield dailies, the New York Independent, and, I believe, your neighbor, the Congregationalist, about its decline, as a result of the labors of Rev. Joseph Cook, are totally unfounded. His lectures were able and liberally patronized by the Club, but had the effect of multiplying its meetings and increasing their interest, instead of convincing a single member. A very few were won by a revival which was not, of course, engineered by human agency or designed to withstand the liberal tendency of college thought! Their places, however, were more than filled by others. The Club's last session, held a few days before the close of last term, was one of the best attended and most profitable; and a meeting was appointed, with a subject and leader selected, for the second Sunday in the next college year.

Truly yours,
HENRY DOTY MAXSON.

A WORD ON GEN. DIX.

SUNDAY MORNING, Aug. 13, 1876.

I have just read John A. Dix's letter on church taxation, in which he says, "It is not a subject for human logic," and "one can hardly debate it without a feeling of abasement." Probably it has not yet occurred to the old-fogy writer that real abasement is reached when one allows his mind to become so thoroughly bigoted as to deprive him of all sense of right and justice.

His letter reveals a mine of bigotry so vast that, if it could only be marketed at a cent per ton, it would pay the national debt.

It is amusing to see the advocates of Christianity, whenever it suits their purposes, declaring that—"It has overcome all obstacles"; that—"It is going on conquering and to conquer"; that—"Its success is evidence of its truth"; and in the next breath virtually pleading that it is a pauper, and should be unfairly favored on the tax-list and in the school-room, and in every way and place insisting upon making it the chief of deadheads.

D. B. MORTON.

HE WAS A MAN who had hosts of warm friends, and his death will be sincerely regretted. While deploring his untimely end, however, we must not forget that he was one of that dangerous class of genial swindlers whose loose ideas of right and wrong have done so much towards making us a nation of thieves. An unmitigated rogue, wholly bad in everything, is much less dangerous than a man who coolly perpetrates the most monstrous frauds, and yet is not lacking in those virtues which make his fellow-men love him.—Indianapolis Herald.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 " "	8 " "
" 26 " 51 " "	6 " "
" 52 " " " "	5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 20 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX
No. 1 Tremont Place Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by O. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Barleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. B. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	2.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawi-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	2.00
Edelweiss.....	1.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	1.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	6.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	2.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUECKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately, 21 vols. London, 1871-4. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARK (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	1.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	1.50
CLARK (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.30
CONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
COBBELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Propositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Leibig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.50
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.50
Historical Pictures Relouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede, Romola, The Mill on the Floss, Felix Holt, Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	2.00
Essays. Second Series.....	2.00
Miscellanies.....	2.00
Representative Men.....	2.00
English Traits.....	2.00
Conduct of Life.....	2.00
Poems. With Portrait.....	2.00
May-day and Other Pieces.....	3.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.50
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	2.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.....	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	2.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Selective Aesthetics. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	2.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.00
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	6.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAUTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	1.50
The Marble Faun.....	1.50
The English Note-Books.....	1.50
The American Note-Books.....	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Old Port Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedded Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.75
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skel-ligh.....	1.75
Stories for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Byes.....	1.25
Mopea the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERBOL'S (BOBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection" and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aëronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versabilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. E.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.). Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Moments of Geology.....	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	2.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1829 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	3.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	3.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	3.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
ROUSSEAU, 2 vols.....	2.00
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Moulton, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	2.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Language. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.). Swaglin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoos from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	6.50
Places of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, and the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic America—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.....	1.50
The Two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I and MDCCLIV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Truhy Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.00
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	1.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.....	5.00
The Expense of Heaven.....	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROBESSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	4.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 26 vols.....	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.00
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Condition Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	2.50
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
STOWE (HARRIET BEESCHER) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.00
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Chaucer-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair.....	1.25
The Newcomes.....	1.25
Adventures of Philip Fendensha.....	1.25
The Virginians.....	1.25
Remond, and Love the Widower.....	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 3 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Sketches, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces. *
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.50
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.50
On Cape Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.50
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.00
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	2.00
Forms of Water.....	2.00
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSKY (REV. CHARLES) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V., each.....	2.00
Vols III, IV, and VI., each.....	2.75
WARREN'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Seauterings.....	1.00
Back-Log Studies.....	5.00
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	2.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.00
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	2.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

Digitized by Google

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,
"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"
 contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of religious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES.....	.15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES.....	.40
FIFTY ".....	.75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.50
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Samples FREE. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE KINGDOM OF HUMANITY

IS AT HAND!

The Time has Come for the Separation of the Wheat and Tares.
 Sent on receipt of Ten Cents by MARY E. ADAMS, P. O. Box 117, Milan, Ohio.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Killingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
 1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

T H E

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Free Thought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
 LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.).....	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER.....	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....	3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author)....	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
 O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
 T. W. HIGGINSON,
 W. J. POTTER,
 W. H. SPENCER,
 F. W. NEWMAN,
 CHAS. VOSEY,
 A. W. STEVENS,
 F. E. ARBOT.

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
 Nos. II, III, IV, 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Arbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
- REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.00.)
- RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
- PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; for 1876 40 cts.; four for $1.00.
- FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 cts. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.
 Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,
 and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,
 787 Washington St., Boston.

T H E

PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEINSDORFF ST., San Francisco.

RADICAL LECTURES

BY

B. F. UNDERWOOD.

The following is a list of the subjects on which I shall lecture the coming season:—

Positive and Constructive.

1. THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM, and the Duties of Liberals in the American Republic.
2. THE TRIUMPHS OF LIBERALISM.
3. WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS as a Substitute for the Christian Theology.
4. A TRUE MAN better than a true Christian.
5. JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
6. ORIGIN AND HISTORY of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
7. BUDDHA AND BUDDHISM.
8. ANCIENT EGYPT: Her Laws, her Morality, and her Religion.
9. THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.
10. DARWINISM: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
11. NATURAL SELECTION versus Design in Nature.
12. THE PHILOSOPHY of Herbert Spencer.
13. MODERN SCIENTIFIC MATERIALISM.
14. INSTINCT AND INTUITION: organized experiences of the Race.
15. WOMAN: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
16. PAIN: The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
17. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical and Destructive.

18. THE GENERAL INFLUENCE of Christianity.
19. CHRISTIANITY AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.
20. THE FOUR GOSPELS Unhistorical and Unreliable.
21. THE EVIDENCES for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
22. POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS regarding the Bible and Christianity.
23. POPULAR OBJECTIONS to "Infidelity" answered.
24. THE CRIMES AND CRUELITIES of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
25. BIBLE PROPHECIES FALSIFIED by the Facts of History.
26. THE PROOFS of a Personal, Intelligent Deity examined.
27. THE PROS AND CONS of a Future State.

For terms, &c.,
 Address B. F. UNDERWOOD,
 THORNDIKE, MASS.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.
 Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment.

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President
 R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1876.

WHOLE No. 352.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued falsehood. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

THE FREE GEMEINDE of Philadelphia, as stated in a communication elsewhere by Professor Loos, has constituted itself into a Liberal League, with Mr. William Holdmann as President and Professor A. Loos as Secretary. This is very encouraging.

DR. THOMAS E. MOORMAN, of Mount Zion, Campbell County, Va., has written to the Richmond Christian Advocate that George Brown, a blaspheming and swearing negro, was struck by lightning on the evening of August 6, and that the word GOD was found written on his burned body! Any one who doubts the truth of this impressive tale should address the Doctor.

THE PARIS correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial says: "While Paris has been amusing itself, and reading on its walls every day the words which no government dares to erase, 'Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité,' the so-called French republic has given up real power over the nation to the one party which is united—the clerical party. There are in France four hundred thousand priests, and they act as one man. Orleanists, legitimists, imperialists, republicans may divide into rights and lefts and centres, but the priesthood knows no division, and they are absolute masters of the situation."

THE NEW YORK Irish World cannot fail to exert in some respects a very beneficial influence over its Catholic readers. The Tablet having intimated that the Irish cause is nothing but that of the Catholic Church, and that "the Irish quarrel with England is, and ought to be, exclusively religious," a contributor to the Irish World points out that "the Norman Catholic invaders of Ireland were never surpassed in their harsh treatment of the conquered Irish by their Protestant successors." Our Irish fellow-citizens cannot be too soon weaned from the ridiculous notion that unity of religious creed is a guarantee of justice or happiness among men.

WE JUDGE it well to let our readers know what sort of treatment is dealt out to political orators who have had the courage to express heterodox religious opinions openly,—even at the cost of quoting matter otherwise very unprofitable. "Bob Ingersoll's Dream," which is republished in another column, is a sample of the ruffianism to which we allude. Remember that such vile abuse as this is the inevitable outcome of a state of things in which Orthodoxy enjoys political superiority over heterodoxy, and that it will cease to "pay" when liberals have vindicated their equal rights before the law. Equality before the law is in this country the condition of public respect for any class of citizens; and freethinkers are no exception to this rule.

THE SCHOOL BOARD of Manchester, New Hampshire, in which Mr. William Little, Clerk of the Board, has been making a gallant but hitherto unsuccessful effort to get a fair hearing on the Bible-in-schools question, has shown itself a body false to every principle of free speech and fair play. It not only refused, at its session of Sept. 1, to consider the subject then, but refused also to appoint a public hearing on the subject a fortnight later in the City Hall, notwithstanding the fact that Rev. Henry Powers (minister of the Unitarian Society) asked to be heard on behalf of one hundred and sixty-one petitioners for the exclusion of the Bible from the schools. The Board stubbornly refused these petitioners a hearing, both then and subsequently; it refused to hear Mr. Powers on their behalf altogether. This, liberals, is the spirit of the Orthodoxy which controls your School Boards, your Legislatures, your Congresses; it despises and tramples on your equal rights as freemen and citizens. How long do you propose to bow before it in silence and submission?

COL. INGERSOLL takes, we fear, a rose-colored view of the party for which he labors. He said in his speech at New York: "The political principles of the Republican party are as broad as this continent—as extensive as humanity itself. They welcome every one to this country who is a friend of humanity and of human progress. They have a welcome for the Methodist, for the Catholic, for the Old School Presbyterian, and for the infidel, provided he is in favor of the eternal equality of human rights. And the Republicans go further than that; we believe it is right to allow every man to do his own thinking, and to express his own thoughts. We will suffer no fetter on the brain, no chain on the hand of man." If the eloquent freethinker of Illinois can persuade his fellow-Republicans to come out in favor of the "Religious Freedom Amendment," he will make good these fine words. But if they are using him now as a mere catpaw to rake the chestnuts of office out of the fire of this Presidential campaign, only to carry through Congress the Bible amendment for which every Republican in the Senate voted last month, Col. Ingersoll is only forging "fetters for the brain and chains for the hand" which he himself will be compelled to wear.

THE CINCINNATI Herald and Presbyterian thus retells a manifest "pious fraud" about Charles Sumner: "In an article last week, on 'The Great Want of France,' we quoted a paragraph from Mr. Conway, in a recent letter to the Commercial, of this city, in which he attributed to the late Senator Sumner a remark made to Gambetta, during his last visit to Europe, to the effect that 'the great want of France was more vital religion.' In our comments upon this highly gratifying opinion we incidentally stated that we believed that Mr. Sumner was a Unitarian. This has induced a friend, a Presbyterian minister of this city, to call upon us and relate the following conversation he had with Mr. Sumner a year or two previous to his death. He was in his house at Washington, with Mr. Sumner and one other person present, when the minister said: 'Mr. Sumner, I have always understood that you are a Unitarian; that you do not believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ, nor in prayer. For one, I should like to know if it is true.' Mr. Sumner, dropping his head for a moment, replied: 'M. —, I believe in prayer, and I pray daily; and I believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ, and trust him as my Almighty Savior; he is my only trust.' The words of this conversation, our informant says, are distinctly remembered, and were uttered as here related."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Illinois.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
 HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. M. FROTHINGHAM,.....New York.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. R. P. HOLLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
 HON. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAYAGE,.....Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSENTHAL,.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LICK,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Detroit, Mich.
 HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,.....New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL REINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SAYER,.....Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER,.....Chicago, Ill.

Secretary.

R. H. RANNEY,.....Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX,.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 R. H. RANNEY.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,.....Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS,.....Monticello, Arkansas.
 J. L. HATCH,.....San Francisco, California.
 E. B. HAZEN,.....New Haven, Connecticut.
 S. B. WALLIS,.....South Water, Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAVIS,.....Easterville, Iowa.
 HERMANN LIEBER,.....Indianapolis, Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Peoria, Illinois.
 J. E. WALLACE,.....New Orleans, Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD,.....Portland, Maine.
 A. WARREN KELSEY,.....St. Louis, Missouri.
 FRANK J. MEAD,.....Minneapolis, Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE,.....Manchester, New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,.....Lincoln, Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORNE,.....Warren, North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS,.....Providence, Rhode Island.
 R. PETERSON,.....Paris, Texas.
 SAMUEL WATSON,.....Memphis, Tennessee.
 J. O. BARRETT,.....Janesville, Wisconsin.
 WILLIAM H. SAYWARD,.....Dorchester, Mass.
 JOHN L. CUTLER,.....Quilman, Ga.
 GEORGE M. WOOD,.....Washington, D. C.
 (The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.)

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman,.....24 Temple Place, Boston.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS,.....70 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE,.....231 Washington St., Boston.

N.B.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, as above.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
 AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, undimly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Commemoration of the Dead.

BY O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

The festival of All Saints, which was a commemoration of the sainted dead, was immediately followed in the Church by the festival of All Souls, which was a commemoration of the dead who were not sainted. It might appropriately have been called All Sinners, for the dead that were remembered were all supposed to be in the cleansing fires of Purgatory, from which their friends sought to deliver them. The sentiment of All Saints was honor of virtue triumphant; the sentiment of All Souls was pity for virtue under a cloud. All Saints was the day of glory; All Souls the day of compassion; All Saints the day of grateful smiles; All Souls the day of tender tears. The first is kindling, the second sad. The first incites to goodness by the thought of its splendor. The second incites to goodness by the thought of the sorrow that comes from its opposite. On All Souls Day, it was the custom to say masses for the dead, to pray for the peace of their souls, to lay garlands at their graves. Such remembrance was meet, in an age that believed in the efficacy of mortal supplications to mitigate the doom of unworthiness and even to abolish the doom of guilt. And now, when such superstition lingers only with the members of a particular church, there is no special usefulness in remembering the dead, not with any view to the release of their souls from torment, but with a hope that by reviving our best impressions of them and revising our worst we may do something to rescue their names from the shadow of reproach. To remember the dead is what we are all likely enough to do. To remember them kindly, appreciatingly, gently, forgivingly, mercifully, is a duty that all should accustom themselves to perform. Days of commemoration are not amiss; rites of commemoration are becoming. If the dead are great, or fair, or dear, the remembrance of them is natural and easy; we cannot help it; it steals upon us unawares in silent and even in busy hours; they demand and receive our thoughts; to them belong moments of every day; it is not always possible to tell when they are absent from our minds. If the dead are small, or foul, or hateful, the effort is not misdirected that would bring them before us for repeated consideration and judgment. All days are days of loving remembrance of those we love; but for those we love not, days of special remembrance are needed.

For we cannot treat the dead as if they were shadows, phantoms of thought, beings departed, and no more to be reckoned among things that are. On any theory of a future life, even on the theory that there is no future of conscious life, the dead are very real existences. They are as real as our minds are, as real as the world we live in. We cannot banish them if we would; we cannot banish them by forgetting them; they are as near as we are to ourselves, for they are part, and often a great part, of ourselves. The departed are present, the vanished are real. Death in taking them away reveals them, strips off the disguising accessories, the material mask, the incidents that stood between them and us, the appearances that concealed or misled, and by making them mere spirit, pure soul, gives them, to our imagination, a kind of omnipresence. The limitations being removed, the being is diffused; and in being diffused is not dissipated, but made vital rather; in many homes the most real personages are the dead. They inhabit the rooms, occupy the chairs, sit at the table, greet the household in the morning, give at evening the farewell blessing. They are the angels of the house, the ministering spirits to the rest, who come and go and seem like shadows. The reality of the dead is attested by the haunting recollections that cling to places, persons, implements, with which they had been associated. There are places which owe their reality wholly to the dead. Salamis and Marathon, Thermopylae and Waterloo, owe all their interest to the shades that hover over their sods. Ghosts possess them, and hold the visitors there by a spell of memory they cannot break.

The power of the dead is attested by evidence more unequivocal still, if that were possible. Indeed, when we consider our systems of thought, social customs, political institutions, moral ideas, ethical standards, we are inclined to think of the dead as our rulers and kings. They alone hold the sceptre of dominion over the world. What great interest do they not control? The shade of Buddha exercises sway over the millions of people in India and elsewhere who make him arbiter of their faith and master of their observances. Confucius lays the myriads of China under his spell. The unseen forms of Moses and the prophets preside over the pondered future of the Hebrew people. The transfigured shape of the Christ of Judea moves the thought and emotion of the world of Christendom. The fisherman, Peter, sustains by the echo of his word the vast structure of the Roman Church. The tent-maker, Paul, inspires all Protestant churches with his breath. Plato and Aristotle, mighty shades, have shared between them the domain of speculative philosophy for more centuries than Christendom has counted. Leibnitz, Descartes, Spinoza, Newton, Kant, Hegel, each have empires of their own, and count their subjects by tens of thousands. In English literature the dead Shakespeare is king; in German literature the dead Goethe; and under these mighty potentates lesser princes exercise authority over limited areas of mind.

The power of the dead is shown in our customs and institutions which are of their creation. We are like puppets in their invisible hands; they pull the strings that move us; our designs and devices are of their remote suggestion. Our laws bear trace of the present, active, constraining, preventing, commanding energy of legislators, judges, statesmen, who have long been dust, who in history are but names and not always that. Our institutions are the embodied principles of souls departed long ago from their tenements of flesh, but permanent now in dwellings of more enduring material. Our ordinary customs are the trodden ways of multitudes that have gone before us; our bearing, carriage, mode of dress, manner of speaking, are but imitations, or unconscious repetitions of theirs. The dead made the prayers that are recited in hundreds of churches; the dead voice the organ and the choir, dress the altar, robe the priest, put words into the preacher's mouth. It is their wall that sighs through the litany; it is their triumph that shouts in the "Gloria." The unfelt presence of their shadowy hands bows the heads of the congregations at the mention of the great Name. The temple is of their designing, the font of their shaping, the ornament of their carving, the vessel of their fashioning. They spread the communion-table, bless the bread, consecrate the cup, appoint holy day and festival. To move without their knowledge were impossible.

For they shape our features, tint our flesh, color our hair, mould the ingredients of our bodies. Our frames are haunted dwellings; the secret chambers and private closets of the mind are filled with ghosts. We are in their hands, though their hands are thinner than air. For good or evil, for good if we will, they are a destiny.

Let us spend the remainder of our hour in weighing by the scales of thought the relative value of the departed, and estimating the character of our duty toward them. Their offices are many and various, but they are all human.

1. First in the regard of mankind are the religious, the spiritual souls, as they are called, founders of men's faith and practices. Their office, divested of accessories of form and rite that do not really belong to them, is to disclose the reality, the glory, the beauty, of the interior world of sentiment and feeling. They are discoverers of the universe within the heart, its mountain-ranges of reverence, its shadowy forests of mystery, its retreats, its pasture-lands, its harvest-fields, its rivers of life, its deep seas of wonder. They show its firmament covered with stars in the night, and effulgent with sunbeams in the day. They show how high feeling can rise in aspiration, how swiftly it can ascend in prayer, how sweetly it can hope, how fondly it can trust. They reveal the latent capacities of love and fear. "To them it is given," says an eloquent writer, "not to cast an eye around human life and observe by what scene it is encompassed, but to retire into it and reveal what it contains; not to disclose how man is materially placed, but what he spiritually is; to comprehend and direct, not his natural advantages of skill and physical power, but his grief, his hope, his strife, his love, his sin, his worship."

This is a great office, of which the world is not unmindful or ungrateful. The qualities that we describe by the words heart, soul, spirit, are made manifest in all their potency by them. With the unknown Cause they have associated feelings that have filled the vacant spaces of the universe with thoughtfulness and love, and have converted the world into a temple of worship. The word Father as applied to the Supreme Cause is of their inventing. The word Providence they have charged with the tender significance it bears. The conception of heaven they originated, the scenery of heaven they painted. To them we are indebted for our faith in an infinite care, in a loving heart at the centre of the world. There is no necessity for setting apart special days for the commemoration of these. One day in every week is devoted to them. The hours of deeper emotion in every day are theirs. We cannot pass the borderline of ordinary existence without meeting them face to face.

2. Pass from these to the memory of those who have constructed the forms of faith which are the creeds of mankind, the theologians, who, applying thought to the subject of religion, have fashioned the doctrines and systems of doctrines that men believe. It is hard sometimes to think amiably of these when trying to throw off from our minds the intellectual fetters they have forged, and dispel the horrid spectres of opinion which they have conjured up. It is not uncommon to hurl maledictions at them as enemies of the race. To call them fantastical speculators on themes no mortal can comprehend, word-jugglers, phrase-mongers, visionaries, beaters of the air, strivers after wind, foolish squanderers of mental power, idle misusers of human reason, is mild language; to call them intellectual despots whose authority is to be resisted and detested is the prevailing fashion with active minds. These men, if any, it is thought, should be in Purgatory and stay there, till they have atoned for the evil they have inflicted on their kind.

It is not my purpose here, or my wish anywhere, to claim an intellectual value for the speculations of the dead ages. But it is not out of place to say a word in behalf of the men themselves. In thinking of them we ought in justice to remember two things which the world cannot afford to forget. One is, that to these departed ones we owe the passionate desire after truth which is a growing distinction of the human mind. Grant that their search was fruitless; that they started on a wrong track; that they pursued a false method; that they mistook cloud-land for solid earth, and arrived nowhere; grant that, for practical purposes, their expeditions into the region of speculative thought involved a waste of energy, time, and devotion. Still they did seek; such light as they had they followed; such paths as they saw open they trod; they did not go vacant-minded, unquestioning, or unobserving through the universe, but longed to know, were willing to spend their lives in discovering the secret of creation. If they pursued a false method, that was their misfortune, not their fault; if their zeal was intemperate, that, if it was a misfortune, was not a fault, but rather a virtue which we wish more of their descendants inherited; for passion in the pursuit of pure truth is not a failing of our time. As we recall the intellectual audacity of these men, as we look at their voluminous works, as we see the fruits of their toil in libraries of volumes that are never read, our respect rises to veneration, and our feeling approaches gratitude. They are benefactors indeed. Remember them gratefully, too, for another reason,—because they have saved us worlds of trouble by their explorations. By the fidelity of their experiments they have dispensed with the necessity of our making them. By thoroughly demonstrating with toil and sorrow the falsity of their method, they have set us at liberty to adopt another. Their failure earns for us a prospect of success; their defeat allows us to entertain a hope of victory. We owe it to them that we are able to walk as confidently as we do in the paths of rational discovery. They have taught us that some questions it is idle to ask, for it is impossible to answer, and have thus turned our attention to other questions that can be asked with some good prospect of answer. Is not that a noble and beautiful service to render? We recognize it cordially in other departments, celebrating those who have sacrificed themselves even unwittingly for their fellow-men. The Kanes and Franklins, whose search after the polar sea was fruitless, receive our gratitude, and would receive it no less, perhaps even more tenderly, if it should prove that the only thing they demonstrated was the futility of their search; shall we not recognize the courage of explorers in this fine sphere of thought, where guidance is particularly needed and error is especially harmful?

3. Of the dead who have produced the monuments of literature, the historians, poets, writers of drama and fiction; of the artists who have transmitted their power to statues and paintings; the architects who are immortal in buildings; the composers of music, sacred and secular, whose songs and symphonies delight us, it is unnecessary to make mention. They are never forgotten; they are never unhonored. Their souls are held in immortal remembrance. But the mechanics and artisans, the hewers of wood and drawers of water, the delvers and drudges, these, an innumerable company, deserve our commemoration. They labored, and we have entered into their labors. The houses we live in, the implements we use, the fabrics we wear, our steamships, railways, machines, are of their construction. They wrought, and achieved, and died, and are forgotten. We think of them as a host in which only here and there an individual can be distinguished, pressing silently on through the centuries, wasted with hunger, sickness, over-fatigue, violence, the battle with the elements, but gaining recruits as it goes on, clearing the forests, bridging the rivers, subduing wild animals and savage men, and filling up with their own bodies the morasses on which cities were to be built. A host of the dead! Nameless dead! They can be commemorated only in mass. An effort is required to make them personal and interesting. They lose their individuality; they become thin and spectral like mist; but when we summon them they gather, the worn, the haggard, the hard-handed, the sad of countenance, and ask to be remembered as the architects of our material world. From the purgatory of negligence, indifference, contempt, they pray to be delivered; to the hospitality of our hearts they make appeal. It is to the honor of Auguste Comte that he gave a large place to these in his calendar of saints, and appointed days for their commemoration, and claimed for them the admiring homage of living men. "All souls are mine," saith the Lord. And surely these are whose blood has nourished the ground on which we feed.

4. In commemorating the dead we must especially beware how we forget those who, in ordinary life, are always forgotten—the lowly and obscure. These compose the army of humanity; these bear the toil, endure the marches, exhibit the discipline, take the brunt of the day, insure the victory. The general leads, the soldiers move and win. When we decorate the graves of the soldiers who died in the great war for the Union, we remember them all; the sod that covers the private has its bunch of flowers, as piously laid as is the chaplet on the monument of the chief. In that vast army, now an army of the dead, all were not heroes or braves. There were among them poltroons, mercenaries, adventurers, men who entered the army because it offered a field for activity, and men who entered it because it offered an opportunity for plunder. There were demoralized men, idlers, shirks, who were willing to take the risks of the camp for the sake of the fun, or excitement, or gain they expected. But all together they made up the host. Their companionship annobles the ignoble. The cause in which they died glorifies them; and they bring flowers to the dead who had no praise for the living.

The multitude of the obscure makes the human world. The distinguished, as the word itself imports, are the few. The Platos, Aristotles, Shakespeares, Angelos, Raffaellas are rare, and did the progress of mankind depend on them, that progress would be fitful and slow. Notwithstanding their prominence, the praise bestowed on their works, the glory that clusters round their name, the means taken to spread their knowledge and increase the reputation of them, how limited is the area of their influence! How small, comparatively, the number of those who are in the least acquainted with their achievements! What millions in Europe and America never heard of Newton or Bacon, never read a line of Milton, never saw a picture of Titian or a statue of Canova, never heard an oratorio of Haydn, or a symphony of Beethoven, or a mass of Mozart!

Never heard the names, even, of the great masters to whom the cultivated in both hemispheres bend the knee! And yet these millions peopled the earth, had homes there, plied industry, tilled the ground, subdued the beasts, loved, mated, reared families of children, organized existence after a fashion, practised the virtues that conduce to social welfare, prudence, thrift, economy, exercised patience, did justly as well as they knew how, and made existence as sweet as their natures permitted. The majority of them must have led tolerably decent lives in the midst of strong inducements to the reverse; must have set examples respectable under the circumstances; must have been true to such social relations as they knew; must have done their best to adjust their lives to their conditions. They created the soil from which the tall pines and cedars grew, on which palaces and temples and cities were built. They laid the substratum of qualities which the poets and artists glorified.

The multitudinous streamlets of virtue swelled the river on whose broad bosom the mighty ships floated to immortality. The memories of parents and kindred that have been cherished in humble families as devoutly as in kings' houses or in nations' legends; the graces cultivated in lowly homes; the habits of obedience, submission, thankfulness, simplicity, that the poor must form in order to live at all, go farther than anything and all things beside to make the moral universe what it is. History tells nothing of them; it could not; there was nothing to tell. Yet without them there could have been no material for history. The historian records events that occur in presence of spectators, and cause loud reports as they transpire; but the multitude of the lowly have made it possible for great events to transpire or occur at all. They are the gray, solemn ocean, whose level never varies, whose mass neither augments nor diminishes, on whose wind-swept surface the mightiest of the mighty rise and fall, flash and sparkle, rave and dazzle, like evanescent waves.

We think of these multitudes of the obscure dead as a nebulous mass, as the ordinary mind thinks of the white belt we call the milky way. A mass of ignorance, superstition, suffering, sorrow, that no microscopic eye has ever been keen enough to disintegrate. Yet as the milky way is composed of clusters of stars, constellations, each globe whereof is a whole by itself, with orbit of its own, attractions and repulsions to which it is constant, bright companions from whom it cannot separate, so, in this dim conglomeration of souls, each, in his hour and place, stood for one; each was loved, lamented, remembered, by those with whom his life was interlinked. Truth and kindness were mingled with the poverty and sorrow. Those worlds of the dead, whose bodies no cemeteries contain, who were never honored with monumental stone, whose mounds have been obliterated, whose bones were committed to caverns and immense pits, whom the elements swept away, whom the sea engulfed, whom cataclysm overwhelmed and beasts devoured,—where are they? Can we think of them as conscious beings still? The imagination faints under the effort to conceive of them as populating other spheres with their innumerable hordes. But living still they certainly are, living in the eternal rock on which time builds its habitations. FAITH, that marvellous quality of human nature by which we get our hold on the unseen possibilities of things, that, when everything seems crumbling, gives substance to things hoped for, and, when everything seems vanishing, gives evidence of things invisible, is a mass of results from the efforts of these unknown and forgotten children of humanity. HOPE is another, the accumulated radiance from all the eyes that steadily or dimly, through tears, have looked forward to the better time coming for humanity. CHARITY is another, the gathered glow of the countless kindnesses that, like candles, have sent their beams out into a naughty world. PATIENCE is another, the power of endurance hardened by the use of generations, till it has become a moral principle, accepted and sanctioned. TRUTH is another, a solid body of convictions which keeps mankind steady in their relations. Such another is JUSTICE, the habitual, unquestioned sense of equity or righteousness which finds expression in the common law, and establishes its authority in every conscience. These tremendous phenomena are clusters of souls, living powers and dominions over us, whether we be of the least or of the greatest.

5. But in our commemoration of the dead, there are others who must not be forgotten, but must be remembered thoughtfully, if not gratefully. I mean the evil, or those our world has agreed to consider such, the persecutors of their kind, those who have made humanity a prey. The Phillips, the Alvas, the Torquemadas, the Dominics, the Marys, the Henrys, who have played such an awful and bloody part in history. They are numbered now with the departed. Their descendants are few, scattered, powerless. Their day is done; their line is lost; their race is almost extinct. They do not hurt us now; they are hated; their names are by-words of detestation. For ages the memory of them has been harsh and bitter. In our thought we can afford to do them justice. We can afford to remember the age in which they lived, the faith in which they were nurtured, the lessons they were taught, the work that was laid on them by their position and their time. For aught we know, or can judge, they did their best according to the light they had, and deserve more of our commiseration than of our hate. It is very hard to place oneself in the position of people who lived in a wholly different world from ours. It requires knowledge, but, more than knowledge, it requires patient consideration and kindness. Their conduct looks to us so irrational, their thoughts seem so inhuman, their deeds so brutal, their natures so savage, that the temptation to heap obloquy upon them is, to the heedless mind, invincible. Yet, in all probability, they behaved as well, in view of their circumstances, as we do in view of ours. They were at heart no more inhuman than we are; in spirit and intention they were accordant with the temper of their age. Were they in our place they might look back with astonishment and horror on the parts they performed in life, weeping bitterly over the victories of their fanaticism, and at a loss to excuse themselves. It is a duty to forget these horrors if we can, and to see across them the gleams of virtue that did illumine human hearts, if they extended no further.

To say nothing but good of the dead is an old proverb, dictated by good-feeling as well as by charity. The dead are gone. They cannot speak; they have no voice to defend themselves, by explanation or excuse. The motives they acted by were their own, and with their decease have become undiscoverable. The facts they recognized took color from their minds, and cannot be viewed precisely as they viewed them. Their internal conflicts, misgivings, regrets, we know not, and never shall know. Give them, therefore, the benefit of a doubt. The worst men had their apologists and defenders when alive; can we not believe that the apologists and defenders had something reasonable to say for themselves and their clients?

I regard it as a virtue in our time, that efforts are making in every quarter to lighten the burden of odium under which so many conspicuous names have groaned so long. To some, this disposition to clear from reproach the names that history has placed in niches of infamy seems to indicate a weakened moral sense, an insensibility to distinctions of right and wrong, which is the sign of a degenerate age. To me, it indicates a broader wisdom, a more careful consideration, a more humane charity, as well as a profounder philosophy. It is a perfectly legitimate as well as an altogether humane work. Let Nero and Tiberius, Dominic, Henry VIII., and Judas Iscariot have their chance, and let us give them the benefit of any compassion we have to bestow, not merely by calling to mind the good things they actually did, nor by extenuating as far as possible their evil, but by imagining what good things they would have done, had destiny favored them as it favors us. It is right and good that death should glorify. We accept its office gratefully. Death purifies and transfigures. It transforms the mortal into the immortal. The angels are born of death. The saints are of his creation. But for death we should all die. Death lifted Moses from the position of a chief of tribes to the spiritual supremacy over a people. Death took the haggard prophets from their caves and made them oracles of a worldly conscience. Death purged David of his sins, and made him the holy singer of twenty centuries. Death collected the company of the apostles, and gathered the noble army of martyrs. The world had little respect for them till they were reduced to ashes. The shining forms that look down as from the celestial heights of remembrance are the forms of people whose virtues were not seen while they lived. That death should glorify those we love and honor seems to us natural. If it will glorify those whom the world hated and despised it is about a still more excellent work. For death allows us to see that these bad people were of service in their way. Their work, even as they did it, was necessary to the education of humanity. It could not have been omitted without leaving a gap in the line of development that could not be filled up. In the discipline of man every experiment must be tried; the experiment of fanaticism and cruelty, as thoroughly as the experiment of reasonableness and gentleness. And these awful persons whose grim shades loom up so terribly in the past were the men to whom was committed the dreadful duty of conducting the experiments; providential men in their generation, raised up, armed, robed, for that purpose. Frightful destination! To be sent on such a ghastly errand is doom enough; but to be hated, loathed, cursed for it by successive generations of men, is more than it is just they should bear. The service they have rendered in bearing away on their devoted heads the woes that might have befallen their descendants should extort gratitude deep and fervent from us who are among the number of the saved. To stand as scarecrows in the open field of humanity, to bear the pelting and the dripping of scorn for centuries of years, is more than any should be called to. We praise those who show examples of goodness, and win the world to admire and love it. We might, at least, commiserate those who disgust us with examples of vice, and repel the world from practices that are as dangerous as they are shocking. In the education of man, two kinds of angels are required; the bright angels who beckon onward to Paradise, and the dark angels who frighten away from Purgatory. Each renders a service that deserves humble and hearty thanks; thanks in the one case accompanied with smiles, in the other case accompanied with tears, but in both cases alike thanks.

The custom of commemorating the dead with equal and universal kindness belongs to our day, and is one of its chief privileges. In an elder day it was impossible. The Catholic held it a religious duty to blacken the memory of the Protestant, the Protestant made it a matter of conscience to put the worst construction on the deeds of the Catholic; the monarchist thought of the shades of republicans as being in Hades; the republicans thought of the dead monarchists as being in Purgatory. The historical sense was not developed. By an effort of charity, the few larger minds flung a cloak of extenuation over the crimes and sins of their fellow-creatures, but the multitude did not see the necessity of exercising charity, and obeyed the impulse which moved them to detest their enemies.

By our new law, the law of gradual development, this is forbidden. We are obliged to do justice to all the dead, to level, as far as practicable, the mountains of prejudice that divide the sheep from the goats, the saints from the sinners, to interpret all characters by one and the same standard, and study them all in the light of providential law. Ours is the duty to absolve from guilt. It is recorded among the legends of the Church, that a pilgrim, on his return from Jerusalem, when in the neighborhood of Rome saw flames breaking out from the ground, and heard lamentations from the sinners in Purgatory, beseeching him to move the monks of Clugny to put up prayers and make intercession for them. Whereupon, Odito, Abbot of Clugny, instituted the practice of All Souls Day, as a special day for attending to this imperative duty.

We, too, as we make our pilgrimage, hear voices from those who suffer in the Purgatory of human prejudice and scorn, calling on us to deliver them from their torment. We, too, should have All Souls Day for this purpose; only our day should be every day, and our observance the exercise of habitual charity.

[For THE INDEX.]

ARCHBISHOP PURCELL ON THE SCHOOLS.

The public school question has lately received an addition in the shape of a declaration by Archbishop Purcell, defining the position of the Catholic Church towards the public school system. Could Bishop Purcell's declaration have been made before the last political election in his State, at which the school question was made one of the issues, the public might have construed it as an evidence of his personal and private sense of justice in the matter. But, coming as it does now, after the signal defeat at the ballot-box of the Catholic position in that campaign, and directly in the face of another and more important political struggle, it reveals only an acknowledgment of weakness on his side, and a "disposition" to "waive" pretended rights, as he himself says, for the present, and thereby stop further agitation; which, as he well knows, would be disastrous to his cause, and to the political party which espouses it.

Again, this declaration does not mend matters, for the Archbishop's determined opposition to the present school system is visible in every word. While it is not my purpose to discuss his letter in general, there was in it an implied denial of the right of the State to interfere with the education of the child except at the option of the parent; and it is this point, which is at the foundation of the Catholic argument on the school question, that I wish to touch upon.

In the first place, this school question is only one of the many variations of the renewed struggle between "Church and State" which has been going on all over the world for the last few years. The Catholic Church, knowing it to be a struggle for its own existence, has been long making preparations for it; notably so, when she declared herself and her visible head "infallible," whereby she sanctioned all her future deeds, and completed her authority over her children. She even felt compelled to take the offensive; and the turn the struggle has taken in our country shows how determined is the spirit which actuates her and the sagacity and cunning of which her followers are possessed.

The results of this struggle in Germany, Italy, and Canada are well-known. To-day Germany presents an exceptionally fine, honest, and respected government, and an exceptionally high degree of learning, progress, and prosperity among her people. In France, the result has been different, the Catholic Church being to-day virtually in possession of the government, so that only the Church possesses the right to grant degrees, even of law or medicine. This condition of things is very detrimental to these last professions, and singularly out of accord with those principles of justice, equality, and competition which the American Catholic clergy are so fond of holding up to the American people.

In our country, however, where the government is of a republican form, with the principles of religious liberty at its very basis, the Church dares not openly defy it; so it adroitly turns the question into an issue between the individual and the State. But the Catholic Church itself recognizes no individual. It is "one body." It declares itself to be so, and its members are as the particles of flesh that compose the human body. They live, but they can have no separate existence from the Church. When a person joins the Catholic Church and subscribes to its articles of faith, he delivers himself over to the Church in these words: "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church." The Church is defined as being "One, Holy, Catholic, and Apostolic"; which means that the Church shall decide upon all matters of faith, and that the individual consciences of the members must conform rigidly to her doctrines. As a reverend father stated here not long ago: "A liberal Catholic is something that does not and cannot exist." Again, the Church being apostolic, the clergy have legal control over all its members on points of faith; and as almost every question that might arise can be construed as a matter of "faith," it follows that the individual consciences and minds of the Catholic people on any question must be in grovelling subjection. As a proof that the clergy do endeavor to extend their control to other subjects than religion, I could mention one Catholic young man who is somewhat exercised as to how he shall vote this fall. An old relative, not a Catholic, desires him to vote for Hayes; while another relative, who happens to be a priest, says he must vote for Tilden, as "no Catholic can conscientiously vote for Hayes."

In this way, the individual being under the jurisdiction, if not the absolute control, of the Church, any issue between the State and the individual Catholic becomes virtually a conflict between State and Church; and not the Church in this country alone, but the whole Catholic Church at large. Though the Right Reverend Archbishop Purcell tells us that the bishops and clergy in this country have no intentions against the public school system, that does not help matters in the least. Were they ever so innocent of any such intentions personally, the Church in this country is not a separate organization, but is ruled by the same spirit that, securely centred in Rome, quietly promulgates itself throughout its whole empire. We have only to look to France or Spain to find out what this spirit is; and it only needs the power to make itself felt here with the same effects.

Having shown the position of the Catholic individual, whose rights and conscience are supposed to be injured by the present school system, I shall now try to show the relation of the State to that individual. In our country the State is an association of individuals, without regard to religious beliefs, who combine for their mutual protection and welfare, and to secure liberty and justice to all, and who, in order to realize and perpetuate such benefits, delegate to certain legislative and executive bodies of their own choosing the right to enact and authority to enforce such laws as they may deem necessary.

Our ancestors, in forming our present system of government, foresaw the necessity of public education, as a requisite to liberty and justice, and also as a preventive of crime. Unfortunately, crime does and will exist; and one of the first duties of a State is to insure to its members the protection it promises, by the punishment and suppression of crime. If education is a preventive, then assuredly the government, by the authority delegated it by the people, has the right of regulating education; and not only have they the right, but it becomes their duty, to furnish, regulate, and even enforce it. But the Catholic Church, in the person of Bishop McQuaid, says that education, as a promoter of public virtue, is powerless without religion. In reality, it is just the other way. Religion is of no use without education. If we look to the criminal records, we find a surprising proportion of the public offenders are persons who profess the Catholic faith. If we were to accept this fact as a sign of the average Catholic character, or of the efficiency of the Catholic Church as a promoter of morals, we should be answered that it is unfair to take this as a test, as it was only the lowest and most ignorant Catholics who were thus criminal. Catholics would point with pride to the virtues of their educated class, which proves conclusively that it is the education that makes the difference, and not the religion. If the fact of education can make such a difference, even in the Catholic Church itself, then education at once becomes a subject for public control.

There is still another reason why the State has the right to furnish, regulate, and enforce, if necessary, secular education. In order to fulfil its mission, the State must have wisdom in its legislative bodies to make salutary laws, and authority enough to enforce them. But as long as ballot-stuffing, repeating, and bartering are matters of common occurrence, it will be possible for dishonest and ignorant men to be elected into our government. Yet it is only a want of education, and an utter ignorance, on the part of the voters, of their own interests, that makes such things possible. Just as long as such things are tolerated, our government will cease to be respected either at home or abroad.

Again, there are many who, from want of knowledge of the duties and rights of a citizen, imagine that, as this is a free country, they are not amenable to law, or rather that laws are made only to oppose them and trample on their individual rights; and such people constitute a very dangerous class. Now one of the first duties of a State is to take means for its own establishment and preservation, and for the protection of its own delegated rights, so that it may properly perform its functions and fulfil the ends for which it was created, thereby securing the respect of its members and also of other nations. As has been shown, public education, being one of the most necessary conditions for stability, it follows that the State not only has the right to make and enforce educational laws, but in certain cases is absolutely bound to do so as a matter of duty.

AMERICUS.

Boston, Aug. 20.

THE CONDITION OF NATIONAL SUCCESS.

But questions of that kind can only be indicated here, and require great care for their practical settlement. Indeed, I think it doubtful whether it were wise of me to touch more fully upon the many topics which are indicated here in my notes. Let me rather say in conclusion that I have often been struck in England with the charm which Americans seem to feel in visiting those ancient cities of ours, or climbing the battlements of crumbling castles, the names of which are inseparably associated with the great epochs of our noble literature, or with the various steps of that blood-stained progress by which the savage Briton and the wild pirate of the North Sea have become converted into champions of order, chief means of the progress of civilization. It is impossible to be otherwise—as an Englishman—than in entire sympathy with a feeling of this kind; but if retrospect has its charm, I think it is no less true that there is a joy in anticipation; and to an Englishman who first lands upon your shores, who finds himself travelling for hundreds of miles through what I can only call strings of great cities, who even in the roughest way compares the extent of your territory with that which he has left, and looks at your marvellous resources in everything that tends to the welfare and riches of mankind, there is a something sublime in the vista of the future.

I don't say this with the least intention of flattering that particular vulgar sentiment which is commonly called national pride. On the contrary, I don't know that I have any particular respect for bigness as such, or for wealth as such, and most assuredly bigness is not the same thing as greatness, and territory does not constitute a nation. What I referred to just now as the issue which had suggested itself to me, fraught, as I will say again, with a certain sublimity, a terror as of overhanging fate, is the question: What are you going to do with all these things? To what purpose will you put this great store of material wealth and this vast amount of human intelligence and capacity which is among you to deal with? The question is one which, it seems to me, no man has a chance of answering with the remotest probability at the present moment.

You are undertaking the greatest political experiment that has ever been performed by any people whatever. You are at this present centenary a nation of 40,000,000 of people. At your next centenary, rational and probable expectation may look to see you 200,000,000, and you have before you the problem whether 200,000,000 of English-speaking, strong-willed people will be able to hold together under the form of republican institutions and under the real despotism of universal suffrage [a burst of applause]; whether State rights will hold their own against the necessary centralization of a great nation, if it is to act as a whole, or whether centralization will gain the day without breaking down republican institutions. The territory you cover is as large as Europe, as diverse in climate as England and Spain, as France and Russia, and you have to see whether, with the diversity of interests, mercantile and other, which arise under these circumstances, national ties will be stronger than the tendency to separation; and as you grow more people, and the presence of population makes itself manifest, the spectre of pauperism will stalk among you, and you will be very unlike Europe if communism and socialism do not claim to be heard. I cannot imagine that any one should envy you this great destiny,—for a great destiny it is to solve these problems some way or other. Great will be your honor, great will be your position, if you solve them righteously and honestly; great your shame and your misery if you fail. But let me express my most strong conviction that the key to success, the essential condition to success, is one and one only; that it rests entirely upon the intellectual clearness and upon the moral worth of the individual citizen. Education cannot give intellectual clearness. It cannot give moral worth. But it may cherish them and bring them to the front; and in that sense, the university may be and ought to be the fortress of the higher life of the nation.

It is my most earnest wish and hope that the University, the career of which begins to-day, may fulfil this high mission to its fullest extent. That its outgrowths may become centres of intelligence, foci of intellectual life in the United States; and on the next centenary of your republic let me hope that you will attain such a position that the students of all nations will flock here as in former days they flocked to Oxford, to Paris, and to Bologna. Permit me to fancy that among the English part of that population there may linger a dim tradition at that time that at the commencement of your work an Englishman was permitted to address you as he has done to-day, to look upon your hopes as his hopes, and to consider your success as his joy. [Great applause.]—Address of Professor Huxley at the formal opening of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Sept. 12, 1876.

THE AMERICAN NATION.

No nation ever offered the privileges of citizenship more liberally, and no nation was ever rewarded with such rich returns for its hospitality. The especial glory of the growth of the United States has been this, that the republic has grown because refugees from all the rest of the world have flocked to its protection. Sometimes they have fled from the cruel conditions of over-crowded life at home, the blame of which could be laid at the door of no man or class of men, since they were the necessary consequences of false ideas universally acted upon as if they were true; sometimes they fled from the tyrannies of conscription and of feudal law, which kept them bound from the cradle to the grave; sometimes they sought in the West a liberty to obey the dictates of their own consciences, denied by prelates and governments of the European continent. It is justly a matter of congratulation that a great people should have thus grown up. The troops of immigrants coming in year after year have traversed the continent, ploughed the prairie, bridged the mightiest rivers, thrown railways over and through mountains, and brought from the hidden depths of the earth those treasures of iron and coal which more than anything else increase the power of man to appropriate the gifts of Nature to his use. Of silver and gold we need not speak; the abundance of their production is comparatively an insignificant accident. The one hundred years that have passed have seen a great industrial community developed with unexampled rapidity. Its growth would, indeed, have been still greater had not false and foolish notions of protective legislation deceived the democracy of America, as they have deceived European governments; but the productiveness of a virgin soil has been generous enough to hide this loss. The nation has not been so prosperous as it might have been; but the aggregate wealth it now annually produces approaches that of the oldest communities, and yet the mass of population remains so small, compared with the capabilities of wealth-making which undeveloped lands afford, that the wages of the laborer are higher than they are in any other part of the world. The English settlers, and those who have come to share their freedom, have brought the United States so far in the course of one hundred years, and it would be vain to prescribe the limits of the growth to which the nation may attain in another century of existence.

The United States have become a great nation in numbers and in the production of wealth, and they have shown themselves great also in the capacity to free themselves, at the cost of much temporary suffering, from the great evil of slavery, which was so long interwoven in their existence. The spectacle they present to the world of a vast multitude of people peacefully producing food and clothing, and ready to receive within their ranks immigrants from all lands who desire to join their freedom, is not unimposing. Although man does not live on bread alone, bread is one of the necessities of life, and—speaking broadly and apart from special crises—in the United States bread may always be obtained. If we are impatient that the United States have as yet done so little for the world beyond increasing the affluence of the means of animal existence, we may, perhaps, see cause to restrain our discontent in thinking of the materials out of which were collected the armies of immigrants that have recruited the numbers of their citizens. They have for the most part come from those classes of Europe whose whole lives are given up to the daily struggle to obtain the means of keeping alive. By much effort, by savings that may almost be said to have been stolen from necessity, by resistance to temptation that has often been heroic, the few necessary pounds have been got together to enable the immigrant to sail from Liverpool or Bremen, from Cork or Hamburg, to an Atlantic port, and he has landed penniless to try his fortune in another hemisphere. If the times are fairly prosperous, he gets employment and wages which prove to him that he is indeed in a world which is new. The strength of character which brought him out remains with him; he saves, he becomes a householder, a house-owner, a landed proprietor; but the memory of his own early struggles, and of the struggles of his father before him, does not pass away, and if he were asked to speak of the land of his adoption and could put his thoughts into words, he would always describe it as "a land of fulness of bread." It takes a generation or two to raise the immigrant above the new satisfaction of material contentment, and the rarer development of the United States as a member of the elect nations that contribute something more than material wealth to the treasures of the world is yet before it. Into that future we cannot pry, though we have faith that it will come. Perchance a hundred years hence it will yet be only at the dawn.—London Times.

FRILIGRATH.

Friligrath first sang himself into the heart of the German people more than forty years ago. With a master's touch he then opened, as if by magic, the weird realm of the ghastly desert, the purple portals of the glowing land of the palm-grove, dazzling the eye with the wild grandeur of his richly-tinted pictures. His first youthful fancy had led him to dream of the icy, antarctic North, of the boundless prairies and the mysterious virgin forests of the far West. There was something gigantic in his imagination even then. A mere boy of sixteen, he produced, when "faint and ill and sleepless on a couch of woe," a very remarkable poem called "Iceland-Moss Tea." The form, it need scarcely be said, is still somewhat crude, as may be expected from so young an aspirant. Yet a wonderful description is given by the suffering, fever-stricken boy of that saga-hallowed isle which has preserved for us the image of Eddic gods and heroes, and thoughts are thrown out which now seem typical of the poet's later share in the strife for human freedom. In the green beverage that is administered to his sickness he sees a likeness of the chalice of his future life. He feels in himself, as in yon isle, the strife of snow and fire:—

Oh, be it thus! Oh, let me feel
The lava-flood in every vein!
Be mine the will that conquers pain,
The heart of rock, the nerves of steel!

Oh, let the flames that burn unfed
Within me wax until they glow,
Volcano-like, through even the snow
That in few years shall strew my head!

And as the stones that Hecla sees
Flung up to heaven through fiery rain
Descend like thunderbolts again
Upon the distant Færöese;

So let the rude but burning rhymes
Cast from the cauldron of my breast
Again fall flashing down, and beat
On human hearts in farthest climes!

—Fraser's Magazine.

PROF. HUXLEY ON "ENDOWMENT FOR RESEARCH."

These are the remarks which I venture to offer to you respecting the university, considered from its educational side. But, as I said at starting, there is another side to a university. It is given to everybody to learn more or less, but it is given to very few to increase the stock of knowledge. It is perhaps even more rare that a man should possess the creative faculty in art. It is a difficult thing even to get the power of accurate representation in art. But whether in literature, or in painting, or in sculpture, the creative power, as you know, is one of the rarest of faculties, rarer, I think, than the power of scientific investigation. But rare as these powers may be, and indeed in virtue of their rarity does it devolve upon the community to provide the means by which the persons possessing them can open a career for themselves and devote themselves, as all such men do, whether consciously or unconsciously, to the high service of the community; for it is assuredly true that man does not live by bread alone, but by ideas, and it is unquestionable that the future of this world lies in the hands of those who will supply the world with ideas and in some way furnish the masters of mankind, who have not the time, or the inclination, or the capacity, to think out things themselves, with some theory of things that is not too absolutely inconsistent or too absolutely absurd to serve some practical purpose.

Therefore, it is the highest duty of a university to find a system which shall discover and protect these powers of artistic creation and the investigation of new truths, which are the two great sides of active, or what we may call the original, or creative, or investigative, human mind. The problem which I have referred to, the endowment for research, has been in England greatly discussed among us, and you will find in the report of the Royal Commission, I think, almost all that is to be said upon this most remarkable question. There are many persons who seem to think that the sole question is one of money. Endowment of research rather expresses that notion, but the power of investigation, or the power of creation in art, is like other things, follows the laws of supply and demand: pay for it and you will get it. That is a notion that does not commend itself to my mind. I do not think we shall get a man of genius by merely going into the open market and offering money. On the contrary, I am afraid that such a purely commercial way of looking at the matter is likely to yield purely commercial results, and that the door would be open on such principles for indefinite nepotism and indefinite jobbery. To my mind the problem is one of the most difficult problems that can meet practical men. I entirely concur in the principles laid down in your trustees' address. I mean in the principle that the safest and best thing to do in the way of endowing research is to offer offices, the payment for which is sufficient to maintain a man, to such persons as think themselves competent to become investigators, but to require of them something or other. And I believe the most healthy and sound requirement is a certain amount, not too much, but a certain amount of teaching. I know of nothing else which is more likely to prevent the evils which always await about money-power, wherever it may be. I know of nothing which is so likely to prevent those evils as the connection of offices and posts made for men who are capable of original research, as teaching in some shape or other. It offers their colleagues a knowledge of what they are about, and the public a knowledge of what is being done. I think to well-constituted minds it must be a satisfaction thus to know that they are thus exercising a direct influence upon their contemporaries.—Address at the formal opening of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Sept. 12, 1876.

GROWING OLD.

An American woman, writing from Paris, said that the great point of superiority of the French over the Americans lay in the fact that the French knew how to grow old without becoming incapable. An old woman in France was not necessarily a wall-flower, nor was she ignored. She was often a centre of attraction, and always an object of respect and attention. We constantly hear old people in America complain of being of no importance, and we all suffer the pain of seeing them pushed aside by those who are younger but not superior. The worst is, the fault lies not with the younger but the older generation. We concede too much to age, and fancy our life is measured by its length. We allow interest after interest to slip out of our minds; we become spectators and are no longer actors, and then suddenly find the world has left us behind. The young people have pursuits of which we know nothing. They ask no help, they care for no advice nor sympathy. Their life is not ours.

It is not pleasant to live in the world and not be of it, and the old man and woman turn away and say no one cares. And no one does care. That is the pity of it! The world thinks only of what is of use to it; and if the old French woman has power and influence while the American woman sits alone and feels that she has outlived the world, the reason is that the French woman has kept abreast of her time. She does not allow old age to defraud her of her interest in life, nor does she rest in inactivity. She never dreams that there need be any antagonism between youth and age, and if she can no longer join the workers she watches the work with keen eyes, and the younger ones find help and inspiration in the sympathy of an audience wise through love, interest, and experience.

We all know old people who are the most charming companions, but they are not the ones who sit aside and ask the world to run to their liking, nor do they expect to receive, but never give. They are living lessons that youth is not all of life, and that it may be possible to make our lives the richer for being long.—New Century for Women.

BOB INGERSOLL'S DREAM.

One night, after speaking in his usual fashion to an audience of many hundred persons, Bob Ingersoll went to his chamber, and laid him on his bed to rest. He had a dream.

The man dreamed that he stood in space, face to face with a great clock that slowly beat out the seconds of a miserable existence. The face of the clock was as the ghastly face of death. The hands crawled over the face like the worms of corruption, and crawled slowly on toward the midnight hour. Every tick of the clock was the splash of a great drop of blood in a pool of gore. Every splash of blood sprinkled his bosom with hideous red. He tried vainly to wipe away the stain; and he found that his hands, too, were red like his bosom and like the pool of blood at the foot of the clock. But the hands of the clock crept on to midnight.

There shut in around him a hot, suffocating fog of night. Then the hopes and loves and hates and aspirations within him groaned and gasped and died. The hot, suffocating shroud of vapor wrapped him more closely, and he, too, groaned and gasped; but death came not to him as it had come to his hopes and affections. He stood there alone in the dying universe, alone with the great clock that splashed blood at the beat of every miserable second while the hands crawled on to midnight.

To this man every breath was an agony, every heart-throb a century of pain. He felt his bones crumbling in decay, and his flesh rotting while it clung to him. His tongue was swollen in his month. His throat was dry and horribly bitter. He cared no longer for the stains of red blood, but bathed his brow and his eyes in the pool and moistened his lips with the clotted gore. In the same breath he blasphemed and prayed for the light of morning.

The hands of the clock reached midnight and stopped. There were no growing hours thereafter, no dawn, no morning light, no sun. Even the blood stopped splashing, and the pool dried away so that he could no longer moisten his lips or quench the indescribable thirst that consumed him.

In anguish that was terror, and in terror that was agony, he broke the awful silence and cried:—

"Is there no sunlight?"

A Voice, louder, harsher, hoarser, and as sneering as his own, answered out of the silence:—

"There is no sunlight for the stirrer-up of strife."

After an eternity again he cried:—

"Is there no dawn?"

And the Voice replied with a bitterer sneer:—

"There is no dawn for the denier, and the liar, and the blasphemer."

When an eternity of eternities had passed, he cried out once more:—

"My God! Is there no morning?"

And the Voice came back:—

"There is no morning, and you have no God!"—N. Y. Sun, Sept. 13.

MIXTURE OF RACES IN EUROPEAN TURKEY.—Our recent reference to the strong anti-Slavonian feeling of the Albanese race in Turkey has been quickly confirmed. Sixteen thousand well-armed Albanese have joined the Turkish army at Orkup, west of Nisch. It may not be amiss to observe that even Serbia, small as it is—with but little more than one million inhabitants,—is by no means homogeneous in race or speech. Its eastern districts are inhabited by Wallachs, or Roumans, who just now give great trouble in Leshjanin's army. In the south-east of Serbia, a section of Bulgars dwell within the frontier, and they, after all, are also a race different from the Serbo-Slavs. In Bosnia, as we have before stated, the Christian Slavs and the Mohammedans nearly balance each other. Turning to the remnant of European Turkey, we find the Albanese, or Arnauts, along the Adriatic and Ionian Sea, from the frontier of Montenegro down to the boundary of Greece. The territory between the Albanese districts and the Moldo-Wallachian frontier, where the Roumans dwell, is mainly inhabited by Bulgars, but with odd sprinklings of Arnauts, Turks, and various other races. In the eastern part of European Turkey, from Philippopolis to Kirkilissi, and up to the frontier of Roumania, the Turks and the Bulgars are represented in about equal numbers, in hopeless intermixture. At the very edge of the Black Sea shore the Greeks come in; and in the projecting tongue of land which stretches out toward Constantinople there is an intermixture of Turks and Greeks. In the provinces near the Aegean Sea, Greeks alternate with Turks and Bulgars. In the districts near the Greek border the Turkish, Hellene, Wallachian, and Albanese races form a jumble which it is impossible to disentangle. This is only a description made in the gross, without entering into the variegated details of the confusion of races often found in many a single town or village. Enough has, however, been said to show what difficulties attend all attempts of "solving the Eastern Question."—London Examiner.

THE FOLLOWING correspondence appears in the Congregationalist:—

"TO THE PROTESTANT PREACHER: I send your spoons back. If your servant-girl had been a Protestant, you never would have got them again."

"Yours, CATHOLIC PRIEST."

"TO THE CATHOLIC PRIEST: I thank you for the spoons. If the girl had been a Protestant, she never would have stolen them."

"Yours, PROTESTANT PREACHER."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 16.

H. E. Parsons, $5; J. F. Ruggles, $3.20; M. E. Adams, $1; C. F. Gard, $1.75; J. G. Jenkins, 25 cents; F. Maxse, $3.99; W. F. Howes, $3; C. M. Garrison, $2; Mrs. L. C. Sleeper, $3.20; David Tenney, $3.20; Geo. Riker, $3; Oscar Ross, $3.20; G. Mo ris, $3.20; A. H. Foss, $2; E. J. Leonard, $2.50; J. Rummel, $1.00; H. Van Pelt, 50 cents; A. Russell, 50 cents; B. T. Russell, 25 cents.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

N. B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 21, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 1, TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Con-
tributors.

THE BOSTON Sunday Herald says: "The editor of THE INDEX is not fond of myths, yet he runs some risk of becoming the starting-point for a new series of them. In a free religious family in California, little 'Phil' is the bright youngster. His mother writes that the juvenile sceptic reported a lesson he had picked up among his mates: 'Don't you think, mother, Tom Bradley says that the first man's name was—was—Abbot, or something like that. Just as if anybody could know!'"

THIS is a specimen of what the Sun calls "blasphemy" in Col. Ingersoll's late speech in New York: "What more? The institution of slavery had polluted, had corrupted, the Church not only in the South, but a large proportion of the Church in the North; so that ministers stood up in their pulpits here in New York and defended the very infamy that I have mentioned. Not only that, but the Presbyterians, South, in 1863, met in General Synod and passed two resolutions. The first resolution read: 'Resolved, That slavery is a divine institution; second, Resolved, That God raised up the Presbyterian Church, South, to protect and perpetuate that institution.' Well, all I have to say is that, if God did this, he never chose a more infamous instrument to carry out a more diabolical object." This being "blasphemy," it is evident that, if Col. Ingersoll had declared those resolutions to be true and beautiful, such a declaration would be complacently alluded to by the Sun as a proof of genuine "religion"! Well—we would cast in our lot with "blasphemy" in any shape rather than with the "religion" which is after the Sun's own heart.

THIS SUPERSTITION is a direct result of unquestioning belief in the literal truth of the Bible: "An inquest was held at Woolwich, England, the other day, on the body of Ann Downes, aged seventeen months, daughter of a member of the religious sect called Peculiar People, who consider medical men as unnecessary, and rely in cases of sickness on prayer, anointing with oil, and laying on of hands. The parents of the deceased said the child had been ill three weeks. While it was ill the elders came and anointed it in the name of the Lord. They did not call in a doctor, having confidence in God, and feeling assured that he was able to heal and raise it up if it was his will. They relied wholly on the power and will of God, who was wiser than any human physician. They had lost one child before, and were tried at the Old Bailey for manslaughter, and sentenced to three days' imprisonment. The sentence dated from the commencement of the sessions, and they were liberated without going to prison. The police surgeon at the present inquest testified that the child died from scarlet fever. The coroner said that when the parents were tried at the Central Criminal Court before, after the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and before sentence was pronounced, the opinion of the twelve judges was taken on the law of the subject, and it was clearly laid down that it was the duty of every parent to provide medical aid and sustenance to children. The jury returned a verdict of manslaughter against the father of the child. The coroner committed Downes for trial at the next Old Bailey sessions, refusing bail. The sect of Peculiar People numbers nearly one thousand persons. They live chiefly in South Essex and North Kent, and have seventeen places of worship. Their bishop is Samuel Harrod, farm laborer, Thunderly, a village in Essex. He lives by cultivating a small plot of land of his own, and by thatching."

NOTICE.

On receipt of $3.20, THE INDEX will be sent to any name not already on its mail-list, from the present time until January 1, 1878. This is an excellent opportunity for friends of the paper to increase its circulation among their acquaintances; and it is hoped that they will not neglect to render in this way some greatly-needed assistance to the important cause it represents.

PERSONALISM IN POLITICS.

In an article headed "Some Reflections for Independent and Doubting Voters" the Nation says: "It is said that [a good man] has been nominated by a bad party; but the reason the party is bad is that it nominates bad men." This is a half-truth as pestilent as an error. The reason a party is bad is chiefly that it proposes and carries out bad ends. If its ends are bad, the better men it can delude into giving them their sanction, the worse it is for the country; for mischief is never so mischievous, never so hard to defeat or to remedy, as when done by good men who think they are doing good. When a party cherishes bad ends, either confessed or unconfessed, and nominates men of well-known bad character to execute them, it is far less dangerous to the community than when it succeeds in concealing its bad ends from good candidates, and thereby helps to deceive the electors.

The truth we hold to be this. A party is good when it secretly cherishes and openly proclaims good ends, and then nominates good men to carry them out. A party is bad when it either openly avows or secretly cherishes bad ends, and then nominates either good or bad men to carry them out. In either of these two extreme cases a voter of clear perceptions and good intentions knows exactly what to do. The practical difficulty arises when a party with good average purposes and professions is saddled by selfish managers with unworthy candidates. When it comes to a choice between only two parties, one with good ends and bad candidates, the other with bad ends and good candidates, one may well be perplexed how to vote. And this is too often the case.

It is a vast delusion to hold that "the candidate is the platform," as has been of late so inconsiderately preached. If he is, he ought not to be; for that doctrine is pure personalism in politics. Is the voter to have no mind of his own, no principles to promote, no measures for their promotion to carry? Is he merely to hunt about for an honest man, and then say to him: "I submit my judgment to yours implicitly. I believe you to be honest: now do all my thinking for me. You are to act just as you see fit on all questions; I have no opinions to urge upon you on any of them; I only want to see good men in office. You are a good man; now use your office without any instructions from your party." Is that good sense or good citizenship? In their disgust at dishonesty and selfishness in public positions, that is exactly the absurdity into which many advisers of repute have run this year.

But there will be a reaction from all this nonsense. The Constitution of Massachusetts is far wiser when it proclaims "a government of laws, and not of men"; it warns us in advance against any epidemic of personalism in politics. Every good party has certain good principles and measures which are supreme in the hearts of all its supporters, and which it will seek to carry out practically by the combined strength of all. From among the honest men who are already persuaded of the goodness of these principles and measures, it will select its candidates to establish the principles and carry the measures; but it will not be so idiotic as to disregard the previous question whether these honest candidates are already in favor of them. The Pope of Rome is undoubtedly a "good man"; should the friends of State Secularization therefore vote to send him to Congress?

The truth is that public officials are only agents to execute pre-appointed purposes; and it is wild to forget the latter in a gush of enthusiasm even over "honesty." The Nation falls sometimes into sheer sentimentalism on this subject. Of course good citizens all want honesty; but they want it to be shown in the service of a wise policy which they themselves have previously approved, and not of any policy which any honest agents of theirs may approve. The country has not yet arrived at such a millennial state as to have found even its honest men so wise as to relieve the electors of all necessity of thinking. The use of frequent elections is really to enable the electors to decide for themselves the public policy on important questions; and this object is defeated, unless the men they elect are under obligation to execute the general decision. The great importance of having "good men in office" ought not to eclipse the equally great importance of having good ends in office; and what ends are good, and what bad, every elector should decide beforehand for himself. It will not do to fall back in disgust on personalism in politics, merely because bad candidates have been elected; it is just as necessary to have the real (though perhaps unwritten) platform right as it is to have the candidate honest, and to merge the platform entirely in the candidate is simply to stake the national destinies on the good judgment of a single man. Such a course is the surrender of the democratic principle altogether; and, with all its evils, democracy is safer than personal government in any shape.

CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY.

So absorbed are most men apt to be in the thoughts familiar to themselves that they are seldom able to understand the working of other men's minds, or to see the world as other men see it. Their individual point of view determines their horizon; they are apt to imagine that the general drift of things is in the direction of their own preconceived opinion; they complacently take it for granted that all the world is gradually coming to occupy the mental position they hold themselves. Whatever facts would lead to a different conclusion they hastily set down as exceptional and unimportant; but they catch at even trivial occurrences which seem to indicate that mankind are "coming up" to themselves. Just as a rigid sectarian reads his Bible, dwelling with exultation on every passage which favors his special dogmatic hobby, and skipping nimbly over all those which oppose it, so the average man reads the book of passing events: he takes careful note of everything which coincides with his own wishes, and disparages the importance of all besides. In this way we see Catholics, Protestants of all sects, Jews, Spiritualists, Materialists, religionists and non-religionists of all possible types, triumphantly pointing out the proofs that their own particular belief is in the ascendant, and destined to drive all opponents off the field. If they are all right, society is pretty much in the condition of Ravallac, torn asunder by horses pulling in diametrically opposite directions. But the probability is that no one of them is wholly right. The path actually followed by society in the progress of evolution is a resultant of all these diverse forces, and will scarcely coincide with any one of the courses so confidently marked out for it in advance.

It would be very agreeable, of course, if we could share the persuasion of many liberals that the whole modern world is drifting peacefully, inevitably, and all together, in the direction of liberal ideas. Such a conclusion would save so much trouble! But one must be thoroughly steeped in self-complacency, must be totally incapable of entering into the intellectual regions inhabited by other minds, must be absolutely devoid of the power of seeing more than one of the myriad sides of human nature or the myriad tendencies of human society, to flatter himself with hopes so fallacious. There is certainly a general drift of society as a whole, just as there is a general drift in space of the solar system as a whole; and we trust, of course, that this is in the direction of larger liberty of thought, finer liberality of feeling, higher harmony of action. Nevertheless, this general drift of society is, and must be, the resultant of conflicting forces, and not the simultaneous and consentaneous advance of all social elements on the line of a single doctrine. There is, and must be, the same eternal struggle for mastery among human ideas, purposes, passions, institutions, which has made up the history of civilization from the beginning. It is futile and weak to expect anything else.

Hence the importance of the study of history, in attempting to anticipate the course of events. Mere speculation is very misleading, if it presumes to deduce future social states from abstract conclusions alone. But a sober examination of the present in the light shed by the past, with a view to determine the wisest course in the future, is not speculation, but solid practical wisdom. Whoever in this manner studies the present condition of American society, and the existing tendencies affecting the development of American institutions, must be struck with the fact that the public mind is not agreed touching the fundamental theory on which the political structure of the nation rests. There is a profound and irreconcilable difference of opinion as to the true nature of government. There is abundant lip-service of the principle that Church and State should be separate; but the grossest ignorance prevails as to what constitutes such a separation. The majority believe that no union of the two is implied by governmental favoritism towards the Christian religion; they believe that the Christian religion can be legislatively favored without in any degree entangling the State with the Church; and they are prepared to act accordingly. Yet the practical consequences inseparable from the adoption of this ignorant theory as a basis of action must be deplorable in the extreme, involving as it must a reversal of the wiser theory on which the fundamental law of the nation was framed. The national Constitution is purely secular, favoring the Christian religion no more than it persecutes it; but the prevailing public opinion as it exists to-day, and as it is manifested by almost every influential exponent of it, demands governmental favor for the creed of the majority.

Now the attempt has been actually made to obtain such governmental favor for the majority's creed in a wholly new form, by according to the Bible, the acknowledged fountain of that creed, an extraordinary, unprecedented, and artful recognition of its Divine authority in the national Constitution. Yet scarcely any one comprehends the grave peril of this measure, or perceives its far-reaching consequences. So long has personal liberty in this country been protected, that it is supposed to rest on foundations that cannot be undermined or even disturbed. There seems to be in this country very little intelligent appreciation, except in a small class of legally-trained thinkers, of the historical fact that PERSONAL LIBERTY CAN ONLY BE CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY—that it rests absolutely for its protection and very existence on the express sanctions of public law. Whatever destroys the neutrality of the Constitution in the warfare of conflicting creeds will ultimately impair or destroy the personal liberty of all except those whose creed the Constitution is perverted to favor. This must be the slow-working, but inevitable, result of the lately-proposed Bible amendment, if adopted at last. Carelessness or ignorance as to this tendency of it is stupid even to the verge of criminality. The religious issue sprung upon the nation by the United States Senate last month ought to appear what it really is—infinitely the most important issue now before the people for decision. The liberties of the human mind itself are at stake; for in the long run these liberties, like all others, depend on Constitutional provisions. Anglo-Saxon institutions, as every intelligent student knows, owe their character to the gradual enlargement of Constitutional liberty; and it is precisely this which, despite the blindness of the people, is in greater peril than it ever was before in this country. What Tennyson said of England, when he described it as—"A land of settled government,

A land of just and old renown,
Where Freedom broadens slowly down
From precedent to precedent,"— is just as true of the United States; and the precedent of recognizing the Bible in the Constitution will be one which must exert in the end a power for evil that is simply incalculable. It will dry up the fountain of freedom at its very source; and when the establishment of this precedent is so imminent, it is almost enough to create despair of all human progress that so few persons perceive or heed the magnitude of the issue so suddenly raised. Think what we may, the fact remains that the signs of the times point to the introduction of a new element into politics from this time forth, and that this new element is a determination on the part of Evangelical Protestantism to assert its political supremacy in the United States government. If it succeeds, the future has in store for this people an experience of the bitterest and perhaps bloodiest kind, before the conditions and precedents of Constitutional liberty are—as they will be—re-established. How much better to be wise in season!

GOV. HAYES AND THE AMERICAN ALLIANCE.

The New York World recently published a statement which lends new interest to the American Alliance. It is as follows:—

The American Alliance adopted a series of resolutions which said of the nominations of Messrs. Hayes and Wheeler that they were "hereby endorsed by the American Alliance Conference," and that the Alliance earnestly advised all who are in favor of American principles, as advocated and set forth in these resolutions, to give these nominations an active and determined support."

"These resolutions" were sent to Mr. Hayes, who returned the following reply, dated July 5, 1876, addressed to "Samuel J. Tyler, Secretary of the American Alliance."

"I have just received your letter informing me of my election as a member of your admirable Alliance. Return my thanks to the Alliance, as I deeply sympathize with its principles. I remain your fellow-citizen,"

R. B. HAYES.

Now here is one expression of the principles of the Alliance of which Mr. Hayes is proud to be a member, and with which he "deeply sympathizes:—"

"An amendment to the naturalization laws limiting suffrage to persons born in this country or of American parents; the election of American-born citizens only to official positions in this country; opposition to the interference of the Roman Catholic organizations in the political affairs of this nation; and opposition to the formation of political organizations composed exclusively of foreign-born citizens."

If some subscriber who knows Mr. Tyler's address would be so kind as to forward it, or to procure for us a copy of the Constitution of the American Alliance, we should be greatly indebted to him. It is our impression that the defence of the Bible in the schools is one of its fundamental principles. If so, that fact should be known in connection with the above letter of Governor Hayes. The avowed sympathy of the Republican candidate with a definite anti-Catholic and pro-Evangelical movement is surely a fact worthy of very thoughtful reflection.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

In concluding his address at the dedication of the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, last week, Professor Huxley referred in pregnant sentences to the problem of the future of our country. After mentioning our "strings of great cities" and our "marvellous resources in everything that tends to the welfare and riches of mankind," he asks: "What are you going to do with all these things? To what purpose will you put this great store of material wealth and this vast amount of human intelligence and capacity which is among you to deal with? The question is one which, it seems to me, no man has a chance of answering with the remotest probability at the present moment. You are undertaking the greatest political experiment that has ever been performed by any people whatever. You are at this present century a nation of 40,000,000 of people. At your next centenary rational and probable expectation may look to see you 200,000,000, and you have before you the problem whether 200,000,000 of English-speaking, strong-willed people will be able to hold together under the form of republican institutions and under the real despotism of universal suffrage; whether State rights will hold their own against the necessary centralization of a great nation, if it is to act as a whole, or whether centralization will gain the day without breaking down republican institutions. The territory you cover is as large as Europe, as diverse in climate as England and Spain, as France and Russia, and you have to see whether, with the diversity of interests, mercantile and other, which arise under these circumstances, national ties will be stronger than the tendency to separation; and as you grow more people, and the presence of population makes itself manifest, the spectre of pauperism will stalk among you, and you will be very unlike Europe if communism and socialism do not claim to be heard. I cannot imagine that any one should envy you this great destiny—for a great destiny it is to solve these problems some way or other. Great will be your honor, great will be your position, if you solve them righteously and honestly; great your shame and your misery if you fail. But let me express my most strong conviction that the key to success, the essential condition to success, is one and one only; that it rests entirely upon the intellectual clearness and upon the moral worth of the individual citizen."

We desire to commend the last sentence of the above extract to those among our readers who have been disposed occasionally to find fault with some of our political criticisms. We fully believe that our future as a nation depends more "upon the intellectual clearness and upon the moral worth of the individual citizen" than upon the triumph of any party, or the election of any man, or the success of any particular measure of reform. We acknowledge, of course, that we have our favorites among parties, and men, and measures; but we refuse to approve of cant and sophistry although mustered in defence of our favorite party; we positively decline to admire the actions of every immoral scamp who supports our chosen candidate; and we shall not scruple to expose any kind of sham or falsehood which is lodged into the service of the most desirable project.

At the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Professor Huxley stated that America furnishes, in some respects, a better field than Europe for purposes of scientific investigation. The discoveries of fossil remains, for instance, which have been made in this country, are unsurpassed in importance. The collection of Professor Marsh at Yale College he pronounced unequalled by any in Europe, and went so far as to assert that evolution, hitherto regarded as a scientific hypothesis, is no longer a theory, but has been changed by American discoveries into a demonstrated fact.

Politically, the week has not been a good one for the Democrats. The elections in Maine and Vermont showed that no change of importance has taken place in public sentiment in those States since the last presidential election, but that the Blaine and Ingersoll style of argument—that is, the old and familiar Republican war-cry, which knows nothing of the currency or of a reformed civil-service—is still effective in certain localities. Mr. William Lloyd Garrison, for instance, re-echoes it loudly in a letter to a colored voter who expressed a desire to vote for Tilden, but, before doing so, applies to his old leader for advice. Democratic prospects continue to be affected badly, also, by Mr. Tilden's long silence with regard to the income-tax charges, explanations of which given by various newspapers being decidedly unsatisfactory. Nothing but a detailed explanation by Tilden himself—similar to that by which Hayes disposed of analogous charges—can now be satisfactory to many people. The record of Dorsheimer, Mr. Tilden's Lieutenant-Governor, has been looked up, and some things therein do not look well for a man who is now a pronounced reformer. He appears to have had the knack, for instance, while acting as United States District Attorney in New York, of making some wonderful charges for constructive mileage. The Seymour blunder, moreover, in New York was a blow from the effects of which the party has not yet recovered, notwithstanding the nomination of Lucius H. Robinson in place of Seymour. Chandler, who is head of the Republican machine, predicts—although of course his predictions are not accepted by Democrats—that the Republicans will carry the doubtful States of Ohio and Indiana as well as California and Oregon, in the North, and Florida as well as North and South Carolina, in the South.

Massachusetts politics continue to present interesting phases. The advocates of woman suffrage have organized a political party with all the necessary improved machinery, and as predicted have nominated the candidates of the prohibitionists, who, by the way, have also been accepted by a faction of labor-reformers. Mr. Adams accepts the nomination of "those opposed to the present administration of national and State affairs," and "Hayes and Adams," the ticket advocated by the Springfield Republican, will probably receive the votes of many Independents. Perhaps the most significant fact of the week, however, is the absolute repudiation of Butler as a Republican by such decided party papers as the New York Times, and the Boston Journal and Advertiser. Although some of the arguments of these papers might be employed with woful force against several other Republican candidates, we nevertheless look upon their opposition to Butler as a very encouraging symptom of our national politics.

A report which was current at our last writing, that "Boss" Tweed, the notorious chief of the New York Ring had been arrested in Spain, appears to be confirmed, with the important addition that by the courtesy of the Spanish government, he will be returned to the United States. Without doubt there are many persons in New York City who would prefer to have Tweed remain in exile, as there were not a few in Boston who inwardly rejoiced at the failure of our government to bring back Winslow from England. The probable effect of Tweed's return upon the politics of New York State is already a subject of newspaper discussion, but we do not expect that the "dreadful disclosures" which he is said to be able to make will greatly effect the prospects of either party.

The National Unitarian Conference at Saratoga was addressed by a colored bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Unitarians decided to continue their pecuniary assistance to that denomination in order to help save the Southern negroes from the Catholics. A new sign of the present tendency of the various Protestant sects to put out of sight their theological differences and unite as Christians, was seen in the offer of a Methodist minister to open his church for the use of the Unitarians if they should meet at Saratoga another year. Some of the essays read at the Conference, from the nature of the subjects discussed, should be of interest to the members of all religious sects, as well as to those who have no denominational connection, but recognize, nevertheless, the need of denominations in the present condition of religious thinking and feeling. Among these may be specified "Free Churches," by James Freeman Clarke; "The Labor Question," by Calvin Stebbins; and "The Essential Piety of Modern Science," by J. W. Chadwick.

The Old South Church building, the beginning of the destruction of which we announced some time ago, has been saved from demolition through the earnest efforts of those interested in its preservation. The owners—the members of the Old South Society—have sold the ground for $400,000, to a committee of gentlemen who agree that the building shall not be used for commercial purposes and that the doors shall not be opened to the public on Sunday for thirty years. This last stipulation, we should state, is not made out of any especial regard for the assumed holiness of Sunday, but in order to prevent the formation of a rival "Old South" society. The building will be used, probably, for a historical museum, or something analogous thereto.

Dr. George B. Windship, who died last week in Boston, enjoyed for many years the unchallenged distinction of being the strongest man in the world. He was better known to the general public, perhaps, some dozen years or so ago than during more recent years, his feats of strength at that time attracting a great deal of attention, and being described, if we remember aright, in an article in the Atlantic Monthly. He was frequently urged by publishers to write of edit a work upon muscular development as illustrated by his "lifting" process, and entertained the plan favorably; but a natural indolence of disposition and confirmed ill-health prevented its execution. That by his process a man's strength, or, at least, his lifting capacity, could be permanently doubled or trebled in a very few months is an undoubted fact. Dr. Windship began his experiments in order to overcome constitutional weaknesses, in which, however, he was only partially successful, his death taking place at the early age of forty-two. He was a Harvard graduate, diffident but intelligent in conversation, and evinced a deep interest always in mechanical pursuits and enterprises. He was under, rather than above, the average stature, and was by no means strong-looking; in fact, he always maintained that almost any man of large frame and muscles could be trained so as to lift a much larger weight than he had been able to raise. This last, we may state for the benefit of the curious, was somewhere between 2,000 and 2,500 pounds.

There is at present some prospect that the war between Serbia and Turkey will soon end, it being reported, as we write, that the Sultan has ordered a cessation of hostilities until further notice, and that Prince Milan has followed his example. This cessation of hostilities has been brought about by the urgent demands of the several European powers, which have given the Porte to understand that the war could not be allowed to continue. The conditions of peace proposed by the Sultan are not at all acceptable to the powers, although they are the result of the deliberations of first one and then another council, the latter being an extraordinary council of eighty called by the Sultan to alter, if possible, the decisions of the former one. It is reported by the English government that the Porte has resolved to punish the perpetrators of the Bulgarian atrocities—having already caused the arrest of fifteen ringleaders and their transference to Constantinople for trial,—and that ample restitution will be made to Christian sufferers.

Communications.

GLASGOW LETTER.

GLASGOW, August 25, 1876.

DEAR INDEX:—

I don't remember ever hearing of the existence in America, where all sects nearly have representatives, of that body of religious believers known as the "Peculiar People." Most of your readers are perhaps aware that their distinctive tenet is that in cases of sickness the treatment prescribed by the Apostle James is the only one permissible to believers in the Christian Scriptures. And I think it is indisputable that they are correct in this, and are thus the only consistent believers in the Scriptures being the guide of a Christian's life. But the administrators of the law here don't take the same view of the matter. And when, as does happen, some member of a family, holding the tenets of the Peculiar People, dies, notwithstanding the prayers of the saints and the anointing with oil, the head of the family has to stand his trial for culpable homicide. Most people will, no doubt, think that the legal authorities act on a reasonable view of the matter. So would all, were it not for the fact that the same law which prosecutes this offender upholds and pays for the teaching on which he conscientiously acts, and might (although the progress of liberal opinion renders this almost impossible now) prosecute any one for saying that the advice on which he acts is foolish. It is astonishing that, with such cases recurring again and again, the eyes, or minds, of the people are not opened to the absurdity of maintaining, at immense cost, a national church to instruct the people, who, if they act on the instructions thus furnished to them by the State, subject themselves to a criminal prosecution by the same State.

That there is some dim suspicion to this effect, however, may be inferred from the fact that juries seldom, if ever indeed, convict in such cases. I notice, however, that the head of a family who has already been tried once or twice on this charge, is again in trouble, when, I fear, he will not be so likely again to experience the tender mercies of a Christian judge and jury. Assuredly, were I on the jury, I should refuse to convict the man so long as the State, through its church, taught him and others that in doing as he had done he was obeying a divine and infallible precept.

But this is only one instance of the inconsistency between Christian profession and Christian practice, which is almost universally prevalent throughout the Christian world. Where is the Christian who, when smitten on the one cheek, will turn the other also? or who chooses his guests or lends his money on the principles inculcated by Christ? If such an one could be found, is it saying too much that he would be the butt and laughing-stock of the Christian world? and that his fellow-believers would write him down a fool? It is only the other day that an eminent English preacher published a volume of sermons in one of which he attempts to show the compatibility of war with Christian principles. Now does not such a state of matters indicate the disintegration of Christianity? Is not this exactly the state which prevailed among the religions of Rome and Greece when Christ appeared? We are told by Christian advocates that the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount are metaphorical. But the only reason assigned for this statement is what you are constantly urging against them: the impossibility of living upon them in this world. In a world of angels they might be practicable, and if practicable would, in my opinion, be exceedingly desirable; although I quite agree with you that the attempt to practise them in our present state of society is most deleterious to the moral standing of a man. Still if the impossibility of living up to Christ's precepts is sufficient to prove them metaphorical, will the impossibility of proving the facts of Christ's life be admitted by professing Christians as sufficient ground for believing them mythical? The two things seem to me to furnish a parallel. The development of Christianity, as this abandonment of the teachings of Christ is called, seems to me to be simply an evaporating of Christ out of Christianity. We have, to be sure, in the present day, any amount of believing about Christ (and very little good does it do the believers), but believing in Christ, if the phrase means, as to every rational mind it must mean, acting on the principles which Christ lived and taught, is by no means quite so common. A little of this on the part of Christians would go a much greater way to secure respect for their religion than any amount of zeal for the sanctity of the Sabbath, or any quantity of howling in "the praise of our Redeemer."

Sabbatarianism is a peculiarly Scotch institution. Nevertheless, it has lately met with a check here which it is a pity it did not also meet with in the case of the Philadelphia Exhibition. The Sabbath Alliance League some time ago petitioned the trustees of the Leith Docks to prevent the sailing of pleasure-boats on Sunday. The trustees wisely took eminent legal advice before granting the prayer of the petition. Which legal advice, much to the chagrin of the Sabbatarians no doubt, was to the effect that the duty of the trustees was to facilitate, and not to obstruct, traffic at any time or season.

Great excitement prevails in Glasgow over three cases of perversion, on the part of congregations and pastors combined, from the Free to the Established Church. In a previous letter I related the steps which the Established Church had taken to bring about this consummation, and with what poor result. But these three cases occurring all within a week, yet apparently without concert, make people think that the bait is taking. One of the cases is rather amusing. This pastor, it seems, has been maturing his plan for some time. Thinking, or at least alleging, that he was shabbily treated by the Finance Committee of the Free Church to whom he had applied for a grant in aid of a new church he was building, he turned for assistance to the late James Baird, the munificent patron of the Established Church. Laying before Mr. Baird the change which was working in his opinions as respected the rival claims of the two churches, and delicately hinting his growing preference for the Establishment, he was somewhat bluntly, it must be confessed, met by Mr. Baird's strictly business and to-the-point inquiry, "Will ailler dae't?" Thus rudely brought to face the material question, the minister confessed to the soft impeachment that it was only money that was required to buy him and his congregation. Then came Mr. Baird's second practical query, "Hoo muckle?" for which the figure of £11,500 was quoted as a reply,—showing, that though willing to be sold, they were not to be sold for naught. Mr. Baird stickled a little at this, remarking, "That's a lot o' siller for ae kirk!" but at last completed the bargain for £9,500. The minister and congregation perhaps congratulate themselves on their bargain, but no one else seems inclined to do so—the Established Church being almost as unanimous as the Free in reprobating the whole affair as a disgraceful transaction. Yours cordially,

JAMES BOYD.

A REMARKABLE LETTER.

HERRON, Ind., August 11, 1876.

MR. ARBOT:

Sir,—My object in writing to you at present is to present some things for your consideration. I have no doubt your object and aim is to promote the welfare and happiness of the human family; this also is mine, but we cannot work together; for while you believe their happiness lies in following a certain course, I am urging them to take the very opposite direction. You think the world would be far happier, if the Bible was entirely removed. [No, but if it was rationally used.—ED.] I think that the teachings of the Bible are calculated, when well understood and closely followed, to turn the world into a paradise. It is evident that one of us is wrong, but is there any way to find out who it is? I have been thinking for some time that we might arrive at some certainty respecting this, by planting two small colonies somewhere in the West,—the members of one of them to bind themselves by oath or covenant to aim to make it their whole business to follow the directions of the Bible in every thought, word, and act; the other to have no Bibles and to be as far as possible composed of men who have never read the Bible and know nothing of its teaching, but otherwise intelligent. We should expect this government to give them the privilege of forming their own civil governments, the one strictly according to the Bible, the other as they please. This would give us a little chance to see how our paper models would work. Mine seems perfect in all its parts, when I look at it on paper, and no doubt yours does to you; but will they work? That is the question.

Another proposition I want to make is that you assist me in forming an organization that I think will one day destroy your organization. You will say, "That is rather cool!" But hear me out. You say Christianity and Republicanism are in direct opposition to each other, and I say so too; a people claiming all power are in open rebellion against Christ, for he certainly claims all power. If this is the case, it must be a very heinous sin for a Christian to take part in this government. Now if you open your columns to me, I think I can prove this position to a demonstration, both from Scripture and reason. The effect of it would be to divide the Christian element in this country, and place the power in your hands, which I expect you would not be slow to use in freeing yourselves from what you consider the bands and cords of Christianity. Of course it is not division that I am working for; but, as all are now on the wrong track, and it is impossible to get all at once on the right track, I would rather see some right than all wrong.

What I want is an organization every member of which will place himself publicly, by oath or covenant, entirely under the authority of Christ, giving his time, talents, property, and life wholly into his hands, to be entirely under his direction and at his disposal; and Christ, on his part, engages to supply all their wants. These are the conditions of the treaty that God proposes to make with his rebel subjects, fully contained in these words of the apostle: "All things are yours and ye are Christ's" (I. Cor. iii., 22, 23). This is our condition after we have publicly and fully accepted his terms. But as God is the proposer of the terms, it is plain that they must be fully accepted before it is a bargain; otherwise God is not bound to fulfil a single promise, for his promises are all made to such as have fully accepted his terms. This, I think, is the condition of the Christian world at present; they have not fully placed themselves under the direction of Christ, and he is therefore not bound by his engagement to direct them, and it is plain that it is not for his honor to show them favor while they are in this state. This, I think, is the cause of their divisions. This organization that I am speaking of, I expect to be "the stone cut out of the mountain without hands"; it will be a beautiful, polished stone, and men will do it. But their social, civil, and ecclesiastical organization shall be so completely under Christ's direction that it will not show the least hammer or chisel-mark of man's device.

I expect but little advantage from the present National Reform Association; it is certainly not for the honor of Christ to be the captain of such a company. All except the Reformed Presbyterians are connected with this government in open rebellion against Christ, and they, though believing it sinful, keep their mouths shut on this subject, hoping to carry their point through the committing of this sin by others. As a firm believer in the Bible, I have no faith in such practices. You will ask me how I expect to reform the government, if I drive off the Christian element from taking any part in it? I answer that I cannot tell. Our business is just to place ourselves entirely under the direction of Christ as our captain, and through his direction and assistance we expect to bring the whole world under his authority. I would calculate to lay no plans of our own or follow anything of our own devising. I expect that for a time you will have everything your own way, but the triumphing of the wicked is short. [We are grateful for this good opinion of our character.—ED.]

There are at present three claimants for sovereign authority: the Pope, the civil powers, and Christ. I think the time for settling these claims is not far distant. The Bible tells us how they will be settled. It says the ten horns (or civil powers of Europe) shall hate the whore, and make her desolate and naked; they shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire. Then it says these shall make war with the Lamb, but the Lamb shall overcome them. It is evidently against this claim of the Lamb, set up by his followers, that they will contend. This claim is now very feebly and partially set up by the National Reformers; but when the stone organization is formed, then it will be fully set up. We see the hatred between the Pope and civil powers of Europe increasing rapidly, and even spreading in this country, which shows that the end of the Pope is not far distant.

You will ask why I apply to you in this case and not to some religious editor. The reason is plain: they will give me no chance. They are all devoted to the principles of their sects, and will print nothing but what agrees with their principles. If the Bible is not true, then the proposition that I make will certainly be for your advantage, providing we succeed in drawing off a number of Christians from connection with the government. But if the Bible is true, and we succeed in forming a right organization, then we shall certainly be your ruin. But of course you feel no danger from that source, and I therefore expect you to help me, and I have no doubt you will say, "If the Bible is true, then the sooner our organization is destroyed, the better."

You are the only editor I can think of that would be likely to discuss this subject. You do not care how irreligious or Satanic I prove this government to be; none other, either secular or religious, will allow anything to be said against the government, except perhaps the Reformed Presbyterians, but they will print nothing but what is in strict accordance with their creed, and I cannot be bound, and also tell the whole truth.

A Christian civil government is one that gives Christ all that he claims; and that is, not merely supreme authority, but all authority. All judgment belongs to him, and he is the one or only law-giver. The command to do everything in his name extends to every situation and relation in which we can be placed. When we once engage in the service of Christ, we never can be our own masters again, no, not for a single moment. Then the people, as Christ's servants, not as sovereigns, obeying his commands, will choose out just such men as he tells them to choose for rulers and judges. These officers are wholly engaged officially in the service of Christ; they are not by any means the servants of the people. Everything in the government must be done in the name of Christ and according to his directions. This you will think an awful state of slavery, but the Bible calls itself the perfect law of liberty, and when we understand it aright, we shall find it to be so. I think you will now understand what I want, and if you can and will assist me, please to let me know.

JOSEPH MCFARLAND.

P. S.—I am candid. I hold no principle that I am afraid or unwilling to reveal openly, and, as you have that character, I expect to be treated with candor.

[We feel an involuntary respect for the calm and rigorous logic of the above very remarkable letter. The utter antagonism between Christianity and Republicanism is frankly conceded, and the latter is rejected for the former. We differ only in reversing this choice. This country, in the end, will discover that Christianity, true to its own despotic imperialism, involves the denial of those individual rights and liberties on which Republicanism rests; and therefore, by the very law of its nature, the Church is impelled irresistibly to plot ruin to the Republic. The grasping and sagacious ambition of Rome, the equally grasping but more confused ambition of Protestantism, both aspire to vanquish science and equal civil liberty. Mr. McFarland is welcome to these columns, though we cannot help him to his "organization"; for there is something very refreshing in his transparent sincerity and profound loyalty to his own Master. He tells above some home truths, after all. The perplexity he gets into, however, lies here: how is he ever to know what his "Christ" commands? Is every Christian to be his own infallible Pope? If so, his "colony" of Bible-believers would be at loggerheads in ten minutes, and would end in a Kilkenny-cat tragedy in about fifteen.—Ed.]

CHRISTIANITY'S DEBT TO CIVILIZATION.

ELORA, Ontario, Sept. 4, 1876.

SIR:—

In the last Annual Report of the Free Religious Association we have the eloquent address of the president; and in this address we have the following statement: "It is my firm faith personally that Christianity, as a religion, owes more to modern society, to modern civilization, to the modern age, than these owe to Christianity." This thought has, no doubt, occurred to the minds of many who had not the courage to give it utterance—the thought being in such direct antagonism to the popular belief.

We have been, from our earliest years, taught that everything good in theory or practice is due to religion; and that human nature is so corrupt that nothing pure or virtuous can emanate from it.

This, and much more, if more could be said, in derogation of poor human nature has been pressed upon us as a matter that admitted of no doubt; and it is probable that there are men of very liberal views as to religion who have not yet freed their minds from all belief in this vile and false doctrine. So difficult it is to discard prejudices so early and so persistently instilled into us by parents and parsons!

Immediately after giving utterance to the above statement, the president adds: "When we speak of the influence of Christianity on the world, we must remember that the effect of the world on Christianity has never yet been fairly described."

I know no subject that could more worthily engage the pen of a competent writer than to show what the Christian religion was, as left us by its author, its subsequent modification by Paul, and finally the changes and perversions introduced into it by the "Fathers" and by the "Church." The effect this system of religion has had on a world advancing in arts and sciences, and in all kinds of knowledge, and the reciprocal effect of such a world upon the religion, would then be described.

We might thus have a volume as interesting and important as any work in English literature. The eyes of those who now stubbornly close them against any work not in unison with Orthodox views might here and there be opened, whilst men of liberal tendencies, but of imperfect knowledge, would have their vision and knowledge both greatly improved.

To an ordinary reader, the theism and the ethics of the Gospels and the Epistles do not seem difficult of comprehension. The conceptions regarding the Deity seem to have been much the same as those of the Old Testament; with the addition of "Father" as an attribute of love and mercy foreign to the Deity of the patriarchs, however. This theism, combined with the morals of the Gospels, would seem to constitute the religion left us by the Founder.

Perhaps I should apologize for touching on a subject so far above my reach, but I need not offer any excuse for indicating my wishes to see such a work as I have mentioned executed.

I am, sir, yours, etc., J. FINLAYSON.

"CONSCIENCE VOTES."

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 9, 1876.

MR. EDITOR:—

You say, in your last issue: "I am resolved to cast a conscience vote." So am I, if possible; but how? No party represents the ideas which the crisis calls for. Who will organize one?

If honest men can be nominated, pledged to State secularization, civil service reform, hard money, and equal rights for all races, the ticket shall have my vote. I will not ask how the candidates stand upon other questions, as free trade or woman suffrage, for these can be postponed. Neither will I ask whether my vote, given in this important and doubtful State, may elect Hayes or Tilden; nor whether it may be the only vote for the liberal candidates. A "conscience vote" is never thrown away, if, upon important issues which both the great parties refuse to recognize honestly, it represent a platform and purposes that are unmistakable.

J. E. OLIVER.

[Professor Oliver asks a difficult question. It would be presumptuous and impertinent for us to advise others how to answer it. All that is proper for us to do is to point out the public duty of preserving and perfecting the conditions of religious liberty; every voter must decide his own course for himself. But we can say that our own vote will not be cast for any candidate whom we believe to be unsound or doubtful on the question of State Secularization. If the treasury of the National Liberal League were well supplied, we should advise calling at once a public convention of its friends in New York city, to consider the expediency of nominating Presidential candidates of its own. That would give an answer to Professor Oliver's question which might satisfy many. But the National Liberal League cannot do its great work without abundant means. Perhaps it may possess them four years hence; now it must labor in a narrow field as best it can.—Ed.]

SECOND PHILADELPHIA LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11, 1876.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,—I hasten hereby informally to report to you that the Freie Gemeinde of Philadelphia, at its regular quarterly business meeting last night, in accordance with a recommendation adopted by the convention in June last, constituted itself into a "local auxiliary Liberal League," at the same time electing me as a special secretary for the purpose of carrying on all the necessary business correspondence with the Board of Directors of the National Liberal League. I suppose it will, for convenience' sake, have to be designated as Philadelphia Liberal League, No. Two. Its president is Wm. Holdmann, 111 North Fifth Street, Philadelphia.

In addition to ratifying all the resolutions of the above-mentioned convention, the Philadelphia Freie Gemeinde also resolved to join the "Union of Radicals" formed at the convention held here during the last three days of June. Yours very sincerely,

A. LOOS.

THE INSULT TO INGERSOLL AN INSULT TO ALL.

WORCESTER, Sept. 11, 1876.

THE INDEX:—

Is there in the land a liberal who does not feel the insult to Colonel Ingersoll in the New York Sun? What does the Sun care for his "bold blasphemy," except as a means to subvert a low, partisan purpose? I subscribed for the Sun under the impression that it was a manly, independent journal, but it turns out a low, scabawag concern. "Moral pestilence"—"moral carion"! Can't the Sun see itself? Has it lost all power of introspection? Or had it never any to lose? I have never felt so strongly impressed with the necessity of the League organizations as now. There are enough intelligent men and women outside of, and opposed to, this modern paganism of the churches to be felt, if not feared, if they could only be brought en rapport with one another. Now they must submit in detail to the grossest of insults.

Oh, that every one of them would take THE INDEX, and come to feel some little connection and sympathy with their own mental kith and kin!

Respectfully, CHARLES NASH.

NO HELP IN THE PARTIES.

DEAR INDEX:—

I have just read the editorial in the last issue, on "The Republican Party and the School Question." I am a Republican, but have no faith in the party, on the question of secular schools. Neither party will, as a party, help us here; and, believing that this question is of more vital importance than all other issues of the day, I am ready to sacrifice all party ties, and vote for men who will be just and fair toward all. I am an infidel, but I do not ask that the Constitution of the United States shall declare that Jesus was but a man, and the garden of Eden a myth. I only ask that it remain forever silent in matters pertaining to religion. With liberty for all, none need complain.

Yours truly, F. G. JOHNSON.

TOWANDA, Pa., Sept. 10, 1876.

A VETERAN'S VOTE.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 11, 1876.

DEAR INDEX:—

I helped to make the Republican party, served more than three years in the army in defence of its principles, always labored to the best of my ability for its success, never voted any other ticket, and would even now regard the election of Tilden and Hendricks as a national calamity. Yet after reading the quotations from the speeches of Hayes and Wheeler in THE INDEX of Sept. 7, 1876, I would suffer martyrdom before I would vote for either of them. The reason must be obvious. I regard religious liberty as infinitely more valuable than political or civil liberty. What is the attitude of Cooper and Carey on the vital question? The desired information would be thankfully received by

Yours truly, HARRY HOOVER.

Sanctuary of Superstition.

THE FUNERAL OF THE WORLD.—The bells of eternity have rolled up their doleful chasms, muffled in silence, as though waiting to toll the funeral of the world! The trump of God in its awful echo is retiring through the distant planes of eternity with a vibration which sends a tremor through the universe! All is still before the great white throne! Gnashing teeth and gnawing worms are paralyzed! Emotion, stagnated in its channels, lays trembling on the soul, and blasphemies choked in the throat of death! Myriads vast are being awed into silence, except, I think, the children of pious parents and highly favored sinners; and backsliders, as they look along the glorified ranks and change looks with ministers, parents, and Christians, utter a sigh too deep for sound. Behold the vast convocation of immortal, transparent bodies! Perhaps so transparent, that through the naked breasts of once mighty kings and common sinners may be seen the corpse of soul whose eyes look out despair—dead to God, to hope, to heaven,—dead, eternally dead, yet alive to sin and guilt, to pain and woe.—"Shocks from the Battery": a volume of Sermons by Rev. B. Pomeroy, of the Troy M. E. Conference, published in 1869.

A LITERAL HELL.—"I don't like hell-fire preaching," is often said by even professors of religion belonging to evangelical churches. Then they don't like the preaching of the Lord Jesus Christ, his apostles, or the prophets. They talked about the "lowest hell," "the damnation of hell," "the vengeance of eternal fire," and the day that would "burn" the wicked "like an oven," and an "horrible tempest," with a "rain" of "fire and brimstone," that should be the "portion of their cup." "Hell-fire," "lake of fire," "everlasting fire," and "I am tormented in this flame," are words used by the direction of the Holy Ghost, in an absolute manner, without ambiguity. When Christ talked to his hearers about heaven, he endeavored to assure them it was a place, just as they had been taught to believe, and said, "If it were not so, I would have told you." They believed also that hell was a place, and that punishment would be everlastingly inflicted upon the wicked, and that fire, of some kind, would be used in inflicting that punishment.

Now if the doctrine of a literal hell, as described in the Bible, is not true why did not Christ correct his hearers of their error in this matter, for it is generally believed that the Jews held to this doctrine, and why did he send apostles to continue preaching this doctrine if it was erroneous? And why did he not tell them that the prophets had made a mistake in their utterances on this subject of future punishment? These questions will not be easily answered; they cannot be answered. If it can be shown that Christ allowed his hearers to believe erroneously, and confirmed them in so doing, then it will be easy to take away his character as a good and correct teacher. Our repugnance to the doctrine will not make it any the less true, nor will our unbelief prevent the wicked from being "driven away in his wickedness," and "turned into hell," no more than the unbelief of the Jews prevented the burning of the Temple. We may say it is unreasonable, but that will not alter the fact.—Zion's Herald (Methodist), April 11, 1872.

A LIGHTNING-BOLT WRITING GOD'S NAME ON A BLASPHEMER.—Some of our contemporaries seem disposed to question the truth of our statement that a negro man who was killed by lightning a few days ago, in Campbell county, had the letters "GOD" on his body. Dr. Thomas E. Moorman, whose post-office address is Mt. Zion, Campbell county, has furnished the Richmond Christian Advocate an account of the circumstances, from which we extract the following:—

"On the evening of the 6th inst., Perry Jones and George Brown, colored men, notoriously the most profane, wicked persons in the whole community, with three other colored persons, took refuge, during the rain accompanied by a good deal of lightning and thunder, in a tobacco barn on the land of Mr. George Creasey.

"From their several positions one would have thought that two of the others were in more, and the third in as much, danger as Jones and Brown were. They, as their custom was, were engaged in cursing and swearing. Suddenly the lightning descended upon them, and while the other three were comparatively uninjured, Jones was killed, and Brown was stricken down senseless and almost lifeless for a time. He revived after a few minutes, and soon seemed to have regained all of his strength, but was dumb and bereft of his mind for several hours. The lightning had set fire to his clothing, and he was burned on his chest and left side and arm before the fire was extinguished. In his maniac efforts to free himself from those who were restraining him the skin was rubbed from the burned flesh and presented the following characters, GOD,—very close representation, to say the least of them, of the capital letters used in printing the name of Deity, while around and between them the skin was unremoved, and apparently not burned. The above characters occupied the angles of an equilateral triangle, which, as you are doubtless aware, was in ancient days the symbol of Deity. This man then appears to have been branded with the name of his Creator in the symbolic language, it may be, of his forefathers three thousand years ago, and in the printed language of the nation to which he belongs."—Lynchburg (Va.) News, quoted in the N. Y. Sun of Aug. 9, 1876.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

TO THE INDEX ASSOCIATION, Toledo, O.:
 Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address
 THE INDEX,
 No. 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3. one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place Boston

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by O. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights.....	1.50
Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	2.00
Edelweiss.....	1.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.50
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Treasury.....	1.25
The World-Friend.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUEHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUECKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-4. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verses.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. R. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter, with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE; Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mousson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE E.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Outings.....	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor".....	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 3 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede. Romola. The Mill on the Floss. Felix Holt. Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellaneous.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Bahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	6.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAUTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The Marble Faun.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Old-Fashioned Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bite of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	3.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-lings.....	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mosses from the Fairy.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, tracing its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	3.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	1.00
LEWIS (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. O.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
Pre-historic Times.....	5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
Elements of Geology.....	2.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1829 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN) Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	6.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER) Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUKLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NASSBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed.....	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union; Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	2.00
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	1.75
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping, with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.80
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trotty Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.50
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Secrecy, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLEIER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in the Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	11.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.50
First Principles.....	1.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	1.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	2.50
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	2.50
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	1.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	5.00
STOWE (HARRIET BECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.50
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.50
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Class-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	3.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.50
Vanity Fair.....	1.50
The Newcomes.....	1.50
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....	1.50
The Virginians.....	1.50
Emmond, and Leval the Widower.....	1.50
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humorists, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....	1.50
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.50
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.50
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	1.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.50
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Lectures at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYAGE (REV. CHARLES) The Bibles and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	1.50
Vols. III. IV. and VI., each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.50
Sauntering.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	4.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Best Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	1.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

1 Tremont Place Boston.

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,
"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
 2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
 3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
 4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
 5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
- This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of religious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,.....	.15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,.....	.40
FIFTY ".....	.75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.50
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
1 Tremont Place, Boston.

$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Samples FREE. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place Boston.

THE KINGDOM OF HUMANITY

IS AT HAND!
The Time has Come for the Separation of the Wheat and Tares.
Sent on receipt of Ten Cents by MARY E. ADAMS, P. O. Box 117, Milan, Ohio.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
1 Tremont Place, Boston, U.S.A.

THE

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.).....	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIFE OF THE TEACHER.....	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....	3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author)....	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass., for

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
- REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)
- RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
- PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1873, '74, '75. 25 cts. each; for 1876 40 cents; four for $1.00.
- FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book," Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUB & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 8000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS. Address THE INDEX,
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

Rev. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.
Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING,

WINDOW SHADES,
and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,
757 Washington St., Boston.

T H E

PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEWISBOROUGH ST., San Francisco.

RADICAL LECTURES

BY

B. F. UNDERWOOD.

The following is a list of the subjects on which I shall lecture the coming season:—

Positive and Constructive.

1. THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM, and the Duties of Liberals in the American Republic.
2. THE TRIUMPHS OF LIBERALISM.
3. WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS as a Substitute for the Christian Theology.
4. A TRUE MAN better than a true Christian.
5. JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
6. ORIGIN AND HISTORY of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
7. BUDDHA AND BUDDHISM.
8. ANCIENT EGYPT: Her Laws, her Morality, and her Religion.
9. THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.
10. DARWINISM: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
11. NATURAL SELECTION versus Design in Nature.
12. THE PHILOSOPHY of Herbert Spencer.
13. MODERN SCIENTIFIC MATERIALISM.
14. INSTINCT AND INTUITION: organized experiences of the Race.
15. WOMAN: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
16. PAINE: The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
17. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical and Destructive.

18. THE GENERAL INFLUENCE of Christianity.
19. CHRISTIANITY AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.
20. THE FOUR GOSPELS Unhistorical and Unreliable.
21. THE EVIDENCES for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
22. POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS regarding the Bible and Christianity.
23. POPULAR OBJECTIONS to "Infidelity" answered.
24. THE CRIMES AND CRUELITIES of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
25. BIBLE PROPHECIES FALSIFIED by the Facts of History.
26. THE PROOF of a Personal, Intelligent Deity examined.
27. THE PROS AND CONS of a Future State.

For terms, &c.,
Address B. F. UNDERWOOD,
THORNDIKE, MASS.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.
Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President
R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1876.

WHOLE No. 353.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church; in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.
2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.
3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.
4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.
5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.
6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.
7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."
8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.
9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.
10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.
11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.
12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.
13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental ideas on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

CLERGYMEN BLAMED General Newton for exploding Hell-Gate on Sunday. But is not the explosion of the gates of hell their own regular Sunday business?

SEVERAL CITIZENS of Jacksonville, Illinois, have just applied for a charter as a local auxiliary Liberal League. Mr. A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, Mr. S. W. Sample, Mr. David Prince, and thirteen others have signed the application. They are moving in a good cause, and we receive promises of similar action in many other quarters.

MR. GEORGE LEWIS, of Providence, who represents Rhode Island on the Executive Committee of the National Liberal League, reports the organization of the State Executive Sub-Committee as follows: George Lewis, Chairman; Charles W. Livermore, Secretary; Elsieha S. Aldrich, Treasurer; B. A. Ballou, Mrs. Sarah E. H. Doyle. Mr. Lewis adds these words, full of the spirit which befits the hour: "Rhode Island hopes to do her duty in the coming struggle."

PROFESSOR HUXLEY made this emphatic declaration in his third lecture in New York, September 22: "The doctrine of Evolution at the present time rests upon exactly as secure a foundation as the Copernican theory of the motions of the heavenly bodies. Its basis is precisely of the same character—the coincidence of the observed facts with theoretical requirements." It is about time to discontinue the apologetic reference to Evolution as a mere "working hypothesis." As Professor Huxley said a little later in his lecture, "the whole evidence is in favor of Evolution, and there is none against it."

JUDGE McCUE, of the Brooklyn City Court, recently refused to marry a man to his deceased wife's sister on the ground that such a marriage is forbidden by the Catholic Church, though not by the State of New York. That is, his religious views interfere with the proper discharge of his official duties, and so far neutralize his oath to administer well and truly the laws of the State. There is no reason to blame Judge McCue personally in this case for obeying his conscience; but he had no moral right previously to pledge himself to perform functions which he cannot conscientiously discharge. That is a just cause of blame. If the State law contravenes the Church law, no Catholic ought to take the oath of office; if he does, he does wrong by his own moral standard, and is justly censurable.

THE NEW YORK Sun continues its insults to Colonel Ingersoll, as this paragraph in its issue of September 12 illustrates: "Colonel Bob Ingersoll, the loud-lunged man who disbelieves in God and puts his trust in James G. Blaine, repeated in the Cooper Institute hall last evening the campaign speech which he has been delivering down East. It is a peculiarity of Ingersoll's oratory that he cannot address an audience without obtruding blasphemy enough to shock one-half of his hearers and to disgust the other half." But when other orators "obtrude" their Orthodoxy in their speeches, that is a matter of course, and entirely proper! There is one rule for Christians, and another rule for freethinkers; if the former speak their religious convictions in public, it is "piety," but, if the latter do the same, it is "bold blasphemy." This insolent contempt for equal rights in religion has its root and seeming justification in the semi-union of Church and State; and it can never be abolished until the two are totally separated. Will liberals never get tired of being publicly and ignominiously kicked? When they do, they will be ready to assert and establish their equal rights like men.

THE WISCONSIN STATE FAIR, at Milwaukee, has been opened on Sunday. Mr. Robert C. Spencer, of that city, was especially earnest and influential in securing this result, speaking calmly and forcibly in the State Agricultural Society on behalf of the opening, but being greeted by "Christians" with disgraceful cries and interruptions. The Evening Wisconsin of September 15 refers to him in this brutal style, which shows exactly how much Christian respect is accorded to liberals, if they dare to advocate liberal measures in public: "An insult to America, to morality, to decency, was the expression of that State Fair barnacle last night, when he said that it would be anti-American to close the Exhibition grounds on Sunday." Mr. Spencer, be it remembered, is one of the most respected citizens of Milwaukee, the principal of a Commercial College of high reputation, and a staunch friend of THE INDEX from the beginning. But he is publicly stigmatized as a "barnacle," just as soon as he speaks a public word for equal religious rights in public institutions. The result, however, seems to indicate that the Wisconsin Society is more liberal than the Centennial Commission on the Sunday question.

THERE WAS something intensely amusing, if not wholly pleasing, in the adroit diplomacy of Professor Huxley at his first New York lecture, September 18, when he referred to the Creationist theory not as the "Mosaic cosmogony," or the "Biblical cosmogony," or the "cosmogony of Genesis," but merely as the "Miltonic hypothesis." There was a delicious irony in his allusion to the elastic interpretations of Genesis by the theologians, when hard pressed by the facts and arguments of men of science. He professed to be quite unable to decide nice points of Hebrew scholarship, but made a very sly thrust when he said: "A person who is not a Hebrew scholar can only stand by and admire the marvellous flexibility of a language which admits of such diverse interpretations." That is really cruel to the distracted Doctors who have so ingeniously twisted the Bible out of all resemblance even to itself! But, although he could thwack John Milton before a popular audience a little more undisguisedly than Moses or the Bible, every well-informed hearer knew that he was hitting the latter over the former's back. We cannot help preferring the proud dignity of science, disdaining to stoop to a clever expedient, to the ingenious arts of indirection. The truth is that Milton fairly reproduces the Biblical view of creation; and it is the Bible, not Paradise Lost, which will feel the effect of Professor Huxley's masterly argument.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....Boston, Mass.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Ill.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
 HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. H. FROTHINGHAM,.....New York.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. B. P. HALLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTTS,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAY,.....Boston, Mass.
 REV. B. F. SPENCER,.....Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Florence, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LICE,.....San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Detroit, Mich.
 HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,.....New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SEAYRE,.....Editor of "The Pioneer," Cincinnati.
 MR. ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of "American Israelite," New York.
 MR. D. W. BENNETT,.....Editor of "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER,.....Chicago, Ill.

Secretary.

E. H. RANNEY,.....241 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

Miss JANE P. TITCOMB,.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX,.....3 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 E. H. RANNEY.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,.....Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS,.....Monticello, Arkansas.
 J. L. HATON,.....San Francisco, California.
 E. B. HAZEN,.....New Haven, Connecticut.
 S. B. WALLISAN,.....South Waver, Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAY,.....Savannah, Georgia.
 HERMANN LIEBER,.....Indianapolis, Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Paris, Illinois.
 J. E. WALLACE,.....New Orleans, Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD,.....Portland, Maine.
 A. WARREN KELLEY,.....St. Louis, Missouri.
 FRANK J. MEAD,.....Minneapolis, Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE,.....Manchester, New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,.....Lincoln, Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORNE,.....Warren, North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS,.....Providence, Rhode Island.
 R. PETERSON,.....Memphis, Tennessee.
 SAMUEL WATSON,.....Janesville, Wisconsin.
 J. O. BARRETT,.....Dorchester, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SAYWARD,.....Quinton, Ga.
 JOHN L. CUTLER,.....Washington, D. C.
 GEORGE M. WOOD,.....Washington, D. C.
 (The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.)

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman,.....24 Temple Place, Boston.
 MRS. SARAH E. OTIS,.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE,.....231 Washington St., Boston.

N.B.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, as above.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
 AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

Religion in Politics and in the State.

A DISCOURSE IN THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH,
 NEW BEDFORD, JULY 16, 1876.

BY WILLIAM J. POTTER.

It is customary for those who advocate the separation of all religious institutions from the domain of the State to plead the case in the interest of liberty. And this argument is entirely proper and strong. But an argument to the same end, equally legitimate and cogent, may be made in the interest of religion. And it is to this side of the question that I propose to address myself in this discourse. I believe that religion, no less than liberty, demands the entire separation of Church and State, and that this principle of separation, which has always been theoretically the policy of our national government, should be applied practically wherever among us in public custom the old tradition of ecclesiastical and governmental union still exists.

I say that the interests of religion, no less than those of liberty of thought, demand this separation. And I say this as one who believes in religion, and who would think its degradation and overthrow the greatest possible peril to mankind. Not that I care very much for the word religion, but that I do care very much for what the word genuinely stands for. Religious faith is a phrase that, to my mind, covers the highest impulses of human action; and I regard the highest hopes and welfare of the human race as involved in the continuance of such faith. I do not mean the religious faith that is necessarily attached to certain forms of ecclesiasticism and to certain schemes of theology, but that faith which, under whatever form of church or creed, or of no-church and no-creed, does attach itself, with a tenacity which no obstacles can shake or break, to an ideal law of truth and right, clear in insight and courageous in purpose, let come what will, to make that law the standard of conduct and character. I mean that kind of religious faith which binds the conscientiously weak and imperfect human self to "the Power in the universe not ourselves," and thence to sources of power, and life, and progress, and perfection that are as inexhaustible as they are wonderful. I mean that kind of faith which, in all periods of human history and under every form of religion, has taken men and women out of selfish aims and out of their material interests, has made them actually forget self and their own happiness, and life even, and has sent them forth up the rugged steep of duty, the consecrated champions of an idea, to live or to die for truth and human welfare. This is what I mean by religious faith; and I think we must admit that in the past it is a quality of character that has in the main been connected with some phase of historical religion, and that to historical religion, notwithstanding all its errors and corruptions, credit is to be given therefor. It is frequently found, it is true, and especially in our age, outside of the prevailing theologies and churches. But I should deem it an irreparable loss and a fact of the gravest possible disaster to mankind, if this kind of faith were to be sensibly diminished.

And doubtless it is from an apprehension that harm is somehow to come to religious faith from what is now called the secularization of the State and the public school, that so many people oppose the further application of the principle of secularization, and begin almost to doubt whether the American idea of the separation of Church and State is a true and safe theory. They see that religion had an immense deal to do with the settlement of this country, and with the formation of the character of its early inhabitants, and the establishment of free and orderly Constitutional government among them; and they argue that, if our politics are now growing more corrupt, if our national and State governments seem to have lost something of their pristine virtue, it is because religion is not connected so vitally with them as once it was. And so they deprecate any further separation of religious custom from the domain of civil government, and even begin to agitate, under the name of reform, for some more formal recognition of religion, and indeed of a very Orthodox view of the Christian religion, in the national Constitution.

Now so far as the views and apprehensions of this party rest upon the assumptions that there is and always has been a very close and vital relation between religion and civil government, and that religion cannot be safely divorced from politics, but should be a dominant element therein, holding politics and governmental administration to a higher law of rectitude than is furnished by the poor policies of expediency and availability, they have truth for their foundation. But in the assumptions that religion is to have this purifying power in politics, and that this vital relation between religion and government is to be preserved or even furthered by the formal recognition of certain religious beliefs and the observance of certain religious practices in the domain of government, these persons grievously err, and, in my opinion, are doing the very harm, both to religion and government, which they are seeking to avert. Admitting that there is much of truth in their premises, I yet deny their conclusions and the logic of their method. The truth of their premises is, that religion, historically and in its essence, has a very close and vital relation with civil government. Their conclusion is that the recognition by the State of certain views of theology and of certain religious institutions is necessary to good government,—and this is the conclusion they are attempting practically to enforce.

But between these two propositions there is no logical connection. Religion and theology are two very different things; and the official recognition of the latter does not at all imply the possession and power of the former. Let us look at the subject historically, and see if we cannot find some common ground for national opinion and action in this country. I think we shall find these three propositions to be justified:—

First,—Religion and civil government originated in the primitive era of human society side by side, very nearly at the same time and, to a large extent, from the same source, and, up to a certain stage of civilization, they have developed institutions conjointly, forming a close alliance of Church and State.

Second,—A tendency manifests itself in the course of human development towards a separation of civil and religious institutions, and this separation, at a certain stage of progress, becomes complete.

Third,—The separation of civil and religious institutions becomes complete, to the end that religion may the better occupy its legitimate field of improving and elevating individual character, and through character may go into politics and government.

To consider the first of these propositions,—historically religion and civil government have been very intimately blended. We can hardly take up the history of mankind anywhere, whether in its more civilized or in its more rude and barbarous phases, and not find that this connection exists. As a general rule, it is very difficult indeed to separate the two elements of religion and politics, so closely have they intertwined in the historical development of the race. Sometimes a nation—as the Hebrews—has made no attempt, even, to separate the institutions of religion and civil government, but has believed in their practical union; and in treating of such nations it is impossible for the historian to make any such separation. Their civil history and religious history are one and the same. And in Asia, before there was any interference from abroad with the natural development of institutions, this seems to have been a common fact. In Hindostan, before the British government got the control of affairs, the religious and civil institutions were essentially one. The Brahmins, or priests, were recognized as the highest and most powerful class. They were really the political rulers as well as religious, and the other castes were their servants. The government, in fact, was a species of theocracy,—not so purely defined a theocracy as that of the Hebrews, but essentially of the same order. Buddhism adopted a theocratic form of government, even though early Buddhism endeavored to ignore the problem of Deity. In Tibet a theocracy exists to this day. Religion and government are one. The Grand Lama is not only civil ruler, but he is high priest of religion. He is God's representative on earth; and believed to be not simply of human birth, but of divine origin,—a veritable incarnation of Deity. The Grand Lama is a Pope; and spiritual and temporal affairs are more nearly harmonized in his kingdom than they have ever been in the Roman Catholic Church. But the Roman Catholic Church is another illustration of the historical connection between religion and civil government. For centuries after the Christian religion got possession of the Roman Empire, there was no historical movement of any sort in Europe which was not either purely ecclesiastical or did not come somewhere in contact and connection with the Church. And to-day it is the idea of the ruling party in the Church of Rome, in spite of the hopelessness of the prospect of realizing it, that State and Church should be one; that is, they would institute a theocracy.

Nor have people who have become Protestant entirely abandoned the idea of an organic union between religion and government, though the Protestant doctrine of private judgment has helped towards such separation. But this was not one of the issues directly and consciously involved in the Protestant Reformation. The notion of the divine right of kings has been upheld by Protestant nations even more strenuously than by Catholic. It was one of the old points of contest between the Pope and the princes of Germany,—the latter claiming to be divinely-appointed rulers as well as the former. The Protestant king of Protestant Prussia to-day claims to reign by the grace of God. The new title of Queen Victoria runs, "Victoria, by grace of God Queen of England, Defender of the Faith, and Empress of India." And the great Protestant rationalistic philosopher, Hegel, advocated and developed in his philosophical works the idea of a union between State and Church,—not merely of a formal union, but of a union in essence. He believed that Protestantism, through its rationalistic phases, would naturally develop a pure theocracy again, in which the State should be the Church. Calvin, three centuries before, had practically acted upon this idea in the government of Geneva. And our Puritan forefathers in New England acted upon it, a century after Calvin, in their honest attempt to establish a sound and stable government in the new world. They, too, believed in theocracy. They would have the Church and State one, and the Church chief, though the power should be administered through democratic forms. They went to the Bible, not only for their religion, but for their code of civil laws. And that connection which they established between Church and State, though long ago overthrown in form, has not ceased yet as an active element in the civil administration of our country.

These facts might suffice to show how close has been the historical relation between religion and civil government; but as the point is an important one, let us look at two or three other facts. In Greece and Rome, when they were at their best days, the institutions of religion and of government had become to a considerable extent separated; yet not entirely so. The political and military leaders of Athens were expected to consult the oracle at Delphi in regard to public measures, and they did so. Socrates was put to death on a charge (in part) of denying the divinities of the State. And in Rome the Sibylline books, the Sacred Scriptures of the nation, were entrusted to a governmental commission and were to be inspected by order of the Senate, whenever any great public exigencies should arise on which their wisdom might throw light. It must, however, be confessed that the light was thrown so sparingly that the historian, even so keen-eyed a one as Niebuhr, has been left mainly in the dark as to what were its constituent rays. The truth is, the enlightened and ruling classes of Greece and Rome had outgrown the religious institutions of their time, and those institutions were only maintained by the State for the satisfaction of the common people. China is in somewhat similar condition at the present day. The cultivated and governing class of people in China manifest, it is said, very little of religious sentiment as anything distinct from ethics and humanity. Reverence for ancestors is about the only form of worship that can be called common to all classes. Yet the mass of the people have their religious ceremonies and institutions, and these are upheld and protected by the State apparently as a police regulation. This seems to have been to some extent also the condition of things in ancient Egypt, though religion there was more in the ascendancy. But in all these countries, and everywhere—and this is the important point to be noted,—whether religious and civil institutions have become extinct or have existed together under a theocratic form of administration, if we trace back their history, we find their roots, in the dim land of tradition and mythology, mingling so inextricably together that no antiquarian's skill is equal to the task of severing them. Historically, religion and civil government have developed together. State and Church have seldom been separated, perhaps never entirely separated in practice.

Now this fact, as it seems to me, points back to a very important truth; namely, that religion and government have originated in the same way,—that they both had a natural origin in the human mind itself, far back in the primitive ages, when it first began to meet and struggle with the experiences of conscious existence. We are much accustomed to think of religion coming by some distinct, full-rounded revelation,—by some articulated sound spoken out of the Infinite silence, pronouncing the name God or Jehovah; but the alleged revelations themselves contradict any such hypothesis. Look at the Hebrew religion, for instance. Read the very first line of its sacred book,—“In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” It assumes, you see, the existence of God; it assumes that people had the idea of a created Power, and begins with telling what he did. This, therefore, represents a comparatively late period in the history of human development, and tells nothing of the long ages previous through which man must have been working up to this idea of God and of his creative work. So, too, we are apt to think that government must have begun in some quite specific institutions. Many persons, indeed, think that government was originally instituted by special revelation, just as they think religion to have been. But if we look at the institutions of government at any point where their authentic history begins, we shall discover that they assume a fund of previous knowledge, which recent investigations into primeval ages will not allow us to consider a gift by miraculous inspiration, but which was the product of centuries of slowly accumulating experience. It is customary to say that government begins with the patriarchal form, which readily passes into monarchy. And for ordinary usage this may be sufficiently accurate. But in fact the germs of government appeared before they took shape in patriarchal institutions. There are tribes of savages now existing that have scarcely so high a form of government as the patriarchal, and yet are controlled by rules and customs which, though not written, are very stringent. Some of these rules and customs are plainly enough the result of the primitive maxim—hardly yet obsolete even in civilized society—that might makes right. They relate to privileges that belong to the strong, and prohibitions made against the weak. But others as clearly originate in some rude idea of justice, of honor, of moral right,—some idea of a compact between a man and his fellow-man, which both are bound to keep.

Civil government, in fact, though its primitive shape may be rude, begins in a sense, however feebly it may be expressed, of a higher law and of a more universal authority than that of individual caprice or will. Human law is an attempt to give utterance and force to a common sense of right to which individuals recognize their allegiance. Even the primitive rules and customs that exist among quite barbarous tribes, and are the first show of government, have to a large extent this moral significance. They have, in truth, the same origin that religious institutions have. They begin in a sense of obligation to some higher and larger power than that of individual will,—the difference being that while civil institutions and laws attempt to express this sense of obligation in relations between one man and his fellow-men, religious institutions attempt to express it by establishing some direct relations between man and the Being or beings who are supposed to be the embodiment of this higher and more universal power. But in a primitive state of society this difference will hardly be recognized. Hence we find the first rules and customs of a people including indiscriminately both civil and religious affairs. And since the two originate so close together and have in one respect a common origin, they naturally for a time develop together, making an alliance of Church and State,—a natural fact of human history that, however much of evil we may think has grown out of it, we cannot quarrel with in the past.

But this historical survey has already given us hints of our second proposition,—which is just as historically true and just as natural,—that, as society progresses in civilization, there is a tendency to a separation of civil institutions from religious. They naturally develop together up to a certain stage of progress, and then they as naturally and inevitably separate. And for this separation we may find an obvious reason. Religious institutions and observances—not necessarily religious character and conduct, but religious institutions and observances—are associated with certain religious beliefs and opinions which, being of the intellect, necessarily change as mental perception enlarges and intellect becomes educated to different and more correct views of the universe. But civil institutions rest for their validity on the common sense of right or justice—that is, on the moral sense,—which, though capable of increase of power and of extension in practical application, is always substantially the same in essence, and does not change with men's mental beliefs, nor depend upon them for its validity. And because of this difference in respect to connection with and dependence upon intellectual opinions, the civil and religious institutions of a community will tend to separate as the people progress in knowledge and civilization.

As an illustration of this distinction note a curious and instructive fact in the Mosaic commandments. The first four of the ten commandments are religious,—that is, they relate to religious beliefs and observances, and were peculiar to the Jewish faith. The remaining six are ethical and broadly human. We find essentially the same in other religions. But the specially instructive fact about them to be noted is, that for the religious commandments a reason is given: in addition to the commandment some statement is added as if to commend them to the rational understanding of the hearers; while the ethical commandments stand in their naked simplicity, strong enough without a reason. They rest firmly upon the moral sense, which tacitly gives its decisions without any needed confirmation from the understanding. “Thou shalt not kill.” “Thou shalt not steal.” “Thou shalt not bear false witness.”—so the ethical commandments run. “Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, . . . for the Lord thy God is a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children;” “Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, . . . for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and rested on the seventh day, and hallowed it,”—so run the religious commandments.

And this illustrates a difference which exists between civil and religious institutions all through history, and a difference which tends more and more to manifest itself practically as history proceeds. Religious ceremonies and institutions, as I have said, are connected with beliefs which differ according to differences of mental perception, and which may therefore be outgrown and changed as mental perception is enlightened and improved in other directions. Civil institutions—laws, jurisprudence, government—rest primarily on the sense of justice between man and man, of which the field of application may be indeed enlarged, but the essential character of which remains the same. There may be appeals to the rational understanding, especially after civil institutions have developed into the complexity of modern civil government, to decide whether this or that proposed measure is a measure of justice; but this being determined, the ultimate appeal in law is not to the understanding, but to the common sense of right. The Jew may outgrow, and is outgrowing, the religious commandments of Moses, and especially the reasons on which they were based; but the ethical commandments abide with him as firmly as ever, and are as enduring as the stone upon which they were written. When progress in mental development has taken a people beyond the conditions amidst which their religious beliefs and observances were formed, then most surely will begin a separation between their religious institutions and their civil life.

This separation takes place in substance just as soon as the mind of the cultivated and influential class has outgrown the established institutions of religion, though a formal union may be longer tolerated for the sake of the less enlightened populace. But ultimately a complete separation will be decreed in the interest of honesty, sincerity, and harmonious government. The era of separation in substance had come in Greece and Rome in their palmy days, though not recognized in form. It has come in substance in China. Protestantism has been hastening it in all countries of Protestant Christendom. It seems quite near at hand in England. It is only delayed in Germany and France because so much of the substance of it is recognized. It is even getting recognition in Catholic Italy, where the temporal power of the Pope after a long contest has been lost. But the United States is the only important nation where the separation has been formally proclaimed and constitutionally established. And this separation was no mistake. It was wisely designed. The men who framed our federal constitution knew what they were doing, when they left religion without governmental recognition or support. And their action in this matter was the legitimate result of the progress which mankind had been making towards a truer perception of the different functions of religion and of civil government. And it is action that needs to be crowned by the consistent and entire application of the principle in all the departments of the national government and of the separate States, to the end that all existing traditional relics of the old idea of union of State and Church may be abolished.

And this being done, the conditions will be reached for our third and final proposition,—which is that religion will do its noblest work and most effectually serve government by improving the characters of individual men and women.

It is a view of religion as pitiable as it is erroneous, to suppose that its influence upon civil affairs in this country is confined to the few formalities of religious observance that government allows or maintains, or depends at all on such meagre instrumentalities. Let all such observances, which, to a large extent, are but empty forms and hollow mockeries, be discontinued, and government would suffer no loss in religion, while religion would be a gainer in honesty. Can any one very seriously believe that religion, as a power in shaping our national and political life, very much depends on the formal prayers, which so few legislators listen to, in Congress and the State capitals, or on the oaths that are gabbled and garbled in custom houses and courts, or on the official duties of the chaplains in our navy, or on the exemption of ecclesiastical property from taxation, or even on the Bible-reading and the concert-recitation of the Lord's prayer in our public schools? Suppose all these religious formalities to be abolished from this time forward, neither government nor religion will be put in any jeopardy. On the contrary, both government and religion will in time be benefited; benefited by the fact that a blind and delusion will have been removed and people's eyes will be opened to the real nature of religious influence on affairs of government.

So long as these formal religious observances are maintained by government, they have a tendency to pacify the religious consciences, and make people feel that the nation is really religious at heart. They tend, indeed, to belittle and degrade religion into a formal observance apart by itself, and often into a very empty and dishonest form, instead of making it the grand, ennobling element of character and conduct which in itself it really is. I do not think much of the religion of a political convention which is opened with prayer, if the convention make a platform which means this thing or that thing according to the section of people who read it. All the services of all the chaplains that have ever officiated in Congress do not make our government religious; it is only true and honest men in office, men reverent before truth, incorruptible by any bribe, and denying self to serve their country and mankind, who can give the government that character. This nation gave evidence of its religion more by the one act of emancipating the four millions of bondmen in the South, than it would by the establishment and maintenance of a State church. A people that do justly and love mercy show by that behavior more than by their formal prayers and oaths that they walk humbly with God. And religion goes as a vital power into our schools and into the education of the young, not through the daily reading of Bible and prayer nor instruction in religious doctrine, but through the subtle and constant though indirect influence of a teacher's character who is all alive with the noblest aspirations and impulses, and is felt as a power lifting the young mind to holiest ideals of life.

In a word, if these formalities of religious observance in the domain of government are abandoned, it is because religion is capable of so much greater and better service. Far be from us the cry that religion has nothing to do with government and civil institutions. In truth, it has so much to do with them that its work cannot be measured by the petty religious observances now maintained by government, and is only hampered by them. Our doctrine gives no encouragement to the timid conservatism that declares religion to have no concern with politics,—that it is for Sunday and the Church and not for legislative halls or political parties. On the contrary, religion has so much to do with political and legislative bodies that it will not be pushed out upon the mere fringe of their action, but demands that its very substance be woven into the warp and woof of all their thought, and motive, and doing. The American theory is that religion goes into the government and into the national life through character. Our country has no established religion save that which is established in the convictions and hearts of individual citizens, and which establishes them in the ways of rectitude and truthfulness. Religion manifests among us its chief power in elevating and purifying the motives of individual men and women; in redeeming souls out of the degradation of ignorance and vice; in making men and women as individuals see more clearly what is true, love more earnestly what is good, and do more faithfully what is right.

And individual men and women are the citizens of a State. They are the State. They make the government. They enact the laws and put them into execution. And the laws, in our country, are the average common sense of what individual citizens believe to be right and just. Religion has, then, to do, and something very vital to do, with the very sources of government. It is a power felt at the very fountain of law. It enriches and clarifies the primary springs of national life. Let individual character be ennobled, and the nation is ennobled. Let religion, through the teachings of church, and home, and the press, do its duty with the hearts and lives of people—let it teach a more self-denying virtue, a more incorruptible integrity, a finer motive, a more sacred regard for truth and justice,—and the State may be safely left to fulfil all its great trusts, both for the present and for coming generations.

IN A CERTAIN GOOD old Puritan town of New England lives a wealthy deacon. One Sunday morning a neighbor applied for a quart of milk. The placid face of the good deacon's wife appeared, and she, after listening to the request of the boy, replied: “We don't sell milk on Sunday.” As he turned away, evidently disappointed, she said: “You'd better see if you can get it somewhere else. But if you can't get any in the neighborhood, I will let you have a quart; but I shall be obliged to charge you two cents extra, as it is Sunday, for we don't intend to sell milk on Sunday.”

PHILADELPHIA LETTER.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—Brazil, in Agricultural Hall, is even more interesting than in the Main Building. It is so long since some of us studied geography that perhaps we have forgotten that this empire is second only to Russia in extent of contiguous territory, covering an area of three millions two hundred thousand square miles. Agriculture being the chief industry of its people, it naturally follows that the agricultural products of Brazil are its principal source of national wealth. A large variety of these products are here on exhibit, showing at once the immense agricultural resources of this vast empire, and the luxuriant fruitfulness of her soil.

The visitor to the Exposition is everywhere gratified with the wonderfully artistic manner in which the most unattractive and unartistic materials are here placed on exhibit. So noticeable is this feature of the Exposition that it would be an almost satisfactory exhibit of art, if there was no Art-Gallery.

Brazil's display of coffee and cotton, her two principal articles of export, is not an exception. A pavilion is made and decorated with raw cotton, some specimens of which are exceedingly fine. The fleecy whiteness of the cotton, in striking contrast with the national colors, here as elsewhere bounding the space allotted Brazil, renders this pavilion especially attractive. In the centre is a pyramid-stand upon which are displayed one hundred specimens of coffee, put up in glass jars of various sizes,—the smallest jar forming the apex of the pyramid. These coffees are of various forms and sizes, the smallest closely resembling a kernel of wheat. Every one has seen a grain of coffee, but few individuals appreciate of the delicious beverage made from it, which Bacon says "comforteth the heart and brain and helpeth digestion," know how the coffee grows. Just inside the pavilion on the right is a large glass case, in which are dark chestnut-brown berries of the size and shape of a cranberry. As you take one in your hand, so hard is the covering that you think it a species of ground-nut; but upon opening the shell you find two grains of coffee separated by a partition wall, each again enclosed in a light, thin but horny encasement. Brazilian coffees received, at the Paris and Vienna Expositions, the highest award given; and yet they are still sold in the markets of the world as coming from other places. In 1873 and 1874, the United States alone received about one hundred and ninety million pounds of coffee from Brazil; and this was a little more than half the amount exported. According to Professor Agassiz, "more than one-half of the coffee consumed in the world is of Brazilian growth"; and yet your grocer will tell you that the Mocha and Java coffees which you buy come directly from the country whose name they bear. These facts increase our interest in this exhibit. The cultivation of cotton in Brazil has become an important industry only since our late civil war, as prior to that there was no market for it.

Sugars and syrups made from the various kinds of sugar-cane grown in Brazil, caoutchouc or India rubber, with many gums and resins from Brazilian trees, grains, fruits, vegetables, wools, skins, vegetable fibres used in the manufacture of textile fabrics, are here on exhibit. These fibres, some pink, some white, some taken from vines, others from the inner bark of palm-trees, with specimens of fabrics made from them, were sent to England several years since for examination by scientists and manufacturers. The report being favorable, it is believed they will be utilized for the markets of this country and Europe. Some of them are almost equal to silk in appearance and are said to be of easy cultivation, and superior to flax in strength and elasticity. Catalogues containing historical notes of these vegetable fibres, textile plants, and the products of the Brazilian forests, will be furnished you by the attendant. The exhibit of the products of the forests of Brazil is wonderful for its variety, value, and beauty.

It has been well said: "The display would be wonderful if made by the world." Some of these woods are planed, polished, and varnished, showing their quality as decorative woods. Many varieties of the palm are here exhibited. The palm furnishes good building timber, yields wax, oil, starch, a vegetable wool used for cloth and cordage, bears valuable fruit as the cocoa-nut; and from the roots, flowers, and sap medicines are prepared. Here is also the Bertholletia excelsa, the large tree which bears the celebrated Brazil-nuts; the Mimusops elata, or India-rubber tree; several species of the Euphorbiaceæ, the latex of which is used as a substitute for milk in tea and coffee, or dried and used for India-rubber; the incense tree, whose aroma is similar to the incense of Asia; the quassia-tree, from which drinking glasses are made which impart a bitter taste to the waters drunk from them; the papyrus tree, the branches of which cover themselves by exfoliations of the epidermis with sheets of paper of a peculiarly original appearance; the Eriodendron samahuna, the largest tree of the Amazon, the fruit of which contains flocks of silk much sought for mattresses; the silk tree of Rio de Janeiro, and many others, interesting for the beauty of the woods taken from them and capable of being utilized for the necessities and comfort of mankind. I should not forget to mention the Herva maté, of which Brazil exports thirty thousand pounds annually. This product is the leaf of the maté-tree and is used by a large part of the native population as a beverage. It is a cooling drink, well calculated to quench thirst, and is less exciting and much cheaper than tea or coffee. Four dollars' worth of it is said to be equivalent to eighteen dollars' worth of coffee. This is an item of account in these times of no work and no money. It comes to market in broken leaves or in powder, and will, it is said, independent of any other nourishment, sustain strength and vigor during whole days. It, with the palm, will furnish the food, drink, shelter, and clothing necessary for the sustenance of man.

In Machinery Hall is the army and navy display of Brazil, which does not equal ours: two machines used in the Brazilian mint, one for the cutting and marking of the coins, the other for the milling of the edges; and a private exhibit of silk and silk-worms with the appliances for the reeling of the silk from the cocoons.

This exhibit is exceedingly interesting and instructive, showing the whole process of silk culture as an agricultural pursuit, from the dusty moth-miller which deposits its eggs upon the leaves of the Palma Christi, upon which the larvae feed, through each stage of the development and growth of the worm, from one day old to the twenty-second day, when it commences to spin the cocoon; and still farther on through the spinning of the cocoon, the preparation of it for reeling, the reeling, and finally the braids of silk, many of which are here shown in glass cases by the side of similar hanks from Japan, China, and California. The comparison, in point of fineness, gloss, and beauty of silk, is not unfavorable to Brazil. This miller or butterfly is abundant in nearly all parts of the Brazilian Empire, and produces in each generation an average of two hundred and forty cocoons, each cocoon containing thirty grains of good, strong, elastic silk.

The Art exhibit of Brazil is in the annex to the Art Gallery. It is not large, nor is it attractive, either in design or execution. The religion of Brazil and her battle-fields are of course here represented. One very large picture, by Victor Merellies, entitled "The First Mass in Brazil," attracts considerable attention. An altar is represented surmounted by a large cross, in front of which stands the officiating priest; European soldiers and others are kneeling in adoration, while surrounding them are a large number of Indians in postures of wonder and curiosity. A miniature head of the Virgin, painted upon ivory, hangs by its side. The best painting is a half-length, life-size portrait of the Emperor Dom Pedro II. But one piece of statuary exhibited by Brazil is worthy of note. This is entitled "The Recollections of the Tribe." It represents an old Indian seated upon a rock, his left hand holding a tomahawk, the arm hanging negligently over his knee, while the face wears a life-like but regretful expression.

In the Woman's Pavilion, Brazil exhibits embroidery, needle-work, specimens of lace and knitted work, artificial flowers made from feathers, wax, fishscales, and leather. Most of this work is that of the inmates of orphan asylums and pupils from the college of the Imperial society. Some of the needle-work is by the Vicountess de Stamaraty. It is very fine, but in no way represents the real work of woman in Brazil or in any other country. The Brazilian villa at the head of the Landedowne ravine is beautiful and interesting as a specimen of the architecture of that country.

Brazil has contributed to the fullest extent to the success of our Centennial celebration. Her exhibit is not only fine, but exceedingly interesting as the exhibit of a young and progressive monarchy, whose chief, although called an Emperor, has together with his ministry less arbitrary and irresponsible power than our four-years despot whom we are pleased to call the President of this American Republic. Some of the features of the Brazilian government engrafted upon our republic would result in the increased intelligence and independence of our people.

The republics of Peru, Chili, the United States of Venezuela, and the Argentine Confederation complete the contribution of South America to our exposition. All these republics existed prior to 1823, yet their history to date is but a history of internal wars and conflicts with neighboring States. Of course their exhibits show the possibilities of these countries rather than their developed industries.

The Argentine Confederation and the United States of Venezuela are modelled after our government, both consisting of States or provinces federated for common defence; the former, like our own government, has maintained its confederacy at the expense of civil war, while in the latter a continuous struggle has been going on since 1847 between those demanding a strong central government, a republic still, and those striving to maintain the sovereignty of the States. The Roman Catholic religion is the predominant religion of these four republics, and the only one tolerated by law in Peru and Chili. In Venezuela and the Argentine Confederation other religions are tolerated; in the latter, ministers of some other denominations are paid by the government. Will those liberals who do not believe it possible for a State religion to be here established because our government is a republic take note of these facts?

The exhibit of Peru is in an unattractive enclosure near the south-west entrance of the Main Building, and consists of a few agricultural products, extremely fine Llama wool; guano from the Guano Islands, said to be of the best quality, yet without the disagreeable odor of that usually found in our markets; cases of minerals, including two large specimens of silver ore from her very rich silver mines. In one of these cases is a representation of the crucifixion, cut in a piece of sulphate of lime by a half-breed Indian.

Among the agricultural products is a small glass jar of the dried leaves of the coca, a small bush which grows wild upon the slopes of the Andes, and which is largely cultivated in Peru and Bolivia. The native Peruvians claim that the coca contains all the principles necessary for the sustenance of life; they perform laborious work and travel long journeys, taking no nourishment for many days save that obtained from the chewing of the leaves or the beverage made from them. This beverage is much used by travelers to prevent the difficulty of respiration in ascending the Andes; its use often produces interperence and insanity, like the use of opium and alcoholic liquors. So intoxicating is it, that young men becoming addicted to its use forsake civilized people and abandon themselves to savage life with the Indians. The properties of the coca leaf are now the subject of discussion in English medical journals. Some visitors suppose the coca here exhibited to be the same as the cocoa, from which chocolate is made. This is a great mistake. In the centre of the enclosure is a case of mummies supposed from the geological evidences surrounding them to be those of the Incas, and upwards of three thousand five hundred years old; also some skeletons of the Ancient Peruvians, which with household divinities, quaint pottery, implements and weapons have been taken from more than fifty mounds to send here to our Centennial Exposition. The unearthing of these mounds of the dead to complete the exhibit of Peru at this Exposition of the resources and industries of the nations is itself quite as complete an exhibit of the undeveloped condition of Peru to-day as of the customs of ancient nations.

The exhibits of Chili and the Argentine Confederation in the Main Building are located side by side between Peru and the main aisle, and are quite similar. The most attractive exhibit of Chili is a very tastefully arranged mineralogical cabinet, in glass cases under a decorated canopy, in the centre of which is a pyramid of ores with a fine specimen of the condor upon the apex. This cabinet is the exhibit of a private citizen of Chili, and is both beautiful and instructive. Here are one hundred and fifty specimens of native silver, many specimens of copper ores, alabaster, malachite, cobalt, and rock taken from different levels in the silver mines. One specimen of Proustite of silver or ruby silver, containing hundreds of rhomboidal, translucent crystals, is valued at $4,000 and is considered the gem of the cabinet.

By the side of this cabinet, fronting upon the main aisle, is the mineral exhibit of the Argentine Republic. The Argentine government, it will be remembered, received the gold medal at the London Exhibition for her exhibit of gold, silver, and copper ores, of which she makes a fine display here, though less attractive than Chili's. The manufactured goods of these two republics, as here exhibited, are of a primitive character and inferior in both quantity and quality, excepting the one specimen of a Panama hat exhibited by Chili valued at $200; some Manila rope and cordage, a fine alabaster table-top and two mosaic table-tops; a travelling trunk, also a sideboard and dressing-case containing many combinations expressive of some inventive power exhibited by the Argentine Republic. Both exhibit cases of embroidery as woman's work, while Chili adds hand-made lace. She also exhibits silk cocoons, floss silk, and silk in skeins, raw cotton, cotton thread, a few books, periodicals and topographical maps which are creditable. The most noticeable agricultural products exhibited by Chili are her grains which are of a very fair quality.

In Machinery Hall, Chili exhibits a miniature amalgamating machine for the amalgamation of gold and silver ores. This model was erected for the Chilean exhibition of last year, at a cost of $13,000, and is one-sixth the size of the original machine erected at a cost of $230,000.

The exhibit of the Argentine Confederation in Agricultural Hall is a very creditable exhibit of her natural but undeveloped resources, in kind not unlike those of Brazil. It consists of grains, grasses, several specimens of both plain and decorative woods, gums, resins, coffee (of which she exhibits one hundred specimens), tea, spices, hera maté, tobacco, preserved fruits, and meats, native wines, extract of coca, hemp, flax, cotton, wool, silk and silkworms. Animal products from the principal exports of this republic, and wool-growing is her leading industry. It is, therefore, natural that her most noticeable exhibit should be wool and skins of animals. Of wool there is here a remarkable display. Some of the fleeces are of Llama wool and Angora goats' hair, and are very fine and heavy. The frame-work enclosing the section is covered with the skins of animals; some of these are untanned, others tanned with the fur, hair or wool left on and include the domestic animals, also sealions, tigers, and other wild animals. Upon the right are large sacks of animal skins filled with hera maté. It is in this form that this product is brought into their markets.

The Art display of this republic is in the annex of the Art Gallery, and is only noticeable from the heavy coloring of the paintings.

The entire exhibit of Venezuela is situated near the south-west corner of Agricultural Hall, and is enclosed by a high framework from the centre of which is displayed the national flag. Upon the sides are festooned the national colors, red, blue, and yellow. The flag is composed of three longitudinal stripes of these colors with a constellation of seven white stars in the middle of the central blue stripe.

Venezuela exhibits many varieties of tropical fruits preserved in alcohol, specimens of grains, peas, beans, a fine quality of loaf sugar, chocolate, and the cocoa bean from which it is made, and especially coffee, of which there is a large display in glass jars and which is known in our markets as the La Guayra coffee.

A variety of woods and tree products, also cotton, (one specimen of which has a pink color), a vegetable fibre resembling cotton, the product of the silk cotton tree; the cocutza fibre resembling hemp, though finer, dyed, bleached, and in braided skeins, a large cable made of a coarse kind of grass resembling horse-hair; the tortoise-shell is taken from the animal, skins of animals tanned and untanned, boots and shoes, soaps, candles, vegetable oils including the cocoa-nut oil are here exhibited. Several hammocks are swung between the posts of the enclosure. These hammocks are made of braided strands of flax or hemp, the fringes ornamented with embroidered leather flowers.

Embroidered handkerchiefs, floral designs made from the plumage of birds, a case of wax fruits and flowers, illustrating the growth of the coffee-berry, are tasteful in design and well executed. By the side of the latter is a large design in half-work representing Washington, crowned by the Goddess of Liberty, under which is the inscription in hair, "Antonio Guzman Blanco, President of the United States Venezuela, to the country of the immortal Washington: 'first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen.'" An equestrian statue of this first President of the United States of Venezuela, is in the main passage way of the Art Gallery. It is, however, by a Philadelphia artist.

The mineral exhibit of Venezuela, consisting of gold, silver, platinum, antimony, copper, iron, salt, etc., is well arranged; the specimens, labelled, show the richness of their mines. Venezuela makes no effort at an exhibit of woven or knitted goods.

The United States should find a market for her surplus manufactured goods in these South American countries, rich in mineral and agricultural resources, but as yet incapable of utilizing their vast natural wealth.

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12, 1876.

THE GAY CAPITAL.

REV. MONCURE D. CONWAY IN PARIS.

PARIS, Aug. 4, 1876.

When Emerson was in Paris, twenty-eight years ago—one of a then more youthful company of social philosophers and idealists, Monckton Milnes, Arthur Clough, and W. H. Foster,—he came, writes Rev. M. D. Conway to the Cincinnati Commercial, to a conclusion which he expressed in these words: "The French will have things theatrical. God will have things real."

The words came into my mind just now while standing in front of an old house a few doors from my hotel (Louvois), in Richelieu Street, one end of which is now turned into a monument of Molière. In that house Molière lived and wrote the most of his great plays, and now he is seated there in marble, with nymphs around, and a fountain ever singing of how he refreshed the people with his genius; nay, how he refreshes them still, for even now, when "Cloture" and "Relache" are written on two-thirds of the theatres, "Tartuffe" still has a good run at the Comedie-Française. Molière made a good thing out of the mimic world he created for Paris. From Nov. 3, 1658, to Easter, 1659, he received £1540; 1659-60, £2995; 1660-61, £2478. Then he demanded a double portion, and it was accorded by the theatre to his wife, if he should marry. He married in 1662, and for the ten following years he received £67,648. This makes his receipts in Paris alone from one theatre, and in thirteen years, when the money was worth more by a third at least than now, £84,667.

But the opening of this century found in that very same house another poet dreaming a dream which he aimed to throw upon the great stage of the world. There sat St. Simon, creating, in imagination, a new heaven and a new earth; a France organized after the Golden Rule, sevents to be the only priests, churches to be turned into schools and libraries, all—men and women—to have congenial occupations and every comfort provided by the State. When St. Simon had followed his glowing dream until he had it fairly on paper, he raised his head and found that his fiery pillar had led him in the wilderness of pauperism. He looked from his Pisgah in the Rue Richelieu, and saw no land flowing with milk and honey for him; but the cry of his children for bread was audible enough, and his means had all gone to print books which stocked the booksellers' shelves. Nobody bought, nobody read them; so he concluded that it was about time to die. He loaded a pistol one morning, and determined that when the hand pointed to a certain hour he would commit suicide. He then devoted his remaining hours to correcting and annotating his works, and some of the finest things in the poor Count's works were written there when his clock was moving on by death-ticks to a tragedy such as Molière never imagined as he sat, one hundred and fifty years before, in the same room. At last the hour struck, and St. Simon fired at his own head. Some hours later two of his friends—one being the famous Auguste Comte, then young—found him terribly mangled. They shouted for aid. When the surgeon came and began his attentions, St. Simon said: "How can a man live—and think—with seven slugs in his brain?" Yet live he did, strange to say, seven years longer, and wrote admirable books. Such were the differences in the payments which Paris gave for a new theatrical world, and a new world meant to be real.

If Voltaire had only kept to writing plays France would have kept on crowning him in the theatre, and surrounding him with splendor beyond monarchs. But he began to be serious, wished to overthrow the chief of all theatrical institutions with its solemn dramatis personæ of priests, and it hunted him out of the country.

Revolutions did not change this. In 1840, Rachel received in Paris 60,000 francs for three months' acting, more than any author or statesman ever received in a year by solid work. In all of which France keeps up the tradition of the Latin races. At Athens, Polus, the comedian, received a half-talent per day (2700 francs); at Rome, Roscius received from the public treasury 300,000 livres a year, and Dionysia 50,000 crowns. The actor Æsopus left his son 20,000,000 sesterces ($1,000,000). Paris now represents the Latin races, and Paris is itself a theatre. Its theory still is that what cannot be done can be said, what cannot be said can be sung, and what cannot be sung can be danced.

Only out of such a constituency could have come the poetic priest Renan, able to lay before the world such a dramatic drama as that which half-scandalizes, half-amuses his readers. It is that the advance of science will be such that at length a few sevents will combine and compel the obedience of the millions by threatening, if they rebel, to blow the earth to atoms! M. Renan had evidently been meditating on Thomas-son, and imagined the earth as a ship floating through space with a group of scientific dynamitologists on board. But the cynical dreamer knows that it is perfectly safe to tell his dream to Paris, for the Belleville ouvriers would be willing to be blown up themselves if their tyrants should also be blown up,—always provided it were done spectacularly, terminating with a brilliant feu d'artifice. Up to this time, however, the crafty politicians of France have been able to rule Paris by the easy plan of providing fascinating displays, and making scenic felicities cheaper than bread and meat. The attempt of the late emperor to vary the amusement with a grand military drama was hailed with delight in the first act. The piece cost too much, and was not a success, but with better actors a similar variation has several times succeeded. But that the attempt had to be made is significant, as showing that although the theory I have been stating is true, it is only true up to a certain extent. Even conserve of roses cloys at last. I do not know whether the present rulers of France have consciously taken a leaf out of the late imperial drama or not, but it appears to me that during none of the last seven or eight years of the Empire was there a freer rein given to the pleasures of the people than now. The notorious Jardin Mabille has been broken up this season, by reason of the fact that the whole Champs d'Élysées is turned, every evening, into a free exhibition of much the same character. If any one wishes to see the can-can it is only necessary to pay a franc or two at the entrance of one of the open-air spectacles, whose ten thousand lamps now fringe with light that avenue along which the Prussians marched the other day, when they became masters of the city called Beautiful. For a few pennies all the gamins of Paris can see the Twelve Danish Beauties displaying their charms in diaphanous dresses in one place, or the Chiarini Marble Ladies in another. The boulevards and shops are more brilliant than before the war. The Parisian merry-go-round, actual and allegorical, does not pause long enough for the people to think of Versailles and what goes on there. Though the time must come when it will pause, and the people will find out why the capital of France has been fixed at that distance, by the constitution, until 1880.

While Paris has been amusing itself, and reading on its walls every day the words which no government dares to erase, "liberté, égalité, fraternité," the so-called French Republic has given up real power over the nation to the one party which is united—the clerical party. There are in France forty thousand priests, and they act as one man. Orleanists, legitimists, imperialists, republicans, may divide into rights, and lefts, and centres, but the priesthood knows no division, and they are absolute masters of the situation. In an interview which I had with Prince Napoleon, he was conveying an impression of how very different Corsica was from France generally, and he could not describe it in a more startling way than by mentioning that though the priesthood, as a body, voted against him, two or three priests actually came to him and said, "We mean to vote for you, but we vote as citizens, not as priests." Prince Napoleon added: "You see, therefore, Corsica is not priest-ridden."

This term, "priest-ridden," is rather vague. Just now, when so many in America are trying to reverse the effect of that blow which our fathers struck at ecclesiastical power over the State, it may be well to give some succinct statement of what the term used really means in France. The Church has now exclusive power to grant degrees. This means that it is solely by a vote of Catholic priests that a young man can get his degree, either as a physician or a lawyer. It was formerly in these professions that freedom of thought flourished; but now no student can be admitted to the bar or to the practice of medicine, unless he has satisfied a theological faculty as to his Orthodoxy. Thus the matter stands by the recent vote of the Senate. At a stroke, all the great paths of preferment are placed under control of priests, except only the army. But even here the priests have the highest power, by reason of their prestige in possessing such general influence. It is an actual fact, that no poor young man in France can marry an heiress, however moderate her fortune, unless he first secures the consent of the girl's priest. It is his business to take care that no money goes out of the Church, and the young suitor has to begin to undergo his cross-examination with the vicar before he asks consent of the parents. The priests rule over the women of France to such an extent that it is an opinion I have heard from one of the ablest French statesmen living, that to give women votes in France would, since they number one million more than men, be equivalent to turning the Assembly into a Legislature of priests.

Nor can there be any prospect of anything better, so long as the tone of even most literary men in France is that "the vocation of women is to be pious and pretty," whilst this sudden throwing of the medical profession into clerical hands bids fair to bind every household to the priest by a new fetter. Every youth now knows that "to get on" means to be on good terms with the priest, and to keep the tongue Orthodox whether the heart be so or not. So one may look out for that deluge of vipers which M. Toussennel prophesied would overrun France in the form of a double-tongued generation of students and professional men. The outlook is felt to be sad by all the genuine republicans, and those I have met are in more distress for their country than at the close of the war. Marshal MacMahon's intellectual imbecility has placed the main power in the hands of his wife, a fiery Orleanist in her sympathies and an intriguing Roman Catholic. She is coarse, masculine, talented, energetic, and is the central power around whom such reactionists as Dufaure, etc., cluster.

However, the republicans of the Assembly are very strong men, and they mean to make a hard fight to recover the ground just lost,—that is, to recover from the Church its despotic control over professional degrees. What one most hears of now is "the grand conflict,"—that is, the conflict between the Assembly and that infernal Senate, which no French radical can ever forget was sprung upon France in the name and by the example of the United States. The men whom universal suffrage, working through vast constituencies, has elected to the French Assembly are such as may be taken into account when the philosophy of the right electoral power is to be settled. In the cities, the largest arrondissements have always chosen the best man intellectually, and, as a rule, the best man morally.

It is within my personal knowledge that John Stuart Mill and Louis Blanc once had a long consultation on this matter of suffrage. Mr. Mill held that there ought to be some gradation of electoral power, by which every man should have a vote, but a more learned man should have two votes, a professor three, a statesman four, and so on. Louis Blanc said to him that if he (Mr. Mill) should go into a popular meeting of six hundred comparatively ignorant men, and should explain to them the issues of their vote, and convince them how they ought to vote, he (Mill) would thereby have and would cast six hundred votes. M. Blanc contended that Nature had determined all the gradations of political influence and power, and I believe that Mr. Mill was afterwards inclined to regard his view of "degrees" with less confidence. In the last elections it was abundantly proved that the workingmen of Paris were resolved to have great men as their representatives. Some of the eminent left-wing republicans came to the conclusion that it might be a political advantage to have a laboring man in the Assembly, and an ouvrier named Quinet, having appeared as a candidate, the eminent man withdrew from that arrondissement (the thirteenth) in favor of the laborer. But it made no difference. The workingmen, who entirely controlled the election, refused to vote for their own comrade, Quinet, and elected in his place one of the eminent, scholarly radicals who had withdrawn. Next to the compact unity of the priesthood, the Bonapartists possess the most combined force, and though they are comparatively few, they are still formidable, especially since the recent triumph of their natural allies, the clericals. It is plain the government does not regard them as a party which has ceased to be formidable, and hesitates to break with them. Here is one little proof of this: Having not been in Paris before this for two years, I have been surprised to find that some of the finest streets still preserve their imperialistic names, one being named after the Empress, another after the Empire, a third after the Duke de Morny, etc. On inquiring for the reason of this, I find that repeated protestations against the retention of such names have been made by all the municipal bodies, but that the Prefet had refused to change them. The protesting bodies are elected by the people, the Prefet is appointed by the government, and is responsible to them. The power over street nomenclature in each department is vested in its Prefet, but it is known to be impossible for such an officer to act without sanction of the government in such a matter as the retention of these imperialistic street names in a city where such names are ordinarily changed with even inconvenient rapidity.

Still Paris is amusing itself and the world indefinitely. Vive la bagatelle!

Poetry.

GIORDANO BRUNO:

BURNT FEB. 17, 1600.

Full high-advanced, Truth's banner bright he bore
In a still priestly age, which fagots piled
Around the Sons of Light, whose spirits soar,
By fires ecclesiastic, undefiled,
Into the heaven of fame, whence rule they now
The realm of thought with sovereign, kingly sway,
Hierophants of Truth, before them bow
The nations,—gladly their behests obey.
Immortal Bruno! haply yet will stand
Over the ruins of the Roman Baal,
Whose minions burnt thy flesh, thy statue grand,
For full enfranchised times and men to hail,
When hierarchies proud no more can bind
With slavish dogmas e'en the common mind.

B. W. BALL.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 23.

E. R. Spurrier, $3; H. Blanchard, $3; Isidor Bush, 60 cents; D. Ferguson, $1; Olive N. Preston, $1.50; S. E. Whitney, $3.20; S. P. Andrews, $3.20; T. C. Cornet, $3.20; Alan Greenwell, $4.01; W. M. Mackay, $1; Mrs. H. B. Bird, 50 cents; Chas. Storrs, $5; J. M. P. Bachelier, $1; George Stickney, $3; G. E. Corbin, $1.20; Henrietta Hyde, $1; R. Wilkin, $3; Joseph Treat, $3; John A. Todd, $3; G. Fraustein, $5.30; T. Bush, 50 cents; O. H. Green, $3; W. S. Babcock, 50 cents; A. W. Cadman, 75 cents; Stafford Bolton, $2.75; S. C. Gale, 25 cents; W. H. Ovington, $3.30; John H. Platt, $3.30; Robert Davis, $3; P. Pillsbury, 34 cents.

The Index.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 28, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

REMOVAL.

On and after October 1, 1876, the publication office of THE INDEX will be No. 231 Washington Street, Boston. Office hours will be from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M.

PAINE BUST SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Acknowledged August 31.....	$1144.08
A Friend in New York.....	50.00
E. C. Darling, Ipswich, Mass.....	2.00
Joe. York and friends in Meadville, Pa.....	10.00
D. G. Macgill, Baltimore.....	5.00
	$1211.08

CARRIE BURNHAM KILGORE, Ch. Com. Phil. L. L.
605 Walnut St., Philadelphia.
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.

ALL FRIENDS to the "Paine Bust" enterprise will rejoice at its successful conclusion, as shown by the above report. The sum proposed has now been raised. Mrs. Kilgore writes: "I presume the enclosed report of the Paine fund is the final report of moneys. I shall, of course, make a report of its presentation. Mr. Kilgore has seen the Mayor, and he promises to lay the communication before the Council when they meet, which is about the ninth of October. If more moneys are sent, I shall accept them until Mr. Morse's own contribution [of $100] is made up. This is right." To this last suggestion we heartily say amen; and we congratulate the liberals on this highly gratifying termination of their efforts. Now it will be seen whether the city of Philadelphia will honor itself by cordially accepting this mark of honor to Thomas Paine.

AN UNKNOWN friend sends us an extraordinary extract, simply marked on the margin, "Victor Jacquemont's Letters, 1824." It is characterized by all the mental vigor of De Tocqueville, who nowhere exhibits a superior insight. Although the allusion to Franklin's name is not strictly correct to-day, M. Jacquemont understands American religion far better than most Americans do. The passage is as follows: "There is, in fact, a State religion in the United States. Instead of being the Catholic communion as in France, or the Episcopal as in England, it is the Christian religion in the widest acceptance of the word; but that matters little. Here, as elsewhere, the religion of the greater number lays down the law for the minority, and oppresses it. Moreover in Europe—at least in France—these absurd and tyrannical laws have no other defender than a few officials who at heart despise them; whereas in the United States the greater part of the population, from zeal or from hypocrisy, sees to their observance. . . . In a country where the majority is religious, and where that majority disposes of all official appointments, any man who has political ambition is obliged to seem religious. Every career would be closed to an honest man if he were a philosopher—or, as they call it here, an infidel. Such is the execrable hypocrisy which poisons this society that the name of Franklin is scarcely ever mentioned because Franklin was an infidel! However, these odious and absurd prejudices, being instilled into children from their earliest age, regulate the sincere religious opinions of the masses, and make them religious. Perhaps you may fancy that American society is better on that account? Indeed it is not. What I have seen in the United States has made me relinquish an opinion which you, I believe, hold: that religious ideas may be useful instruments for moralizing mankind. I have long been disposed to think so myself, but I have ceased to think so now."

NOTICE.

On receipt of $3.20, THE INDEX will be sent to any name not already on its mail-list, from the present time until January 1, 1878. This is an excellent opportunity for friends of the paper to increase its circulation among their acquaintances; and it is hoped that they will not neglect to render in this way some greatly-needed assistance to the important cause it represents.

THE SECRET OF UNION.

Why is it that liberal societies and organizations are wont to have so frail and brief a tenure of life? The fact is evident enough to those who have watched the fortunes of such societies during the past ten or twenty years. Multitudes of them have come up like mushrooms to disappear again as quickly. What is the matter? Is it because, as the Orthodox exultingly infer, liberal principles and liberal religion are not really adapted to the wants of humanity—do not contain the seeds of social permanence—fall altogether to minister to the deeper cravings of the human soul and to the deeper necessities of human society? If that is the reason, then liberal principles are false and liberal religion is a delusion. Shall we believe this? If so, Catholicism is to be the final goal of every truth-loving spirit; and, as extremes are said to meet at last, Rome is destined to swallow up Reason.

That conclusion is not what observation and experience and reflection have taught us. The lesson is quite a different one. We believe, on the contrary, that the force of liberalism has spent itself hitherto in fostering an extreme individualism, to the comparative neglect of the social side of human nature. It has manifested itself disproportionately in one direction. It has been centrifugal, and not sufficiently centripetal. It has fostered diversity rather than unity, not because this is necessarily characteristic of liberalism, but because men are seldom liberals in the present state of human development without being stronger on the intellectual than on the social side of their natures. But there is nothing necessary in this. In the long run, freedom will prove productive of a far finer fellowship than ever grew out of subservience to authority. Time will yet exhibit a Commonwealth of Man far nobler, sweeter, and stronger than any possible Church of Christ.

It is because liberal societies as such have hitherto been deficient in public spirit, unconsecrated by a common self-dedication to the needs of the race, altogether too much wrapped up in themselves and too little absorbed in purposes which embrace the whole community, that they have proved so ephemeral. It is the missionary spirit which has given to the Church all its vitality. Just so long as its creed can create that, and fire individuals with a supreme contempt for their own happiness in comparison with the "cause of Christ," so long will the Church thrive, and so long ought it to thrive. There is no miracle about it; the secret is an open one. Whoever loves humanity above himself, even though it be in the ignorant way of a creed-worshipper, proves himself the moral superior of any man who (as a highly gifted thinker once phrased his confession to us) does not "care a damn for his fellow-citizens." Devotion to universal ends just as surely draws men together as gravitation aggregates atoms; and liberalism will create a host of social organizations the very instant that it becomes conscious of a universal common work to do, and responds worthily to the high obligations such a work imposes.

Now the work of the Liberal League is exactly such a work as that, for it grows necessarily out of the very heart of the liberal principle itself. It is essentially a public work, and will appeal to nobody whose soul is too small to take in the length, breadth, and depth of a vast public purpose. The separation of Church and State underlies every one of the special reforms about which men and women busy themselves to-day; not one of them can succeed, if the State is bound down by the creed or subject to the control of the Church. So long as the spirit of ecclesiasticism dominates the national life, just so long are human reason and conscience struggling in vain to find scope for their own free expansion—knocking their brains out against a prison-wall of adamant strength. The separation of Church and State, in the vast sense of the Liberal League movement, is the re-habilitation of the human soul itself—its restoration to the dignity of self-ownership; for no citizen of an enslaved State is free. If he fancies himself free merely because his own individual legs or arms are not separately manacled, he only befools himself and excites the secret derision of his master, who is quite willing to humor his infatuation. Humanity will never know what life in liberty really is, until the chain of its great collective bondage is at last broken; and it is self-consecration to the task of abolishing this bondage, for the sake of the glorious life that shall ensue, which is the soul of the Liberal League movement. Depend upon it, whenever the inspiration of this mighty purpose has once fairly streamed into the now torpid liberalism of America, Liberal Leagues will start into existence like the leaves of the forest in the spring sunshine; for it is the veritable "enthusiasm of humanity."

Next week we shall publish with comments the plan of local organization which has been carefully matured, in order to be submitted to the rapidly increasing number of liberals who discern both the ideal greatness and the practical feasibility of the Liberal League. We believe that the combined simplicity and comprehensiveness of this plan will win for it many friends.

FREE POLITICS.

I see that one, at least, of the readers of THE INDEX objects to "political articles" and discontinues his paper in consequence of the recent political discussions in its columns. None of us, I suppose, would like to see our INDEX turned into a partisan political sheet; but that any one who has understood the principles of free religion should not perceive that those principles inevitably touch social and political problems, is indeed strange. In the times of the anti-slavery conflict, it was the most timid conservatism that used to cry out against the introduction of the subject of slavery into the pulpit, and into ecclesiastical gatherings, on the plea that religion was an affair by itself and had nothing to do with politics. But it was the glory of free and liberal thinkers that, as a class, they claimed that religion was not a mere matter for Sunday and the church and the pious newspaper, but something that concerned the daily conduct of men and women and that ought to enter into all the relations of human life, whether domestic, social, or political.

And that certainly seems a very narrow view both of religion and politics which does not see that they blend together in their practical results. "The separation of Church and State is a very different thing from the separation of religion, rightly understood, from political action. To separate Church and State is to emancipate the State and politics from the authority of certain instituted creeds and rites, in order that, so far as government is concerned, religion may be left a free matter of individual conviction and character; but the more religion becomes a matter of individual conviction and character, and the less it is bound by formal beliefs and observances—that is, the more free it becomes,—the more thoroughly will it enter into political motives and doings and identify itself with all the practical affairs of life. Authoritative religion means allegiance, first of all, to certain beliefs and forms and churches. Free religion means, first and always, with whatever beliefs and institutions it may be associated, practical allegiance to the highest ideal of living. Whatever else it may mean, it must mean at least the dutiful following of truth, the practical observance of reason, right, honor, justice, love, in all the relations of human society. One of the direct results of free religion, therefore, must be free politics."

And is anything more needed in our day for the purification and reform of politics, than just this free individual application of the highest principles of reason and right to political problems? The bane of our politics is partisanship; not necessarily party-organization, but partisanship,—the spirit that subordinates truth to party expediency, reason to passion, principle to policy, honesty and candor to party-victory. There is sectarianism, bigotry, intolerance, the pressure and yoke of authority in politics as in religion; and not a few of the evils that afflict modern politics spring from the fact that party is worshipped before political truth and integrity. We need the same freedom, the same emancipation of thought and reason, in respect to political action, that we claim and are striving for in religion.

And I know of no question on which free and rational thinking independent of all party bias or party claims to authority, is more needed than on this question of secular or sectarian schools—or the whole question of the relation of our government to religion which is so rapidly coming to the front in our politics. The politicians, it is evident, do not yet look at the question as anything but a party foot-ball.

They are studying only how to hit it so as to win for their side the most votes by it. But I have yet to see on the part of any politician, in Congress or out, any speech that indicated either a mental or moral appreciation of the nature of the question. They are indifferent to the question except as it affects party-supremacy. They manifest in the matter no mental conviction, no moral earnestness; and the very objectionable religious amendment to the national Constitution came very near passing the Senate recently, because of this subservience to party rather than to freethought and conscience.

For one, I am glad that the editor of THE INDEX is striving to arouse people to independent thought on this great question. He does not ask them to conform their action to his thinking, but to lift this question up out of the mire of party-policy into the clear atmosphere of truth and right. All things considered, I do not agree with his conclusion that it is wisest to make this the first issue in the coming Presidential vote, but I do agree with him as to the importance of an immediate rational consideration of the subject.

W. J. P.

"THE BIBLE AND WOMAN'S RIGHTS."

With great pleasure we give place to the following letter from Mrs. Stanton, in reply to Mr. Hoover's recent letter addressed to her:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Sir,—At the inauguration of the woman's suffrage movement, the Bible was constantly quoted by clergymen in their pulpits, and in our conventions, against the demands for woman's equality.

Instead of being frightened with the unctuous "thus saith the Lord," echoed on every side, women began with new zeal and discrimination to study the Bible for themselves, and in due time were fully able to rout their opponents with their own weapons. At a woman's convention in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1853, the Bible argument was exhaustively discussed. William Lloyd Garrison, being one of the principal speakers, had shown conclusively that it could be fairly interpreted on the side of justice, liberty, and equality. A clergyman present became so exasperated with his calm, complacent exposition of Scripture truths, in opposition to his own narrow dogmatism, that, on meeting him in the street, he caught Mr. Garrison by the nose and shook him violently, much to his astonishment and discomfort.

In reading a letter in THE INDEX of Sept. 7, addressed to me, containing a column of quotations from our Protestant Scriptures to show the profound contempt all those writers had for women, accusing me of "groping in the ashes of the dead past, and throwing scraps to the Orthodox Cerberus," because, forsooth, I had claimed the Bible on the side of human equality, I felt, Mr. Editor, very much as I imagine Mr. Garrison did when seized by the Rev. Dr. Nevin, of Cleveland, Ohio; not that I was violently shaken by your correspondent in my opinions, for I still feel quite sure I am right.

The Bible, like our Declaration of Independence, United States Constitution, and system of jurisprudence, is susceptible of various interpretations, and if we yield our opponents what they claim, that all these authorities which bind the world's conscience establish man's right to tyrannize over woman, where can we rest the moral lever with which to lift the masses into higher creeds, and codes, and customs? I ponder the letter and breathe in the spirit of our famous Declaration of Independence, and feel that its broad principles can shield and protect the rights of all humanity.

It is vain that men tell us that "its authors had no thought of woman."

Those universal sentiments of liberty, echoed and re-echoed round the world, cannot be recalled,—their power revoked or limited to any one class of mankind. So men may quote and argue on certain sections and articles of the Constitution, to prove that "the fathers never meant liberty for women"; but in these first hours of inspiration, having achieved independence for themselves, they uttered sublime truths of universal application, that neither reason nor sophistry can explain away.

Again: the general principles of our system of jurisprudence provide absolute justice for all alike; and yet the special legislation for woman is cruel and oppressive.

The fact that one can quote volumes of unjust laws from the statute books of every State in the Union does not prove our theories of justice false and valueless, and make it our duty to throw Blackstone, Story, and Kent to the winds.

Even so with the Bibles of all nations; their fundamental principles and declarations are of universal import, just for all times and latitudes, and, rightly interpreted, are in favor of human freedom and equality. If isolated texts here and there are opposed to these underlying principles, we must let the texts go for what they were worth at the time uttered, and balance them with others directly opposed; but to repudiate the eternal truths that have been echoed through the ages in the Scriptures of all peoples and countries robs the reformer of one of the strong arms of power by which to move the masses. Your correspondent says: "The men that wrote the Bible never dreamed of woman's rights." Galatians iii., 28, proves the contrary: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

If there were nothing in the Bible but the Golden Rule, I should claim it on the side of woman suffrage. If Deborah and Huldah were the only characters to illustrate the spheres woman had the right to enter, I should consider Paul's strictures answered by their example. If I had the time and patience to copy them, I could double and triple the texts your correspondent quotes on the other side of the question. But it is as absurd to study the Bible with a concordance as it would be to read history with a dictionary, or explore the solar system with a microscope. But to give you one example of his quotations: For the creation of woman, he goes to Genesis ii., 21, where woman is formed from a rib. It is easily seen why men gravitate to that view of woman's advent into the world.

They think, no doubt, with Paul, that, as man was created first, as the woman was of the man, therefore her place should be one of subordination; forgetting that the historical fact has been reversed ever since, and the man has been of the woman. Therefore, according to that logic, his place should be one of subordination evermore.

However, this view of the creation of the race is regarded by all thinking minds as a mere allegory, opposed to common sense; and the more scientific view of the great event is given in Genesis i., verses 26, 27, 28. In this account man and woman are a simultaneous creation, invested with equal dominion over all living things. Here the first title-deed of this green earth was given alike to the sons and daughters of God, and not one word is said of man having dominion over woman. And after this crowning work was completed, and our progenitors placed, according to the record, in conditions of complete equality, the whole panorama of creation being critically and complacently surveyed, it was pronounced very good.

Respectfully yours,

ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUE.

The subjoined letter written by a gentleman of large influence in political circles, whose intimate relation to leading Republicans all over the country entitles his views to the most careful consideration, will be sure to interest our readers. He takes a hopeful view of the probable action of Congress on the School Amendment, "when again introduced, as it will be at the coming session." But he rests his hope on a "faith" that "no effort will be spared upon the part of those who have this matter at heart to have it rightly and intelligently understood." The universal circulation of the "Patriotic Address" of the National Liberal League, and the increased circulation of THE INDEX by the efforts of its friends, is certainly an effective, and we believe the most effective, manner of securing the needed popular enlightenment on the great question now at issue. Without such popular enlightenment, the passage of a measure embodying the worst feature of the Christian Amendment next winter seems to us as certain as anything in the future can be. Can you serve your country in any wiser way?

The writer of this letter fully appreciates the situation; and it is encouraging to find that religious freedom and equality have at least one sincere friend among those whose opportunities of service are great. We share his hope that the needed "efforts" will be made, and trust that the staunch van-guard of INDEX readers will not be behindhand at this hour. One of them promptly ordered a thousand copies of the "Patriotic Address" at his own expense, and many others have also ordered large packages. The Christian Statesman, the Christian Amendment advocate and organ of the National Reform Association, is sent by the hundred to public men at the expense of friends of that nefarious project; why cannot disinterested liberals do as much for THE INDEX and the equal justice it represents? Every Congressman should have this paper sent to him regularly, and every other man whose position or ability makes his influence felt. There is here a great opportunity of popular "enlightenment," and true it is, as the writer of this letter well points out, that on popular "enlightenment" alone must this great issue depend. But here is the letter:—

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 11, 1876.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—The pressure of a large correspondence, and other responsibilities connected with the political campaign now in progress, has prevented upon my part a further interchange of views with you upon the status of the school question, as affected by the recent action of Congress. The gratifying news reached me on the way West, immediately after our hurried interview at Boston, that Congress had adjourned without the passage of the resolution for the submission of the Senate Amendment to the people. The duty now to be discharged is the enlightenment of public opinion, to the end that the amendment upon this subject, when again introduced, as it will be at the coming session of Congress, shall be all it ought to be.

My conviction is clear and decided that no amendment to the Constitution will ever receive the sanction of Congress, which is in any respect unjust, unfair, or reactionary in the estimation of any portion of our people, however limited their number. I have an abiding faith upon this point, and I take occasion to express it here, for mutual encouragement. It is a faith, however, which, as I am obliged to confess, rests largely upon the fact that no effort will be spared upon the part of those who have this matter at heart to have it rightly and intelligently understood by all who are called upon to act with reference to it, by the members of Congress themselves, and by influential and controlling minds among their constituents throughout the country.

It is evident from the debate upon the subject in the Senate, that the main objectionable feature of the proposed amendment—serious, radical, and untrue to the spirit of the Constitution as it was—escaped attention. Wide-ranging, elaborate, and earnest as the discussion was (leading Senators of both political parties taking part in it repeatedly), the only allusion to the question of the Bible in the schools was an inquiry as to what Bible the proviso clause contemplated, and the reply that it might be indifferently the Protestant or the Douay version; and a statement that the clause was only negative and non-prohibitory in its effect. It is not at all satisfactory to say that there was evidently a want of political discernment on the part of the Senate, as to the all-important principle involved in this proviso. Be this as it may, the fact is beyond question that a marked injustice to all among us who do not derive their religious faith from the teachings of either of the sources referred to was only obstructed and prevented by the votes of Senators who not only voted with no such purpose as this in view, but whose political affiliations, and in some instances whose direct and most earnest sympathies, are all with those who are strenuously opposed to all schools in which their own religious faith is not taught.

With respect to the position of the Republican members of the Senate upon the question it is not a little surprising that this particular point was so entirely overlooked.

I am well-satisfied that the general sentiment of Republicans throughout the country is decidedly in favor of an amendment that shall be open to no objection on this score by any one. This is the only course that is consistent with the nature of the interest in the subject of our public schools, which has always characterized the Republican party. With a very earnest desire that an amendment may be so framed that it shall be free from every reasonable objection whatever, I have embraced every proper opportunity which has offered since the adjournment of Congress to present the subject for the consideration of our leading Republicans residing in various parts of the country, and I have not met as yet any one whose preference is not in favor of an amendment strictly of this description.

I trust, when the occasion recurs for Congressional action upon the subject, we shall have such action as will fully accord with the wise and just tolerance and the enlightened spirit of absolute impartiality with which the Constitution itself was established by our forefathers, and with which its integrity has hitherto sacredly been maintained by those who have undertaken to enlarge or to define more clearly its provisions.

Very truly,

P. S.—My hasty note is not written "for THE INdex"; but, if all or any portion of it will subserve the good cause by insertion, do not hesitate to make such use of it as you think best, withholding the name of the writer, as is my preference under present circumstances.

Reading yesterday the proceedings of the Ninth Annual Meeting of the Free Religious Association, I was impressed with the singular completeness and beauty of statement with which the Secretary, in two brief, concise paragraphs, on pages 14 and 15, under the heading "Breadth of the Association," tells the whole story of the purpose of the Association. I read and re-read it, and read it again to my wife. The question is often asked by letters of inquiry to THE INDEX, and often ably answered—"What is the object of the Association? What do you propose to accomplish by its instrumentalities?" I am inclined to make the suggestion to you to place these two paragraphs, as a standing answer to the inquiry, in every number of THE INDEX, on its first page, as a preface or introduction to its contents.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

From every direction come gratifying reports of increased business activity, and the monotonous wall of "hard times" appears to be almost stilled. This increased activity, moreover, is not a result of speculation, nor is it the feverish result of additional inflation, but arises from the normal operation of the laws of trade. In many departments, the immense over-production of stock, which was the principal cause of the long depression following the panic, has been consumed, and there is now, therefore, a healthful demand for reproduction. In consequence of this demand, wool, for instance, has advanced in price, recently, nearly twenty-five per cent.; many cotton and woollen mills, long silent, are again in operation; and some of the Eastern companies have already added ten per cent. to the wages of operatives. Coal has not risen in price, and another auction sale of one hundred thousand tons is announced for the present week. Within a very few days, also, a wonderful change has taken place in the business of producing crude petroleum. Production for a long time past has not been equal to consumption, and the call for increased production has occasioned the starting of an extraordinary number of new wells, and the pumping of old wells to their fullest capacity. The sudden rise in the price of crude oil has placed an unexpected fortune in the pockets of many persons. It is evident, moreover, that England will need all the wheat we may be willing to spare, and a large export trade is confidently anticipated. The crop of Indian corn is large and excellent in all parts of the country. Altogether, therefore, there is abundant reason for believing that the long and painful period of business depression has come to an end, and although its effects will not immediately disappear, they will cease to seem omnipresent and irremediable.

Hell Gate is, as is well known, the name of a portion of the East River alongside of the upper part of New York Island, or, more properly, of a dangerous portion of the passage between the East River and Long Island Sound. The navigation of this channel has been much improved during recent years, but there still remained a bad ledge of rocks, mostly under water, stretching from Astoria on Long Island out toward the New York shore. For seven years General Newton has now been engaged in an attempt to dispose of this ledge of rock by blowing it up. To effect this purpose a shaft was sunk into the ledge (of hard gneiss rock), and from this shaft radiated numerous tunnels, each tunnel being fourteen feet in width and from seven to twenty-six feet in depth. These tunnels were connected by galleries, and these by other cross-galleries, until at last there was left only an immense excavation covered by a roof of rock ten feet in thickness and nearly three acres in extent, the roof being upheld by something less than two hundred pillars of rock. Above the roof of rock was a depth of water varying from nothing, or almost nothing, to over twenty feet. Into the excavation were closely packed, in numerous distinct charges, over twenty-six tons, or fifty-three thousand pounds, of preparations of nitro-glycerine, in the forms of dynamite, red-rock, and vulcan powder. All the charges were connected by wires with an electric battery; water was let into the excavation; and public notice given that this fearful mass of nitro-glycerine would be exploded on Sunday, the 24th instant, at precisely 2.50 o'clock, the hour of high tide. No such explosion, or anything analogous thereto, had taken place in the history of the world, and we may well believe that throughout this country, as well as in Europe, news of the result was awaited with intense interest. Throughout New York City deep anxiety was added to the feeling of interest, many dismal prophets having predicted a terrible destruction of life and property. The result of the explosion, however, was exactly in accordance with the predictions of those having the affair in charge. The force of the nitro-glycerine in relation to the superincumbent mass of rock and water was calculated with remarkable precision, and the work of seven years became in an instant a wonderful success. General Newton has become the hero of the hour.

Theological bigots have a way of making their appearances at unexpected times and places, but no one could have imagined, in advance of the fact, that the explosion at Hell Gate could have been made an occasion for a ridiculous exhibition of religious narrowness. Among the celebrities of New York is the Hon. William E. Dodge, a wealthy iron-merchant, of highest respectability, an honorable and well-meaning man, the pet of ministers and sentimental reformers, and President, we believe, of the International Convention of Evangelical Christians. With all his excellencies, Mr. Dodge may be described as a besotted Christian, whose bigotry led him to write an extremely foolish letter to General Newton protesting against the firing of the mine on Sunday as an unnecessary "desecration of the Sabbath." But for once the bigot found his match, as appears from the following well-merited letter:—

"HALLETT'S POINT, Sept. 28.

"MR. WILLIAM E. DODGE:

"Sir,—I received a communication from you, dated Sept. 22, in which you decline an alleged invitation from me to witness the explosion at Hell Gate, on Sunday, the 24th inst. As you take a great deal of pains to go out of your way to violate the common courtesies of social intercourse, I take this occasion to inform you that I did not invite you, nor even know of your invitation until the receipt of your refusal of acceptance. The truth is, I left the matter of invitation to the Chamber of Commerce and to Lieutenant Willard, United States Engineer, with instructions to invite a certain number of gentlemen. I regret to find that in one case he has made a mistake.

"Your obedient servant,

"JOHN NEWTON.

"Lieut. Col. Engineer."

Since the death of Custer, the campaign against the Indians, as we have before intimated, has been a decided, and, as it appears at this distance, a very unnecessary failure. With whom the responsibility rests—with Generals Terry and Crook, or with their superior, General Sherman, or with the government at Washington—we do not know, but the failure is none the less a shameful one. The Indian warriors, some of them in their war paint and with defiant speech, are now returning to the various agencies, and although they are formally disarmed and made prisoners, they will of course be fed and sheltered during the winter, and put in good condition for another massacre next spring. Meanwhile another Indian uprising is threatened on our Oregon frontier, and a commission has concluded the farce of a new treaty with the Ogallalla and Brule Sioux, the Cheyennes and Arapahoes at the Red Cloud Agency. The speeches made upon the occasion of signing the new treaty by Young-Man-Afraid, and Swift-Bear, and Little-Wound, and Red-Dog, and Big-Foot, and other chiefs with the absurd names which play so important a part in "dime" novels, are enough to convince any sane person of the utter folly of the whole proceeding. Each one signed evidently with full belief that thereby his extravagant demands upon the Great Father would be complied with, and ready, of course, to take the scalp of the first white man he may meet when assured that his unreasonable desires are not likely to be satisfied.

Since the letters of Mr. Lewis H. Morgan upon the Indian Question, a brief abstract of which we gave in these columns, other letters upon the same subject have been written by Bishop Whipple, General M. A. Miles, and Mr. Thomas Sturgis. From these letters it is evident that the country does not lack able and faithful men who thoroughly understand the Indians and the method of treatment which should be applied to them. There is a remarkable unanimity in the letters of these independent observers with regard to what should be done with the Indians, as well as with regard to the fatality and wickedness of our present methods of treatment. Bishop Whipple states that the present cost of each Indian scalp is $500,000, and the lives of ten soldiers. Mr. Sturgis writes that "the policy that places two bodies of men in the field against each other, equipped by the same power, their rifles and ammunition supplied by the same work-shops, their provisions and blankets stamped by the same inspector, . . . is of so puerile and suicidal a nature as to be rejected by any reasoning mind of whatever shade of pro-Indian or anti-Indian feeling. The Indian is not a ward to be consulted, a child open to good influences, to be gently led aright; but a lunatic, whose impulse is dangerous, and who must be restrained, but whose cure is possible, . . . if he be not allowed, by his own violence, to destroy himself and to injure us in the process." Despite the rant of politicians like Logan, and the vapors of sentimentalists like Seelye, the Indian should be made, first, to comprehend fully that which at present he has no belief in at all, namely, the overwhelming power of the government. Then should follow a strict enforcement of the reservation system, with such modifications as may be necessary to convert the Indian gradually into a stock-raising, or pastoral, or agricultural, or factory-working being. Panics, and rifles, and ammunition should be taken away and positively forbidden them, being dangerous articles for which they have no use whatever, their living being assured by government; and, at the same time, the strictest regard for law and order should be persistently inculcated. In this, or some analogous manner, the Indian might at last be changed from a disgusting and dangerous savage into a decent and self-supporting and useful being. It is evident, at once, that this long-delayed and urgently important work cannot be done by those now having the Indian in charge. The first step must be the formation of a new Indian Department, or the transfer of the present Indian Bureau to the educated and accountable officers of the War Department.

Judge Sinnott has written, upon request of Mr. Abram S. Hewitt, a long and detailed reply to the income-tax charges of the Times against Mr. Tilden. As Judge Sinnott was the confidential law clerk of Tilden during the whole period covered by the income-tax law, this reply may be accepted as that of Mr. Tilden himself. The Times' statement consisted of thirteen distinct items, which are taken up in order and considered by Judge Sinnott, who declares that twelve of the thirteen "are wholly or mainly fictitious." The reply of Sinnott will be accepted as conclusive by the friends of Tilden, and will be refused as inconclusive by those opposed to him. The Times, in its rejoinder, withdraws a few of the items, reiterates the larger number, and adds one more of importance, declaring that Tilden "has attempted to conceal perjury by falsehood, and to hide fraud by the arts of the pettifogger and shyster." Without going to the extreme of the Times, it must be admitted that Sinnott's explanation is not thoroughly satisfactory; but perhaps the admission should also be made that from the complicated nature of Mr. Tilden's business, a thoroughly satisfactory explanation could not readily be furnished. We believe, however, that a much better one could be made (on the supposition of Mr. Tilden's innocence) than any yet given, and regret that it does not appear to be forthcoming.

The condition of affairs in Serbia and Turkey is by no means encouraging. The soldiers of Tchernajeff's army have taken advantage of the temporary cessation of hostilities to proclaim Prince Milan King of Serbia, a defiant act which, under the circumstances, can have no good effect. Mr. Disraeli, in defending the course of the English Government with reference to Turkey, states that "Serbia in its relation with the Porte has violated every principle of honor and morality." After speaking of what has been done, he declares that the next step is to settle the relations of the Porte with its Christian subjects, and not attempt to drive the Turks out of Europe, which would lead to a general European war. It is evident that Serbia does not really wish for peace, but desires to maintain her ground, if possible, long enough to bring about the interference of other nations, hoping thus to gain her independence. Were it not for the Bulgarian atrocities, however, it is difficult to understand how any nation could find a pretext for interfering with Turkey in her punishment of Serbia. But these atrocities have been so shocking that sympathy has been instinctively elected for the Servians who might be exposed to similar barbarities. The Porte is earnestly urged by the powers to proclaim a formal armistice to succeed the temporary truce, but this he has thus far declined to do, unless the powers will first express some opinion upon his propositions for peace, which the powers have unanimously declined to do, and, as we write, the prospect for peace is a gloomy one. In the meantime, Russian soldiers and officers continue to enter the Servian army in large numbers, the plague is reported to have broken out among the Turks, and before this reaches our readers, some important event, at present beyond conjecture, may already have taken place.

Communications.

A SHORT METHOD WITH THE INFALLIBILITY OF THE POPE.

Doubtless, when the Pope is truly fulfilling the function of Supreme Pontifex, of Pontifex Maximus, he is infallible; for it is only when he makes no mistakes that he is fulfilling that function. So every other man, when doing rightly his supreme devoir, is infallible, for the same reason. It is only when a man is off the tripod that he makes mistakes, because to make mistakes is to be off the tripod.

STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

CATHOLICS AND DEMOCRATS.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Will you permit a correction of a misstatement of my position on the Catholic question, in your comments on my letter in your issue of Sept. 14th, which might mislead those who did not read, or do not remember, our original discussion?

I have never denied that the Democrats held certain "relations" to the Catholics in this country which are not held by the Republicans; or, in other words, that a large majority of Catholic voters side with the Democratic party. On the contrary, I admitted that fact in my earliest letters on the Ohio contest. What I did deny, and still deny, is that this "relation" between Catholics and the Democratic party is likely to influence that great party in favor of a division of the school-fund, or in favor of any policy dangerous to the principle of complete religious freedom. The Catholics naturally side with a party which is willing to treat them fairly and justly, instead of trusting a party which, as in Ohio, is dominated by a bigoted Orthodox Protestant influence, which insists on retaining the Protestant Bible in the public schools, and nominates for President a man pledged to sustain and perpetuate this injustice. The bigoted bias of General Hayes is also indicated by the boasting announcement made by his friends that "he never visited a theatre in his life."

That I am not alone in my view of the Catholic question, I call to witness a former editorial contributor of THE INDEX, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, whose views I find thus stated over his well-known initials:—

"I must say again what I have long said, that I believe our liberals are making a serious mistake in policy, in leading themselves to revive the vehement anti-Catholic agitation of twenty years ago. At present, the Catholics, like the Jews, are virtually on our side, because their main claim is, like ours, to be let alone, and not have their children compelled to take part in Protestant religious services against their will. Grant that the Catholic Church would, if it had the power, demand much more than this. As a matter of fact, there is not the slightest chance of its having the power; so strong and permanent is the anti-Catholic prejudice that any ill designs of that Church are sure, at any time, to be defeated by being unmasked. That question will take care of itself. For liberals to join in the 'No Popery' excitement is simply to throw the country back on the old Protestant ground—"the Bible in the schools,"—as a defensive measure against the very dangers the liberals have been so ardently depicting. It is in precisely this way that the 'Religious Amendment' became transformed; it was brought in under a false cry, the 'No Popery' cry; and it presently took a form that alarmed its inventors. I do not know that the 'Christian Amendment' people had much to do with this; if they did, they were wise in their generation. They must have smiled to see liberals aiding in their work, by becoming illiberal against the Roman Catholic Church, and so bringing on a battle under the old flag and on the old ground."

I am certain that we all earnestly desire the same end, the absolute secularization of the government in all its branches; thereby rendering it, not godless as our opponents falsely assert, but more truly godly, or godlike, by removing out of the way the petty little personal and sectarian images and definitions of Deity which each sect sets up, and would command us all to bow down and worship. Wherein we differ is simply in respect to the best, fairest, and speediest means of securing this end. Perhaps only the event can determine which of us is right. I am certainly willing to abide by the event. I submit, however, that it is not a matter of trivial importance that we adopt the right way, and pursue our object steadfastly to the speediest possible conclusion. Therefore I object to the snap-judgment that I am "enamored of an unreal phantasm," that I "delude myself," or that I "fondly imagine" things that are not. Let us fairly and honestly discuss the question, and let the event determine. I submit that the action of the Senate on the school amendment, its indorsement by the New York Republican convention and those of other States, and the nomination of Hayes, are significant indications of the correctness of my view.

You say that I do not "read THE INDEX aright" when I insinuate that you "denounce unjustly all Democrats and all Catholics." Yet in the very same paragraph you assume to declare that "there is no such thing as liberal Catholicism. There are liberals at heart (more or less) who stay nominally in the Church; but they are not Catholics, and have no influence whatever on the course pursued by the Church."

I submit, in reply, that these "liberals at heart" who "stay nominally in the Church" still partake of its communion, and themselves claim to be Catholics. No power in the Church assumes to excommunicate them for their liberal views. By what authority, then, does the editor of THE INDEX assume to do so? To attempt an escape from the charge that you "denounce all Catholics unjustly" on such a plea seems to me a quibble unworthy your usual fair and logical treatment of a question.

I am glad you intend to cast a "conscience vote" for President. But the query suggests itself, How is this to be done? We cannot vote for President directly; only through casting our votes for Presidential electors. Will the editor of THE INDEX meet in convention and nominate a full set of electors for Massachusetts, and vote for them? I, too, desire to cast a "conscience vote." If none other were cast by any citizen, the country would be the better for it.

I am no partisan defender of the Democrats. Nothing can exceed the contempt which I feel for the manner in which the Democratic newspapers have attacked our friend Colonel Ingersoll for his religious views. Though not sympathizing with his extreme partisan defence of the Republican party, or his support of Hayes, I attended his recent meeting at Cooper Union, New York, purely out of condemnation for this spirit of religious bigotry. His brave words for religious liberty were but coldly received; while his claim that the Republican party had done "no act for which we need be ashamed—not one,—not one," was applauded to the echo. Surely, the Democrats do not lack arguments in reply to his indiscriminate laudation of the party in power, that they need to descend to petty and contemptible appeals to religious prejudice and bigotry.

Sympathizing with you heartily in all attempts to weaken the allegiance of liberals to any political party whose principles or candidates are opposed to religious freedom and a secular government,

I am yours faithfully,

LEWIS G. JAMES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18, 1876.

[1. We are sorry to have misunderstood Mr. James, if we did so. We supposed he referred to "relations" between the Democratic party and the Catholic Church; as he reduces them now to the mere fact that "a large majority of Catholic voters side with the Democratic party," we see that he does not admit any "relations" at all between the party and the Church as such. Nevertheless, such relations exist whenever Catholic priests, as in New Jersey, instruct their flock to vote the Democratic ticket, or whenever Democratic politicians, as in New York, secure sectarian appropriations for Catholic institutions out of the public treasury. "The Catholics naturally side with a party which is willing to"—make such appropriations.

2. The quotation from Colonel Higginson is wholly irrelevant. We know of no such "liberals" as he describes, or such as are doing the bad things he points out. They may exist—but we suspect they exist only in his own imagination. If he refers to THE INDEX, he makes an inexcusable misrepresentation; and we by no means assume that. To resist the Catholic attack on the schools is anything but attempting to "revive the vehement anti-Catholic agitation of twenty years ago"; and we credit Colonel Higginson with too much perspicacity to suppose him capable of any such blunder as confounding things so dissimilar.

3. Mr. James ought frankly to withdraw his charge that we "unjustly denounce all Catholics." He tries to sustain it, on the contrary, by quoting our statement that "there is no such thing as Liberal Catholicism." Now we respect all Catholics who, while they remain in the Church, believe the creed and obey the laws of the Church; and, strongly as we oppose the policy on the school question to which their Church commits them, we never "denounced" them at all. Let Mr. James cite, if he can, some passage in which we have "denounced all Catholics," or else recall candidly his hasty charge. We have not even "denounced," though we do not greatly respect, the few Catholics who evade the creed and laws of their Church by coquetting with liberalism; but even if we had "denounced" them, that is not "denouncing all Catholics." If Mr. James considers this a "quibble," we suspect that his readers will apply that word to his own reiterated, but unsubstantiated, charge. The talk about "excommunication" has nothing to do with the question.

4. How we are to "cast a conscience vote" is a matter we reserve for our private decision. We only say that we shall not vote for such candidates as we believe to be opposed to State Secularization.—ED.]

"THE WORLD'S SAGES, INFIDELS AND THINKERS."

This is the title of a new and very valuable biographical compilation which Mr. D. M. Bennett, the indefatigable publisher of the Truth Seeker, has just presented to the radicals of America. It is a very respectable volume of one thousand and forty-eight pages, and contains biographical sketches of the "leading philosophers, teachers, reformers, innovators, founders of new schools of thought, eminent scientists, etc." divided into four parts. The first Part, "from Mena to Jesus," treats of the ancient reformers and philosophers; we have here brief accounts—yet containing all the essential facts and even extracts and passages from their writings—of such great characters as Buddha, Confucius, Solon, Socrates, Plato, Diogenes, Aristotle, Cicero, Virgil, Seneca, and others. The second Part comprises the epoch "from Jesus to Thomas Paine," and here we meet the Nazarene innovator, Plutarch, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius, Mohammed, Roger Bacon, Giordano Bruno, Francis Bacon, Shakespeare, Descartes, Spinoza, Newton, Leibnitz, Voltaire, Franklin, Rousseau, d'Holbach, d'Alembert, Kant, Priestley, Gibbon, and many other great thinkers. We pass on to Part three, the period "from Paine to Lord Amberley," and from the total number of (seventy) sketches, we may mention those of Thomas Paine, Herschel, Ethan Allen, Thomas Jefferson, Goethe, Laplace, Volney, Mary Wollstonecraft, Saint Simon, Madame de Staël, Schelling, Hegel, Robert Owen, Fourier, Mary Somerville, Abner Kneeland, Frances Wright, Auguste Comte, Josiah Warren, Heinrich Heine, Harriet Martineau, George Sand, Feuerbach, John Stuart Mill, David F. Strauss, Maxmill, Margaret Fuller, Charles Sumner, Horace Greeley, Buckle, Austin Holyoake, Winwood Reade. Part four introduces us to the "living characters," and here we have the life-ports of ninety-six eminent men and women who, when the book was published in August, 1876, were still among the living. Some may, perhaps, find fault with the arrangement; we should have liked a complete, alphabetically-arranged index, in addition to the table of contents, but as the author begs his readers to exercise leniency, since the work is really the result of only four months' labor, we may expect that in another edition this matter will be attended to. The fourth Part would have been more complete if it contained, for instance, sketches of the following eminent persons, also: Schünemann-Pott, Carl Schurz, O. B. Frothingham, Rabbi Wise, and others; and in Part three we miss the names of Schopenhauer, Bruno Bauer, Samuel Ludwig, Gerrit Smith. Yet, all in all, the selections have been judiciously made, and the labor of compiling the same was evidently a labor of love. Very interesting to many readers will be the encouraging discovery to find so many illustrious co-workers in the ranks of progressive thinkers, so many noble souls who, sacrificing comfort and following the dictates of their consciences, have dared to be true to themselves!

In speaking of B. F. Underwood, the author says truly: "It was not a rose-straw path he had chosen. How hard he found it for a year or two, no one but himself probably knows. But we can guess what it must have been. To stand up firmly but still respectfully against superstition, bigotry, and religious zeal; to conquer in the popular mind the horror raised in it by the word infidel; to be courteous and calm under insulting and furious religious rant; to enforce a hearing in the most untoward localities by a persistent, respectful manner, but indomitable will; to be 'instant in season and out of season,' travelling long distances between appointments in inclement weather, at whatever pecuniary loss to himself,—these are but a few of the many hard things he had to do. But he did them all without a murmur or complaint, and failed not; and to-day he finds himself able to obtain a respectful and earnest hearing before large audiences wherever his appointments take him; and his appointments have already included nearly every State from Maine to Oregon. The leading dailies of the large cities no longer sneer at infidelity and materialism, but give his lectures large space and respectful mention, often publishing the 'infidel's' lecture entire."

We believe every reader of our INDEX will approve of Mr. Bennett's dictum when he says (page 1025): "Like all radical and reform journals, THE INDEX has had its troubles and difficulties, but it has performed its duty faithfully; it is adding materially to the advancement of Radicalism in America. It fills a niche in the great public field of thought which, perhaps, no other paper has so long and so ably filled. It has been the organ of what is called the Free Religious movement; an organization whose religion is entirely free from supernaturalism and superstition of all kinds. It is radicalism in the freest sense of the term."

HUGO ANDRIESEN.

THE DIFFERENCE.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 12, 1876.

The following extract from Col. Ingersoll's speech at the Cooper Union is from the New York Times of this date:—

"I want free schools, and I want them divorced from sectarian influence. [Tremendous applause and cheers.] I want every school-house to be a true temple of science, in which shall be taught the laws of Nature, in which the children shall be taught actual facts; and I don't want that school-house touched, or that institute of science touched, by any superstition whatever. [Applause.] Leave religion with the Church, with the family, and, more than all, leave religion with each individual heart and man. Let every man be his own bishop, let every man be his own pope, let every man do his own thinking, let every man have a brain of his own, let every man have a heart and conscience of his own."

With the above we may all heartily agree; yet Col. Ingersoll, no doubt, wishes the schools non-sectarian with the Bible out, and the average Republican wishes them non-sectarian with the Bible in. Is not the conflict between the two ideas irrepressible?

MERCHANDISE OF SOULS.

The Bishop of Peterborough, in describing the abuses of the law of church patronage, added a statement of fact as to the working of those laws for which he could personally vouch. Since he had been a bishop he had been called upon to institute in that diocese four clergymen, of whom one was paralytic, another was so aged and infirm that, on the ground of his age and infirmity, he asked for leave of perpetual absence from the important parish to which he (the bishop) had just been compelled to institute him; a third was a reclaimed drunkard who was presented to a benefice situated only a few miles from the scene of his former intemperance where the scandal of it was, unhappily, notorious; the fourth—he could hardly bring himself to say it, but things had come to such a pass that he was resolved that there should be no further concealment—the fourth had resigned a public office that he had formerly held sooner than face an investigation into a charge of the most horrible immorality, the truth of which he did not dare to deny. In each of these cases the facts were perfectly well known to the respective patrons. As regarded every one of these he was legally advised that he had no power to refuse institutions; and as regarded the last, it was simply the fact that the man to whom, at the risk and under the threat of a lawsuit, he refused institution, could the next day have bought, across a counter in London, with the same ease and with more secrecy than he could have bought a railway ticket, a cure of souls in the shape of a donative on which he might have at once entered without any human being having the right to ask him so much as a single question. Shocked at such facts as these, and knowing they were by no means solitary ones in the Church, he asked for a committee of the House of Lords to investigate the state of the law which allowed of it; he embodied in the bill those reforms which this committee declared on evidence to be really necessary, and he was forthwith greeted with a cry of horror and condemnation, as if he had committed an act of sacrilege.—Leisure Hours for July, 1876: "Varieties," p. 478.

A PROMINENT clergyman of Brooklyn, while taking one of a course of boxing lessons for exercise received what the boys call "a jolly black eye." On Sunday he chose his text from Timothy, fourth chapter, seventh verse: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course."

DURING a recent examination of a class of youngsters in one of the Chemung County schools, the teacher asked: "What is a monarchy?" and was immediately answered by a bright, little, eight-year-old boy: "A country governed by a king." "Who would rule if the king should die?" "The queen." "And if the queen should die, who then would be ruler?" "The jack."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 "	" 8 "	" "	" "
" 26 " 51 "	" 5 "	" "	" "
" 52 " " "	" 5 "	" "	" "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.

DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "read the numbers of your INDEX with 'increasing interest.'"

Send $1.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 25 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it, by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooks Hartford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS KILLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

231 Washington St., Boston.

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,
"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"
 contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of glorious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,.....	.15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,.....	.40
FIFTY ".....	.75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.50
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
 231 Washington Street, Boston.

$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Samples FREE. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. ANY OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.
 Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

THE KINGDOM OF HUMANITY

IS AT HAND!
 The Time has Come for the Separation of the Wheat and Tares.
 Sent on receipt of Ten Cents by MARY E. ADAMS, P. O. Box 117, Milan, Ohio.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.
 Address THE INDEX,
 231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

THE NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY
CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
 LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)....	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION.....	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIFE OF THE TEACHER.....	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS.....	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES.....	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER.....	3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author)....	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

ON
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
 Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
- REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.00.)
- RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
- PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; for 1876 40 cents; four for $1.40.
- FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.
 The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York; for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 3000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 50 cents.
 Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

SUBSCRIBE FOR Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.
 Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING, WINDOW SHADES, and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,
 757 Washington St., Boston.

PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEIDESDORFF ST., San Francisco.

RADICAL LECTURES

BY
B. F. UNDERWOOD.

The following is a list of the subjects on which I shall lecture the coming season:—
Positive and Constructive.

1. THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM, and the Duties of Liberals in the American Republic.
2. THE TRIUMPH OF LIBERALISM.
3. WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS AS A Substitute for the Christian Theology.
4. A TRUE MAN better than a true Christian.
5. JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
6. ORIGIN AND HISTORY of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
7. BUDDHA AND BUDDHISM.
8. ANCIENT EGYPT: Her Laws, her Morality, and her Religion.
9. THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.
10. DARWINISM: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
11. NATURAL SELECTION versus Design in Nature.
12. THE PHILOSOPHY of Herbert Spencer.
13. MODERN SCIENTIFIC MATERIALISM.
14. INSTINCT AND INTUITION: organized experiences of the Race.
15. WOMAN: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
16. PAINE: The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
17. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical and Destructive.

18. THE GENERAL INFLUENCE of Christianity.
19. CHRISTIANITY AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.
20. THE FOUR GOSPELS Unhistorical and Unreliable.
21. THE EVIDENCES for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
22. POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS regarding the Bible and Christianity.
23. POPULAR OBJECTIONS to "Infidelity" answered.
24. THE CRIMES AND CRUELITIES of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
25. BIBLE PROPHECIES FALSIFIED by the Facts of History.
26. THE PROOFS of a Personal, Intelligent Deity examined.
27. THE PROS AND CONS of a Future State.

For terms, &c.,
 Address B. F. UNDERWOOD,
 THORNDIKE, MASS.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE: to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

In the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.

Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President.
R. H. BANNET, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1876.

WHOLE NO. 354.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.
2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.
3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.
4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.
5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.
6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.
7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."
8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.
9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.
10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.
11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.
12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practicing the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.
13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body, of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

GLIMPSES.

CAN YOU not secure one new subscriber for THE INDEX before its next issue?

THE SPANISH Catholic clergy are agitating for the suppression of all Protestant schools.

CHARLES ELLIS will lecture on "Death" at Paine Hall next Sunday forenoon. The public are invited.

MR. FROTHINGHAM has returned from Europe with greatly improved health, as multitudes will rejoice to hear.

IT IS DENIED that Governor Hayes is a member of the American Alliance, as appears from a communication on another page. We hope sincerely that the denial is correct.

THE CHURCH was alarmed lest the great Hell-Gate explosion on Sunday should destroy her. Why did she not remember the Scripture promise that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against her"?

MRS. WOODHULL was denied the privilege of speaking last Sunday in Boston in any hall but Paine Hall. It was a shameful denial, whatever she might have to say. Where speech is free, truth only can hold its own. Boston tolerates too many iniquities to be so virtuous all at once. "Methinks she doth protest too much."

WHO is it that mends the Sabbath so industriously? Every week somebody breaks it all to pieces, yet it always gets mended in season for the next performance. It "comes up smiling" after every mauling. President Grant broke it, General Sherman broke it, Secretary Taft broke it, General Newton broke it (with a terrific crash); and now the pet of Orthodoxy, General Hawley, has been breaking it for the second time. We are getting worried over the conundrum—"who does the tinkering?"

HON. BENJAMIN RODMAN, of New Bedford, died on September 29, at the age of over eighty-one years. He was one of the earliest, most interested, and most generous friends of THE INDEX, and his memory will be tenderly cherished by one who last May was welcomed to his charming home with a hospitality never to be forgotten. Bred a Quaker, he was a radical by nature and by mature conviction, and possessed a mind and character of great force, combined with a geniality and kindness that were irresistibly attractive. Truly has it been said that free religion has lost in him "one of its oldest and best friends."

JAMES LICK, the philanthropist and one of the Vice-Presidents of the National Liberal League, died at San Francisco, Sunday, Oct. 1, at the age of eighty years. He was born at Fredericksburg, Pa., Aug. 26, 1796, spent the years from 1821 to 1847 in commercial pursuits in South America, and afterwards accumulated the bulk of his large fortune in California. His donation to Paine Hall in this city is well known, as well as his conveyance in 1874 of $2,000,000 to trustees for benevolent and scientific purposes—a trust subsequently revoked in order to be carried out more in accordance with his own ideas. The provisions of his will are not made public at this writing, but it is hoped that he did not abandon his philanthropic objects.

REV. S. W. SAMPLE, of Jacksonville, Illinois, whose influence had much to do with initiating the new Liberal League in that flourishing place, has published in the Jacksonville Daily Courier of September 11, 12, and 13, a very comprehensive and thrillingly earnest discourse on "The Defeated Constitutional Amendment," delivered before the Independent Religious Society. He depicts the situation very ably and thoroughly, and sums it up with great terseness in the words: "That amendment was defeated, not conquered." It is in the highest degree encouraging to us, in our too frequent disheartened moments, to catch the echoes of some eloquent voice like this, proclaiming aloud the same great principles which THE INDEX is resolved to labor for to the last. May the voices multiply and the echoes fill the air!

A NEW Liberal League has been recently formed in Houston, Texas. Mr. M. O'Regan, the Corresponding Secretary, writes: "It gives me great pleasure to report to you the formation of a Liberal League in this city, modelled after the pattern of the National Liberal League. . . . The subject of organization has been for a long time a matter of serious consideration; its desirability and necessity were felt, but many were timid and backward. The organization of the National Liberal League in Philadelphia has been the signal for general action, and this city cheerfully responds and falls into line." The first formal meeting was held on August 13, and, on August 20, the following officers were elected: Dr. J. J. Burroughs, President; Mr. Z. Emmich, Vice-President; Mr. T. C. Cornet, Recording Secretary; Mr. M. O'Regan, Corresponding Secretary; Mr. Charles Warnecke, Treasurer. The League has just ordered five hundred copies of the "Patriotic Address," and promises to be a vigorous and energetic organization.

A CORRESPONDENT inquires whether the National Liberal League, without holding a special convention, cannot suggest Presidential electors for each State who are known to be uncompromising friends of State Secularization. The plan is hardly feasible, partly because the National League could not wisely select the names, partly because not enough voters would regard the suggestion even if it could, and partly because the people of each State should nominate their own electors. It would be well for local Leagues to draw up lists of electors for their own neighborhoods, provided they are sufficiently in earnest. Before another four years are over, multitudes will do this. At present, the only way to "cast a conscience vote" on this issue may possibly be for the individual voter to draw up his own list of electors, and write on his ballot the reasons why he votes for them. There are undoubtedly some who will do this, and such votes will not be wholly "thrown away," as politicians like to assert. There are undoubtedly others who will vote under protest for one of the three prominent candidates. Others still, seeing no use in voting, will refrain from voting altogether. All that is needed is to have a quick and strong "conscience for liberty," which will manifest itself in some effective way—we care little what. But four years hence we may all know better what to do.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,..... Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,..... Albany, N. Y.
 HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,..... Boston, Mass.
 HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,..... St. Louis, Mo.
 HON. HENRY BOOTH,..... Chicago, Illinois.
 HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,..... Irvington, Ind.
 HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,..... Boston, Mass.
 MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM,..... New York.
 MR. WM. J. POTTER,..... New Bedford, Mass.
 MR. E. P. HALLOWELL,..... Boston, Mass.
 MR. JAMES PARTON,..... Newburyport, Mass.
 MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT,..... San Francisco, Cal.
 HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,..... Providence, R. I.
 REV. M. J. SAVAGE,..... Boston, Mass.
 RABBI B. FELSENTHAL,..... Chicago, Ill.
 REV. W. B. SPENCER,..... Springfield, Wis.
 MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,..... Florence, Mass.
 MR. JAMES LICK,..... San Francisco, Cal.
 MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,..... Detroit, Mich.
 HON. ROBERT DALE OWEN,..... New Harmony, Ind.
 MR. KARL HEINZEN,..... Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
 MR. HORACE SEAY,..... Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
 RABBI ISAAC M. WISE,..... Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
 MR. D. M. BENNETT,..... Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
 MR. MORITZ ELINGER,..... Editor of the "Jewish Times," New York.
 MR. E. F. UNDERWOOD,..... Thorndike, Mass.
 REV. ROBERT COLLYER,..... Chicago, Ill.

Secretary.

E. H. BANNEY,..... 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,..... 142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX,..... 8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT.
 E. H. BANNEY.
 J. A. J. WILCOX.
 D. Y. KILGORE.
 H. S. WILLIAMS.

Executive Committee.

D. Y. KILGORE, Chairman,..... Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 S. J. MATHEWS,..... Monticello, Arkansas.
 J. L. HATCH,..... San Francisco, California.
 E. B. HAZEN,..... New Haven, Connecticut.
 S. S. WALLMAN,..... South Water, Colorado.
 HARWOOD G. DAY,..... Estherville, Iowa.
 HERMANN LIEBER,..... Indianapolis, Indiana.
 ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,..... Peoria, Illinois.
 J. E. WALLACE,..... New Orleans, Louisiana.
 MONROE A. BLANCHARD,..... Portland, Maine.
 A. WARREN KELSEY,..... St. Louis, Missouri.
 FRANK J. MEAD,..... Minneapolis, Minnesota.
 WILLIAM LITTLE,..... Manchester, New Hampshire.
 LORENZO W. BILLINGSLEY,..... Lincoln, Nebraska.
 GEORGE WILLIAM THORNE,..... Warren, North Carolina.
 GEORGE LEWIS,..... Providence, Rhode Island.
 R. PETERSON,..... Paris, Texas.
 SAMUEL WATSON,..... Memphis, Tennessee.
 J. O. BARRETT,..... Janesville, Wisconsin.
 WILLIAM H. SAWYARD,..... Dorchester, Mass.
 JOHN L. OUTLER,..... Quitman, Ga.
 GEORGE M. WOOD,..... Washington, D.C.
 (The remaining States and Territories are to be represented on this Committee by future appointment, as provided in the Constitution.)

Finance Committee.

H. S. WILLIAMS, Chairman,..... 34 Temple Place, Boston.
 MRS. SARAH B. OTIS,..... 131 Warren Avenue, Boston.
 HARLAN P. HYDE,..... 231 Washington St., Boston.

N.B.—For further information, apply to the Secretary, as above.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, undeviatingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

Proving and Holding Fast.

BY O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

An apostle charges his disciples to "prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." Reading the words with modern eyes, we find in them a direction to practise fearlessly the right of free inquiry, restrained only by the respect which all conscientious people must feel for moral principle. The least reflection corrects this impression. In the age of Paul, the rule of free inquiry in our sense of the term was unheard-of, at all events in the community to which he belonged. And no such idea occurred to him when he penned that sentence. The proving or testing that he recommended was simply discriminating between good and evil influences. The Christians believed themselves to be beset on one side and the other by good and evil spirits which often looked so much alike that a keen discernment was required to tell them apart. The power of discernment was a "gift" as they called it, that is, a faculty specially imparted to believers of the "holy spirit," which was sharpened by use, but blunted and even "grieved away" by neglect. The doctrinal test applied was simple, and would be wholly inapplicable to our time: "Try the spirits, whether they be of God. Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God. This is the anti-Christ." Precisely what was meant by this confession is disputed among the critics. It would be idle to make such a confession imperative now when definitions have become subdivided to a degree that in primitive ages could not have been imagined.

The rational rule of free inquiry is of modern device. It came in with the earliest uprisings of the human mind against doctrinal authority, and has acquired clearness and force as reason has gained supremacy. The claim to divine revelations is in conflict with the claim of reason, because it is based on the thought that reason needs divine revelation, and must therefore be incapable of judging it; fallible reason cannot test infallible truth, but can do nothing but meekly accept it. None but inspired minds can prove the validity of inspired teaching. Hence rationalism is a thing unheard-of and wholly inadmissible by churchmen and by creedmen and by Biblemen. Only when the principle has been fairly and fully admitted that reason has the right of eminent domain in the intellectual sphere, that no spot is too sacred for its tread, no object too holy for its vision and touch, is the principle of free inquiry well understood and securely established, and this is very far from being a state of things accepted by any very considerable number of religious people.

It is a good deal for religious people to allow that free inquiry may be tolerated in regard to secondary and incidental doctrines, in the way of explanation, definition, justification. It may be permitted to prove the doctrines of revelation true, not to prove them untrue; it may establish the claims of the Bible and the creed, but it may not invalidate them; it may answer questions, but not raise them. The rationalist claims more than this, a great deal more: he claims that reason has the right to "prove," that is to test, "all things," to bring them to judgment, pronounce sentence on them, declare them precious or valueless. He claims this not as a favor to which he is entitled, but as a right inherent in the human mind. Nay, he asserts it as a duty of the most solemn kind. He declares that men ought, as they prize truth, and would show their appreciation of it, to put it to the test, and the severer the test the better. Is anything alleged to be beyond the reach of proof? How do you know that, before you have tried it? Are some things too high? The more we test them the more will their majesty shine forth. Are some things too low? The more we test them the more will their insignificance and worthlessness be exposed. Is anything too sacred, or too old, or too deeply grounded in reverence? How do you know that, until you have put it to the proof? Is exemption claimed on the ground that the article has already been tested by the experiments of generations and has earned the title to stand unchallenged henceforward? There can certainly be no objection, then, to submitting it to the experiments of more generations, and so adding weight to its title, and extending its authority. He would be satisfied that established things are worthily established, that venerable things deserve veneration, that ancient things are to have a future as well as a past. Why should the privilege of passing uncriticized be accorded to age? Why should mere antiquity be esteemed a merit? It is very certain that some of the stupidest, weakest, falsest, most inhuman things are the oldest, that nothing is quite as old as ignorance, superstition, and delusion. And although new things are not always true, they are not likely to be truer for being imitations of old things. The proving and testing of things, whether old or new, is the only process by which the truth in them can be brought out.

The rationalist contends that, for his own sake and in his own interest, religion should invite proof. There is an impression abroad among keen-minded people of the world, that religion dreads inquiry and shrinks from it; and this impression affects the common mind most unfavorably. The charge of timidity is currently made; some hint at policy and interested motives of greed or ambition; others openly make accusation of hypocrisy. The whole subject is invested with an air of unreality that is most unfortunate for piety. Now and then a teacher of eminence frankly avows his opinion that some beliefs are too precious to mankind to be exposed to the dangers of criticism or controversy, the belief in personal immortality, for example, the belief in an individual God, in a particular providence, in a day of final account,— and suspicion naturally fastens on these beliefs. There is no scepticism so terrible as the scepticism of distrust, no such disastrous confession as our apparent want of frankness. Much of the prevalent unbelief would be disarmed at once by an aspect of sincerity on the part of religious teachers. An open, fearless, cordial bearing towards honest and even dishonest thought would propitiate in advance intellects that begin by suspecting timidity and end by rejecting truth.

It is time men ceased to associate devoutness with a submissive, unquestioning, unchallenging mind, and a disposition to take accepted things on trust, as if passiveness and piety were synonymous terms, as if inertness were a sign of inspiration. But, honestly regarded, which requires the more faith, to question or not to question, to put things to the proof or to rest satisfied with their being improved? Can one, on reflection, hesitate on such a point? At first glance there is something sweet, tender, and touching in the attitude of one who yields up his reason to authority or prejudice. But a deeper glance discloses the fact that this passive disposition is largely made up of elements that are not creditable to the moral side of human nature; elements of indolence, indifference, timidity, and fear; love of ease and tranquillity; desire for popularity; the wish to be well-reputed among the conservative and fashionable, or the dispensers of social favor; a conceit of superiority; the dread of facing or causing wholesome pain, of encountering the natural consequences of disbelief, of disturbing the convictions of mankind,—the last often a pretence. But what is all this but infidelity? To doubt that truth can be found by those that seek it; to doubt that if found it will be a safe thing to have; to doubt that if safe for you it will be equally safe for others, for all without distinction; to doubt that men can live happily without delusions; to doubt that the intellectual universe will abide the shock caused by the tornado of your questioning breath, is to carry doubt as far as it can be carried. This is as good a description of infidelity as can be made. It requires no manliness to profess the creed of the lounge or the stand-still.

A man's faith is large in proportion as he ventures to put all things to the proof. It requires indeed immense faith to do this; faith in reason, faith in the object of reason, faith in the value of knowledge, faith in the future of the race, and in its past too, faith in the end and purpose of creation, faith in the divine leading of humanity, faith in the mind's power to make good all losses, to recover from all defeats. The great provers have been great believers. None perhaps have so magnificently affirmed as they who have courageously denied. The martyrs have all been questioners. The Christian martyrs questioned the beliefs of the pagan world. The Protestant martyrs questioned the authority of Rome. The Unitarian martyrs, for there have been Unitarian martyrs, criticised the faith of Protestantism. All martyrs are of the same order, the order of the provers. All were equally men of faith. They must needs have been so, to do what they did. Men do not willingly discard old and precious beliefs, or throw away hopes that have been dear to mankind. To whom can it give satisfaction to pull down buildings in which souls have found shelter and peace for ages? To whom can it give joy to set men adrift on a sea of speculation, to set themselves adrift also, to make themselves orphans in the world? Do men take pleasure in proving ill-will, hatred, persecution, death, and infamy after death, simply in order that they may indulge a propensity to belittle the world of their own being? Is it such a fine thing to be destitute of faith and hope in the universe, that men will lay down their lives for it? Is it true, as I read on some bitterly sarcastic page, that "the advanced thinker of our time takes an enlightened pride in his father, the monkey"? That "when he has sunk his pedigree as man and adopted as his family tree a procession of the skeletons of baboons, superior enlightenment radiates from his very person, and his place of honor is fixed in the illuminated brotherhood"? I know of none who profess that belief, but if there be such, what martyrs so devoted as they who are willing thus, in the cause of knowledge, to abrogate their humanity, to immolate their immortal being on the altar of creative law!

No; no. The great provers, the really great ones, have dared to prove because they were certain that their proving would result in the establishment of truth. They heated their crucibles and threw in their gema because at the bottom they expected to find the stone that turned everything to gold. They asked questions because they listened for answers. They doubted because they felt sure of a solution. They put off from shore because they were confident of the existence of another shore across the wild waste of waters. They withdrew the veil from before the holy of holies because they wanted the holy of holies and not the curtain. What do we not owe to the few who have done their best to "prove all things"? What have such men given to us, and how tenderly we should bear them in remembrance! They bore hard names through life, and after death harder names were piled like stones over their memories. They lived solitary and misunderstood; they knew the sadness of hope deferred, and the deeper sadness of feeling that their fellow-men regarded them as enemies and destroyers of souls. Some of them were driven by the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil; were called infidels because they believed more than their neighbors, and heretics because they chose the painful pursuit of truth to the idle luxury of their old theological home, and atheists because their deity was too large for definition, and image-breakers because they avowed the unseen spirit, and deniers of the Christ because they affirmed the eternal Word. What do we not owe to them who went about shaking their heads, and saying

"No" with their lips, their hearts all the while murmuring "Ay" to the immortals! These, after all, are the builders of our most beneficent beliefs. Almost all the rational faiths we hold we must thank them for. They have abolished for us the everlasting hell which consumed the hope of our immortality. They have taken the discord out of the heart of God, and made beautiful the aspect of his countenance. They have hunted the old phantom of Satan from place to place, from mountain-top and abyss, from the secret chambers of the air, from the substance of the elemental world, from the heart of human society and the hidden breast of man. They have delivered us from the thralldom of evil spirits, from witchcraft, priestcraft, and superstition. They have taught us to read the Bible with open eyes. They have interpreted for us the noble humanities of Jesus, and have helped us to understand the moral principles that govern our social being. They had, no doubt, their human infirmities, neither few nor small. Their talk was hard and they were but men. They must have been more than men to have kept the sweetness of their hearts from turning to gall, and the passion of their souls from becoming scorn in the persecutions they had to meet. But all this will in the future be forgotten and the service they rendered will be acknowledged. Speaking of the first French Revolution which has been associated in the minds of men for three-fourths of a century with infidelity running to the extreme of atheism, one of our latest historians, Mr. Lecky, says: "The Revolution of France bore the revolution of the world. All around us the spirit of that revolution is permeating the masses of the people with its regenerating power; many ancient despotisms have already crumbled beneath its touch; others are even now convulsed by the agonies of transformation, or by the last paroxysms of a despairing existence. Treaties have been torn, armies have been scattered, the spirit of liberty has survived." Victor Hugo, a writer of a very different school, in his novel Ninety-Three, recounts the services rendered to humanity by these terrible idol-breakers, and as we read the list of undertakings in behalf of the poor, the disfranchised, the oppressed, the enslaved, undertakings too fine and glaring to be carried out, we feel that after making all needful, reasonable, fair deductions from their merit, on the score of speculative excess, enough remains to justify their admission to high places in the ranks of men who have served their kind.

But it is unnecessary and almost impertinent to indulge this train of thought in the presence of people who are entirely convinced of its justice, and need no persuasion to follow it. These considerations are commonplaces among liberal people. Another aspect of the duty to prove all things waits to be presented here. The point which it becomes liberals to consider is the difficulty of the process, and the care that must be taken in properly conducting it. It is a common impression that to prove all things is as easily done as said; in fact, some seem to imagine that doing and saying are the same thing; that the claim once established that testing truth by reason is permissible, nothing more need be attempted. The proving may be left to do itself, or it may be assumed that the accepted views of truth, being doubted, may be dismissed. But the proving of anything whatever is a matter of great difficulty, and to prove the validity or the invalidity of any great human belief is so difficult that the task can never be considered accomplished.

What a number of processes, apparently disconnected with each other, must be gone through before a bar of steel is accepted as proved! What different sets of mechanics must employ their strength and skill on its manufacture! What baths and successive furnaces it must be submitted to! The process becomes complicated as the work becomes important and delicate. In the outer hall of our museum of art is a most impressive and beautiful statue representing the sick Napoleon, holding in his hand the map of Europe and lost in sombre thought. The comments of the visitors who stand around it show how many minds are required to pass judgment on a work of that class. One criticises the marble from which it is carved; another is lost in admiration over the perfect finish of the smallest details, the folds of the dressing-gown and paper, the plaits of the ruff, the wrinkles of the hands, the nails in the chair; a third, passing all this by, considers the historical accuracy of the representation, the resemblance of the portrait, the truthfulness of the attitude, the probability of the scene; a fourth regards the piece as a work of imagination, and entering as well as possible into the situation selected by the sculptor judges it as a poetic creation. Finally the accomplished artist must be listened to as he passes opinion on the work as a piece of sculpture, declaring wherein it transgresses or fulfils the legitimate rules of his art.

A private gallery of the city contains a very remarkable painting by Turner, called the "Slave Ship." Standing before it, one may amuse himself by collecting the criticisms of the observers, and noting the curious variety of tests by which they try the quality of the picture. What a motley array of judgments, and how positive they are! What contradictions between the reports of inner and outer eyes! Some pronounce the artist crazy and his production an unintelligible jumble of colors; others declare him inspired and his canvas a masterly triumph of genius. Some are bewildered, others illuminated. Some see no merit of drawing or perspective, others say they could sit hours admiring both. Some are at a loss to discover the idea that the artist wished to express, to others the idea burns upon the imagination. Some laugh and sneer, others wonder.

If so much vision is required to discern all the qualities of a painted canvas, what a process it must be to render full justice to a belief that has been impressed on the mind of different nations and of many ages, and has been stamped there by the creative power of which the human mind is an expression! Clearly, no one set of observers or critics can meet that demand. Take, for example, the belief in personal immortality. No apology need be made for the frequent reference to this faith, for it is of vast interest and importance to mankind. Until recently, certainly until modern times, no systematic attempt has been made to put this belief to the test. It was received on authority of the Church and of tradition, and passed unchallenged, save by a few individuals whose doubts had no effect on the general mind. The rapid development of physical science has brought against it a power of suspicion and misgiving that almost immediately became denial. As secret after secret of the human organization was penetrated, as the mysteries of its mechanism were laid bare, the immortal soul which had been supposed to be its prime instigator and mover was compelled to retreat from one fastness to another, till at length no chamber remained unsearched, and its personality was nowhere to be found. Material forces and properties seemed to explain everything. Instantly the surmise sprang up that these were everything, and that the spiritual principle was an imaginary thing, without form or substance, an illusion or a conjecture.

The doubt became grave when the fact came out in full force that intelligence never manifested itself except in connection with physical organization, that it weakened as the organization failed, was disordered when the organization was affected by disease, wandered into insanity when certain parts of the organization were disturbed, and disappeared entirely when life departed from the organization and it was left to dissolution and dust. These facts carried with themselves a fearful import. To deny them was unavailing; to dispute them was audacious; to escape from their influence was impossible. The faith of mankind seemed to be at the mercy of the scalpel. The immense fabric of hope that had sheltered the race for hundreds, perhaps for thousands, of years seemed to crumble in a moment at the touch of the chemist. A species of stupor came over the heart of multitudes; existence shrank to the dimensions of a grave. The miracle of organization was suddenly deprived of its marvellousness, and the organization itself, being no longer regarded as a shrine to be revered and preserved inviolate, passed to the uses of a laboratory where men could study and make chemical experiments.

This new and surprising method of proof, so candid, so fair, so apparently exhaustive, naturally made a deep impression, and was accepted by great numbers as final. But is it final? Is the scalpel the final arbiter in this matter? Can any single test be reckoned conclusive in such a case? Are we not bound to consider that in such a concern, involving so many aspects and phases of being, we should not be satisfied till every method had been tried? It must not be forgotten that by the side of the physician stands the metaphysician, searching mind as the other searches body; that while the physiologist is explaining the laws and conditions of organic growth and change, the psychologist is explaining the laws and conditions of moral and intellectual change and growth. Facts in one department offset facts in the other, and facts in both departments are announced with an equal positiveness. Listen to the physician and you find yourself doubting if everything be not dust; listen to the metaphysician, and you find yourself doubting if everything be not delirium. Instead of sinking we soar, and instead of losing heart we are filled with joy.

From another quarter come in sentimental considerations which are paramount with the heart, and in all nations have been exceedingly weighty, especially in the so frequent seasons of grief from disappointment or bereavement. From other sides still come in moral considerations affecting the question of the moral constitution of the universe and the moral character of its originator, and spiritual considerations bearing on the aspirations, hopes, and high expectations of the noblest of the race. These are all entitled to respect in their place. A question that concerns the whole being of man can be finally answered only by the testimony of the whole being of man; and cannot be regarded as disposed of so long as any method of proof remains untried.

Moreover, the testimony of all the nations of mankind must be taken. We must have the verdict of the German mind, the French mind, the Italian and English minds. The genius of no single people is infallible in such a matter as this. The speculative, the practical, the meditative, the devout, are alike privileged to have a voice in the decision. The different ages and epochs must likewise be consulted, for these exhibit the various moods and phases of experience that mankind has passed through. No generation can answer for all generations. No mood is a substitute for all moods; no passage of experience exhausts experience.

It cannot with truth be said that this complicated, cumulative process of proof has been tried in this one belief. There are other beliefs that still wait to be tested in a similarly comprehensive manner; beliefs that have been hurriedly dismissed on the strength of some party protest, and must be reconsidered by the light of new knowledge. Indeed, it seems sometimes as if we never should know when the proof was concluded. The "Golden Rule" has been on the anvil of the race for some thousands of years. It has been under the hands of every kind of human artificer. The thinker has exercised on it his thought; the dreamer has mused on it; the man of feeling has held it close to his heart; the man of conscience has tested it by the sentiments of abstract right and wrong; the socialist has laid it against the natural relations that man sustains to his neighbor; the just man has used it as a rule of ideal equity towards the wronged; the pitiful man has taken it up and tried it as a rule of mercy to the wretched and sinning. It has been thrust into furnaces of every form of construction and every degree of heat. It has been thrust for hardening into baths of tears and baths of blood. The practical Chinese took it; the philosophical Greeks took it; the law-worshipping Hebrews took it; the gentle-hearted Jews took it, announced it as a principle worthy of all acceptance, laid it down as the corner-stone of the celestial city.

Nevertheless, something is yet wanting to the perfect proving of the "Golden Rule." It has not been submitted to every conceivable test. It is still ideal, imaginative, sentimental. It has not become a tool or a weapon. No State has yet applied it to its criminals; no ruler has ever applied it to his subjects; no nation has ever made experiment with it in the regulation of its affairs with other nations; no government has ever held it out towards those who have resisted its authority and labored to overthrow its dominion. In fine, it lacks the authentication of practical life on any broad scale. A great many people doubt its applicability to business affairs, and are ready to discard it as a working principle.

Thus while the liberty to prove all things is exceedingly stimulating to the mind, and the duty of proving all things is exceedingly ennobling to the will, the difficulty of proving all things is humbling and at times discouraging. What! we cry. Is there never to be rest? Must we be forever on the march, forever doubting, forever questioning, forever listening to arguments? Can we never feel sure that the foundation of our being is not a quicksand which may sink under our feet at any moment, and let us drop into the nether abyss? An apprehension something like this terrifies multitudes away from the rational faith, and drives them back within the shelter of the older communions where the universe is taken for granted and no questions are asked. The ancient churches are made rich and powerful by the number and quality of these recruits.

But apprehensions of this kind are causeless. All are not expected to be provers. Few are capable of being so. The many must be content with what is established, so far as they can appreciate it, and for the rest must have confidence that in proportion as the proof is exhaustive, error and nothing but error will be overthrown. That confidence should be sufficient to allay all fears. When all things shall have been proved, all things will be finally justified. The explorers, so they be patient and persevering, will reach their goal, and their goal will be the truth. They who are not explorers, whose offices are at home, whose part it is to go about with untroubled and restful mind attending to the duties of the day (and these are the vast majority), have but to follow the other part of the apostolic direction, and hold fast that which is good. Goodness, simple goodness, proves itself by its own process; it needs no testing. Love is demonstration and verification of love. Kindness interprets and vindicates kindness. So long as man is man, so long as society is society, existence is existence, so long will justice, truth, fidelity, honor, continue to be worth all they ever were. Day by day these qualities will be found to increase in value, as day by day the need for them augments, and the occasions for practising them multiply. Perish what perish may, opinions, doctrines, beliefs, methods of inquiry, results of partial inquiry, systems of philosophy, systems of divinity, the relation of man to man will continue essentially what it is, while the world lasts; and that which maintains the relation and keeps it strong and sweet will also retain its virtue. Duty will never lose its sanctity; truth will never lose its dignity; love will never lose its graciousness; purity will never lose its gift of charming and cleansing, or its privilege of looking into the face of the absolute righteousness unabashed. The race of man may become unbelieving after the ordinary standard, misbelieving, disbelieving, spiritualist, materialist, theist, atheist, pantheist; in any and every conceivable event it will be nevertheless safe, wise, or consoling to do to your neighbor as you would have him do to you, to bless them that curse you, to do good to them that hate you, to pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you. Through all intellectual convulsions, humility and patience and self-forgetfulness will hold their own.

They will more than hold their own, for this terrible process of proving that so unsettles the intellectual world settles and confirms the moral. Good things and good people are continually coming out stronger. The evidence is accumulating that to hold fast what is good is to hold fast what is substantial and everlasting. It is time we outgrew the old notion that morality, that is, social equity, personal truth, is well enough if you can have nothing better; serviceable to hold on to when belief is shipwrecked; the ration of rice in the season of famine; the mouldy crust when the larder is empty and the fortune gone; a crumb or two to live on till better times. Away with a notion like that! Goodness is the root of faith, not the fruit of it; the beginning, not the end; the substance, not the shadow. Principle is the mother of philosophy. Without love is no light, for without love is no earnestness and no trust. Instead of consoling ourselves that this remains when all beside is gone, we might rather congratulate ourselves that this remains though all beside should go. They who hold fast to humanity hold fast to fidelity; so much purity, so much piety, so much justice, so much belief. The good life begets faith, as the fruitful ground brings forth grasses and herbage; uncultivated, it will cover itself with wild flowers; cultivated, it will grow tall beliefs that will brave the storm, and shelter the creatures, and give refuge to the birds of heaven.

OUR WISHES are presentiments of undeveloped capabilities,—harbingers of what we shall one day be able to accomplish.—Goethe.

AMERICAN DARWINISM.

A REVIEW OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF AMERICA TO THE EVOLUTION THEORY.

BY PROF. E. S. MORSE.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.

By far the most striking feature of Wednesday's proceedings before the American Association for the Advancement of Science was the last address delivered in the evening by Professor E. S. Morse. It had been very generally whispered about that he would take the opportunity as a vice-president and the presiding officer of the section which includes natural history, to give a full and explicit declaration of his well-known faith in the doctrines of evolution. He thinks that the time for being mealy-mouthed in this matter is past. Especially is credit due to the American workers in this field of research. The main object of the address was to show what America had contributed toward the growth of the development theory.

He said that never before the present period has the study of animal life assumed so high dignity among the sciences. Chemistry could long since point to her triumphs in the useful arts; geology to the revelations of hidden wealth below the surface; but zoology was only valued as an adjunct to geological studies or looked to as a means for averting the ravages of insects. Now, the question of the origin of man is answered by the revelations from animal forms. No general review of American studies in this field has hitherto been attempted. The works on the subject which meet the popular eye are from English and German sources. Their references are largely composed of European observations, and the public has commonly inferred that these are the principal examples. Their remoteness prevents these evidences from carrying due conviction. Our native researches lie concealed in the proceedings of learned societies, and are only in a few instances made accessible to the ordinary reader of the literature of the day.

The development of zoological study in this country presents itself under two aspects. The first and earliest was the period when its votaries busied themselves with making an inventory of animals and plants, and arranging them under schedules of genera, species, and varieties. Very necessary work was this. Professor Agassiz likened it to the labor of bringing together the stones and bricks for a building. But these workers piled up their materials thus accumulated till they shut out the light of knowledge, and offered a barrier to those who would have built the edifice of the science itself. The words of Emerson describing science in England in 1847 were true of this country at a later date: "One hermit finds this fact, another finds that, and lives and dies ignorant of its value." The change from this period of preparation to one of direct work in building up the science of zoology dates from the arrival of Professor Agassiz in this country and the vast popular interest which attended his efforts to kindle the growth of knowledge. These efforts were largely directed toward elevating the character and aims of the papers contributed to our learned societies, and the success he met with was as noteworthy here as in the arena where he was more generally known to the public. Professor Agassiz made men. Previously they had been the slaves of their science, the mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. He taught Americans what Cuvier, Von Baer, and Leuckart had been doing. He urged, indeed, his hearty protests against evolution theories, but thereby he did good service in awakening attention to the subject and compelling further inquiry. Since then all the students whom he educated personally have, with scarcely an exception, become converts to those theories.

The first clear premonition of the doctrine of natural selection came from this country, or rather from an American, William Charles Wells, born at Charleston, S. C., in 1757. This appears in a paper which he read in 1813 before the Royal Society. It offers an explanation of the color of dark-skinned races of men. He cites the changes of animals under domestication, shows that varieties in men and animals were occurring exceptionally but constantly; that different breeds of animals were thus obtained by man's selective supervision; that a similar selection among men had been effected by the comparative immunity from certain diseases of those who had dark skins.

As evidences of the transmutation of species, Professor Morse here cited the instances where the seeds of Alpine plants sown in warmer regions gradually produced plants that had previously been regarded as of a different species. A kind of crustacean was similarly changed from one recorded species to another by gradually freshening the briny water in which it lived; in slowly altering thus it actually lost one of its segments. Mr. James Lewis discovered that a truncate form of mussel which had thus been distinguished from another form had taken its peculiar shape from the circumstances to which it had been exposed; namely, the abrasion of its edges and consequent retarding of its growth in the rapid currents of the Mohawk River; he also made similar observations on other mollusks under other influences. A. G. Wetherby called attention to changes of the kind in snails under like surroundings. Professor Agassiz urged that what are called "varieties" by naturalists do not really exist separately. He found a series of echinoderms in which the forms were graded insensibly from one to the other. The extremities of the series would have been called distinct species. Professor Parsons suggested that species might be done away with if all intermediate forms should be discovered; and Doctor Gray expressed the belief that all species might be thus eventually resolved into varieties. Doctor J. G. Cooper, and Messrs. Stearns, Bland, and Birney each described instances where such changes in animals followed altered circumstances of heat or moisture.

In a broader field and respecting different classes of creatures, Professor S. F. Baird, J. A. Allen, and Robert Ridgway have severally found that marked differences in birds and mammals are due solely to their surroundings. Birds bred at high altitudes or at the North were thus shown to be smaller than those of the same kind at the South or at lower elevations; Western birds have longer tails than Eastern ones of the same species; the bills increase in size below a certain latitude; on the Pacific coast the birds acquire a darker hue. Similar changes in the ears and feet of mammals, as well as in their fur, are noted as dependent on climate. When these changes were tabulated and shown on a geographical chart, they were found coincident with variations already ascertained in the annual amount of rainfall in the different regions. The total number of species of birds was reduced about a fifth by these investigations; the number of species of squirrels diminishes one-half or more. Doctor A. S. Packard sees that this process of reducing species must go on while the gaps between them are gradually filled, and the genera must follow in this process of obliteration. He says: "The work of the systematic biologist amounts to little more than putting Nature into a strait jacket."

In producing new evidences for the doctrine of natural selection, Doctor Burt G. Wilder has borne a distinguished part. Anatomical changes have been closely observed. To this class of students belong also the essays of Doctor William K. Brooks, Doctor Englemann, and Professor Charles V. Riley. Professor Riley's proof of the interdependence of flower and insect in the case of the Yucca moth is one of these triumphs. Professor Grote has made a noteworthy observation on the alterations caused by use or non-use in the antennae of the butterfly. One of the most striking instances of the better knowledge which closer observation of Nature has conferred is that of the shape of the honey-comb. In the days of the Bridgewater Treatises it was demonstrated that the form of the cell, mathematically considered, was that which used space and material to the greatest possible advantage. The late Professor Jeffries Wyman spoiled this pretty theory by showing that a cell of this mathematical perfection is rarely, if ever, made. The cells are built unequally and in the greatest variety of shapes, due to incorrect alignment and many other causes. There is no geometrical accuracy about the structure. Following the list of cell-making insects, from wasps, hornets, and humblebees upward, we find that there are all grades from shapeless cells to those that approach but never reach perfection. Professor Wyman showed remarkable ingenuity in this research, making plaster casts of the comb, dissolving out the comb from the plaster, then cutting sections and taking electrotypes. The late Professor Chauncey Wright was almost equally fortunate in showing that the arrangement of leaves of plants along their axes was due to circumstances of growth, and not a result of blind law.

Among the examples of the survival of forms by adaptation to changed environment, Professor Morse mentioned the discovery by Ernest Ingersoll of marine mollusks and living salt-water crabs high up in the Rocky Mountains. Some of the crabs were closely related to existing marine forms. The researches of Professor Marsh concerning the sireon, an animal of the salamander kind, that loses its gills and becomes, when moved from its native habitat, one previously recorded under an entirely different genus (ambylostoma), has been described and figured in one of the earlier extras of the Tribune. For many years Professor Agassiz argued that the blind fish of the Mammoth Cave were a race created in their present condition. This whole matter has been removed from discussion by the accurate investigation and thorough researches of Drs. Packard and F. W. Putnam; and a series of fishes, from those with perfect eyes to those without any, including between them various deficiencies of vision, has been found in American caves and secluded waters. The discoveries of Professors Alpheus Hyatt and E. D. Cope, respecting the ammonites, were almost simultaneous, showing a parallel between the changes of form in groups and in the separate individuals. The numerous writings of Professor Cope, on evolution doctrines, deserve notice here. But we must hasten on to the great discoveries among the tertiary mammals of the West by Professors Leidy, Marsh, and Cope. They have filled wide gaps between older and existing forms, showing all the intermediate animals, so that we have nearly the whole ancestry of the horse, for instance, back to the five-toed animals not much bigger than a fox in the early eocene.

The positions taken by the earlier workers in zoology were then reviewed, and the latter half of the address set forth the present theories of Darwin and the evolution school. Professor Agassiz was driven to the expedient of belief in several different creations of men, in order to preserve his faith in the separate creation of animals, and was heartily reprehended for his views by the religious controversialists of that period. Since those days, innumerable facts have been brought to bear upon the controversy. Many of these were mentioned in detail by Professor Morse, but on the point as to the gradual development of the intellect of animals, the discoveries of Professor O. C. Marsh, in respect to the small size of the brains of the earlier mammals, are especially worthy of attention. He has shown that the animals of the earliest eocene formation have brains so small that they may be likened to those of a serpent, and relatively so diminutive that they can be passed through the neural cavity of the backbone. As we go upward in the strata the size of the brain steadily increases. Its development in the monkey tribe is regarded as the means by which those animals were enabled to escape from the carnivora that then abounded; and intellect, even in that era, became superior to brute force. Due justice cannot here be done to the chain of argument by which Professor Morse illustrated the descent of the human race from ape-like forms. The principal feature in it was the prominence given to the intellectual needs and consequent development of the monkey. In respect to man, the necessity of care during the period of infancy was strongly dwelt upon; and it was shown that the long period during which young human beings have to be supported and cared for lies at the foundation of the family and of social life. Due credit was given to the workers in this field who have traced out, step by step, the necessities which are occasioned by the long continuance of human infancy, which calls forth alike the sympathies and the efforts of the parents. None of the inferior animals are long in acquiring the capacity for walking and procuring food. The monkeys, within a month of their birth, are as capable of walking as at mature age. Man, in his physical powers, is weaker than any of the lower animals that compare with him in size; his strength is in his intellect.

A mind unbiassed by preconceived opinion can scarcely resist the convictions that will be forced upon it by Nature's facts as to man's lowly origin. The massive skulls and coarse ridges for muscular attachment, the rounding of the case of the nostrils, the early ossification of the nasal bones, the small cranial capacity in certain forms, the prominence of the frontal crest, the posterior position of the foramen magnum, the approximation of the temporal ridges, the lateral flattening of the shin-bones, the perforation of the humerus, the tendency of the pelvis to depart from the usual proportions,—all these are characteristic of the earlier races of men. Associated with these race forms there is a rudeness of culture and the manifestation of the coarsest instincts. He must be blind indeed who cannot recognize the truths to which these evidences point.

We need no longer be surprised at the fatalism of the Turk, the cruelties practised by lower races, or the outrages that are attributed to total depravity among civilized men. They are not instigated by an evil spirit, but are the outburst of the savage nature inherited from their animal progenitors, and are still preserved more manifestly among the lower races of to-day. We are taught the folly of permitting criminals to roam at large or receive the benefit of legislative pardon. Society owes it to itself to keep its criminal classes in a confinement where they cannot propagate their kind.

—N. Y. Tribune.

W. C. W.

SIR W. THOMPSON ON AMERICAN SCIENCE.

Sir William Thompson has returned to England with the most favorable impressions regarding the progress of science in this country. In his recent address as president of the "Physical Science" section of the British Association he began as follows:—

"A conversation which I had with Prof. Newcomb one evening last June in Prof. Henry's drawing-room in the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, has forced me to give all my spare thoughts ever since to Hopkins' problem of precession and nutation, assuming the earth a rigid spheroidal shell filled with liquid. Six weeks ago when I landed in England after a most interesting trip to America and back, and I became painfully conscious that I must have the honor to address you here to-day, I wished to write an address of which science in America should be the subject. I came home, indeed, vividly impressed with much that I had seen both in the great Exhibition of Philadelphia and out of it, showing the truest scientific spirit and devotion, the originality, the inventiveness, the patient, persevering thoroughness of work, the appreciativeness and the generous open-mindedness and sympathy from which the great things of science come."

Warming with his theme, Sir William referred to some of our noted men of science in these words:—

"I wish I could speak to you of the veteran Henry, generous rival of Faraday in electro-magnetic discovery; of Preece, the founder of high mathematics in America; of Bache, and of the splendid heritage he has left to America and to the world in the United States Coast Survey; of the great school of astronomers which followed—Newton, Newcomb, Watson, Young, Alvan Clark, Rutherford, Draper, father and son; of Commander Belknap and his great exploration of the Pacific depths by piano-forte wire with imperfect apparatus supplied from Glasgow, out of which he forced a success in his own way; and of Capt. Sigbee, who followed with like fervor and resolution, and made further improvements in the apparatus by which he has done marvels of easy, quick, and sure deep-sea sounding in his little surveying-ship "Blake"; and of the admirable official spirit which makes such men and such doings possible in the United States naval service. I would like to tell you too, of my reasons for confidently expecting that American hydrography will soon supply the data from tidal observations, long ago asked of our own Government in vain by a committee of the British Association, by which the amount of the earth's elastic yielding to the distorting influence of sun and moon will be measured; and of my strong hope that the Compass department of the American navy will repay the debt to France, England, and Germany, so appreciatively acknowledged in their reprint of the works of Poisson, Airy, Archibald Smith, Evans, and the Liverpool Compass Committee, by giving in return a fresh marine survey of terrestrial magnetism to supply the navigator with data for correcting his compass without sights of sun or stars. I should tell you also of 'Old Prob's' weather warnings, which cost the nation $250,000 a year, money well spent, say the Western farmers, and not they alone; in this the whole people of the United States are agreed, and though Democrats or Republicans playing the 'economical ticket' may for half a session stop the appropriations for even the United States Coast Survey, no one would for a moment think of starving 'Old Prob'; and now that eighty per cent. of his probabilities have proved true, and Gen. Myer has for a month back ceased to call his daily forecasts 'probabilities,' and has begun to call them indications, what will the Western farmers call him this time next year?"

Sir William Thompson also observed that the "United States Naval Observatory is full of the very highest science, under the command of Admiral Davis." He referred in complimentary terms to the scientific apparatus he saw at Philadelphia, and frankly declared that "if Europe does not amend its patent laws, America will speedily become the nursery of useful inventions for the world."—Tribune, Sept. 28.

DR. SLADE EXPOSED.

A SPIRITUAL SEANCE IN LONDON.—THE WRITING ON THE SLATE.—HOW IT WAS DONE.—TWO EMINENT WITNESSES AGAINST DOCTOR SLADE.

[From the London Times.]

My friend, Mr. Serjeant Cox, having begged me to go and see the medium Slade, and having informed me that so distinguished a man of science as Dr. Carpenter had confessed himself "very much shaken" by what he had witnessed in Slade's presence, I wrote to that person, and obtained an appointment for last Monday morning. Slade's chief "manifestation" is of this kind:—

The witness and Slade being alone in an ordinary well-lit sitting-room, Slade produces a common slate and a small piece of slate-pencil, which are laid on the simple four-legged table, at one corner of which the witness and Slade are seated. Slade then shows the witness that there is no writing on either side of the slate. He then places the slate horizontally close against the table and below it, pressing the slate against the table, the little piece of slate-pencil being supposed to be between the slate and the flat under-surface of the table. The slate is so closely applied to the table that no hand or finger could possibly get between them in order to write. A noise as of writing is now heard proceeding from the slate, which is held by Slade or by the witness; the spirit is supposed to be at work. The slate is then removed, and a message is found written either on the under surface of the slate or on the surface which was facing the lower surface of the table.

I watched Slade very closely during these proceedings, which were repeated several times during my interview last Monday, paying no attention to the raps, gentle kicks, and movements of the table, of which I will say nothing further than that they were all such as could be readily produced by the medium's legs and feet. I simulated considerable agitation and an ardent belief in the mysterious nature of what I saw and heard. At the same time I was utterly astounded to find the strongest reason to believe that, with the exception of the first message, which was written by Slade underneath the slate with (I believe) one finger of the hand which was holding the slate, the rest of the messages, which were longer and better written, were coolly indited on the slate by Slade while it was resting on his knee, concealed from my view by the edge of the table, and that the slate was subsequently placed by him in the position where the spirit-writing was to take place with the message already written upon it.

I was led to form this hypothesis by noting the delay which always occurred between my being shown the slate with both sides clean and the placing of the slate against the table or over my head for the purpose of receiving the spirit-writing, which was then heard proceeding with the usual sound of scratching on a slate. This delay did not occur when Slade wrote with the finger of the hand by which he held the slate. During the delay Slade made various excuses; took up the little piece of pencil and bit it, and also invariably made a peculiar grating noise by clearing his throat. At the same time I heard distinctly on three occasions a low but perfectly recognizable sound of a pencil traversing a slate; and twice on looking quickly at Slade's right arm, the elbow of which was visible, while the rest was hidden by the table and purporting to be holding the slate, I saw movements from right to left and left to right which accorded with my hypothesis that he was using his hand in writing.

I left Slade with a promise to return to-day (Friday), and at once wrote to Mr. Serjeant Cox to tell him my explanation of the manner in which the thing was accomplished, and offering to put my hypothesis to the test by seizing the slate from Slade's hand when he professed it to be devoid of writing, and at the moment when the "spirit-writing" was about to commence.

This morning I went with my friend, Dr. H. B. Donkin, of Queen's College, Oxford, to test my hypothesis by this crucial experiment. I had determined to seize the slate at the critical moment—at the moment when Slade professed that it was entirely untouched,—and if the writing were already on the slate before the spirits were supposed to have begun their work, I considered that I should have a demonstration of the truth of my hypothesis which would be convincing to persons not already lost to reason. I explained to Dr. Donkin my hypothesis and my intention, and the result has completely justified my anticipation. As on last Monday, so to-day Slade allowed me to hold the slate against the table in order to receive the spirit-writing, saying that the spirit would probably write more distinctly for me than for him. The slate had been cleaned and was now declared by Slade to be devoid of writing, but writing was to appear on it in the usual way, accompanied by the scratching noise of the pencil. There had been the usual delay and fumbling on Slade's part, when I put out my hand and immediately seized the slate away, saying, "You have already written on the slate. I have watched you doing it each time." And there, sure enough, was the message already written, as I had anticipated. My friend, Dr. Donkin, will give you a more detailed account of the events which occurred in his presence.

I am, sir, faithfully yours,

E. RAY LANKESTER, F. R. S.,
Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, and Professor of Zoology in University College, London.
Sept. 15.

At the request of my friend, Professor Lankester, I accompanied him in his visit to-day to Slade, the medium, in order to watch carefully what might happen, and to be able to corroborate or not the opinion he had formed as to the means employed.

A spirit-message was soon written, the slate being held in opposition to the under surface of the table, the thumb alone of the medium's right hand being on the table. During the alleged writing a scratching was plainly heard, and at the same time a slight to-and-fro movement of the arm, with some contraction of flexor tendons on the wrist, was visible. The writing was imperfect and distorted, requiring the interpretation of an expert, and appeared on the surface of the slate which faced downward.

The result was in accordance with the theory of the agency of a minute piece of slate-pencil probably held under the nail of the middle finger.

The next communication was partly quite legible, and in a straightforward, undisguised hand; but this time it appeared on the upper surface of the slate. Bearing in mind the hypothesis that this was ready written before the spirit got to work under the table, I carefully watched Slade during a considerable interval before he replaced the slate. While he was clearing his throat and making short remarks, I saw his right arm, now at some distance from the table, moving exactly as though he were writing on something placed on his knee. Owing to my position at the table, opposite him, I could not see his hand. Simultaneously I heard the scratching of the pencil, hardly at all obscured by the noises I allude to. After the replacement of the slate the spirit-scratching (this time as a ruse) was heard as before.

Before the next communication the spirits were asked if they could write for Professor Lankester. They agreed to do so. I observed the medium go through the same sort of manoeuvres as before, although even more deliberately, very little effort being made to hide a loud scratching while the slate was away from the table. After some little time Slade put the slate under the table, holding it as before, with his right hand, Professor Lankester being about to hold it with his left in a similar manner. Here let especial notice be given to the fact that at this moment the slate was said to be free from writing. Before any time was allowed for spirit-scratching to be heard, my friend, as agreed upon, sharply withdrew the slate, and in accordance with the prophecy displayed the message already written.

To make this exposure still more perfect, I may add that the first of the two later messages referred to consisted of two words read by the medium as "Samuel Lankester," in answer to the question as to what spirits were present. The "Samuel" being very indistinct; my friend suggested it might be "Edwin," which the medium said was quite possible. The last message was an answer to the same question, and, the suggestion being adopted, the words "Edwin Lankester" were perfectly clear.

To any one not predisposed to believe in spirit agency at all hazards, the result of this seance is sufficient.

I am, sir, yours faithfully,

HORATIO B. DONKIN, M. B., Oxon,
Assistant-Physician to the Westminster Hospital.
Sept. 15, 1876.

THE CATECHISM IN SCHOOL.—A notable illustration of teaching "sound without sense," words without intelligence, is recorded by an Inspector of Schools, the late Mr. Brookfield. Two children, aged about eleven years, did their arithmetic and reading tolerably well, and wrote something pretty legible, intelligible, and sensible, about an omnibus and about a steamboat. They were called upon to write down the answers of the Church Catechism to two questions. The children had been accustomed to repeat the Catechism during half an hour of each day, in day-school and Sunday-school, for four or five years, and this is what they wrote:—

"My duty to God is to bleed in him to fering and to loaf withold your arts withold my mine withold my sold and with my sernth to whirchp and to give thinks to put my old trast in him to call upon him to onner his old name and his world and to save him truly all the days of my life's end."

"My dooty tods my Nabers to love him as thyself and to do to all men as I wed thow shall do and to me to love onner and suke my fathor and mother to honner and to bay the queen and all that are pet in a forty under her to smit myself to all my goones teaches sporial pastures and marsters to oughnen myself lordly and every to all my betters to hut no body by would nor deed to be trew in jest in all my deelines to beer no malls nor ated in your arts to kep my ands from pecking and steel my turn from evil speak and lawing and slanders not to civet or deoar othermans good but to lern labour trewly to get my own leaving and to do my dooty in that state if life and to each it his please God to call men."

It will be observed that these written answers, if recited with sufficient rapidity in the customary school-room patter, really bear a horrible likeness to the sounds of the genuine ones; and there can be little doubt that the writers and their classmates had so recited them for years, to the entire satisfaction of all who were "pet in a forty" over them.—London Times.

RECEIVED.

Books.

- TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND. A History. By O. B. Frothingham. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. 1876.
POLITICAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL LAW OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. By William O. Bateman. St. Louis: G. I. Jones & Co. 1876.
DARWINIANA: Essays and Reviews Pertaining to Darwinism. By Professor Asa Gray, of Harvard College. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
THE FIVE SENSES OF MAN. [International Scientific Series.] By Professor Julius Bernstein. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
GENTLEFOLKS AND OTHERS. By Julia Duhring. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co. 1876.
THE THREE BRIDES. By Charlotte M. Yonge. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
TALKS ABOUT LABOR, and Concerning the Evolution of Justice between the Laborers and the Capitalists. By J. N. Larned. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
THE UNIVERSAL METRIC SYSTEM. By Principal Alfred Collins. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
THE WORLD'S SAGES, LITERALS, AND THINKERS. By D. M. Bennett. New York: D. M. Bennett. 1876.
SCIENCE PRIMERS.—No. VIII. Botany. By J. D. Hooker.—No. IX. Logic. By W. S. Jevons. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
HISTORY PRIMERS.—No. 1. Old Greek Life. By J. P. Mahaffy.—History of Europe. By E. A. Freeman.—New York: D. Appleton & Co.
LITERATURE PRIMERS.—English Literature. By Stopford Brooke. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
IS "ETERNAL" PUNISHMENT ENDLESS? By an Orthodox Minister of the Gospel. Boston: Lockwood, Brooks & Co. 1876.
ILLUSTRATED LESSONS IN OUR LANGUAGE; or, How to Speak and Write Correctly. By G. F. Quackenbos. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1876.
THE SECULAR SONG AND HYMN BOOK. Issued by Authority of the National Secular Society. Edited by Annie Besant. London: C. Watts, 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet St. [Price One Shilling.]

Paper.

- THE COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER. Boston: James K. Osgood & Co. 1876.
FIRE AND FLAME. From the German of Louis Schücking, translated by Eva M. Johnson. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
"THE LAND OF THE SKY," or, Adventures in Mountain Byways. By Christian Reid. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
MY OWN CHILD. A Novel. By Florence Marryat. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
JOURNAL OF SPECULATIVE PHILOSOPHY. St. Louis: Gray, Baker & Co.
APPLETON'S JOURNAL. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
CANADIAN MONTHLY. Toronto: Adam, Stevenson & Co.
POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. New York: D. Appleton & Co.
UNITARIAN REVIEW. Boston: 7 Tremont Place.
SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY. New York: Scribner & Co.
ST. NICHOLAS. New York: Scribner & Co.
THE WESTERN. St. Louis: Hook & New Co.
ADRIAN COLLEGE RECORDS. THE SANITARIAN. New York: Campbell & Co.
HERALD OF HEALTH. New York: Wood & Holbrook.
SERMONS BY O. B. FROTHINGHAM.—Rights and Duties.—Authority and Religion. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.
DISCOURSES BY M. D. CONWAY.—Our Cause and its Accusers.—Human Sacrifices in England. London: Trübner & Co.
BEST USE OF SUNDAY. By J. W. Chadwick. New York: C. P. Somerby.
PUBLICATIONS OF THOMAS SCOTT, Esq., No. 11, The Terrace, Farquhar Road, Upper Norwood, London, S. E.—The Advantages, Mental and Moral, of a Faith Unchangeable, Certain, and Complete. By W. H. K.—The Chaldean Account of Genesis. By Sir G. W. Denys.—Beauties of the Prayer-Book. Parts II. and III.—A Neglected View of Education. By M. Macle.—Paul: the Disowned Apostle. By J. W. Lake.—Evidences of Christianity: the Messianic Prophecies. By W. L. Rogers.—Key Notes. By Arthur Leigh.—Euthanasia.—Spontaneous Dissolution of Ancient Creeds. By Dr. Zeoff.—Portraiture and Mission of Jesus.—Rights and Duties of Parents. By W. H. Donny.—Liberal Protestantism: what is it? By J. W.—The Good and Evil in Orthodoxy. By Charles K. Whipple. (Copied from THE INDEX.)—Christianity Viewed in the Light of our Present Knowledge and Moral Sense. Part III. By Chas. Bray.—Signs of the Times.
THE FREE-THINKER'S TEXT-BOOK. By Charles Bradlaugh. Parts I., II., III., IV., V. London: Charles Watts, 11, Johnson's Court, Fleet St., London.
SERMONS BY THE REV. CHAS. VOYSEY.—Delusions as Agents of a Moral Government.—The Silence of God.—The Word of God.—God or Christ?—The Two Christs.—Imperfections in the Historical Christ.—Martha and Mary.—Moral Value of the Example of Christ.—Moses in Egypt.—Doctrine of the Holy Spirit.—Mr. Gladstone on "The Causes of Religious Thought." Parts I., II., III., IV.—The Abuse of Criticism.—Agnosticism.—On Bigotry.—On Zeal.
THE HOUR BEFORE THE DAWN. London: Trübner & Co.
HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY IN OUTLINE.—By Wm. T. Harris.
PAPER-MONEY INFLATION IN FRANCE. By President Andrew D. White.
THE LAW OF NOLLE PROSEQUI IN CRIMINAL CASES. By Joel P. Bishop.
EXEMPTION OF CHURCH PROPERTY FROM TAXATION. By Ham-ison A. Hill.
BOSTON UNIVERSITY YEAR-BOOK. Vol. III.
AMERICAN SHAKESPEARE BIBLIOGRAPHY. By Karl Knortz.
TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY of the Second Unitarian Society of Brooklyn.
THE DOVER PULPIT during the Revolutionary War. By Rev. G. B. Spaulding, Dover, N. H.
REASON AND MYSTICISM. By Rev. Isaac S. Moses, Quincy, Ill.
THOMAS FAINE. By Rev. A. C. Edmunds, of Portland, Oregon.
CENTENNIAL LECTURE ON THOMAS FAINE. By Rev. M. K. Schermerhorn, of Buffalo, N. Y.
DEATHS IN THE LIGHT OF THE HARMONICAL PHILOSOPHY. By Mary F. Davis. New York: A. J. Davis & Co.
A CHALLENGE TO THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH. By C. H. Wymas, Stoneham, Mass.
ERRORS OF AMERICAN STATESMEN. By Salvador.
LESSONS OF A CENTURY.
HAMMY AND BURCHY. By Ingersoll Lockwood, New York.
THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF SCIENCE. By L. Hymenay, New York.
THE BIBLE GOD Disproved by Nature. By W. E. Coleman, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN DARWINISM AND SPIRITUALISM. By J. M. Peckes.
ANNUAL REPORT of the St. Louis Public Schools, 1874-5.
FIFTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY of the American Unitarian Association.
PROCEEDINGS of the Pennsylvania Yearly Meeting of Progressive Friends at Longwood, 1876.
TRANSACTIONS of the Mass. Press Association, 1876.
REPORT of J. L. Jones to the Western Unitarian Conference, 1876.
CATALOGUE of the Meadville Theological School, 1876.

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 30.

F. Fradley, $3.25; F. Andriessen, $3.25; Chas. H. Coffin, $3.25; A. Magni, $6; C. O. Gale, 25 cents; G. H. Adams, $2; James Dillaway, $3.20; Chas. H. Mann, $3.20; L. Blimmer, $3.20; E. Fowle, 25 cents; F. H. Islam, 10 cents; William Dudgeon, 10 cents; A. Coe, 40 cents; A. Richter, 25 cents; J. Fisher, $3.20; J. Consalus, $3; Benj. Cobb, Jr., $3.20; J. C. Grierson, $3.25; E. F. Blaisdell, $1.00; Cash, $4; O. B. Vose, 10 cents.

N. B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 5, 1876.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CROFT, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, Editorial Contributors.

REMOVAL.

On and after October 1, 1876, the publication office of THE INDEX will be No. 231 Washington Street, Boston. Office hours will be from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M.

WILL THE READER, if he or she is in sympathy with the general work of THE INDEX, spend five minutes of serious thought in answering the question: "How can I most effectually help to increase its circulation?"

REV. MR. SAMPLE, in the discourse to which we allude in another paragraph, says of the defeated Bible Amendment of the United States Senate: "That defeat and failure, which came so near to success, will only incite to greater exertions the friends of the amendment. We have not heard the last of this. Perhaps we have escaped that particular amendment only to be bent down under the yoke of a still more stringent one. The probabilities are that a religious Constitutional amendment of some sort will be sent forth by Congress within the lapse of another year." And he says: "Christianity is plotting in an underhanded manner against the existence of the government"—that is, as a government based on the equal rights of all; as Mr. Sample himself explains, when he adds: "This so-called amendment—recognizing the authority of the Bible—would not be an amendment at all in the true sense of that word, but an utter subversion of the Constitution, a negation of its essential spirit and utterances, and a complete overthrow of the principle upon which our free republican government is founded."

WHAT A wilful falsehood the boast of shutting the Centennial Exhibition on Sunday has become! It is enough to make an old salt thoroughly sea-sick to hear any more of that Orthodox darling, General Joseph R. Hawley, who took some visitors into the Exhibition on Sunday, then whimpered a public confession that he "did wrong," and now takes in another squad of official Sabbath-breakers, as shown in this paragraph in the Boston Herald of September 28: "General Hawley's fear of divine vengeance, in the event of opening the Centennial Exposition on Sunday, has abated. Last Sunday, by his invitation, President Grant and his wife, Secretary Fish and his wife, ex-Secretary Borie, Robert E. Cox of Washington, George Washington Childs, A. M., and his wife, and Colonel Sanford of the British Commission, visited the Exposition grounds. They were received in Memorial Hall by Mr. John Sartain, and spent several hours in looking at the pictures. At 2 o'clock the party ate lunch in the St. George Building. The Hon. John S. Morton, Indian Commissioner J. Q. Smith, Commissioner J. L. Coolidge, and about one hundred and fifty others, with special passes, were also on the Exhibition grounds. The Philadelphia Item remarks that this act of General Hawley, approved as it was by all the resident commissioners, leads to the inference that the Exhibition grounds are to be open hereafter to the general public on Sundays. We fear that the Item is too confident. Hawley has opened the gate on Sunday before to people in whose salvation he was not particularly interested."

NOTICE.

On receipt of $3.20, THE INDEX will be sent to any name not already on its mail-list, from the present time until January 1, 1878. This is an excellent opportunity for friends of the paper to increase its circulation among their acquaintances; and it is hoped that they will not neglect to render in this way some greatly-needed assistance to the important cause it represents.

LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Last week we pointed out that public spirit is the secret of liberal social union, and a lack of it the secret of the almost universal feebleness of local liberal societies. Nothing but a COMMON PUBLIC PURPOSE can give life and strength to such societies, by cementing them together and creating the vitalizing consciousness of a national fellowship or sodality in the great cause of human advancement. Until some common public purpose makes itself universally felt, local liberal societies must remain disconnected and therefore feeble, liable to perish at any time when the first impulse of union has spent its force. Liberal societies cannot permanently maintain themselves about a single man, however gifted or colossal in his personality; the genius of liberalism is not personalism in any form, but devotion to great and universal ideas; hence all the societies which naturally cluster about the single "leader" rest on an ephemeral basis of union, and are doomed to extinction when the "leader" passes away, unless they can rise to the height of the "leader" himself and find a permanent bond of union in the idea which gave him all his greatness—the idea of FREE HUMANITY.

For years we have believed that national organization was the greatest need of American liberalism—not at all because we put trust in party machinery as such, but because we knew that national organization will be the immediate and necessary expression of a common public purpose, just as soon as it asserts itself. No local liberal society can maintain itself in effective existence very long for merely local purposes, any more than an individual can make himself influential for merely selfish purposes. Localism is nothing but social selfishness; and generosity, universalism, public spirit, is just as necessary to liberal societies as it is to liberal individuals. It is the self-sacrificing consecration to broad human ends which gives to both their human value—to both, therefore, their title and claim to permanence.

With these deep-rooted convictions, we have for years been trying to solve the problem how to unite the universal and the local aims in some large plan of organization adapted to the impersonal genius of liberalism—some large plan which shall create FREEDOM IN FELLOWSHIP, and FELLOWSHIP IN FREEDOM, for ends the highest, the noblest, in the true sense the most religious. Hence the origin of the Liberal League movement, which is immensely deeper and broader than its superficial critics imagine. Long and laborious reflection satisfied us that no common public purpose can be found in liberalism except that which is fittingly expressed in the words—"separation of Church and State"; for the attempt to separate these two implies a recognition of the independence and sufficiency of NATURAL HUMANITY to determine its own destinies, whether political, social, or individual. Perceiving that this attempt had been partially successful in the organization of the American republic, and that the impersonal faith in natural humanity which is the core of all liberalism had magnificently, though imperfectly, asserted itself in the United States Constitution without disclosing the full sweep of the principles impliedly the basis of that wonderful instrument, we became convinced that, without knowing it, Free Religion had already created its new humanitarian Church, as the vast social institution destined ultimately to absorb and replace the Christian Church. It only remained, therefore, to draw out the moral meanings of the great American experiment of organization, and develop its humanitarian significance in the recognized sphere of religion. The foundation of the Liberal League was therefore laid on the same great principle of the separation of Church and State which is really now, and has been increasingly for well-nigh a century, the hidden source of our national life and prosperity. The purpose to complete this separation, and thereby to establish explicitly the SUFFICIENCY OF NATURAL REASON AND CONSCIENCE TO ALL THE NEEDS OF HUMANITY, even in their highest aspect, presented itself as the common purpose of liberalism, which is destined to become the bond of union among all who are imbued with the spirit of modern civilization.

So much for the universal aim, which must be paramount in all truly liberal minds and societies. The local aims are better understood, being such as are familiar to all local societies established on a liberal basis; namely, the cultivation of the intelligence, moral life, and social well-being of the members themselves.

Now on the universal aim above described a national organization was, with wonderful success, achieved at Philadelphia on the historic Fourth of July, 1876—a coincidence of dates which reveals and emphasizes the profound agreement of the National Liberal League with the essential spirit of American institutions. To complete the great task undertaken, however, a plan of local organization, combining both the universal and the local aims above described, still remained to be matured. After a great deal of study and thought, the following plan has been issued in the form of a circular and is now submitted to the public by the Directors of the National League:—

A Form of Constitution for Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues.

Approved by the Board of Directors of the National Liberal League, and submitted, by way of fraternal suggestion and recommendation alone, to the friends of State Secularization.

PREAMBLE.

Whereas, At the Centennial Congress of Liberals held at Philadelphia from July 1 to July 4, 1876, a National Liberal League was organized to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE; and

Whereas, The National Liberal League appeals to all liberal citizens to form a "local auxiliary Liberal League in every city, town, and village of the country where ten brave men and women can be found to take the lead in the matter, for the purpose of instituting earnest and combined agitation in favor of equal rights respecting religion, and in favor of such a Constitutional amendment as shall guarantee them"; and

Whereas, We heartily approve of the important and patriotic movement thus initiated, and have applied for and received a charter for local organization in accordance with the Constitution of the National Liberal League;

THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together as a permanent organization, and adopt the following

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.—The name of this association shall be "The Liberal League of ———"; and we hereby declare ourselves to be a "local auxiliary Liberal League," in full sympathy, fellowship, and affiliation with the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE II.—The objects of this association shall be, first, to cooperate with the National Liberal League in furtherance of the public objects, both general and specific, enumerated in its Constitution; and, secondly, to promote the welfare of our own members as a local liberal society, as provided in this Constitution.

ARTICLE III.—Any person who shall sign this Constitution, and pay ——— dollars annually into the treasury, shall be a member of this League.

ARTICLE IV.—The annual meeting for the election of officers of this League, and of the delegates to the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League to which this League is entitled by its charter, shall be held on the ——— day of ———; and the Directors shall give one month's notice of the same. There shall also be regular monthly meetings of this League for consultation and business; and the Directors shall give one week's notice of the same.

ARTICLE V.—The officers of this League shall be a President, Secretary, Treasurer, and four Councillors. All these shall constitute the Board of Directors, which shall have general management of the affairs of the League, subject only to instruction by the League itself. They shall appoint from among the other members of the League committees on Public Work, on Public Discussion, on Social Affairs, and on Finance; and each Councillor shall be chairman of one of these four committees.

The committee on Public Work shall mature measures for cooperating efficiently in the common cause with the National Liberal League, especially in circulating its documents, petitions, appeals, etc., and carrying out locally the various objects of the Liberal League movement.

The committee on Public Discussion shall mature measures for sustaining regular Sunday meetings for public debates, lectures, etc.; and they shall be charged with the general conduct of the same.

The committee on Social Affairs shall mature measures for holding frequent social assemblies for the benefit of the younger members of the League; and also for regular Sunday meetings of a Children's Fraternity, to promote the moral instruction and social enjoyment of the children.

The committee on Finance shall mature measures for raising the funds necessary for these various objects; and also measures for establishing a Relief Fund to be devoted to the assistance of poor, sick, or distressed members.

All these measures shall be proposed to the Board of Directors, and, after being combined in a single general plan, shall be submitted by them to the League for approval.

All appropriations from the treasury shall be by vote of the Board of Directors; and all orders on the treasury shall be signed by the President and Secretary.

ARTICLE VI.—The duties of the President, Secretary, and Treasurer shall be those usually pertaining to these offices. It shall be a special duty of the Secretary to furnish the Secretary of the National Liberal League with a complete list of all the members with their post-office addresses in full, and a list of the officers and various committees; and also furnish him promptly with information of all important action by this League.

ARTICLE VII.—Amendments to this Constitution may be made at any annual or monthly meeting of the League by a three-fourths vote of all the qualified members present. But no amendment shall be made unless the proposed amendment shall have been announced as part of the required notice of the meeting which is to act upon it.

Special Notice.

Liberal Societies already organized can qualify themselves for representation in any Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, and be so recorded, by sending previously to the Secretary a duly certified statement that the following vote has been passed by the Society so sending:—

"Voted, That this Society, desiring to cooperate with the National Liberal League in the furtherance of its general and specific objects, hereby declares itself a local auxiliary Liberal League, according to the true intent of the Constitution of said National Liberal League, and has duly elected the following persons to represent it at the next Annual Congress of the same: to wit, _____, _____, _____, _____."

On receipt of the above, together with an application for a charter signed by the officers of the Society and with the usual fee of ten dollars, a charter will be issued, and the Society will be recorded as entitled to representation.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President.

R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

In this plan we desire to point out the most important features, for the sake of showing how comprehensive it is, and how completely it is dominated by the idea of creating such a fellowship of all liberal-minded citizens as shall unite them fraternally in efficient service of humanity, yet without infringing in the slightest degree that jealous spirit of individual and society independence which is the chief glory of all liberalism.

1. The National League is wholly devoted to the universal aim of separating Church and State, as explained in its own Constitution [see the "Patriotic Address"]. But the Local League is devoted both to the universal and the local aims—the former, however, being still kept uppermost and supreme. In this way the common public purpose is really made the life of the National and the Local Leagues alike, vitalizing them all with a mutual, unselfish devotion to the common good, yet providing fully for the personal improvement of all the local members.

2. The National League desires no sort of control over the Local Leagues, but carefully provides in every single provision against such centralized authority. The use of the charters issued is simply to create the technical union necessary for delegate representation in the Annual Congress; and the reason of the ten dollars required for a charter is merely to help a little towards giving the National League the funds necessary for its national work. No Local League will object to this trifling contribution to the national treasury for the common work, since it secures a fair equivalent in the privilege of sending five delegates to the Annual Congress.

3. The character of the arrangements for carrying out local purposes is specially recommended to examination, for they are believed to be admirably suited to meet the wants of liberal communities. If they are fairly tested in any society composed of earnest-tempered people of the requisite intelligence, we venture to say that this plan will prove to be extremely effective and satisfactory. With the consciousness of a national organization behind them, growing rapidly (as we believe it will) in numbers and influence, the local society will more and more experience the inspiring power of a general public purpose, and find their local public meetings commanding far more attention and respect than they could possibly do under other circumstances. Usually the public meetings of liberal societies are very little regarded by the community at large, who know (better than most liberals seem hitherto to have known) that such societies cannot burn very long as mere scattered embers. The first marked effect of a well-sustained National Liberal League will be discerned in the increased local power and influence of the local societies as such; and if they are half as shrewd touching their own interests as are the Orthodox societies around them, they will hasten to avail themselves of the immense advantages of concentrated energies, now offered without the disadvantages of centralized authority.

This applies just as much to old established societies as to new ones; but we anticipate that the societies which adopt most thoroughly the plan here recommended, and act upon it most energetically, will reap the most advantage from it. The Orthodox opposition which is to be expected in any populous community will no longer be able to triumph completely by overbearing or crushing the local society; it will be compelled to attempt the far harder task of destroying the national organization, and this fact will operate practically to protect the local society in a large measure from the effects of a bold local agitation. Courage comes with the consciousness of strength; and the too common "timidity" of liberals, so frequently deplored by our various correspondents, will tend to vanish in proportion as the National Liberal League increases its membership, its resources, and its activities.

4. It is specially to be noticed that, while the National Liberal League is devoted strictly and exclusively to the common public purpose of accomplishing the total separation of Church and State, the Local Leagues are not expected to confine themselves to this public purpose, but simply to keep it uppermost as paramount and supreme among many kindred purposes. The "Committee on Public Work" above described, which is designed to be the "agitation committee" in the general movement, is put first and foremost, to indicate this supremacy of public spirit even in the local organization; but it is not the only committee.

5. The "public discussion" contemplated will cover all that needs to be discussed in public; while giving its just pre-eminence to the general movement, it will include all topics that befit the platform of a genuine and self-respecting liberal society. This feature of the Liberal League movement, which has been a part of it from its original conception, should be well understood. It is not expected that any local society could sustain itself permanently by discussing the "Demands of Liberalism" alone. Some fat-witted critics have supposed that this was intended; but the merit of such a conception is exclusively their own. So long as enough attention is given to the "public work" of the Local League to secure all the good results it can accomplish in the general agitation, it is taken for granted that other matters will have their fair share of attention in its local meetings; and all that interests or concerns intelligent people will be in place on the platform of any "local auxiliary Liberal League," so long as the League faithfully carries on the "public work" at the same time.

6. The "Committee on Social Affairs" are charged with a most important function. Nothing is more vitally important than something corresponding to the "Sabbath School" of the churches, yet wholly free from its objectionable dogmatism and pernicious sentimentalism. Everywhere the necessity exists for the right training of children in the moral and mental principles of liberalism; and the social demands of the child-nature, if not wisely satisfied, are sure to assert themselves at last in some sadly perverted way. It is especially the duty of liberals to provide social and moral nutriment for the young which shall not poison their minds with superstition; and neglect of this duty by individual liberals is one of the chief causes why their children are drawn away so easily in their tender years from freedom and truth to bondage and nonsense. It is the social attractions and arts of Orthodoxy which do the mischief; and when it is done, the Orthodox gravely point to it as a proof of the "power of the gospel"! It is, on the contrary, only a proof of the weakness of unorganized liberalism. The moment that liberalism is wisely organized, and provides even decently for the social and moral needs of its young persons, it will win ten converts where Orthodoxy wins one; and the plan above sketched provides for this great socio-moral necessity.

7. The last point we wish to emphasize here is the advantage secured in this plan of organization by using the principle of the "division of labor." It is made the work of a special committee to attend to a single important matter; and the combination of all their reports, first elaborated mutually in the Board of Directors, comes before the whole League for final action. If there is any wisdom in the League, it will be brought to bear in this manner; even if the numbers are so small that the above plan can be only partially carried out, a fair and earnest experiment of it is certain to increase the numbers at last, and make the whole plan feasible. Depend upon it, this plan is not a visionary one, but will be found entirely practicable, whenever and wherever a dozen or twenty resolute and intelligent people take earnest hold of it. Hypercritics harp continually on the "destructiveness" of liberalism; here it shows its true social constructiveness, and must, we think, commend itself to all who are sufficiently educated in the spirit of modern civilization to comprehend the admirable balance and harmony this plan creates between the universal and the local aims of liberalism.

A copy of the circular reprinted above will be sent to any one who wishes to take steps towards organizing a new "local auxiliary Liberal League."

A CASE OF LEGAL INJUSTICE.

We print with great pleasure this pertinent letter of Mr. Underwood; and we trust that this fresh act of oppression will have its due influence in rousing the liberals of Massachusetts, at least, to the defence of their own despised rights and liberties:—

EDITOR INDEX:—

Some three years ago Christopher Smith brought an action against the Boston and Maine Railroad Company to recover damages for injury received. It was apparently a clear case. But a defence was made that the plaintiff was travelling on the Sabbath, and from neither necessity nor charity. Although Mr. Smith swore he had been hard at work the previous week; that, when hurt, he was going to see whether a house into which he was to move on the day following was in a fit condition to be occupied; that his furniture was all packed up and he had to leave the house he was in on Monday, as another person to whom it had been let was to move into it on that day,—yet the Superior Court ordered a verdict for the defendant. Appeal was made to the Supreme Judicial Court, which a few days ago affirmed the decision of the subordinate tribunal, declaring that there was "no evidence under our decision which would justify the jury in finding that the plaintiff was travelling at the time from necessity or charity." No doubt this decision is in strict accordance with the letter and spirit of the Sunday law of Massachusetts,—a law that is an insult to every Liberal, an outrage on the rights of freemen, and a disgrace to the nineteenth century. To secure the repeal of such laws, and to make impossible anywhere in the American republic such legal injustice as that which Mr. Smith has suffered, is one of the objects of the Liberal League,—an organization that has greater claims on Liberals, by reason of its principles and aims, than any other organization ever formed in this country.

Respectfully,

B. F. UNDERWOOD,

THORNDIKE, Mass., Sept. 25, 1876.

LETTING THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG.

The Philadelphia Christian Statesman, whose special mission it is to Christianize the Constitution, in its issue of September 14, shows what bigoted legislation would be involved in that measure, by calling for a new "law of Congress" which shall prohibit all official "desecration of the Sabbath":—

"All the force in the Engraving and Printing Bureau that could be worked to advantage was employed during all the daylight hours of Sabbath, September 3, in preparing to issue the bonds for the new Syndicate. The papers of the 18th inst. contain this item: 'General Sherman and family, and Secretary Cameron and daughters passed through St. Louis on Sunday, en route to inspect Western forts. They will first stop at Fort Leavenworth, then go to Denver, Cheyenne, and San Francisco. On their return they will visit all the posts along the route in Nevada and Utah. They will also go from San Francisco to Los Angeles in Southern California. They expect to reach Washington about the 18th of October.' Intelligent readers will recall the action of Secretary Taft immediately after his appointment as Secretary of War, inspecting on two successive Sabbaths, in company with General Sherman, the forts in the vicinity of Norfolk and in New York Bay. This needless and inexcusable desecration of the Sabbath by the national government is a grave offence against good morals and a wanton offence to the sentiments of the great majority of the people. There is need of a law of Congress which shall forbid, under adequate penalties, all labor on the Sabbath in any department of the government. Ample precedent for such legislation is found in acts and recommendations of our early statesmen against blasphemy and Sabbath-breaking, and we have no doubt that combined action of Christian people would secure it. Since we were a nation, there has been no more favorable time for such action than in this Centennial year, and while the inspiration of the signal victory for the Sabbath which was won in the Centennial Commission still breathes upon the mind of the nation."

PROFESSOR P., while lecturing on momentum to the junior class not long since, related, in illustration of his subject, an account of an explosion of gunpowder in one of the army trains during the late war, on which occasion, he said, the horses were blown off their shoes. "But this," he added, "was an extreme case." The class thought so too.—Acta Columbiana.

CURRENT EVENTS.

BY R. C.

Election prospects have changed somewhat since we last discussed them. The outlook then favored Hayes; the outlook now favors Tilden. Republican stump orators who were loudly ringing the changes upon the Times' income-tax charges against Tilden are obliged to play their tune upon a cracked bell, and must soon abandon it altogether. Whether Judge Slinnott's explanation was altogether satisfactory or not, it must be accepted as correct until the Times makes good its remaining charges by a kind of proof which it has not thus far shown any disposition to furnish. The charges having been shown to be at least unreasonably exaggerated, a natural reaction is favoring the one who was temporarily injured by them. The same is true with regard to Dorsheimer, whose constructive mileage account we now learn to be strictly legal and in accord with the usages of United States district attorneys in all parts of the country. The Republican cause is injured also by the persistency with which Blaine and his admirers are pushed or have thrust themselves forward as party representatives; and a letter from Charles Francis Adams, read at a Democratic meeting in New York, has brought again to public attention the unanswerable fact that if Blaine and his followers truly represent the Republican party, we cannot too soon have a change in the national administration.

We are actually permitted to indulge a slight hope that Butler may be defeated as a candidate for Congress. A petition is receiving signatures in the Seventh District, requesting Judge E. R. Hoar to allow the use of his name as a candidate. If he should do so, and we hardly know upon what ground he can consistently refuse, Butler will be spared the duty of attending to the rectification of the tariff. There are undoubtedly very many Republicans in the District who do not wish to vote for Butler, but who will not vote for Tarbox because of his partisanship. There are enough of these to ensure the election of Hoar, or, at least, to defeat Butler by drawing off so many votes from him that Tarbox will receive a plurality.

If Judge Hoar should consent to run for Congress, and should receive, as he certainly would, the support of such regular party papers as the Journal, Advertiser, and Transcript, we wonder if these papers will set up again next year those well-known editorials which advise their readers to attend caucuses. We observe that many ministers continue also to urge caucus attendance as a positive religious duty. Now, certainly all editors, if not all ministers, know very well that there are few performances in this world more decidedly farcical than the operations of a regular party caucus. The editor will tell you, intelligent reader, that if you do not attend the caucus you will become responsible in case a bad nomination be made; an hour given to the caucus will save the character of your party, etc., etc. Now, as matter of fact, intelligent reader, if you wish to know what it is to feel like a cat's-paw, a puppet, a "thunderin' fool,"—go to a caucus and you will be fully satisfied. You will not be permitted to do anything but vote for one or the other of two sets of delegates, selected for you in advance, and whose names are upon a printed ballot. The real work of picking out the men who are ultimately to make the party nomination was done days or weeks or even months before the caucus was announced, by a small group of wire-pullers; that is, of men who make a business of politics, and with whom, my dear intelligent reader, you cannot possibly compete unless you too are willing to give to this business many days and weeks of precious time. The abolition of the caucus, not its perpetuation and attempted improvement, must be brought about, if rascals are to be kept from capturing regular party nominations. Let it not be forgotten that the defeated candidate for Mayor of Boston, last year, had succeeded in getting the regular nomination of both political parties, and it was only the unanimous bolt of terrified tax-payers which defeated him.

General Hawley, who has succeeded so well in many respects, in his responsible position in connection with the Centennial Exhibition, and who has been re-nominated for Congress in Connecticut, will need to purge himself of a very decided suspicion of hypocrisy before he can regain the esteem of a portion of the community. We can understand, of course, the reasons which would allow him to be conscientiously opposed to opening the gates of the Exhibition on Sunday; but we entirely fail to understand how a man who has declared that he would not "dare before God" to open them on that day, should subsequently, and without acknowledged change of conviction, open them Sunday after Sunday to different people, until, as on Sunday before last, as many as two hundred and fifty persons at a time enjoy the Exhibition by permission of General Hawley. He may not be a hypocrite, but he must admit that there are more facts which go to prove him one than there are facts to convict of theft nine-tenths of the men who are sent to prison for stealing.

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, generally referred to as "Bob" Ingersoll, is, with perhaps a few exceptions, the most conspicuous Republican speaker now upon the stump; and it is by no means surprising that his peculiarly florid rhetoric and unusually stout lungs should have attracted the attention of Democratic newspapers. Undoubtedly many unfair attempts have been made to excite prejudice against him by referring to him as an infidel or atheist; and with attempts of this kind we have, of course, no sympathy whatever; but Colonel "Bob" has little reason to complain of unfair treatment, for, surely, on the supposition that he is listened to by persons of even limited intelligence, no speaker ever treated an audience more unfairly than he treats those who compliment him by their presence at his meetings. We know something of the immense capacity for gullibility exhibited by a crowd of excited men, but even this has its limits; and when Ingersoll declares that "the Republican party has committed no act of which we need be ashamed," or asserts that "the Republican party contains every decent man in the country," or refers to Blaine as "the chivalrous knight of politics," he must be aware that he has gone beyond these limits, and has laid himself open to almost any kind of contemptuous retort.

Congress, at its last session, appointed a "silver" Commission, charged with the duty of making inquiries with regard to the relative values of gold and silver, the advisability of adopting a double or single standard, and analogous matters of national importance pertaining to currency and finance. The Commission, as we stated at the time, contained a majority of members in every way disqualified or incompetent for the task appointed. But it possessed the power of appointing three experts to assist in its inquiries and deliberations, and we cherished the hope that by some happy accident the appointment of three genuine experts might save the inquiries of the Commission from foreordained futility. These have now been appointed, and are Mr. B. F. Nourse, of Boston, General Dix, of New York, and Wm. Groesbeck, of Ohio,—all "good men and true," without doubt, but two of whom know but little more of the subjects to be considered than do Jones and Boutwell of the Commission, the former of whom asserts that nothing can be ascertained with regard to silver which is not already in his speech delivered at the last session of Congress, and the latter of whom believes that no study is necessary in order to understand matters of finance and political economy.

There is joy in—certain places. Babcock has been acquitted of complicity in the safe-burglary conspiracy, and Boss Shepherd has ordered a dinner in his honor. Babcock is certainly a very lucky man. He escaped conviction in his "whiskey" trial, and now he gets out of the safe-burglary affair; and yet we suppose that nine out of ten of those who know anything about these matters, or who have studied the testimony with regard to them, believe that he was guiltily connected with both enterprises. For an innocent man, he enjoys a more badly-smirched reputation than any one else equally prominent.

The city of Savannah, Georgia, furnishes a striking illustration of the changes, produced by the war, in many parts of the South. When the yellow-fever, by which it is now afflicted, last visited the city in 1854, Savannah, according to a recently published letter, had a population of about fourteen thousand blacks and sixteen thousand whites. The banking capital of the city was estimated at $18,000,000, nearly all of which is now gone; and the city itself is obliged to pay from twelve to fifteen per cent. interest on borrowed money. The blacks at that time were slaves, and were cared for by their masters; at the present time, nearly all the twelve thousand remaining blacks are fed and doctored at the expense of the city; and the seven thousand whites who remain in the city are mostly mechanics and day-laborers who cannot afford to get away, and who are consequently, to a considerable extent, a burden to the authorities. The fever thus far has obtained no foothold outside of Savannah and Brunswick, both of which places, however, are in a sad condition.

There are few countries in the world having a worse reputation for religious intolerance than Spain, and the history of the past does not seem to have taught her anything with regard to the present. A religious toleration clause, permitting freedom of worship, subject to certain limitations, was inserted into the Constitution, but is practically interpreted as narrowly as possible, so that in some places Protestants have been forbidden to sing aloud in their churches, or to worship with the doors open so that passers-by may look in. The attention of Lord Derby was called recently to the intolerant regulations of the Spanish officials, by a deputation from the Protestant Missionary and Bible Societies of London, and it is probable that some of these petty regulations may be modified. In a speech to the deputation Lord Derby said: "I, personally, have no doubt that it is an exceedingly forced and strained construction of the law to prohibit, as an external manifestation, singing in the church or worshipping with the door open, so that passers-by may look in. I think we have a right to claim that the law should not be construed unfavorably to the rights of foreigners in Spain, because they, undoubtedly, have been encouraged to settle there upon the understanding that they will be free from this kind of annoyance. I suggest that when those affected think it worth while to remonstrate, they should send me their complaint, and inquiry shall be made." Whenever England shall make an "inquiry" of the kind referred to, Spain is likely to discover some new interpretation of her laws.

The fact that Serbia does not wish for peace on the basis of her condition prior to the war, has been fully demonstrated during the past few days. The Turkish assent to a prolongation of the truce was not agreed to by Serbia, who, despite the urgent remonstrances of foreign representatives, reopened the war by a furious cannonade of the Turkish positions last Thursday. In the battle which followed, however, and in which the Serbians are said to have lost two thousand men, the advantage appears to have remained with the Turks. The Czar is reported to have addressed an autograph letter to Francis Joseph, proposing joint action of Russia and Austria with regard to Serbia, but the terms of the proposal have not been made public.

We are unable to read the proof of these columns before publication. This fact will account for the puzzling desire, expressed last week, that panics might be taken away from the Indians. We should be content for the present to have them deprived of their ponies. We believe, also, that sympathy is not customarily referred to as elected.

Communications.

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL.

EDITOR INDEX:—

I notice that some of the partisan papers continue to abuse our brilliant and fearless friend, Col. Ingersoll, for his atheism. Certain organs of the Democratic party have become very pious all of a sudden. As Ingersoll says, all the time that some of his political opponents can find "between drinks" they spend "quoting Scripture." In a conversation I had with him in Boston a few days ago, he informed me that a campaign document was in circulation in Maine, in the form of a tract, made up of extracts from his oration on "The Gods." Although the compilers had selected what they considered the most horrible passages, he thought them about the finest in the book, and commended the judgment and taste that led them to call out the very sentences he would have selected for a tract. Freethinkers really ought to thank the Democratic managers of the campaign in Maine for circulating gems from the writings of their most eloquent advocates. They have helped the liberal cause without disturbing the colonel, or preventing the people from crowding halls to hear his eloquent words.

I sincerely respect and honor Col. Ingersoll for the manly courage and independence he has shown himself to possess. Exercising his rights as a man and an American citizen, he has from time to time, the past few years, frankly expressed his views on various subjects, and among others on religion. And he has spoken in a manner to command attention. All effort of personal and political friends to dissuade him from criticising the Bible and Christianity, all promises and prospects of positions and honors on condition of silence, have been unavailing to make him forego the pleasure or give up the right of presenting to the public his sentiments on religion. When his brilliant talents and his great influence with the people in the campaign make him a target for abuse from political opponents, and when his enemies seek to make capital out of his atheistic views, he does not, like the majority of politicians, try to take back or modify or explain what he has said because his opponents are using it against him, but defiantly tells them he did say it, that he had a right to say it, and then exposes the contemptible meanness of trying to excite prejudice against a man on account of his religious views in a political campaign. I wish more of our public men were as independent, courageous, and as true to themselves and their principles. I could name a large number of men of national reputation whose views are substantially the same as those of Col. Ingersoll, but who are too cowardly or too much in love with popularity to venture a frank expression of their honest convictions on religion, in a form to reach the public ear. If all our professional and public men, indeed all men whose character and position give them influence, who have outgrown the creeds of the churches, would avow their honest sentiments on all proper occasions, we should see no such assaults as have been made upon Col. Ingersoll by the New York Sun and other unscrupulous partisan journals.

Respectfully, B. F. UNDERWOOD.

THE SUNDAY EXPLOSION OPPOSED.

LETTER OF WILLIAM E. DODGE TO GEN. NEWTON.—PROTEST OF THE NEW YORK SABBATH COMMITTEE.

The following protest against exploding the mine on Sunday was sent to Gen. Newton yesterday by William E. Dodge:—

"GEN. JOHN NEWTON, U. S. Army:

"Dear Sir,—I have just received a card to be present on Sunday at the 'Hell Gate Explosion,' by steamboat, from Twenty-third Street. Permit me to say that during my fifty years of public life in this city, I have never known such an unnecessary desecration of the Sabbath as you have now inaugurated. You can have no idea of the extent of the surprise and mortification of thousands of our best citizens. This undertaking is world-wide in its interest, and will be announced by wire in all directions, and with it the fact that the agent of the United States government has taken the Christian Sabbath as the day for this public display; and not only over your own signature do you give warning of danger, and name the time, and recommend the position which the vast crowd, you are aware will attend, shall occupy, but you furnish cards of invitation for your steamboat excursion.

"I am informed that you have chosen this day, thinking there would be less obstruction to navigation, and at the same time you provide the means to warn vessels of danger. Now why could not such warning have been full and perfect on any other day, for the detention could not have been for any great length of time? You have not only given great distress to many professing Christians of our city and country, but to others who make no professions; yet you feel that our ultimate prosperity as a nation depends much on our American, in distinction from the Continental, Sabbath. At the meeting, yesterday, of one of our large marine insurance companies, one of our old merchants, not a member of any church, said to me: 'Mr. Dodge, why has the government taken Sunday for the Hell Gate explosion? As president of one of our principal railroads, five hundred miles long, I have recently so arranged that the change of gauge from five and one-half feet to four and eight-twelfths feet was done without detention to the trains, or having any work done on the Sabbath.' May a kind Providence save the nation from this most public desecration of the day recognized by us as a day of rest and quiet from public, as well as private, business; and may we never forget that there is a God of Nations who has said, 'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.' I trust you will excuse this free expression of the views of one who, for thirty years, was superintendent of a Sabbath-school in this city, and who can but regret that our children and youth have this open violation set before them. Can you not defer the explosion till a week-day?

"Respectfully yours,

WILLIAM E. DODGE.

"NEW YORK, Sept. 22, 1876."

A letter was received by Gen. Newton yesterday, signed by Norman White, Chairman, and W. W. Atterbury, Secretary, of the New York Sabbath Committee, protesting against his exploding the mine at Hallett's Reef on Sunday. The reasons given were, the excuse that it would give to many thousands of people to break the Sabbath, and the appearance that it would have to foreign nations of falling into their practices of making Sunday a gala-day. Gen. Newton gave a verbal reply that he respected the Sabbath, no doubt, as much as those whose sentiments the letter represented, but that the choice of Sunday was a simple necessity. He said to a Tribune reporter, a day or two ago, that he thought it would be almost criminal in him to allow that immense mass of explosives to remain a single hour longer than could possibly be avoided. High water would occur at 2.50 P. M., Sunday, and the explosion must take place then. If the mine, by some unforeseen accident, happened to explode in the night and at low water, when no preparations had been made for such an event, there might be loss of life.—N. Y. Tribune, Sept. 23, 1876.

GENERAL NEWTON TO WILLIAM E. DODGE.

General Newton sent Saturday the following answer to a letter of Mr. Dodge denouncing the contemplated explosion as a desecration of the Sabbath:—

"HALLETT'S POINT, Sept. 23, 1876.

"MR. WILLIAM E. DODGE:

"Sir,—I received a communication from you, dated Sept. 22, in which you decline an alleged invitation from me to witness the explosion at Hell Gate on Sunday, the 24th instant. As you take a great deal of pains to go out of your way to violate the common courtesies of social intercourse, I take this occasion to inform you that I did not invite you, nor even know of your invitation until the receipt of your refusal to accept one. The truth is, I left the matter of invitation to the Chamber of Commerce, to Lieutenant Willard, United States Engineers, with instructions to invite a certain number of gentlemen. I regret to find that, in one case, he has made a mistake.

"Your obedient servant, JOHN NEWTON,
"Lieut.-Col. Engineers, Brev. Maj.-Gen."
—N. Y. Graphic, Sept. 25.

[N. B.—This letter did not appear in the Tribune that I could find.]

At 10½ o'clock yesterday morning Gen. Newton arrived at the works. He said that it was a case of sheer necessity that the mine should be fired on Sunday. In experimenting with the high explosives used he had learned that the preparations used in exploding the mine would retain their power under water for ten days, and that then the strength would deteriorate. Some of the explosives at Hell Gate had been under water for two weeks, owing to the tardiness of the contractors in fulfilling their contracts. Had that not occurred the explosion might have been postponed; but as the minimum quantity of explosives had been charged, the entire seven years' work might be lost should the nitro-glycerine compounds prove deteriorated so much as to explode without accomplishing their entire duty.—N. Y. Sun, Sept. 26, 1876.

Yours truly, F. L. POPE.
ELIZABETH, N. J.

A LETTER TO THE "SUN."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK SUN:

Dear Sir,—I wish to call your attention to an article in the Sun of the instant, which is animated by a spirit that even the license of a presidential campaign cannot justify. Although I have never seen Robert G. Ingersoll, and do not agree with him in the least politically, I cannot resist the temptation of bespeaking fair play for him and his belief.

I do not think the Sun would like to put itself in the position of calling Michael C. Kerr "carrion," or Thomas Jefferson "a moral pestilence." Yet the former was a liberal,—what Bishop Cox would brand an infidel; and the latter held religious opinions scarcely distinguishable from those of the gentleman in question.

In 1872, when Frances Kernan headed our State ticket the Sun had nothing but words of contempt for the narrow bigots who cried out against making a "Romanist" Governor; how, after appealing then to the mass of Protestant voters to rise above sectarian bigotry, can it now, in good faith, seek to inflame that same miserable fanaticism, and bring into a campaign the very prejudices that it condemned so recently?

As has been repeatedly remarked, this is a free country: the Baptist and the Atheist, the Lutheran and the Liberal, have equal rights before the common law; the right to vote implies the right to explain your vote; and in common civility Mr. Ingersoll has just as great a claim upon the courtesy of the public as Senator Kernan, James Freeman Clarke, or—to quit my premise—the eminent scientific stranger now within our gates. If he is not a gentleman, criticize him; if his opinions are unsound, combat them; if he tells lies, nail them tight; but for the sake of the time, our common country and its institutions, don't sink the Sun to the pitiful level of the Witness, and call men names because their religious views are not yours!

I am sorry to be compelled to speak thus, for I am a Democrat and I like the Sun; but it is sadder still that in the greatest of republics, in this vaunted year, there should arise a necessity for the defence of religious liberty, the freedom of speech and "the rights of man." Sincerely yours,

HAROLD FREDERIC.

UTICA, Sept. 5, 1876.

ANOTHER LIBERAL IN EARNEST.

BRODHEAD, Wis., Sept. 20, 1876.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—You struck the key-note in your article on political matters in THE INDEX of September 7. Had you done so long ago, you would have uttered the sentiments of many liberals. Let all such liberals as your New York City subscriber stop THE INDEX; you will gain half a dozen subscribers where you will lose one, by striking the nail plumb on the head every time. Let truth and justice always prevail. The "Demands of Liberalism," for my part, I thoroughly approve, and the resolutions of the National Liberal League, adopted July 3, speak my sentiments precisely, especially the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth resolutions.

Allow me to suggest (if it can be done without too much trouble) that you publish in THE INDEX the religious opinions and notions of all the six individuals, now candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States—Tilden and Hendricks, Hayes and Wheeler, and Cooper and Cary. For myself, I shall not vote for a man that is a religious fanatic, or advocates the "God-in-the-Constitution" amendment, or favors Bible-reading in the public schools, etc., etc., or refuses to express an opinion on these points and tries to be "good Lord and good devil" to everybody.

Yours, etc.,

E. P. HASSINGER.

[Efforts have been made to obtain an expression of opinion on State Secularization from several of the candidates, but without success. They all prefer not to commit themselves on this subject till after election! This is exactly what was to be expected, and their politic reticence surprises nobody. It is time to send to Congress a few men, at least, who will dare to speak boldly for this new cause in the spirit of John P. Hale and Charles Sumner.—Ed.]

QUESTIONING THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 22, 1876.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—I have lately been seeking information regarding the views of the prominent Presidential candidates on the question of secularization as I mentioned to you, the other day. To each of the three prominent candidates I sent a "Patriotic Address" and a line asking an expression of his views. From Mr. Tilden, or at least in response to a registered letter sent to him, I received some printed campaign documents, and find among them the following, from

GOV. HENDRICKS' LETTER.

Of sectional contentions, and in respect to our common schools, I have only this to say: That in my judgment, the man or party that would involve our schools in political or sectarian controversy is an enemy to the schools. The common schools are safer under the protecting care of all the people than under the control of any party or sect. They must be neither sectarian nor partisan, and there must be neither division nor misappropriation of the funds for their support. Likewise I regard the man who would arouse or foster sectional animosities and antagonisms among his countrymen as a dangerous enemy to his country. All the people must be made to feel and know that once more there is established a purpose and policy under which all citizens of every condition, race, and color, will be secure in the enjoyment of whatever rights the Constitution and laws declare or recognize; and that in controversies that may arise the government is not a partisan, but, within its constitutional authority, the just and powerful guardian of the rights and safety of all. The strife between the sections and between races will cease as soon as the power for evil is taken away from a party that makes political gain out of scenes of violence and bloodshed, and the constitutional authority, is placed in the hands of men whose political welfare requires that peace and good order shall be preserved everywhere.

And in place of any words from Governor Tilden, the following, from

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM adopted at St. Louis, June 28, 1876.

SECTARIAN STRIFE AND SECTIONAL HATE.

Reform is necessary and can never be effected but by making it the controlling issue of the elections, and lifting it above the two false issues with which the office-holding class and the party in power seek to smother it.

1. The false issue with which they would enkindle sectarian strife in respect to the public schools, of which the establishment and support belong exclusively to the several States, and which the Democratic party has cherished from their foundation, and is resolved to maintain without prejudice or preference for any class, sect, or creed, and without contributions from the treasury to any.

2. The false issue by which they seek to light anew the dying embers of sectional hate between kindred peoples once estranged, but now reunited in one indivisible republic and a common destiny.

From Mr. Cooper, that noble philanthropist, I received a printed copy of his "Letter to the Episcopal Church Congress," with an "Address to the Delegates of the Evangelical Alliance," the first-mentioned dated in 1874; which, while confirming my idea that he is a good and true man and a liberal, rational Christian, does not help me to know where he would stand on the question of the complete secularization of the State. (Of course he would always try to benefit mankind in his own way.)

In writing to each gentleman, I requested them, if they replied by writing, to mark their reply "personal" or not; and my word as regards Governor Hayes is limited. I can say that my letter was received and acknowledged by personal word from an old friend of his, who refers me to the Governor's public record on these questions. Your issue of Sept. 7 gave us his record, and therefore we have exact information on which to base our actions. I would not for a moment doubt Mr. Hayes' earnestness, or his desire to serve his country; and, as Mr. Tilden's banner is "Reform," we may presume he is earnest too. Peter Cooper we all know as an honest man.

But neither of these three sees the matter as we liberals do; and then what is left to us but to vote a "conscience vote"—shall I say, ahead of the times?—do what we can to organize the new party for the secularization of the State?

Yours truly,

F. A. ANGELL.

GOV. HAYES AND THE "ALLIANCE."

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 25, 1876.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—In THE INDEX of Sept. 22, I notice a quotation from the New York World in relation to Gov. Hayes having written a letter to Samuel J. Tylor, July 5, 1876, accepting membership in a secret political society, the American Alliance, and that he had subscribed to the sentiment that suffrage and the right to hold office should be limited to persons born in this country.

A man who holds such opinions at this day, I think, should have his calvarium elevated, the substance called brains scooped out, and the cavity filled with good soft apple sauce, in order to give him sense.

I hand you herewith statement in relation to this matter published by the Ohio State Journal, Sept. 14, 1876, and for the truthfulness of the statement I can vouch. By giving space in your next issue for the correction you will but do justice to Gov. Hayes, and greatly oblige,

Yours truly,

JOHN N. LYMAN.

"1. Hayes never wrote any such letter.

"2. He never belonged to a secret political society, and would not, under any circumstances, join one.

"3. The sentiment imputed to him, as well as the act, is totally repugnant to every act and belief of his life.

"4. There is not one word of truth, or truth-simulacra even, in any of the charges. They are a complete fabrication, in web and wool, chain and filling."

WANTING THEIR MONEY'S WORTH.

NEPEAN, Ontario, Sept. 18, 1876.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—A lady of my acquaintance took me to view the interior splendors of the new Wesleyan Methodist Church, in Ottawa, the other day. Here, it seems, "salvation is not without money," etc., for she told me that her husband had taken one of the front seats, which are let at the rate of two dollars per Sunday.

I spoke of this at home, upon which the youngest boy "guessed they'd get up off them pretty slow."

Use this item as you please.

Yours very truly,

F. HARMER.

BOSTON CORBETT, who shot Wilkes Booth, lives in a little, old, forlorn-looking house at Camden, N. J., where he has been visited by a correspondent of the Philadelphia Sunday World. This writer describes Corbett as short in stature, with a resolute and rather stern face. He is about forty years old, is very plain in dress, and his principal boast appears to be his devotion as a Methodist. He busily piles his trade as a hatter. He lives alone in his little house, doing his own cooking and housekeeping, and seeing nobody but the members of the little flock of Methodists which meet nightly at his house, and of which he is the head. Heaped together in one corner of his kitchen are half-a-dozen rough benches for the use of his congregation. He preaches and exhorts himself, and uses a Windsor chair for a pulpit. When asked if the name "Boston" was not a nickname, he became rather angry, his eyes flashed, and holding on high a Testament with the name "Boston Corbett" printed on it in black ink, he said, pointing his finger at the name, "Young man, there is my name; the only one I shall ever own. In Boston I was converted; there I met my Redeemer, and Boston is the only name I wish to be called by." As he accompanied his visitor to the gate he said, "On that eventful morning of my life, as I shot the assassin, crouched like a savage beast in the recesses of the barn, I felt that I was doing my duty to my God and my country. To this day I feel justified in my course. Were the ghosts of twenty assassins to arise against me, they could not disturb a calm Christian spirit."—N. Y. Tribune.

MADAME DE STAEL said of America: "It is the vanguard of the human race, it is the future of the world."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 8 " "
 " 52 " " 6 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
 Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
 Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON,

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OF THE

FREE
RELIGIOUS
ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, O. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. F. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 5 cents, singly; package of ten, 30 cents; of one hundred, $1.50.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 6.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal
DEVOTED TO
FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,
 AT
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Sparta, Wis.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets	Price.
Concord Days	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl	1.50
Little Men	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism	3.00
New Poems	2.00
Literature and Dogma	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine	2.00
Edelweiss	1.00
German Tales	1.00
BACON'S Essays	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution	2.25
Physiology and Politics	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems	2.00
The Rising Faith	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Broviary	2.25
The World-First	2.25
The Tall Student	.75
BUEHNER'S Force and Matter	3.25
BURKE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index	5.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 12 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet Naturalist. With Memorial Verses	2.00
CHENNY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Friends	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions	5.00
Common-Sense in Religion	2.50
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Biblical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays	2.00
The Religious Demands of the Age	.50
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship	2.50
Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies"	1.50

The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrawska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor"	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	4.00
Journal of Researches	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede, Romola, The Mill on the Floss, Felix Holt, Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 3 vols.	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series	1.50
Essays. Second Series	1.50
Miscellaneous	1.50
Representative Men	1.50
English Traits	1.50
Conduct of Life	1.50
Poems. With Portrait	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold	1.25
Prose Works	5.00
Society and Solitude	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.	6.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation	2.50
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity	1.50
Child's Book of Religion	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	1.25
Elective Affinities	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments	2.00
Creed of Christendom	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France	1.50
Thoughts about Art	2.00
The Unknown River	6.00
The Intellectual Life	2.00
Chapters on Animals	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second	1.50
Child World. Part First	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures	2.50
2. Logical Lectures	5.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image	1.50
The Marble Faun	1.50
The English Note-Books	1.50
The American Note-Books	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment	1.50
Atlantic Essays	2.00
Oldport Days	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey	2.00
Suburban Sketches	2.00
Venetian Life	2.00
Italian Journeys	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three"	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits	10.00
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses	1.25
Bits of Travel	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature	1.25
On the Origin of Species	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism	1.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals	.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews	1.75
INGELW'S (JEAN) Poems	2.25
The Mountains of the Unseen	1.50
Songs of Seven	2.50
INGELW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skellings	1.25
Stories for Stories	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours	1.25
Mosses from the Fairy's Story	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehet	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analyses and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 3 vols.	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 3 vols.	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed	3.00
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL D'O). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series	1.50
Among my Books	2.00
My Study Windows	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times	2.00
Lyell's Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	8.00
Elements of Geology	3.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government	1.50
Autobiography	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works	1.0
Three Essays on Religion	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species	1.75
MORLEY (PROV. JOHN). Voltaire	2.00
Romances, 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series	2.50
The Same. Second Series	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume	2.00
Lectures on the Science of Religion	2.00
NASSY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy	4.50
Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed	2.00
The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union; Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdeemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping, with the Defence	1.50
The Two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS) The Infinite and the Finite	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar	1.50
The Trolley Book	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts	1.50
Hedged In	1.50
The Silent Partner	1.50
What to Wear?	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates	2.00
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Secondary, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante	2.50
SCHLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.	31.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical	1.25
First Principles	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic	3.00
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers	1.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	4.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.	5.00
Philosophy of Style	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition	2.00
Sociology	2.50
Life, Correspondence and Ethics	3.00
STOWE (HARRIET BECHER) Pink and White Tyranny	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINE'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.00
The Class-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 8 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair
The Newcomes
Adventures of Philip Fendennis
The Virginians
Remond, and Lovel the Widower
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.
3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.
4. Four Georges, Humorsists, &c.
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait	2.50
The Maine Woods	2.50
Cape Cod	2.50
Letters	2.50
A Yankee in Canada	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers	1.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.50
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People	2.50
Light and Electricity	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion	2.50
On Sound	2.50
Radiant Heat	5.00
Forms of Water	1.50
Lectures on Light	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES) The Ring and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each	3.50
Vols III, IV, and VI, each	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden	1.50
Banister	1.50
Back-Log Studies	2.50
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 3 vols.	5.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life	1.50
Essays and Reviews	2.50
Character and Characteristic Men	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth	1.50
Success and its Conditions	1.50
Washington and the Revolution	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldsworthy's Life	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story	1.50
Real Folks	1.50
The Other Girls	1.50
Pansies. A volume of Poems	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
Child Life	2.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

331 Washington St., Boston.

CIRCULATE IT

EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract entitled,
"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
 2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
 3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
 4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
 5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
- This is the Liberal's best

CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT

In the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of

EVERY VOTER,

And has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution, by earnest friends of State Secularization.

The certainty that Congress will next winter recommend to the States for adoption some form of

Constitutional Amendment,

Involving the equal religious rights and liberties of the citizens, makes it vitally important that the work of popular enlightenment should be taken up at once. This Tract is exactly what is wanted; it lays down the THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES of Liberalism, applies them clearly to the great practical questions at issue, and is a treasury of cogent arguments on the subject.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers. The

TIME IS SHORT,

Before the vast interests at stake will be settled for years, by Congressional action; and the

NECESSITY IS GREAT

For unselfishness, boldness, and promptitude, on the part of all genuine friends of religious liberty and equality.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

Copies at least ought to be circulated forthwith; and the sooner the better.

Ten Thousand Copies

Are now ready for delivery, and will be promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,	15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,	40
FIFTY	75
ONE HUNDRED	1.50
TWO HUNDRED	2.40
THREE HUNDRED	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED	6.00
ONE THOUSAND	12.00

N. B. Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
 231 Washington Street, Boston.

$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Samples FREE. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

THE KINGDOM OF HUMANITY

IS AT HAND!

The Time has Come for the Separation of the Wheat and Tares.
 Sent on receipt of Ten Cents by MARY E. ADAMS, P. O. Box 117, Milan, Ohio.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Kellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
 231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

THE

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
 LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.50.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

	Price.
THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY (3d Ed.)	$1.50
CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION	1.00
STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER	1.00
STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS	1.00
BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS, AND OTHER DISCOURSES	1.00
LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER	3.00
THE HISTORY OF TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND (octavo, 400 pp., with steel portrait of the author)	2.50

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FROTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYSEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
F. E. ARNOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

- TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
 Nos. II., III., IV., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.
- THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.) 20 cts.; ten for $1.75; one hundred, $15.
- REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)
- RELIGIONS OF CHINA, by W. H. Channing. 25 cts.
- PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 35 cts. each; for 1876 40 cents; four for $1.00.
- FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL for both sexes. Address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.

AGENTS double their money selling "Dr. Chase's Improved ($2) Receipt Book." Address, Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$12 A DAY at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

WEST NEWTON English and Classical School.

The next Term begins WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20, 1876. Address NATH'L T. ALLEN.

SEND 25 cts. to G. P. ROWELL & CO., New York, for Pamphlet of 100 pages, containing lists of 5000 newspapers, and estimates showing cost of advertising.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 50 CENTS. Address THE INDEX, No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Radical Leaves.

REV. W. E. COPELAND, Editor.
 Published monthly at Lincoln, Nebraska. Terms, $1.00 a year, in advance.

FURNITURE, BEDDING, WINDOW SHADES, and DRAPERIES.

Comfort, Durability, and Common Sense kept in view in its manufacture. Prices the lowest for properly made goods. Repairing and Refitting a branch of our business.

GEO. W. STEVENS,

787 Washington St., Boston.

THE PACIFIC LIBERAL.

The Pacific Liberal is the only journal on the Pacific coast devoted to Free Thought, Radical Reform, and the Secularization of the State.

TERMS.—One dollar for twelve numbers; ten cents a number. Send for specimen copy. Address all communications to A. J. BOYER, 113 LEIDESDORFF ST., San Francisco.

RADICAL LECTURES

BY

B. F. UNDERWOOD.

The following is a list of the subjects on which I shall lecture the coming season:—

Positive and Constructive.

1. THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM, and the Duties of Liberals in the American Republic.
2. THE TRIUMPHS OF LIBERALISM.
3. WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS as a Substitute for the Christian Theology.
4. A TRUE MAN better than a true Christian.
5. JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
6. ORIGIN AND HISTORY of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
7. BUDDHA AND BUDDHISM.
8. ANCIENT EGYPT: Her Laws, her Morality, and her Religion.
9. THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.
10. DARWINISM: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
11. NATURAL SELECTION versus Design in Nature.
12. THE PHILOSOPHY of Herbert Spencer.
13. MODERN SCIENTIFIC MATERIALISM.
14. INSTINCT AND INTUITION: organized experiences of the Race.
15. WOMAN: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
16. PAINE: The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
17. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical and Destructive.

18. THE GENERAL INFLUENCE of Christianity.
 19. CHRISTIANITY AND INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS.
 20. THE FOUR GOSPELS Unhistorical and Unreliable.
 21. THE EVIDENCES for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
 22. POPULAR ASSUMPTIONS regarding the Bible and Christianity.
 23. POPULAR OBJECTIONS to "Infidelity" answered.
 24. THE CRIMES AND CRUELITIES of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
 25. BIBLE PROPHECIES FALSIFIED by the Facts of History.
 26. THE PROOFS of a Personal, Intelligent Deity examined.
 27. THE PROS AND CONS of a Future State.
- For terms, &c.,
 Address B. F. UNDERWOOD,
 THORNDIKE, Mass.

ORGANIZE!

Extracts from the Constitution

—OF THE—

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

GENERAL OBJECT.

ARTICLE II.—The general object of the National Liberal League shall be to accomplish the TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE; to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood in all human life, may be established, protected, and perpetuated.

MEMBERSHIP.

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

Certificates of Membership

AND

CHARTERS FOR LOCAL LEAGUES

Will be got ready for delivery as soon as possible. But meanwhile let every friend of

Equal Religious Rights and Liberties

Enroll his name either as an ANNUAL MEMBER or as a LIFE MEMBER of the National Liberal League.

And let the live Liberals of

EVERY CITY, TOWN, OR VILLAGE

in the country unite without delay to forward their

APPLICATION FOR A CHARTER

as a local auxiliary Liberal League, in order to be all ready for action as soon as the necessary papers are prepared.
 Before New Year, let a

Thousand Liberal Leagues

be thoroughly organized and actively at work for the adoption of the

Religious Freedom Amendment

to the United States Constitution. The

"GOD-IN-THE-CONSTITUTION"

party are scheming and laboring more busily than ever for the adoption of their

Christian Amendment,

which would ultimately DISFRANCHISE and DISQUALIFY FOR OFFICE every honest Liberal in the land, and trample under foot the people's most sacred rights of conscience. It is time to rouse the people to an effective defence of their religious liberty, and the Liberal Leagues must do it.

Per order of the Directors of the National Liberal League:

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, President.

R. H. RANNEY, Secretary.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 7.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1876.

WHOLE No. 355.

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES.

PLATFORM OF THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EXTRACT FROM THE "PATRIOTIC ADDRESS."

1. The Constitution of the United States is built on the principle that the State can be, and ought to be, totally independent of the Church: in other words, that the natural reason and conscience of mankind are a sufficient guarantee of a happy, well-ordered, and virtuous civil community, and that free popular government must prove a failure, if the Church is suffered to control legislation.

2. The religious rights and liberties of all citizens without exception, under the Constitution, are absolutely equal.

3. These equal religious rights and liberties include the right of every citizen to enjoy, on the one hand, the unrestricted exercise of his own religious opinions, so long as they lead him to no infringement of the equal rights of others; and not to be compelled, on the other hand, by taxation or otherwise, to support any religious opinions which are not his own.

4. These equal religious rights and liberties do not depend in the slightest degree upon conformity to the opinions of the majority, but are possessed to their fullest extent by those who differ from the majority fundamentally and totally.

5. Christians possess under the Constitution no religious rights or liberties which are not equally shared by Jews, Buddhists, Confucians, Spiritualists, materialists, rationalists, freethinkers, sceptics, infidels, atheists, pantheists, and all other classes of citizens who disbelieve in the Christian religion.

6. Public or national morality requires all laws and acts of the government to be in strict accordance with this absolute equality of all citizens with respect to religious rights and liberties.

7. Any infringement by the government of this absolute equality of religious rights and liberties is an act of national immorality, a national crime committed against that natural "justice" which, as the Constitution declares, the government was founded to "establish."

8. Those who labor to make the laws protect more faithfully the equal religious rights and liberties of all the citizens are not the "enemies of morality," but moral reformers in the true sense of the word, and act in the evident interest of public righteousness and peace.

9. Those who labor to gain or to retain for one class of religious believers any legal privilege, advantage, or immunity which is not equally enjoyed by the community at large are really "enemies of morality," unite Church and State in proportion to their success, and, no matter how ignorantly or innocently, are doing their utmost to destroy the Constitution and undermine this free government.

10. Impartial protection of all citizens in their equal religious rights and liberties, by encouraging the free movement of mind, promotes the establishment of the truth respecting religion; while violation of these rights, by checking the free movement of mind, postpones the triumph of truth over error, and of right over wrong.

11. No religion can be true whose continued existence depends on continued State aid. If the Church has the truth, it does not need the unjust favoritism of the State; if it has not the truth, the iniquity of such favoritism is magnified tenfold.

12. No religion can be favorable to morality whose continued existence depends on continued injustice. If the Church teaches good morals, of which justice is a fundamental law, it will gain in public respect by practising the morals it teaches, and voluntarily offering to forego its unjust legal advantages; if it does not teach good morals, then the claim to these unjust advantages on the score of its good moral influence becomes as wicked as it is weak.

13. Whether true or false, whether a fountain of good moral influences or of bad, no particular religion and no particular church has the least claim in justice upon the State for any favor, any privilege, any immunity. The Constitution is no respecter of persons and no respecter of churches; its sole office is to establish civil society on the principles of right reason and impartial justice; and any State aid rendered to the Church, being a compulsion of the whole people to support the Church, wrongs every citizen who protests against such compulsion, violates impartial justice, sets at naught the first principles of morality, and subverts the Constitution by undermining the fundamental idea on which it is built.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

